One Way.

Husband—I don't know how much of an allowance to give you next year.

Wife—You know how much you can afford, don't you?

Husband—Why, yes.

Wife—Then give me as much more as you can spare.—Puck.

Love Versus Housekeeping.

Enraptured Lover—And now, darling, why may we not be married at once?

Charming but Practical Maiden—Before the peach season is over? And have you putting indelible stains on all my fine new white table napkins with your long mustache? I guess not. We'll wait till November, Arthur.—Chicago Tribune.

Lack of Reciprocity.

"How do you like your new neighbors, Mrs. Way?"

"Not at all. She's awfully stingy. Why, she borrowed our tack hammer and a nutmeg early last week, but when I went over yesterday to ask her to lend me $8 to pay on the rent she said she didn't have it to spare. Wasn't that small?"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Didn't Worry Him a Bit.

The Doctor—Above all things, madam, your husband mustn't worry. Perhaps you'd better not show him my bill just now.

"But I did, doctor, and it didn't make any difference. He said he knew he couldn't pay it anyway."—Life.

All He Learned.

Census Man—How old are you, madam?

She—Why—er—let me see.

Census Man—If you can tell me when you were born I'll figure it out myself.

She—Yes, certainly! Why, I was born on a Sunday.—Philadelphia Press.

Pugnacious Little Birds.

In the island of Monora, one of the Philippines, the humming birds are pugnacious little creatures. A hunting party had a novel experience with them. One of the huntsmen wandered off from his comrades, but soon his screams were heard. Thousands of the humming birds had attacked him and wounded him on hundreds of spots on his face and neck. When rescued he was streaming with blood.

FROM ACTRESS TO NEWS GIRL.

A Sorrowful Change in the Life of Palma Schroder.

From the footlights, where a few seasons ago she was a favorite, Palma Schroder has descended to the ranks of the New York newsgirls. Once a queenly beauty, she is now a cripple, supported by crutches. Miss Schroder is a California girl, who first appeared on the stage in "The Streets of New York." Later she took part in other plays and was on the high road to success when, one morning, while riding her wheel to get some medicine for her mother, who was then living with her in New York, she was knocked down by a trolley car, dragged the length of a block and left maimed and helpless. Her mother, also an invalid, proposed suicide, but the younger woman refused. Instead she got a bundle of papers, went on crutches to the door of the Casino, where she had once been a favorite, and took her station as a newsgirl. There she may now be found, night after night, selling her papers and eking out a scanty living for herself and her mother.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

The "lucky" advertiser always happens to possess a lot of common sense.—Profitable Advertising.

For local business the local newspapers are by far the best advertising mediums.—The Ad Writer.

Advertising is valuable exactly in proportion to the extent to which the thing advertised is found to bear out the claim made for it.—Montreal (Can.) Witness.

The force and profit of advertising consists in constantly keeping before the people your location what you have to sell, the prices at which you will sell, and in religiously keeping every promise.—St. Louis Star.

Newspaper advertising is the very best "hustler" any firm can employ, going into thousands of homes and reaching people who are approachable in no other way. It is an indispensable part of every modern business.—Saginaw (Mich.) News.

The question is often asked, Why is newspaper advertising the most profitable? And it is to be said that most of the answers have failed in giving the actual reason. The first reason is, that the newspaper advertisements find the public mind when it is in an explanatory and receptive condition. When a person in his own time is reading a newspaper, he will naturally take in with the news of the outside world those facts which are of use in management of his home and the purchase of his supplies. The second is, when a seller puts his advertisement in a newspaper he at once enters into open competition with all others in the same line of business; his facts and prices are stated with the knowledge that they will be noted by these competitors as well as by the public, while the advertiser by circular or sign seems to be endeavoring to do a quiet, non-competitive business.—Paterson (N. J.) News.

Patience is a good thing to have in this world; it takes patience to kill a mosquito.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

The Wicked.—The wicked even in this life fall under the judgments of God.—Rev. Father Caraher, R. C., San Francisco, Cal.

The Rebuke of Silence.—It is noble to keep still, and the rebuke of silence is like a keen sword.—Rev. George H. Hepworth, Congregationalist, New York.

Christian Principles.—Our Christian principles should ever move us to deplore war and to seek in all honorable ways to avoid it.—Rev. W. W. Wilson, Episcopalian, Chicago, Ill.

Hope.—Kill hope and you kill the human race. Follow the leadership of hope and the interests of humanity are forever conserved.—Rev. H. T. Rasmus, Methodist, Chicago, Ill.

Human Life.—A religion that neglects to provide for sin leaves the greater part of human life untouched. Jesus Christ's religion pardons sin.—Rev. Dr. George, Kansas City, Mo.

God's Love.—One of the marvels of God's love is that while he can love the whole world of humanity, he can concentrate it on each individual life.—Rev. R. A. Mayo, Evangelist, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Incarnation.—The sovereignty of God is a very easy and transparent principle, but the incarnation, while simple, is weighty and unfathomable.—Rev. J. C. Smith, Presbyterian, Indianapolis, Ind.

The First Preacher.—It is an indisputable fact that Satan was the first preacher, taking the first text in the Garden of Eden and preaching the first sermon.—Rev. Bruce Brown, Christian Church, Denver, Col.

The Work of Christ.—It creates the very conception of charity, and broadens the limits of its obligation from the narrow circle of a neighborhood to the widest horizon of the race.—Rev. A. G. Bakewell, Episcopalian, New Orleans, La.

Highest Achievement of Christianity.—We have not come to the highest possible achievement of Christian experience until, with Paul, we can say: "I know whom I have believed."—Rev. J. M. Corner, Lutheran, Kansas City, Mo.

God and Mechanism.—It is God who sweeps the plains and tunnels the mountains with our flying trains, as really as though they were carried by harnessed angels—God working for us in every direction.—Rev. M. J. Savage, Unitarian, New York City.

What Christianity Has Done for Woman.—It is impossible to say anything about Christianity without bringing woman to the front. It is only through Christianity that we can form a conception of the possibilities of woman.—Rev. John H. Zinn, Lutheran, Akron, Ohio.

Knowledge.—However plain and simple Christianity is, nothing is so important as knowledge. It is the highest achievement in the Christian experience to know, and it is the most blessed feature of our religion that we can know.—Rev. J. M. Cromer, Lutheran, Kansas City, Mo.

The Labor Problem.—The church can have no specific solution of the labor problem. In general, it may be stated that if the principles of justice and mercy, which the church inculcates, were accepted, the labor problem would not reach an acute stage.—Rev. R. Kidner, Episcopalian, Boston, Mass.

Toleration.—Toleration is bepraised to the heavens, as though it were the only virtue. But men need to beware lest their tolerance become that of shallowness, of cowardice and religious indifference, a toleration, as a great German writer puts it, "that easily degenerates into hatred of every one who firmly holds a positive faith."—Rev. George H. Trevor, Methodist, Milwaukee, Wis.

Jesus as a Socialist.—Man is demanding the rights that an infinite nature has bequeathed to all alike—the right to live harmoniously, happily and prosperously, without oppression. The man Jesus was of socialistic tendencies. His service was to man. He was not a religionist, for he fulminated against the national religion of the Jews.—Rev. Francis Edgar Mason, Church of Individual Dominion, Brooklyn, New York.

Prayer.—Prayer can not make us omniscient, so that we may know all the circumstances of trial that shall arise, for that would be to destroy the end and aim of a probationary existence, but prayer brings us into such an appreciation of ourselves and our situation and responsibilities that it will prepare us for every case which may arise and to suit every obligation to A, B, and C, and to ourselves, and thus to God.—Rev. J. J. Tigert, Methodist, New Orleans, La.

America's Mission in Asia.—Christianity, which, like all other religions, came from Asia, has gone back to Asia to subdue it. The chief moral battle of the twentieth century will be between Christian ideas and forces and the decayed, backward-looking, conceited, devitalized, semi-civilization of the Asiatic continent. The present war in China is opening the world's eyes and throwing into new prominence the mighty missionary problem. America is now the dominant power in the Pacific, and the Pacific, with 700,000,000 people on its shores, is to be the highway of the world's commerce.—President John Henry Barrows, Oberlin College.

Army Steps.

In the German army the step is reckoned at 31½ inches, and the number of steps in a minute at 112; in the Austrian at 29½ inches, and the number at 115 to 120; in the Italian at 29½ inches, and the number at 120; in the French at 29½ inches, and the number at 115; and in the British at 30 inches, and the number at 116 steps a minute.

"That's just like Cousin Sabitha." "What's the matter?" "She sent me $5 and a list of things she wants that amounts to $25."—Chicago Record.

Mr. Shively is one of the strong speakers of Indiana and he is at his best this year. The evils of Imperialism and Trusts will be discussed.

You are interested in the result of this campaign. Come everybody and bring your families and friends.

Hon. Geo. W. Souttit of Fort Wayne will speak at Jackson Center on Friday evening Oct. 12, and at St. Joe on Saturday evening Octr 13.

Hon. J. M. Robinson will speak at Corunna on Monday afternoon, Oct. 15, and at Waterloo in the evening of the same day.

Voters Beware.

Interested parties, especially republican candidates, are showing sample ballots to democrats, and telling them: "Now, if you want to vote for me, all you have to do is to stamp the rooster, and then go down and stamp at my name. In this way you will vote your democratic ticket all right, except the one vote you give me."

Don't you do any such thing. Such a vote is void and will be thrown out. If you vote a split ticket you MUST NOT stamp the rooster. Explain this to the voters.

The Presidential Vote, 1896.

The following table shows how each state voted at the presidential election of 1896. We give first the states, that gave republican pluralities, and then the states that gave democratic pluralities. The first column of figures gives the electoral vote of the states and the second column the plurality of the popular vote. It will be noticed that California and Kentucky were so close, that one democratic elector in each state, had a plurality and gave Bryan one vote.

It will be seen that McKinley carried 21 states fully and got a part of electoral vote of two others.

Bryan carried 22 states fully and got a part of the electoral vote of two others.

If the vote had got into the House, Bryan would have been elected, as a majority of the states had a majority of democratic members of the House.

New Officers.

"Some idea of the extravagant waste of the public's money, in an effort to reward the political heeler, may be obtained by a study of the figures below. These offices were created by the Republican majority in the first session of the present congress, and the patronage list thus handed over to the party managers for effective use to perpetuate the present administration was not the least of the services which that body rendered the party.

Total number of offices created	5,069 00
Total amount of annual salary attached	$4,537,673 77
New offices created, not included in the above, for which salaries were not specified, amount to an annual sum of	2,721,304 84
Total amount appropriated to reward faithful party services	$7,258,978 61

This sum does not include the amount expended in 'special commissions' and alleged confidential services in the war and navy departments, for the appointing of which McKinley and his cabinet have developed special aptitude."

The "special commissions" referred to in the above dispatch are 20 in number. They have entailed a very pretty cost, as the table shows:

First Philippine commission (after battle of Manila), $210,000.

Second Philippine commission (Denby, Worcester and Schurman), $117,500.

Peace commission, $222,931.

W. J. Calhoun, special commissioner. $7,000.

Bimetallic commission, $75,000.

Alger army commission, $150,000.

Samoan commission, $50,000.

Queen's jubilee commission, $60,000.

Special Paris exposition commission, $210,000.

Reciprocity commission, $30,000.

Joint high commission with Canada, $210,000.

Cuba and Porto Rico evacuation commission, $50,000.

Hague peace commission, $35,000.

Hawaiian commission, $30,000.

Isthmian canal commission, $1,000,000.

Insular commission, $50,000.

Industrial commission (labor), per year, $150,000.

Charles Hamlin, special commissioner to Japan, $15,000.

John W. Foster, special commissioner, $30,000.

Robert P. Porter, special commissioner to Cuba and Porto Rico, $30,000.

McKinley's Prayer.

Someone has put the following apt prayer into the mouth of Mark Hanna's president:

O Mammon our God who dwelleth in Wall street, upon a throne of gold, thou art the true and only God that will do to tie to. Deliver me from these dead men. Jehovah is a fake. He refused to hear our prayers in '96 and since, but when we "preyed" for thy assistance thou didst come on the wings of the wind. When we appealed to thee, thou in the plenitude of thy goodness did move the hearts of the soulless corporations and they did empty their treasures in Hanna's lap. We know that giving does not impoverish thee, but robbing makes thee rich. I am a Methodist, but the God of Isreal has turned me down. Thou wilt never forsake me, and if I should forget thee let my tongue cling to the roof of my mouth and Hanna's right hand forget its cunning. I consecrate myself upon the alter of greed for a second term, and I declare in sackcloth and ashes that all I am or ever hope to be I owe to Wall street.

O Mammon thou art the fairest among ten thousand to me, and the one altogether lovely. Thou art my creator, my guide and defender. In thee I live, move and have my being. Thou didst also make Rockefeller, and Morgan, and the devil, but my owo dear Mark is thy masterpiece. Guide him ever in the art of coercion, corruption, and fraud, and thus make my calling and election sure. Forbid that he should go astray into the by and forbidden paths paths of honor, integrity and truth. Make us to lie down in the green pastures of boodle and lead us by the still waters of trusts. Give us this day our daily contribution and lead us not into the ways of Jefferson and Lincoln. Remove from our thoughts the Constitutron and the Declaration of Independence. Deliver us from the Democratic party and thine shall be the power, dominion, honor and glory, worlds without end. Amen.

Mr. Eckhart's Meeting.

To the citizens of DeKalb county, and especially those of Auburn.

I shall speak in the opera house on Monday, October 15, at 7:30 p. m. sharp, subject "Our Boys and Girls." This will be an all day rally. Good speakers will address the people in the afternoon, either on the court house square or if the weather is unfavorable the meeting will be in the opera house. I desire that all classes of people come and hear me; doctors, lawyers, preachers, business men, mechanics and laboring men. I especially desire that all men who work in our factories come and hear what we have to say. I want the editors of our papers; I want the children. The front row of seats in the opera house will be reserved for children, and if there is not sufficient room to accommodate all, some can occupy the platform. There will be no expense to anyone, as I shall pay all expenses myself. Come in wagons, in buggies, on the train, come in any way most convenient. Come with flags and banners flying. There will be 800 bills put up over the county in every town and neighborhood. I expect this to be one of the largest meetings ever held in DeKalb county. Your friend who has gone out of the saloon business by ballot. CHARLES ECKHART.

Election of Councilmen.

In reply to a number of inquiries regarding the election of county councilmen Attorney General Taylor has prepared the following opinion:

The act of 1899 provides for the election of other councilmen-at-large from each county and four councilmen to be elected, each from his respective district. It provides for the division of the county into four councilmanic districts. The three councilmen-at-large will be voted for by all the voters in the county but the councilmen representing each of the four districts will be elected by the voters in their representative districts.

All of these seven councilmen are county officers and the vote therefor must be canvassed by the county canvassing board. That being the case the names of the three councilmen at large will be upon all the county ballots, and in addition thereto, the councilmen from the districts will be placed only upon the ballots voted in their districts respectively, so that there will have to be four forms of county ballots in each county. These four forms of county ballots will be exactly alike, except as to the name of the district councilman.

Forms are Necessary.

The Osolo township prohibitionists brought in their township nominations today to have them certified by the county clerk. They were not on the proper blanks and the clerk refused to accept them as the names were simply written on a piece of paper. As the clerk is not supplied with forms and no one seems to know where to get them there is no end of trouble in having nominations certified.—Goshen Democrat.

Ready for Thanksgiving.

Some one is getting ready for Thanksgiving. Wm. Armstrong of Jackson was here Saturday and reported some ill luck. On Thursday night some sneak thieves had got into his premises and stolen thirty-eight of his fine turkeys. He is out looking for the fellow that got them.

Latest News.

Heads of departments at Washington are now preparing their estimates for next year. The first given to the public in the report to be made by the war department. An abstract of this has been given out to the country and reads:

"More than $200,000,000 will be asked for the support of the army and navy for the fiscal year ending June 20, 1902. In accordance with instructions from the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy the chiefs of the bureaus of the war and the navy departments have submitted their annual estimates. The chiefs of bureaus of the war department estimate on the basis of an army of 100,000 men, and Secretary Root, it is thought, will recommend in his annual report that the regular army consist of this number, provided McKinley is elected. If Bryan is elected it is proposed to close up recruiting offices immediately after Nov. 6.

It will be necessary to recruit regiments to take the place of the volunteers in case more troops are authorized and when they are ready for active service they must be transported to Manila. So Quartermaster-General Ludington, in his estimates, has asked for more than $40,000,000. In his last annual statement he recommended an appropriation of $38,578,547. The pay of the army will be what was estimated for the current fiscal year—47,000,000. The estimate made by Commissary-General Weston for subsistence stores for the current fiscal year was $11,112,242, and this will also be exceeded. Secretary Root's estimates for the military establishment for the current year aggregated $128, 170, 583, and they will undoubtedly be larger for the next fiscal year.

In addition to the estimates for military establishment, estimates will be submitted for public works, including construction and of arsenals, construction and repair armament for fortifications, construction and repair of military posts and river and harbor improvements and maintenance of the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers.

The estimate for increase of the navy is slightly above $21,000,000, more than ever before in the history of the navy."

Election Certificates.

County Clerk Long finds so many inaccuracies and oversights in the certificates of nomination now being filed with him that he thinks a few words instruction as well as an extract from the election law, will be of benefit. The certificate, that a certain man was nominated by a certain party at a certain convention or caucus, is a very important matter. A small error if left in the certificate, or carried onto the ballot, might vitiate an election and cause disputes and expense. The following extract from the law, should be closely studied and carefully followed:

The certificate of nomination by a convention or primary election shall contain the name of each person nominated, his residence and the office for which he is nominated. And shall designate a title for the party or principle which such convention or primary election represents, together with any simple figure or device, by which its list of candidates may be designated on the ballots. Said certificate shall be signed by the presiding officer and secretary of such convention or by the chairman and secretary of the county, city or township committee, who shall add to their signatures their respective places of residence, and acknowledge the same before an officer duly authorized to take acknowledgements of deeds See section 46, page 17, Election Law 1898.

The election commissioners ask, that each name be written carefully and plainly. The full, first name is required. It is not sufficient to say P. K. Jone. It must be Peter K. Jones, and so on. For the middle name, where there is one, only the initial is used or needed. Let every man charged with the duty of furnishing the county clerk with a certificate of nomination, bring it in quickly. There is a good deal of careful work required to prepare the ballots, and he should have ample time to do it well. So be prompt and careful. No revenue stamps are needed.

Stomach Distress.

Constant With Many, But Now Easily Cured.

In very many cases of chronic indigestion there is almost constant distress, pain or burning sensation, bloating or belching, often combined with vertigo, dizziness or dull headache. Sufferers dread to eat, for each meal means hours of distress, yet eat they mush because strength has to be sustained. Few of those who suffer this way have any serious stomach trouble. There is a chronic functional difficulty which can often be relieved in a few hours and cured in a very short time. Dr. Stone, whose experience is probably greater than any other stomach specialist, says that these cases are usually the quickest relieved by these remedies which enter into Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. The stomach and bowels are immediately cleansed and sweetened, the faulty action of the digestive fluids are corrected and the distress disappears as by magic—sometimes from the first dose—though a permanent cure required faithful treatment, of course. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is guaranteed to cure or your money refunded if it ever fails. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

Club Notes.

Saturday was Presidents' Day with the L. L. C. and the members could be seen wending their way towards the home of Mrs. Tillie McCord, who is the newly elected president and the hostess for the occasion. It was the first meeting of the new club year and was a happy meeting, for the members were pleased to see each other after the summer vacation, and the greetings were hearty and sincere.

The meeting was called to order by the president and after the business was over, the members enjoyed many delightful letters written for the occasion by the absent members. They had been asked to give some "Echoes of the Pan.", and the letters were very enjoyable, recalling many incidents in the early life of the Club, and were both grave and gay. They were from the following absent members: Mrs. Alzein Ralston Scott and Dr. Lida Leasure of Angola; Mrs. Helen Ensley and Mrs. Amanda Houser of Indianapolis; Mrs. Josie Brown of Waterloo, Iowa; Mrs. Nellie Barns Hartman of Wabash; Mrs. Maria Holmes of Prattville, Michigan; Miss Lilly McTighe of Alhambra, California; and Mrs. N. A. Loas of Ann Arbor, Michigan, the organizer of the Club and in whose home the first meeting was held over eighteen years ago.

A guessing contest was next enjoyed which was furnished by Mrs. McCord and created many hearty laughs. This was followed by a very appetising luncheon which goes without saying was much enjoyed by the ladies.

The Club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Guild next Saturday when the regular work for the year will be taken up.

The Louisville Synod.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Oct. 6, 1900.

EDITOR COURIER:—The synod of the northwest of the Reformed church is in session here and as a number of your readers in and about Auburn will be interested in some of the proceedings, I will send a few notes. Rev. C. F. Kriete of this city has been re-elected president. The attendance is large and much interest is taken in the discussions on missions. Home missions in particular are receiving attention. Rev. Hansen, our missionary from the far north, reports splendid success concerning his efforts in Manitoba. Rev. Moore D. D., one of our missionaries to Japan, addressed the synod last evening and requests that the hands of Rev. Hoy in China be strengthened. But most of us think that if we properly care for the work we have undertaken in Japan, and which has been so signally blessed, we will have enough to do for some time to come. Rev. C. Baum D. D., of Detroit, Mich., is here as corresponding delegate from central synod and reports that his synod been given a valuable piece of land in Cleveland, O., which is to be owned by both synods, and on which a new theological seminary is is to be established.

It is still exceedingly hot here and many of us are wishing it were Monday night when we could speed northward. Monday morning we expect to visit the State Reformatory at Jeffersonville, Ind., concerning which I will report to you later. Yours truly,

REV. G. M. HIRSCH.

Al Treesh Married.

Auburn people will be interested to hear of the marriage of Almon Treesh, son of John Treesh, of this place. The bride was Miss Margaret Breen of South Chicago. The wedding being at the home of her parents in that place last Wednesday, Oct. 3. 1900. There was a fine reception and many valuable gifts were received by the young couple who at once went to housekeeping in a home he had furnished. Mr. Treesh has a good position in the B. & O. shops in that city and we are pleased to hear is doing well, with excellent prospects for the future. The COURIER unites with the friends here in wishes for their abundant prosperity. They reside at 9127 Erie Avenue, South Chicago.

"I always like to bur my clothing of you people."
Why? "Because I can rely on what I am told here."

This is but one in hundreds making similar statements during the year. Now we consider this kind of a reputation the best possible advertisement. It's not buying an article for the least money you are after; its buying the best article for the lowest price. What you want is value received. When you buy clothing from us (or anything else for that matter) you know positively that is just what you are getting. We haven't a garment in our stock that is not absolutely guaranteed in every respect. Not only quality, make and style, but price as well. When you couple these facts with the knowledge that we have by far the largest stock in the county, you can come to but one conclusion, and that is, such a store is an ideal store in which to trade.

—Word comes from Kendallville, that a son was born Saturday to Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rommis.

—I am permanently located and will test your eyes free of charge. W. D. Chapman, the optician. o13 —Dennison had three ice wagons delivering in town Saturday. It is not often we see this in October.

—Miss Nellie Seller, daughter of Cyrus Seller of Elkhart, is a guest in the family of her uncle, Auditor Seller.

—Lou Adams, who clerked for Frank Spade at the billiard room has skipped out, after taking the cash in the till, about $40.

—Mrs. Cal Refner in the country has been suffering from an injury to her hand that prevented it's use for a couple of weeks.

—After October 19, the cider mill in Stamets town will run only on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 24 and 25. —J. E. Baker.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs for timber. Highest cash prices paid for same. Address, The Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—The population of Arkansas has been reported complete. It is now 1,311,564. Its first census was in 1820 when it showed only 14,255.

—The prohibition train has crossed Kentucky and is now in Tennessee. They will see a big lot of the country if they don't furnish its president.

—LOST:—At Hebel's store on Saturday evening, two $5 bills. Finder will be suitably rewarded by returning same to Hebel's store or to Mrs. Wm. C. Reed. o8

—Charles Picker, jr., has rented the Hollister House and is taking possession. It is a good chance for some one and we hope he may make the venture a success.

—G. D. Beaber of Garrett was a caller at our sanctum today. We are pleased to see him looking so well, being much better health than when we last mel him.

—The school books that Mr. Carr found in his buggy when in town a few days ago, were the property of Mr. Kryder at the Junction. The owner now has them.

—Roy McQuigg of Phenix, Arizona is here a guest in the family of D. C. Caruth. He is on his way home from a visit at Washington, D. C., with his brother-in-law, P. J. Lockwood.

—Judge Adair candidate for the supreme bench of the state and E. V. Whiteleather candidate for prosecutor in that circuit were over from Columbia City today. Both are looking well and evidently feeling well pleased with the outlook.

—Miss Pauline Sabin, of Alliance, Ohio, had a habit of sticking her lead pencil in he hair, like all girls have when not using it, and in doing this the point of the pencil made a slight scratch. From this blood poison set in causing her death.

—O. C. Himes, the Cedar Creek merchant, has sold out his business there to Vanderpool & Buck, and has located at Kalamazoo, Michigan. He had made many friends in the years he was at Cedar, and we hope good fortune may go with him to his location.

—The bondsmen of C. S. Diehl, trustee of Osolo township in Elkhart county, have asked to be released from his bond. It is reported that the trustee, who goes by the soubriquet of "The Duke of Osolo township," has been inattentive to his duties. His term will expire November 16.

—A. P. Foltz of Garrett was here Saturday. He also remembered to fill his pockets with pears for the editor and his better half. They were specimens of the popular "Keifer's Hybrid" and are delicious. These pears are not only fine eating, but are good keepers, coming rather late and are also good bearers.

—If a boy wants to be spider-legged and weak-kneed; if he wants to be short-winded and sunken-chested; if he wants to be thin-jawed and dead on his feet: if he wants to grow into scrub that no business man wants to employ, let him be a cigarette fiend. Otherwise let him keep the nicotine out of his windpipe.

—Quite a queer political bet was made between two girls in Bluffton last week. If McKinley is elected president one of the girls agreed to pull the other young lady about town in a buggy, and if Bryan is elected the other girl will have to pull the buggy. People can look forward to seeing one or the other ride in November.

—The Galveston News of recent date tells of a small yellow dog that was rescued in a kitchen safe, after having been 17 days without food or water. The dog could scarcely move, so weak and emaciated was he, but after some feeding he gained strength rapidly, and is now valued very highly by his rescuers. He was found in a wretched house near two dead negroes.

—G. W. Link saw George Hazzard, while he was on the Coast recently. He says George did not recognize him but he is the some old George, for all of that. He is still in politics and has a leading place in democratic councils.

—Manager Bachtel of the Central Telephone requests all subscribers to call by number and not by name, as calling by name impedes prompt work at central, compelling central to stop and look up nmmbers. Please take notice.

—HAIR SWIMCHES AND WAVES made to order from your own hair. I also furnish hair to parties desiring, at the lowest price. Mail orders receive prompt and careful attention. Hair dyeing a specialty. Also agent for toilet articles. Mrs. Valeria Zimmer three blocks north Farmers Bank, Auburn, Ind.

—At the sale of the Mrs. Kelley property, the other day, Rev. J. N. Wilson bought the rear lot and the barn. But the front lot with the brick residence was not sold. There was no bid for it at the price required. It had appraised at $2,500, and must bring two-thirds of that, which is $1,666, and no one seemed willing to offer that.

—D. B. Bordner and Blanch were here today. The came to pay his taxes and see his old friends in the COURIER office. His daughter is now a tall young woman and one would hardly recognize the little girl we used to know. We are sorry to see that both Mr. and Mrs. Bordner have been having poor health. But we hope this condition is only temporary.

Court Notes.

A great deal of work has been started and some completed.

CRIMINAL CASES.

A large number of these have been called up, and a number dismissed, with several yet to be tried. The case against Ott Baxter was dismissed by plantiff.

Ollie Hall, aged 27 past' was up for petit larceny, stealing a watch from Mr. Moyer, we believe, at Garrett. He plead guilty. Being under 30 he was sent to the reformatory at Jeffersonville one to three years with a fine of $1.

In the assult and battery case against Carpenter, he gives $200 bonds for his appearance.

The irrepressible John Lamphere is still in sight, having two cases against him.

CIVIL CASES.

The cases of Penland vs. Lockwood on contract, has been dismissed each party paying half the costs.

The case of P. L. Bishop vs. the Wabash railway, damages, has been called but no work done. Motions were made by both parties, and 60 days were given to file exceptions. Bishop's attorneys are Hoffman & Link. The road is represented by Stuart & Hammond, and by Rose & Rose.

John B. Rager was divorced from Adetea M. Rager at his costs; George W. Artis from Opha Artis at his costs.

Hannah Holcomb vs. Geo. Chapman for partition. Petition granted and J. W. Brown, Geo. Newcomer and N. T. Jackman appointed to make the partition.

In the case of Mrs. Morris against Isaac Whirledge, for selling liquor to her late husband, the defendant asks for a change of venue to another county.

Flossie Fales will be sent to the Reformatory for girls. John M. Henderson ordered to take charge of her till this order is executed. The costs so far are to be paid by Concord township. The county will pay the cost of transportation and half the maintenance charges at the institution.

—Buy a meal ticket at Had's restaurant, 21 meals for three dollars.

BUTLER.

Edith Wilson has not materialy improved since last week.

Geo. Coffrin remains poorly but is able to be up a part of the time.

John Crouse, jr. has gone back to the U. B. church and will remove to Newville and fill the circuit the coming year.

J. A. Campbell visited Orland on business last week.

A good many of the farmers are cutting a second crop of hay, owing to the late warm weather.

The political pot has begun to simmer a little around the edge.

Jacob Showalter, a veteran of the Civil war, was buried last week under auspice of the G. A. R. Rev. McCloe officiating as minister of the Gospel.

David Knisely is erecting a very fine porch to his house on West North street.

Boon Madden, William Copeland and John Lowe are advertising sales of personal property.

Richard Murch of Franklin township has bought out Monroe Husselman's milk busines and has moved to Butler. Mr. Husselman has moved into the Walters house on the south side.

Mrs. Wm. Olds has bought the Chas. Lewis house at the head of Depot street and will again move back to town.

The heavy rains of last Saturday night were badly needed and will do a great amount of good.

Mrs. Dr. Shumaker returned last Saturday from a lengthy visit with friends in Ohio.

The Eel River Case.

The case between the Wabash road and the Old Eel River railroad is now in the Supreme Court on a petition for a rehearing. The last decision was against the Wabash road, but it was so manifestly out of reason that it must have been decided without a full hearing of the case. It is now hoped to get it into court again and have an exhaustive hearing, when it may be decided the other way. In the meantime the effort to get a new line from Butler to Fort Wayne goes on. It is probably only a bluff, for we suppose the Wabash Company could better afford to buy out the original stockholders of the Eel River road than to build a new line.

Public Sale.

I will sell at public auction at my residence on West 5th street, Auburn, on Saturday Oct. 13, begining at 1 p. m. a large amount of household goods including:

Two bedsteads, mattress and springs, dinningroom table, 60 yards good carpet, parlor furniture, cook stove, chairs, bath tub and many other useful articles. Terms made known on day of sale.

CUARTEL DE INFANTERIA,
MANILA, P. I. Aug. 22, 1900

MR. AND MRS. WINSLOW.

DEAR FRIENDS:—I received your letter of June 21, day before yesterday and I have read it over several times since then. It contains so much interesting news, so many of our young friends married, even Tom. I think if I came to Auburn again, I would think of that verse

"Oft' in the stilly night
I should feel like one, who treads alone.
Some banquet hall deserted,
Whose leaves are fled,
Whose garlands dead
And all but him departed."

When I wrote to you before I did not know your name so I wrote to Frank and I recieved a letter from him a few weeks ago.

I wonder that you could find time to answer my letter so soon amidst all your sorrows and troubles. It does seem sometimes that we have no God, that He does not answer earnest prayers. But we must go on trusting to the end.

I don't think I told you anything about Manila in my first letter so I suppose you would be interested in the place which made Dewey famous, cost the U. S. $20,000,000, besides the lives, and personal injury to many American men. Manila is a very cosmopolitan city, it has a population of about 300,000, some 80,000 Natives, 50,000 Chinese, 20,000 Spaniards, 40,000 Americans (soldiers), 5,000 Spanish half breeds or Mestizos and about 5,000 other Europans. Manila was founded in the year 1571. There are not half 40,000 soldiers in Manila at present, for they are scattered over the Islands, but I suppose there has been enough Americans and other Civilians come in to fill the places of the soldiers sent out.

The cocoanut tree is the native's most valuable possession, almost his staff of life, furnishing him with food, wine, oil, vinegar, fuel, vessels, ropes and fishing lines, also fiber to be woven into cloth. It is said that a young couple of the younger class of natives can get married, build a shack under a large cocoanut tree and live happy. The cocoanut tree furnishes the necessaries of life. Other fruits, the orange, lemon, guava, mango, banana and bread fruit grow wild in the woods.

This climate is warm the year round. Although the air is sometimes cooled off by the rain storms and fresh breezes. Every one who comes here grows lazy after a time, but the natives are born lazy and so do not have to undergo the change.

Rice, hemp and tobacco are the principle crops raised.

There are snakes and reptites of every kind, also many beautiful birds, flowers and bright colored leaves. I will enclose a couple of leaves which I picked while out walking yesterday evening.

The Insurgents and Ladrone bands continue to give our troops trouble from time to time, but the backbone of the insurrection has been broken.

I suppose you hear all the news from China, and have heard of the gallant work of the 9th Infantry. I hear that Russian soldiers are very cruel in victory and bayonet helpless women and babies, besides looting wherever they can. I think that is very unsoldierly and unmanly and I hope that if I am ever permitted to take part in any victory, I shall, as I hope to be brave in the hour of conflict, be kind and compassionate in the hour of victory, especially to women and children, ever remembering my dear friends and loved ones at home.

This is the rainy season, and of course it is wet. The natives here eat snakes and the majority of them chew betel nut. The betel nut is cultivated. All the natives, men, women and children smoke cigarrettes.

We have fuur tame monkies in Battery A.

Cigar makers would not hit a bananza in this country. Cigars can be bought in Minila for $8.00 a thousand and upward, they are made mostly by native women.

I send regards to all inquiring friends. May yours be a long and happy life is the wish of Yours Truly

A. MACDONALD, Sergeant,
Baty. A 6th Arty
Manila, P. I.

Carnahan Reunion.

September 22nd, 1897, there assembled at H. L. Carnahan's in DeKalb County, Indiana, about one hundred relatives and held the first annual reunion of the Carnahan family. Since then one was held at James Carnahan's in Paulding County, Ohio, in 1898; one at C. Ward's in Richland County, Ohio, in 1899 and on September 26, 1900, at the residence of John Carnahan in Jackson township, DeKalb County, Indiana, occurred one of the most enjoyable of these reunions.

The relatives from Ohio and Indiana gathered and spent the forenoon in visiting and social convereation till dinner was announced when there were about ninety-eight partook of the good things, with which the tables were loaded.

After dinner a short but interesting programme consisting of music, declamations and a short address by Rev. Phillips of Maysville, after which officers for the coming year were elected and Milton Carnahan's was chosen as the place of holding the next reunion on the last Wednesday of September 1901.

Only three out of seven of the early ancestors of the family are left to enjoy these pleasant remembrances of the early life of this family. Our hearts are made sad as we witness the work of the reaper death, who cuts down these noble citizens who have contributed their means and energy to the happiness of the present generation which cherishes every memorial of its worthy ancesters.

May these reunions become a means of instruction as well as pleasure and enjoyment to the Carnahan family.

FEATURES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Republicans Not Only on the Defensive, but They Are on the Run.

Two features of the present campaign deserve special notice. First, that the defections from the Republican party can no longer be denominated local incidents. The tide Bryan-ward sweeps over the nation and Democracy counts its recruits in States all the way from Maine to Oregon. Early in the campaign, the Republicans asserted, and perhaps even believed that large numbers were deserting their party as a result of local conditions. They now concede their mistake; acknowledge the defection to be national, the dissatisfaction general, and are using every expedient that can occur to the minds of desperate politicians to keep the followers of the party in line.

The second feature of the campaign that deserves special notice is this, that the Republicans now acknowledge themselves to be fighting upon the defensive. They no longer under the command of their party generals, make bold attacks upon Democratic positions. Offensive warfare has become, with them, an impossibility. They are fighting strictly on the defensive and they acknowledge it.

The Chicago Tribune, heading the speech of Senator Beveridge recently delivered at the Auditorium, Chicago, used the following as a sub-head: "He defends policy of war," and the speech was in very truth an elaborate defense of the foreign policy of the present administration. Senator Beveridge was kept so busy during his entire speech, "explaining" the actions of McKinley's administration that he did not find time during his entire oration to attack a single principle of the Democratic platform. Every practical politician appreciates the disadvantage of fighting upon the defensive. It is a condition calculated to fill the managers of McKinley's campaign with gloom, and to cause the Democratic leaders to become jubilant over the prospects of a victory that is every day becoming more and more a matter of certainty. The Republicans are upon the defensive; more than that, they are on the run.

ROOSEVELT THEN AND NOW.

If Consistency Is of Any Importance, What Do You Think of This?

We present without comment two extracts from writings by Theodore Roosevelt. It may interest some readers to try guessing what the candidate for the Vice Presidency really does think—if he thinks anything at all:

There seems to be equally little doubt that the currency is only one, and by no means the most important, among a hundred causes which profoundly affect a nation.

The United States has been on a gold basis and on a silver basis; it has been on a paper basis, and on a basis of what might be called the scraps and odds and ends of the currencies of a dozen other nations, but it has kept on developing along the same lines, no matter what its currency has been.

The forces that most profoundly shape the course of a nation's life lie far deeper than the mere use of gold or silver.—Theodore Roosevelt in the Forum, January, 1897.

The financial question is always of such far-reaching and tremendous importance to the national welfare that it can never be raised in good faith unless this tremendous importance is not merely conceded, but insisted on.

No issue can be paramount to the issue they thus make.

If we are to prosper the currency of this country must be based upon the gold dollar worth 100 cents.

So intimate is the connection between industrial prosperity and a sound currency that the former is jeopardized, not merely by unsound finance, but by the very threat of unsound finance.—From Theodore Roosevelt's Letter of Acceptance, Sept. 17, 1900.

The Harm Has Been Done.

The strike of miners in the Pennsylvania coal fields is causing much concern to the Republican bosses. They have not forgotten the Homestead troubles in 1892, nor their effects on the national campaign of that year. Soldiers and Pinkerton detectives, obeying the mandates of heartless capitalists, make poor campaigners among the common people. A needy miner shot down while asserting his manhood speaks louder to the hearts of the American masses than all their force and artillery.

Hanna recognizes these facts. After reaching New York the other day from Chicago, one of his first acts was to call on J. Pierpont Morgan, and a report of the interview says he told this big financier that unless the coal strike was stopped at once the election of McKinley was in peril. "This strike will ruin us," Hanna is reported to have said, "and you with your great command can stop it." Mr. Morgan was told that no money was wanted from him, that the Republican committee had all the funds it wanted; its presing desire was that the strike should be ended until at least after the election, for every day of its continuance was winning thousands of votes for Bryan. Cornelius N. Bliss, former Secretary of the Interior; Senator Scott, of West Virginia, and the President of the National City Bank, were with Hanna, and they joined their voices in an earnest appeal that for the sake of party success the strike should be settled at once.

It is too late. The harm has been done. The pitiful wail of the miners, that they might as well starve idle as starve working, has been heard throughout the land, and the infamous industrial system that enriches the few and pauperizes the many must go. It would be incredible, were not the facts adduced, that men with families of young children were compelled to work in the mines at an average of less than $250 a year. Some of them, as was recently stated, at a meeting of the miners, never had in their possession even one dollar in cash of their earnings. It was all traded out as fast or faster than it was earned, in the "pluck-me" stores owned by the coal barons, where the unfortunate underground delvers were forced to purchase the insufficient necessaries of life and the materials used by them in their occupation. They were compelled to produce, too, for a ton of coal as high as 3,000 pounds, which the coal baron sold for nearly the equivalent of two tons. These facts and conditions are now known to all voters throughout the land, and even were the few moderate demands of the miners granted it would not, in the minds of an outraged people, be regarded as a condonation of the crimes and cruelties against robbed and crucified and too patient labor.

Playing with Edged Tools.

Occasionally some one interrupts Mr. Bryan while speaking, by asking what may be considered smart questions.

Then he is sorry and wishes he hadn't.

When Mr. Bryan was speaking in Ohio about the consent of the governed in the Philippines, some one called out, "How about North Carolina?" Mr. Bryan replied: "I thank my friend for the question. Does not the condition of things in North Carolina and in other States, including a recent deplorable outbreak in your own State of Ohio"—referring to the race riot in Akron—"prove that we have a race problem at home sufficiently serious and difficult to deter us from adding to it by taking on 8,000,000 people of alien races in the China Sea?"

At another place Mr. Bryan met a question as to the status of colored people at the South by advising his questioner to read Mr. McKinley's treaty with the Sultan of Sulu, recognizing slavery and polygamy and guaranteeing the expenses of keeping the Sultan's harem.

To a question whether he would accept Senator Hanna's challenge to debate, Mr. Bryan replied: "Yes, provided Mr. Hanna is to be President in the event of my defeat!" Could anything be sharper?

It is a pity that the etiquette of the campaign forbids a debate between Mr. McKinley and Mr. Bryan.

Changeable.

It is estimated that William McKinley has changed oftener than anything or anybody, not even excepting the weather.

He changed on the money question.

He changed on the sugar tariff question.

He changed on the plain duty question.

He changed on the "who will haul down the flag" question.

He changed on the forcible annexation question.

He has flopped and floundered like an eel out of water. He has shifted and evaded and side-stepped like a champion pugilist, who depends more on ability to dodge than ability to hit.

He has advocated both sides of every question of public importance. As was said of Reuben, so may it be said of McKinley: "Unstable as water; thou shalt not excel."

Election by Popular Vote.

The Presidential campaign is not a political battle, as it should be, for the entire country, but is a conflict narrowed down to a few States which are properly classed as doubtful. But if the President were elected as the result of a popular vote, every voter from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the lakes to the gulf, would be aware that his vote would aid in determining the question of whether his candidate did or did not receive—as it would then be—a plurality of the votes cast. A Presidential election campaign would, under such circumstances, be just as active and exciting in Vermont as in New York, because every vote that either the Republicans or the Democrats in Vermont could add to their strength would aid just so much in bringing to their candidate the support needed for success.—Boston Herald.

What the Strike Means.

What the anthracite strike means may be judged by the following figures:

Number of men in anthracite mines	149,000
Number belonging to unions	134,000
Number that will go out	149,000
Number of persons deprived of income	500,000
Union funds on hand	$450,000
Average daily wages received by miners	1.35
Average wages of day men at mines	.90
Daily loss in wages	166,880
Area of coal fields, square miles	470
Average annual production, tons	75,000,000

Ninety cents a day seems to be a very munificent outcome of McKinleyism.

The "Syndicated President."

Where does Mark Hanna turn when he starts to raise the enormous campaign fund which he warns his supporters is essential to the election of Mr. McKinley? Does he go to the people? Not at all! He goes rather to the full money-bags which have been made rotund by McKinley bounties, McKinley subsidies, McKinley contracts and other McKinley benefits, contributions from which are not merely tithes from favors received, but the expression of a lively hope of favors to come. What word can more accurately describe a presidency obtained by this means, for these ends, than that employed by Mr. Olney—"a syndicated presidency?"—New York World.

Hanna's Belated Discovery.

Chairman Hanna's discovery that there are no trusts in this country should have come before the Republican national convention adopted its mild resolution against trusts and before President McKinley wrote his letter of acceptance declaring hostility to trusts and recognizing their existence.—Pittsburg Post.

Senators Stood by the Trusts.

The House of Representatives by a practically unanimous vote passed a very stringent piece of anti-trust legislation, but it was pigeon-holed by the Senate. The Senate is overwhelmingly Republican, and it is therefore the most obedient servant of the trusts and the pirates.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

The Debs Vote in Indiana.

If the Republicans are counting on the theory that all the Debs votes will come from the Democratic party they are making a grevious error. The bulk of the Debs vote in Indiana will come from the factories of the gas belt, which rolled up such great Republican majorities in 1896.—Indianapolis Press.

Should Get Together.

Mr. McKinley says "the Filipinos opened fire upon our army." In his official report General Otis says the first shot was fired by an American picket upon a Filipino. Before indulging in any more letter writing McKinley and Otis should get together and agree upon a modus vivendi.

ALASKA GAME SUPPLY

FUR-BEARING ANIMALS RECKLESSLY KILLED.

Deer Are Now Almost Extinct, Sea Otters Are Extremely Scarce, and Moose Are Vanishing with Great Rapidity.

Ten years ago Alaska was a fur country beyond all else, with a trade annually in excess of $2,000,000. This year the fur crop, exclusive of the seals, will not exceed $500,000. In the judgment of a prominent Chicago furrier, recently returned from a fourth trip of four months in that country, the slaughter of the fur-bearing animals, with the exception of the seals, is such as to make the life of the fur trade short indeed. The sea otter, one of the most valuable of all animals, is practically extinct. Wolves have killed all the deer spared by the hunter or have driven them to the islands off the coast. The moose are fast going, and only the seals are more numerous than they have been for years. But these are at the mercy of a United States monopoly and of the British hunters, who come openly within three miles of the American coast and kill seals in open water. Yet 200 American seal hunters sit idly on the coast, not daring to wo what the British and the North American Trading and Transportation Company are doing unhindered.

Not only are the fur-bearing animals threatened, but it is said that the canneries are raiding the salmon supply of the country in such a way that Indians receiving only 5 cents apiece for salmon weighing above eight pounds are making $15 to $20 a day at fishing. In the Columbia River country years ago the canneries worked havoc with this magnificent game fish, throwing them out of the coast rivers by machinery, taking the big fish and leaving the smaller ones to rot in the sun. With the eight-pound limit there are evidences that the slaughter already has begun when it is said that one company for 1900 will pack 980,000 cases of salmon at Kodiak Island.

"The seal fisheries are the greatest of the fur-bearing possibilities of this great country," says the Chicagoan. "The impression has been given out that these animals are rapidly becoming extinct. But it is not so. I have my own eyes as evidence in this statement, and anywhere along the Alaskan coast natives and those long resident there will tell you that more seals have ben seen this season than ever before.

"According to law the Alaskan Indian may kill seals for food, but in selling the skins he must make affidavit that the animals were killed for food purposes and he must not kill too many for that purpose, either.

"The most valuable and most nearly extinct animal now in Alaska is the sea otter. Ten or fifteen years ago a hunting party could go out and kill perhaps twenty of these splendid animals in one hunt. Now the same party may go out and get one, or it may come back without any. Owing to the scarcity of the animals, too, the hunting of the few left is becoming more and more difficult. A skin now brings from $200 to $500 to the Indian hunters, and in London they sell for $350 to $1,200. Most of these skins are bought in London by the Russians.

Hunting the Sea Otter.

"At least eleven canoes, each holding a hunter, are necessary in the killing of sea otters. They can be hunted only when the water is glassy smooth, as their habits are such that they are invisible on a rippling surface. They are a strangely human sort of creature. The mother otter nurses her babe in her arms, and they sleep on their backs in the water. When frightened or suspicious they keep only their noses and eyes out of the water.

"When the hunters start out each is armed with a rifle, and each man uses marked bullets, that may be identified after they are fired. When the nose of an otter is sighted the man finding it gives a signal to the nearest boatman, and in a few moments the little fleet is surrounding the creature. When the great circle is complete as may be the nose of the animal may be a thousand yards from the nearest marksman. A shot is fired at the black spot on the water and it disappears. The animal is capable of diving 3,000 feet under water, and it may not come up for many minutes, but if the circle is well formed it is not likely to break the line.

"The instant the nose appears again another shot or two is sent after it, and the boats close in on the circle. Time and again it comes up, only to be frightened down again, each time for a shorter period. As it weakens and grows short of breath the otter raises more and more of its head out of the water, until finally it is a good target for the hunters. As soon as it is in range the Indians begin to take careful aim. Finally a lucky shot kills the creature, and the whole party lands.

"The otter is skinned at once and the shots that may have struck it are followed until the bullet is found. The rules of the hunt are that $10 from the skin shall go to the man who sighted it; $5 each shall go to the other nine men in the party, while the one whose marked bullet evidently killed the animal gets all the rest. There is seldom any disagreement in these parties, either.

"Sometimes an otter killed on land may have several bullet holes in his skin, but these holes are no damage to the fur, as the furrier closes them easily from the back. Ordinarily, now, when one hide has been secured, the whole party goes back to the trading post. The Indians are much shrewder traders now than they were once. They have need to be. They may take the hide to every dealer in the post and still be dissatisfied. In such a case they pick upon some squaw to take the pelt to another post—maybe even to Dawson. They would not trust a man to do it, for he would be almost certain to get drunk. The squaws are almost universally honest and dependable, and the hunters count on every penny of returns save the necessary expense incurred. Sometimes the Indians make money by this; sometimes they don't. I offered a party of hunters $300 for a skin, but they refused to take it. They sent a woman with it to Dawson and there she got only $300 after spending $40 on steamer fares and incidental expenses. She was the wife of the man who had killed it, and she was quite pleased with her trip and experience.

"Near Cook's Inlet one finds the best hunting. There are moose, caribou, mountain sheep, and bears for big game. In addition there are millions of geese, ducks, brants, and water fowl of all description. Our party killed three moose, seven mountain sheep, and one caribou in the four months that we were there. We have brought back twelve moose skins and heads, seventeen mountain sheep, thirteen wolf skins, and the hides of sixty bears. The largest of these bear hides is more than nine feet long and is eight feet in width. It came from a grizzly. Some of these grizzlies reach a length of thirteen feet.

Deer Have Become Extinct.

"Deer in Alaska proper are now extinct, but the islands off the mainland are full of them. This is due to the fact that wolves will not take to water, while it is the deer's favorite method for escaping pursuit. A pack of wolves chases a deer to the sea and it swims out to an island. In this way the whole archipelago of the Alaskan peninsula is full of deer.

"Once the moose and caribou were in great herds, but they have thinned greatly. After Sept. 1 the mountain sheep gather in bands and even yet as many as 300 may be found in a flock. The moose and caribou, however, are seldom more than twenty-five in a herd, and they are exceedingly shy and difficult to kill.

"The territory needs a good, practical game law that could be enforced. That enforcement would be difficult, however. Among the thousands of adventurers in the territory there are many who kill game wantonly. The Indians, too, have no regard for the preservation of species.

"The fish supply of the country is open to the onslaught of canners and packers. Something should be done to regulate this. A fisherman may go out, and in an hour, with only hook and line, catch fifteen halibut, some of them weighing 200 pounds. These big fish, of course, have to be let go, as they cannot be taken into a boat. There are millions of codfish, herrings in myriads, and salmon in swarms, but at the present rate of canning the supply will be cut into heavily in a few years. All other kinds of shell-fish save oysters abound in these Alaskan waters. It is only a matter of time when Alaska will be supplying the United States with fish. Just how long it supplies will depend upon how the sources of supply are treated by the fishermen. There are no reptiles of any kind in Alaska, not even turtles, lizards, or frogs. There are a few toads, however."

HUNTING SCENES IN ALASKA, WHERE GAME SUPPLY IS BEING RUINED.

BEGGAR ACTOR WON A COIN.

Man Who Had Been with McCullough Played Touching Role.

"Madam, can you contribute toward the purchase of a breakfast for one who has been less fortunate than yourself?"

There was a ring of broken pride in the voice that told of better days, and awakened interest enough to stop a busy little woman hurrying down Michigan avenue to her down-town business in the early morning. The morning was very warm, yet the speaker was wrapped in a faded coat, half mantle and half ulster, which graced an athletic figure that once might have trodden the boards. To halt in her quick pace down town was something unusual for the woman, but the dissipated face, with the gray, shaggy head, appealed to her, and she asked wonderingly:

"What has caused you bad luck?"

"It happened, madam," the man responded, "that the world went hard with me, among other things. I know all the stages in the descent of man, and, in fact, I know the stage itself. Things were different when I played with McCullough in the 70's." He sighed as he leaned gracefully against one of the foundation pillars of the Calumet Club building, and let his eyes wander over the ruins of the burned church opposite.

The woman was compelled to admire the beggar, whose figure was as majestic as McCullough's own, and who belonged, it was evident, to the same artistic profession.

"But what brought you to this condition?" she asked, breaking in upon his abstraction as she saw a far-off look in his eyes that might have belonged to McCullough in Bloomingdale.

"Oh, I found the current too swift for me. When I got into it I couldn't get out. When a man gets to going downward," he went on, addressing the charred walls, not the woman—"when a man gets to going downward, nothing can stop him—unless it is a woman—and—and the woman died! I should have been a different man if it had not been for that. I left her in a grave back there in Donegal, and I went down with the current—left her in a grave in Donegal," he continued, forgetting his listener, forgetting his hunger, as he drew his old cloak around his once proud form and walked away, and the soft morning breeze brought back the words, "a grave in Donegal."

The woman called to him, but he did not heed her, and then she ran after him, and put a coin in his hand for the sake of a heart gone to dust in a grave in Donegal.

When she had parted with her money she walked on, reflecting that it might be only a clever bit of acting, after all. "And," she finished aloud, "women are the most gullible creatures on earth."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Butterfly King.

The London Express, in announcing the death of William Watkins, one of the foremost entomologists of the day, gives this interesting story of his life:

Of Welsh extraction, he began collecting butterflies when he was a schoolboy of nine. At that time there were fields in the vicinity of Peckham, and the first butterfly Mr. Watkins ever caught was the "peacock." From thenceforth he became an ardent entomologist; he gradually went on collecting moths, and eventually he made this the business of his life.

His parents articled him to some ship and insurance brokers, but while out with them he devoted all his leisure time to collecting. Indeed, it was no unusual occurrence for him to stay out until midnight in pursuit of the treasures he coveted. Taking a dislike to the shipbroking business, and manifesting the inevitable desire to "see life," he went to India, where he had plenty of scope for his love of entomology.

After a sojourn of six years in India, he returned to England, and was able to sell a large collection to Mr. Horniman, the well-known tea merchant.

He then began business as a professional entomologist, and opened establishments in Piccadilly and in the Strand. In 1881 he formed the Insect House in the Zoological Gardens.

During the past ten years he resided at Eastbourne, where he carried on the breeding of butterflies of the most diverse specimens. His success earned for him the name of "The Butterfly King."

Largest Room in the World.

The largest room in the world, under one roof and unbroken by pillars, is at St. Petersburg. It is 620 feet long by 150 in breadth. By daylight it is used for military displays and a whole battalion can completely maneuver in it. By night 20,000 wax tapers give it a beautiful appearance. The roof is a single arch of iron.

A Japanese Auction.

A Japanese auction is a most solemn affair. The public do not call out their bids, but write their names, together with the amount they are willing to pay, on slips of paper and put them in a box. These are looked through, and the article awarded to the person who has made the biggest offer.

A Bad Situation.

"Travel in the Swiss Alps is dangerous."

"Yes, it is; I climbed all over the whole place once, and didn't meet a man who could understand that I wanted to borrow a dollar."

LOST RACE OF TEXAS.

Prehistoric City Near Galveston Engulfed by a Tidal Wave.

Relics of a prehistoric race were discovered in Galveston, Texas, just previous to the storm that flooded the city. Nearly 2,000 human skeletons were found, and scientists who examined the excavations had just given the opinion that an ancient city had been submerged by a tidal wave that drowned all the inhabitants, when the calamity of centuries ago was repeated.

The bones were discovered in a search for relics for the archaeological exhibit at the Pan-American exposition, which is to be held in Buffalo, N. Y., next summer. The skeletons are beyond a doubt several thousand years old, and the character of the people who occupied the coast of the gulf at this period is an interesting subject for speculation. Whoever they may have been and whenever they may have lived, the remains found show beyond a question that some terrible outbreak of nature caused the sudden death of thousands of these ancient people and their burial in the strata where by chance they were exhumed by the people of a far-distant age.

It was but a short time ago that the excavations were begun which resulted in these singular and extraordinary discoveries. The finding of the remains in the first place was quite accidental. H. J. Simmons, superintendent of the Arizona and New Mexico Railway, was making excavations along the lines of the railroad near Clear Creek, Galveston County, when bones were found in the earth removed. On examination of the contents of the steam shovel, skulls and human teeth were noticed, and further search led to the discovery of skeletons of whole families, together with ivory beads and other objects of human handiwork.

Realizing the valuable and scientific character of the discovery, a systematic search of the strata in the vicinity was made. Geologists say the whole section of the State was once covered by the Gulf of Mexico. The idea at once came to Mr. Simmons that in far distant ages a tidal wave had occurred at the time the gulf covered more of that part of the country than at present and that these bones were the remains of the thousands of human beings who had been drowned in the overflow of the waters of the gulf. His theory was later upheld by leading scientists.

TRIMMED A BOY'S COFFIN.

Mrs. Timothy Woodruff Used Her Own Costly Dresses for This Purpose.

When a poor boy died in the Adirondacks, near the Woodruffs' summer home, the wife of New York's Lieutenant Governor, hearing no coffin could be procured, ordered a servant to make one from pine boards in their carpenter's shop. It was finished in rude shape and Mrs. Woodruff, knowing how this would hurt the grieving mother's heart, varnished it herself and trimmed the interior with rich silk and lace from her costly dresses. A pillow, formed of plush, completed the work, and the tearful smile in the mother's face was for Mrs. Woodruff recognition enough.

MRS. TIMOTHY L. WOODRUFF.

Man and Beast.

Nothing can be so terrible to an animal as a human being. There are times when the brute seems to recognize instinctively that man belongs to a higher order of creation, and is stricken with a feeling akin to awe in his presence.

In a small African village, some years ago, there was a scare about some leopards which were said to have killed a number of goats. Accordingly two white men, accompanied by several natives, set off to hunt them. Presently they found a place in the long grass where it was evident that one of the brutes had recently lain, for the ground was still warm.

The natives formed a ring round it, and the hunters got their guns ready. After a little while the leopard emerged from the long grass and was fired at and wounded, but not fatally. With a great bound, he sprang on one of the white men, and brought him to the ground. Holding his victim, he turned and growled savagely at the others.

The natives gave a wild yell for fear, and then, like a shot, the leopard sprang away. He had not been frightened by the guns, but the yell terrified him.

The wounded hunter was ill for a long time, and finally had to go back to England, as one of his eyes was badly injured.

The Real "Flowery Kingdom."

Flowers bloom in the Sandwich Islands all the year round; therefore it is believed that that country is more deserving than Japan of the title, "Flowery Kingdom."

IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

Student Life of the Olden Time Presented a Unique Spectacle.

The student world of olden time presents a unique spectacle to the observer of the nineteenth century. When instruction was about to begin a curious sight was exhibited. Groups of students are pressing toward the university from every quarter. Their bright dresses flash along lonely forest ways. Now they form a part of a caravan of merchants making its slow way along the valleys, or they join themselves timidly to the retinue of some knight for protection; or they float down the dull, sluggish German streams in the trafficking boats. They stop for a day in the great cities through which they pass in order to feast their eyes upon the sights of a new world; they appear for a time amid the crowds at the yearly fairs, where they tell fortunes, or predict eclipses, or sell charms and false relics, or unfold the mysteries of the black art, to earn an honest penny to help them on their way. To-night they sleep in a castle court, and enjoy the hospitality given to strangers; to-morrow a friendly monastery gives them shelter and the wayfarer's food. They chaff the honest country people, and make love to the maidens with their gay manner and songs. They seem like the reckless, careless, troubadours with their jests and merry-making. The wealthier students ride on horseback; the nobles are accompanied by a retinue of attendants, the names of all of whom will be entered on the university books. The poor students, who hope by a drink from the mysterious fountain of knowledge to improve their prospects in life, have no baggage. The others carry a pack containing a velvet or satin doublet, linen shirts, a dairy, an album, a letter of introduction and some book, usually a Greek Testament, Terence, Ovid, Plautus or Petronius. Most wear a sword as a part of their dress, and for defense as well, for the hot blood of these students constantly leads to broils.—Harper's Magazine.

They are never alone that are accompanied by noble thoughts.—Sidney.

A CONGRESSMAN

Cured of Catarrh of Long Standing.

Ex-Congressman A. T. Goodwyn.

Ex-Congressman A. T. Goodwyn, from Alabama, writes the following letter:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"I have now used two bottles of Peruna, and am a well man to-day. I could feel the good effects of your medicine before I had used it a week, after suffering with catarrh for over a year." Respectfully, A. T. Goodwyn.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh. Public men of all parties recognize in Peruna a national catarrh remedy of unequaled merit. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on catarrh.

$3.00 W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES $3.50 UNION MADE

The real worth of our $3.00 and $3.50 shoes compared with other makes is $4.00 to $5.00. We are the largest makers and retailers of men's $3.00 and $3.50 shoes in the world. We make and sell more $3.00 and $3.50 shoes than any other two manufacturers in the U. S. Established in 1876.

Why do you pay $4 to $5 for shoes when you can buy W. L. Douglas shoes for $3 and $3.50 which are just as good.

THE REASON more W. L. Douglas $3 and $3.50 shoes are sold than any other make is because THEY ARE THE BEST FOR MEN.

THE BEST $3.50 SHOE. Made of the best imported and American leathers. The workmanship is unexcelled. The style is equal to $4 and $5 shoes of other makes. They fit like custom made shoes. They will outwear two pairs of other makes at the same prices, that have no reputation. You can safely recommend them to your friends; they please everybody that wears them. THE BEST $3.00 SHOE.

Your dealer should keep them; we give one dealer exclusive sale in each town.

Take no substitute! Insist on having W. L. Douglas shoes with name and price stamped on bottom. If your dealer will not get them for you, send direct to factory, enclosing price and 25c. extra for carriage. State kind of leather, size, and width, plain or cap toe. HUDSON MAXIM'S HAND.

It Is Artificial, but Does Good Service for Its Owner.

"I read with more than ordinary interest your recent interview with Hudson Maxim, the inventor of smokeless powder," remarked a New York merchant. "One reason why it was interesting to me was because of an unusual incident which was the means of my becoming acquainted with Mr. Maxim.

"The inventor, you know, has but one hand, the other having been blown off while he was experimenting with some high explosive. The first time I ever saw Mr. Maxim was one night on the elevated railroad train. He was a stranger to me at that time, and my attention was attracted to him by the actions of a half-drunken burly ruffian who sat in the cross seat opposite and persisted in annoying him in one way and another. A quiet protest from the stranger brought a torrent of vile language from the ruffian, accompanied by a hostile demonstration and a profane threat to 'punch his head.'

"The stranger paid as little attention to the outrage as possible and kept on reading his newspaper. I noticed that the stranger had an artificial left hand, which was gloved and looked very much like the other one. When he got up to leave the car at his station the ruffian jeered at him, and, getting up from his seat, followed him out. It wasn't my station, but, feeling almost certain that the stranger would need some protection, I followed them out of the car. The stranger went down the stairs first, the ruffian a few steps behind him, grumbling all the way, and I next.

"When the stranger reached the bottom of the stair he stepped out to the middle of the sidewalk, apparently making room for the ruffian to pass him. Instead of accepting the opportunity to go his way, he made directly for the stranger, who sent out a good right-hander, which caught the scoundrel on the point of the jaw, knocked him clean across the curb and landed him all in a heap in the gutter, where he lay quivering like a beef hit with an ax. A grewsome part of the midnight incident was that as the stranger landed his knock-out blow his artificial hand became detached and fell to the pavement with a clatter. I confess that I was a little startled at this, and before I could recover myself, he had picked up his artificial hand, put it under his arm and walked off.

"Although he had demonstrated his ability to take care of himself up to that time, I did not know but he would need me as a witness later, and, overtaking him, gave him my card. He gave me his in return, and not till I got home and looked at the card did I know that the stranger who had so handsomely protected himself against a ruffian was Hudson Maxim. Since then we have become very good friends, and have often wondered what sort of an account of the affair the police got from the man we left at the foot of the stairs."—New York Commercial.

Periodical Famines Expected.

Since the first great famine of which there are records devastated the land in 1770, when 10,000,000 perished in Bengal alone, India has scarcely passed a decade free from scarcity of grain in one district or another. The British government expects a drought about twice in every nine years, a famine once in every twelve years, and a great famine like the present about twice in a century.

THE FIRST TOUCH OF AUTUMN.

ELMAR SPEAR.

She Is Only Seven Years Old, but Weighs 180 Pounds.

Green County, Ark., boasts one of the heaviest girls in the United States for her years. She is Elmar Spear and age is only 7. Despite this she weighs 180 pounds. Her hight is 51 inchest. Elmar is phenomenally strong and can readily lift a man weighing 200 pounds and carry him across a room. She enjoys excellent health and her mind is as bright as her body is abnormally developed. If her present rate of growth and development is maintained she will probably be the largest and heaviest woman in the world.

ELMAR SPEAR.

THE PAPAL DELEGATE.

Archbishop Martinelli a Man of Rare Charm and Tact.

One of the most popular as well as diplomatic representatives which the Pope has ever sent to this country is Archbishop Martinelli. Although leading a most secluded life at the papal legation at Washington, his popularity extends throughout the United States. He was sent to America in 1896. In him are united the most lovable qualities of the Latin race. Tactful and possessing a knowledge of the traditions of the people among whom he lives, he is ever careful against offending. The infinite pains, too, that he takes in small matters, his never failing amiability and unselfishness endear him both to the people of his own church and those of other communions who have the privilege of knowing him.

Monsignor Martinelli was educated at Rome under Cardinal Sepiacci, of the

MONSIGNOR MARTINELLI.

Angelica, being ordained as a priest March 4, 1871. He is a member of the Order of St. Augustine, to which his brother, Cardinal Martinelli, who donned the habit in 1863, also belonged. Shortly before his ordination, the monsignor lived for some years in the Augustine community in Ireland, where he became familiar with the English language as it is spoken by our Irish cousins, and his accent still suggests a slight brogue.

In 1889 Archbishop Martinelli was elected to the post of prior general of his order, and in 1895 was confirmed in this office for a term of twelve years. It is doubtful if anyone among the Augustines is more popular or more widely loved, and none surely have a more potent influence.

Resigned to His Fate.

The following story of a negro slave is told by a French officer conducting an exploring expedition recently up one of the rivers which flow into the Congo:

"One night while we were in camp there came from the jungle a youthful voice crying out to our boatman in the Yakoma tongue: "Halloa, Sangos! Do you know on the Ubanqui the Yakoma chief Dembassi of the village of Dimassa?"

"Yes! we know him."

"Is he still living?"

"He was living when we left Ubanqui."

"He is my father. When you see him on your return, salute him for me. Tell him that his son, now become a man, has not much to complain of in his situation, but that he longs for his native country, his father's village and his friends. Tell them that I am a slave of the Sango chief, and that he treats me well."

"How came you here?" asked the boatman.

"My father, debtor to a Bougbou, sold me to his creditor eight times twelve moons ago. From market to market I have passed, through many hands to finish here fifty moons ago. You will give my message to my people, will you not?"

Taught How to Kindle Fires.

Up in Oregon they are teaching in the special schools a number of simple household duties. For instance, one of these is how to kindle a fire. Now, at first blush, it would seem to be trifling with time to teach a boy or girl how to start a fire in a stove or on a hearth. But as a matter of fact the mass of children grow up without understanding that art. It requires a certain skill and knowledge, which it is found the many do not have. Fire mismanagement by girls has been a prolific source of woe. It means ill-cooked food, waste of fuel, loss of time and danger to life and property. But, then, why should parents by neglect of home duty force this new task upon even a special school system?

London's Hospitals.

More than 1,000,000 people are treated in the hospitals of London each year.

"I'm thinking of going to the Paris exposition. I wonder how much it would cost me.' "That depends." "Depends on what?" "On how much you take with you."—Philadelphia Press.

People never sympathize with a wife's devotion when she calls her husband "darling" if his collar is soiled, and he needs cleaning up.

The Minister's Wife's Work.

Every minister's wife is deeply interested in the work of the church, but no one should attempt to decide for her how much of that work is her share. The undue binding of burdens upon shoulders wearied with much willing service has caused some of us to raise our voices in protest, if not for ourselves, for the overtaxed bodies and brains of our less fortunately situated sisters. Let a clergyman's wife decide not to be tyrannized over by circumstances. She, more than many, needs to think out her life with care, and come to definite conclusions by which she is willing to abide. No regulations can be laid down for all alike, for a woman must be herself the judge of her abilities. Let her see to it, however, that she remains uninfluenced by those who seek to direct her. It may be laid down as part of the remedy that no minister's wife should be at the head of more than one organization, and if her home cares are many she should not attempt even that. If she desires to take a class in Sunday school she need not be given the worst class of boys, nor the most difficult class of little children.—Ladies' Home Journal.

What Will Become of China?

None can foresee the outcome of the quarrel between foreign powers over the division of China. It is interesting to watch the going to pieces of this race. Many people are also going to pieces because of dyspepsia, constipation and stomach diseases. Good health can be retained if we use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Tale of Trouble.

"In the first place," said the fat man with the red neck, "I forgot my jug of commissary supplies when I started on that fishing trip, and there was none to be had within eighty miles."

"Too bad," said the lean man with the stringy mustache.

"But that ain't the worst of it. Of course, I came home without showing the usual signs of having been on a fishing trip, and my wife thinks I wasn't fishing at all, and vows she will find out where I was during that time if it takes every cent I've got."—Indianapolis Press.

Soldiers of Japan.

In Japan every able-bodied man is a soldier, and even the children know the use of arms. Military drill is a part of the regular education in the schools throughout the empire. Schoolboys dress in a military uniform cut on the pattern of cadet uniforms in Europe and America. Their instructors are regular army officers, veterans of the war with China, and some of them of the Satsuma rebellion of 1877. This has its effect on the youthful mind, ever prone to hero worship and trebly so in Japan.

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

MISS PEARL GOOD

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is just simply wonderful the change your medicine has made in me. I feel like another person. My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

Money in Waste Sardine Cans.

In Paris the thousands of sardine and other tin boxes that are thrown away every month form the basis of an industry that has reached vast proportions. These refuse cans are stamped by machinery into tin soldiers and sold so cheaply that the poorest children can possess them; yet the manufacturer makes a fair profit, which he could not do if he used new material.

Nerve Food

If you have neuralgia, Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will feed the nerve that is crying for food—it is hungry—and set your whole body going again, in a way to satisfy nerve and brain from your usual food.

That is cure.

If you are nervous and irritable, you may only need more fat to cushion your nerves—you are probably thin—and Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will give you the fat, to begin with.

Cure, so far as it goes. Full cure is getting the fat, you need from usual food, and Scott's Emulsion will help you to that.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

What Will Bryan's Plurality be in Indiana?

IN PRIZES to 76 subscribers to THE INDIANA STATE SENTINEL who come nearest guessing the plurality Indiana will give Bryan over McKinley.

The publishers of The Indiana State Sentinel will award seventy-six prizes to seventy-six subscribers, who at any time before the close of the polls Tuesday, Nov. 6, correctly estimate or come nearest doing so, Bryan and Stevenson's plurality over McKinley and Roosevelt in Indiana.

First prize	$300.00
Second prize	200.00
Third prize	100.00
Fourth prize	75.00
Fifth prize	50.00
Sixth prize	25.00
5 prizes of $15 each	75.00
5 prizes of $10 each	50.00
10 prizes of $5 each	50.00
25 prizes of $2 each	50.00
25 prizes of $1 each	25.00
	1,000.00

NOTE—The result will be decided from the vote cast for the head of the democratic electoral ticket.

If the unexpected should happen and Mr. Bryan not carry the state, then the lowest plurality guess, or the one nearest the result, will get the prize.

Where two or more guesses are the same, the first one received will be awarded the prize.

Guessers should be careful to write name and address plainly, and also state whether they are an old or new subscriber.

$1,000 To The Winners

Conditions.

Any subscriber, old or new, is entitled to one guess on payment of 50 cents—one year's subscription—received at this office before the close of polls on election day—Tuesday, Nov. 6, 1900. The name of subscriber remitting the money will be recorded with the figures of his guess. The receipt of money, as well as his estimate of Bryan and Stevenson's plurality over McKinley and Roosevelt in Indiana, will be acknowledged, and should be laid aside by him until the official vote of Indiana shall have been ascertained, when the names of prize-takers will be duly announced in these columns.

If your subscription is not paid in advance pay it now and participate in this great distribution of actual money. If your subscription is paid in advance, send us 50 cents for another year and give a guess. You stand a chance of getting $300 for 50 cents, and if you do not hit a prize you have your money's worth in The Indiana State Sentinel, the greatest family newspaper in the West.

SEND in your 50 cents with your guess at once. Your judgment is as likely to be correct at this time as it is the day before election. Be careful to date your guesses, and remember you can have as many guesses as you take subscriptions to The Indiana State Sentinel.

—"For three days and nights I suffered untold agony from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by H. B. McCord.

Achievements of African Traveler.

Major Gibbons, the African traveler, who reached Omdurman on August 20, traversed a distance of 13,000 miles. Among the objects attained were the mapping of Barotseland; the accomplishment of the first steam navigation of the middle Zambesi, and the tracing of the whole course of the river, the discovery of its source and the determination of its watershed.

—A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at H. B. McCord's drug store. It is called Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indications of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free.

Russian Detectives Guard Dowager.

The dowager empress of Russia has always declined to accept the guard of Russian detectives during her visits home. On her recent visit, however, this custom was altered at the command of the reigning czar, and much against the desire of the empress. She was followed by eight Russian detectives of the international service.

—When you cannot sleep for coughing, it is hardly neccessary that anyone should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by H. B. McCord.

A Curious Newspaper.

The most curious newspaper is the Stereo Revue, published in Paris. This newspaper gives the news of the week, not in type, but in instantaneous photographs on a film, like that of a cinematograph. A bobbin of this film is the journal, and the subscriber puts it through a portable stereoscope, like a field glass, and looks at the pictures, thereby reading the news.

—When you have no appetite, do not relish your food and feel dull after eating you may know that you need a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Price 25 cents. Samples free at H. B. McCord's drug store.

Germany's Chances for Coal.

Germany is likely to have a hard winter as far as domestic coal is concerned. Prices are high at present, but are certain to rise when cold weather comes. It cost eighty marks ($19.04) to get 200 hundredweights of coal to Frankfort from the Ruhr district. There is an excellent market in Germany for American coal if it could only be sold at a reasonable rate.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Home of Swamp-Root.

At Hymen's Altar.

Last evening was the wedding of two of our best known and most worthy young people, George Beugnot and Inez Pauline Rose. Rev. J. D. Brosy, St Marks Lutheran church officiated, Rev. T. E. Borrows, having been called away by the death of his son.

There were present about eighty guests, including besides the more intimate friends of the two families, several relatives from abroad. A lovely canopy of green sprays and lovely vines formed the altar arch where the ceremony was performed.

As the clock showed the approach of the hour, eight the bride's sister, Laura took her place at the piano, and played the wedding march. The first to enter ware the two little girls, Dorothy Torrance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Graham Torrance of St. Paul, acting as ring bearer, and Helen Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rose, as flower girl. Then came the groom and best man, Ed. Little, followed by the bridesmaid, Miss Mae Rose, sister of the bride and she was followed by the bride leaning on her father's arm.

At the altar, the impressive and dramatic ring ceremony of the Episcopal church was followed, by the guidance of Mr. Brosy, the parties responding, and taking there several parts most gracefully. The father made the usual response, giving the bride away. The little girls were ready and graceful in their parts, the solemn promises and prayers were made, and the ceremony closed when Mr. Brosy introduced them to the friends, and congratulations and good wishes followed.

The bride was the personfication of loveliness, the wedding dress being of French organdie and white taffeta trimmed with valenciennes lace and insertion. The groom wore the usual suit of black.

Then came the purely social features of the occasion, for the company held many old-time friends, who were glad to greet each other again. An elegant and dainty supper in courses followed, and at about eleven, the party separated for their homes, with good wishes for the future of the young couple. They go to housekeeping in their own furnished home today. The groom is a rising young business man of great promise, having been employed many years in the store of Schaab Brothers. The bride is no less well known, and is justly popular. She has been for many years, a successful teacher in the Auburn public schools.

Among the friends from outside of Auburn, we note, Mrs. Graham Torrance of St. Paul, Minn., and her little daughter Dorothy; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Webster and son Earl, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Potter, Mrs. C. J. Coats and Mrs. P. B. Nimmons, of Butler; Dr. and Mrs. Homer Robinson of Bluffton; Miss Marcella Baker of Fort Wayne; John Sattersfield of New Haven, and Roy McQuigg of Phœnix, Arizona.

Good Advice.

When that distressing pain seems to grab you by the back of the head and neck and your eyes seem fixed on a given point straight ahead, do not make yourself sick by taking Drastic Cathartics, but take a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It relieves the pressure on the nerve centers of the brain and aids digestion by curing constipation permanently. In 10c, 50c and $1 sizes at H. B. McCord's.

Barn Burned.

The barn of George Likens about four miles northwest of Auburn burned yesterday afternoon about two o'clock. The straw stack near it, also was destroyed. The cause of the fire is not known. We did not learn as to the amount of loss or insurance.

Mexican Dollars.

The director of the Mexican mint, Leandro Fernandez, reports that the demand in Asia for Mexican silver dollars is increasing and that the production is not commensurate therewith.

This evidently does not mean, as a dispatch from the Mexican capital has it, that the yield of the Mexican mines is not sufficient to meet the demand. The production in 1899 is stated at about 80,000,000 pesos, or dollars, while the export of silver coin was only 15,000,000 pesos.

Silver in ore and bullion to the value of 47,000,000 pesos was exported that year. Had this been coined it would have more than sufficed, no doubt, to meet the oriental demand.

That demand is supposed to be due to the greater quantity of pure silver in the Mexican peso, or dollar, than in the corresponding coins of other countries, and very likely this was a fact in the first instance. But what was originally a sound commercial reason long ago passed over into custom.

In 1873 our congress, under the advice of mint officials and others, accepting the assumption that the Chinese preferred the Mexican dollar merely because it contained more silver, provided for the coinage of the trade dollar, containing more silver than the Mexican dollar, in the expectation that it would be preferred to the latter.

But it was not preferred. The Chinese were accustomed to the Mexican dollar and they gave it the preference for that reason, and because they had learned that it was always the same in content of pure silver, aside from abrasion.

The Mexican coinage for export has been diminished by a coinage charge amounting to practically to 5 per cent. under a law passed in 1897. If the charge were not more than 1 per cent. —which would far exceed the cost—probably Mexico would supply all the the increasing oriental demand for her dollar coinage and realize a fair profit.

Is She a New Woman.

Tiffin, Ohio, Advertiser:—There was a strange occurrence on the 5:23 B. & O. train going west Saturday night. When the cars reached Newark a very stylishly dressed young woman, who was not at all of the flashy order, got aboard and instead of going into the day coach, walked into the smoker and in spite of the stares calmly took a seat and gazed out of the window. In a short time she calmly pulled out a cigarette case, extracted a "smoke" and nonchalantly turning around to the man in the seat behind her asked, "Will you please give me a match?" In an instant there were enough matches offered to start a badly drawing pipe. The young lady lifted a dainty foot, scratched the match and lighted the cigarette, leaned back and puffed away. The gang in the smoker were about paralyzed and several of the younger portion tried to get up a flirtation with the young woman, but she attended to her own business and the cigarette, and puffed away until it was all gone. At Deshler she alighted from the train and evere one "rubbered" to see whe would meet her. A nice looking old gentleman grabbed the lady, kissed her affectionately, and the twain disappeared toward the town. The conductor said that he had been on the road for 20 years and that last night was the first time he had ever seen a woman enter a smoking car and indulge in the weed.

Pleasant Gathering.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Johnson and daughter entertained a company of relatives and old-time friends at dinner, today. The occasion was one of especial interest and pleasure, for the reason that they came from many different and distant places, and therefore meet each other but seldom. Those present were Mrs. R. A. Dunshee of Salt Lake City, Utah; Mrs. Henry Beams of Spencerville; Mrs. Jane Long of Doddgadge, Ark.; Mrs. Rebecca Bennett of Harbor Springs, Mich.; Mrs. A. LII.

While listening to the intensely interesting play last evening the mind naturally went back to those days when Christians were tortured and put to death. The story of the sufferings of these Christians was brought vividly to mind by the drama "Quo Vadis" where the Christian maiden, and even her friends came near meeting a horrible death from wild beasts in the Arena. Happily, these barbarous practices are now almost unknown, the last instances of suffering death for religion's sake, being the recent murders of missionaries in China. No other nation that is recognized as such by the civilized nations of the earth would now permit such a thing. Yet at the time of Nero, when the Roman Empire was the leading power of the world, that great people were the chief actors in these muderous persecutions while those who refused to take a part in them were the weaker and much less enlightened, small nations of the earth.

People have read and re-read the scripture account of the martyrdom and have often been at a loss to know on what charge, if any, of a legal character, these executions for religion's sake, were conducted. But it appears that in all or nearly all cases, some legal reasons were trumped up. In the later days, it was asserted that any religion not in accordance with that already established was dangerous to the state, and that two religions, side by side, always bred wars and contentions among the people. But in the case of the first and greatest martyr, Jesus Christ, this particular point was not urged. While the Bible does not give the form or substance of the entire charge trumped up against Him it has, however, been discovered.

About fifty years ago, the "Courier dis Etats Unis," a French paper then published in New York, surprised the world by publishing the true charge. The article reads:

"Chance has put into our hands a most imposing and interesting judicial document, to all christians, that has ever been recorded in human annals, that is, the identical death warrant of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We transcribe the document from a copy of the translation:

"Sentence rendered by Pontius Pilate Acting Governor of Lower Galilee, that Jesus of Nazareth, shall suffer death on the cross. "In the year seventeeth of the Empire, Tiberius Cæsar and the fourth of March, in the city of Holy Jerusalem: Adam and Caiaphas being present, sacrificators of the people of God.

I, Pontius Pilate, Governor and prætator, condemn Jesus of Nazareth to die on the cross between two thieves—the great notorious evidence of the people saying:

1. He is a seducer.
2. He is seditious.
3. He is the enemy of the law.
4. He calls himself, falsely, the Son of God.
5. He calls himself the King of Israel.
6. He entered the temple followed by a multitude bearing palm branches in their hands.

Order the Centurion Quintius Cornelius to lead him to the place of execution.

For bid any person, whatsoever, poor or rich, to oppose the death of Jesus."

The witnesses that signed the death warrant of Jesus, are

1. Daniel Robani, a Pharisee.
2. James Horohable.
3. Cabet, citizen.

Jesus shall go out of the city by gate Strenous."

The above sentences are engraved on a copper plate. On one side is written these words: "A similar plate is sent to each of the tribes."

It was found in an antique vase of white marble while excavating in the city of Aquillia, in the Kingdom of Naples in 1825.

Both Classes are Benefited.

There is a pretty custom in vogue in Denmark which might with advantage be copied here. During the summer holidays an arrangement is made by which little Danes from town and country change places. The parents of town children send their little folks off to the country and receive in exchange country children. The result is that town children are strengthened and gladdened with country air sights, while the little rustics enjoy the pleasures of town life and the festivals which are for their benefit. This exchange system results in 10,000 children from Copenhagen getting a country holiday, and another 10,000 are brightened up by a visit to the Danish capital.

They Fit an' Fit.

There was a fight of considerable proportions on the public square last evening while the band was playing. The trouble was between Oscar Zelders and a young man from Garrett. It is said to have been caused by jealousy, and the uncertain popularity of each in the eyes of a certain girl. Be this as it may, they fit and fit, like the Boers and the English. Both retired a little the worse for the war.

ROYAL BAKING-POWDER
Absolutely Pure

No inferior or impure ingredients are used in Royal for the purpose of cheapening its cost; only the most highly refined and healthful.

Royal Baking Powder imparts that peculiar sweetness, flavor and delicacy noticed in the finest cake, biscuit, rolls, etc., which expert pastry cooks declare is unobtainable by the use of any other leavening agent.

Alum is used in making cheap baking powders. If you want to know the effect of alum upon the tender linings of the stomach, touch a piece to your tongue. You can raise biscuit with alum baking powder, but at what a cost to health!

A Train Saves a Bank.

Tuesday there was a run started by the depositors of the Grand Haven National Bank. A telegram was sent to the First National Bank at Grand Rapids for help

Cashier Wylie of the First National Bank at Grand Rapids engaged a special train, piled in the express car $250,000 in currency and specie, and had the engineer force his locomotive all the way.

He arrived within a few hours after the sudden drain on the local institution began, and with a fine dramatic effect dashed up to the building in a carriage, the coachman urging his horses to their utmost. But the crisis had been safely passed, and there no longer existed a need for the money.

The run was started, it is charged by persons afflicted with malice toward the bank officials. The depositors gathered, and clamored for their money.

Although the bank had $100 000 of idle money in its vaults, it feared that it might be insufficient, and, in response to inquiries, received assurance of support from numerous establishments in near by towns.

No outside assistance was necessary, however, the bank's own capital being sufficient to supply withdrawals until the insolvency rumor was disproved.

Steps are being taken to apprehend the parties who orrignated the report.

It Happened in a Drugstore.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and ask for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandon, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know to what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by H. B. McCord.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

A NATIONAL PETITION.

The following petition has been sent to Washington by the National W. C. T. U.: "Statements are appearing in the public press to the effect that the houses of prostitution are being established, maintained and inspected in the Philippine Islands for the use of our soldiers by the consent of the army authorities of those islands or under direct supervision. We are unwilling to believe that our government will allow to be introduced among the soldiers that infamous system which brought such just contempt upon England when the condition of affairs in India became known to the world. We beg the President of these United States and the Secretary of War to see to it that no such stigma is allowed to attach itself to our beloved land. To this end, the prayer of the three hundred members of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union is that immediate steps may be taken to prohibit the licensing houses, or the making of any provision whatever for their existence in any of the territory under the jurisdiction of the United States. We protest with all possible emphasis against our government's regulating vice in any form, and more especially, if that were possible, against anything circulated to foster that crime which degrades its citizens, destroyes the purity of the family and deteriorates the race."

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

Note some of the decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court, which cannot be reiterated too often: "No legislature can bargain away the public healths or morals." "The state cannot by any contract limit the exercise of her power to the prejudice of public healths and public morals." "Selling intoxicating liquors is not a privilege of a citizen of a state or of a citizen of the United States." In the light of law and its object and in the light of the appalling facts and figures arrayed against the liquor traffic, what hinders its speedy effectual prohibition? We answer that partisanship in politics whose sole issue is to win the positions of government. Such partisanship is destructive of pure politics.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

More Blood Shed.

The second fatal clash between the striking mine workers and the non-union men occurred early Thursday morning at Oneida collier in Schuylkill County, twelve miles from Hazelton, Pa., when a coal and iron policeman was shot and instantly killed and another policeman and striker dangerously wounded. In addition about a dozen of the employes of the colliery were badly injured by being stoned by the strikers.

The shooting was the result of two separate riots. The first began at 2 o'clock in the morning and reached a climax about 6 o'clock, when the marching strikers, mostly Hungarians, attacked the men on their way to work in the Oneida colliery, which is operated by Coxe Bros & Co.

Millionaire Goes to Work.

In the survey corps engaged in the construction work for the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern Railway Company at Lebanon, Ill., working for $1.50 per day, is a reputed millionaire, or perhaps a multi-millionaire. He is Betram Bell, the son of a wealthy capitalists of New York, who died recently, leaving a large fortune, variously reported from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 to his son, who left the luxuries of his metropolitan home and came out west to enter the surveying corps, just to learn the business. He spends each week many times his meager salary. Young Bell is highly educated, having graduated at Harvard last year, and has traveled extensively.

G. A. R. Staff Officers.

Commander-in-Chief Rasseur, of the G. A. R., in a general order issued recently, announces his staff and the committees which will have charge of the various branches of the organization's work during the coming year. The staff appointments announced are:

Senior Aide-de-Camp and Chief of Staff—Edward N. Ketchum, Galveston, Tex.

United States Troops Sent From China.

Colonel Humphrey, quartermaster in China, has sent a cablegram to the quartermaster general announcing the first departure of United States troops from China. The Kintuk sailed for Manila with forage, quartermaster animals, Company D. Rixth regiment, United States cavalry, pack mules belonging to the Sixth regiment United States cavalry. The transport Indiana will leave soon with about 900 marines.

Terrible Crossing Accident.

This evening as Mrs. Herman Keilbrick and family were crossing the railroad at the depot in Holbrook, Neb., in a farm wagon, an engine ran into them, instantly killing Miss Lizzie Horman, Mrs. Keilbrick and her baby girl, and Mrs. Charles Bartenbeck, also seriously injuring the latter's 4-year-old boy and 18-months-old baby girl. The latter is not expected to survive.

International Oil Workers.

The International Oil Workers convention in session at Findlay, Ohio, adjourned to meet next year in North Baltimore, Ohio. The following officers were elected: President, Ira A. Gibson, Cygnet, Ohio; Vice Presidents, John A. Dike, Montpelier, and C. G. Fitzgibbons, Bradford, Pa.; Secretary-Treasurer, A. H. Mullen, Bowling Green, Ohio.

Aeronaut Falls to Death.

A. P. Deer, an auronaut, fell to his death at Gays Mills, Wis., from a balloon which had ascended to a height of 200 feet. The ascension was made at a fair and was witnessed by 5,000 persons. The balloon exploded and fell 100 feet before the parachute opened and the sudden jerk caused Deer to lose his hold.

Booty Returned.

Jonas Silverman of Valparaiso, Ind., was robbed of $1,500 by confidence men thirty years ago. Recently two of the men returned with wealth from the Alaskan gold fields, and locating Silverman, returned the $1,500 with $1,000 additional for the injury done him.

Farquhar Praises Holland.

Admiral Farquhar's report on the naval maneuvers at Newport recently praises the work of the officers and men. He says the submarine boat Holland is destined to play an important part in naval operations.

General Chinese Uprising Planned.

Hongkong special: It is said that the authorities here have received the information that a general rising in the southern provinces has been planned for the month of November. Ten thousand more troops from India have been requisioned for Hongkong. The present indications are that there will be a boxer rising similar to that which had occurred in North China.

Soldiers' Home Destroyed.

The Soldiers' Home at Boise, Idaho, was destroyed by fire. The loss is $40,000. Thomas Hayes, an inmate, was suffocated.

Sleuths Find Willie Tascott Again.

William Tascott, alleged murderer of Millionaire A. J. Snell of Chicago some ten years ago, and for whom a reward of $50,000 was offered, is shown by a confession of a Nome criminal to be the chief of the Yak Indians, Alaska, disguised.

Trains Collide on a Curve.

Passenger trains Nos. 33 and 35 on the Monon came together in a head-on collision on the curve south of Monticello, Ind. Three persons were injured. The engines were buried in each other and the baggage cars were badly damaged.

BRIDE WON BY TELEPATHY.

Elmer Merrill Mentally Proposes to Edith Tallman Smith and is Accepted.

The romantic engagement of Elmer Merrill of Lowell, Mass., and Miss Edith Tallman Smith is announced. The engagement was the result of telepathy and is the first of its kind on record. Miss Smith lives in the West, but she yearly makes visits to Binghamton, N. Y. Among her admirers was a wealthy business man, whose suit her parents encouraged. She looked upon him favorably until at a social function she met Elmer Merrill. They met but once, as he left for his home in the East the following day, but there arose a strange attraction between them. They did not correspond, for he did not leave an address, but it has since transpired they were constantly thinking of each other and holding mental communications. The merchant had asked for the girl's hand and was to be given an answer the same evening. When he arrived he was astonished by the announcement that she was engaged to another. Her parents thought her insane when she said she had engaged herself to Merrill that afternoon. This was, however, corroborated by a letter written by Merrill to his friends, in which he said he suddenly realized that he was in great danger of losing Miss Smith and he made a mental proposal to her which was accepted. He has since written her his first love letter and she has formally accepted him.

COAL FOR AMERICAN NAVY.

Large Quantities Distributed at Various Points Throughout the World.

The United States has more than 50,000 tons of coal distributed at various points throughout the world for the use of its warships, and this amount will be increased by additions to be made by schooners en route. The largest coal pile is at Manila, where there is 24,000 tons. As large a quantity is now on the way to the far East. At Guam there is 2,856 tons, and a station to accommodate 10,000 is to be established. Honolulu has a naval coal pile of 10,918 tons, and Rear Admiral Bradford has prepared plans for locating 20,000 tons there. There is about 2,500 tons at Pago Pago, and an increase of 2,500 tons will be made upon the completion of the coal house under construction at that point. At San Juan, Porto Rico, the navy controls 3,426 tons. The navy also has coal at Annapolis, Boston, League Island, New London, Norfolk, Port Royal and Key West, on the Atlantic coast, and at Mare Island and Puget Sound, on the Pacific coast.

SOME PRICES SLIGHTLY LOWER.

Iron, Wool, Coal and Sugar Have Declined a Little—Textiles Are Firm.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s review of trade says: "Prices are slightly lower in iron, wool, coal and sugar, but the produce and textile markets are firm and in all departments of business an effort by distributors to increase transactions would quickly advance prices There is little ordering ahead in any kind of merchandise, but steel-rail makers look for contracts for about 2,000,000 tons after election. The most interesting financial development was the further drop of 1 cent in the pound in sterling exchange, completing a decline of 2 cents in two weeks, without any important change in our money market. Failures for the week were 208 in the United States, against 134 last year, and 23 in Canada, against 20 last year."

BURNS HIS LIBRARY.

New York Atheist Is Converted and Destroys His Books.

Converted from atheism and anarchy, Anarchist Robert A. Guidelly of Newark, N. J., for twenty-one years an active exponent of the "red doctrine," and a hater of law and religion, burned his library of anarchistic books, smashed the busts of the men that had been his ideals and the other night married his common law wife according to the rites of church and state.

SUNK IN A COLLISION.

Steamer Swallow Run Down by Unknown Vessel—Crew Escapes.

The steamer Swallow, loaded with cedar, bound down, was run into and sunk by some unknown up-bound steamer two miles below Marine City, Mich. The crew succeeded in getting their vessel into shoal water before she sunk to the bottom. No lives were lost. The Swallow was struck on the port bow, which is badly battered and crushed.

Many Hurt by Explosion.

Seven thousand pounds of dynamite in the powder magazine at the Spruce mine, about half a mile from Eveleth, Minn., blew up. The loss in the city is estimated at $30,000. The damage done to the Spruce mine was about $3,000, the mine laboratory and warehouses being totally wrecked. At least 200 people were hurt more or less by the shock or by shattered glass.

New Officers for Northwestern University.

Rev. William A. Burch, pastor of the South Park Avenue M. E. Church, Chicago, has been selected to fill the position of financial agent of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., and Robert D. Sheppard, at present financial secretary of the institution, is to succeed to the presidency of the school.

Cure for Yellow Fever.

One hundred thousand dollars is the prize which Dr. Angel Bellinzaghi, a young Italian specialist, may win as the discoverer of a serum which cures yellow fever. Several years ago the Mexican government made a standing offer of $100,000 to the discoverer of a remedy for yellow fever.

Murdered at a Street Fair.

Thomas Tolliver, a gambler, was shot and killed in Main street, Washington, Ind., by an unknown man who escaped in the immense crowd which was taking in the street fair. The murder grew out of a "crap" game in which the stranger used loaded dice.

Dies on His Wife's Grave.

The body of Louis Holtzmiller was found on the grave of his wife in the Dodgeville, Mass., cemetery. About eight months ago his wife died and he had continually brooded over the loss. He had taken carbolic acid.

Fatal Collision of Trains.

A Great Northern local passenger train, bound south, and a local freight train, bound north, collided just south of Edmonds, Wash. Sam Work, the engineer of the passenger train, was killed and three others injured.

Robbed on Honeymoon.

Dr. and Mrs. Yeatman Wardlow of Columbus, Ohio, were robbed of jewels worth $2,000, $246 in cash and a draft for $587 at their hotel in New York. Dr. and Mrs. Wardlow were on their honeymoon trip.

She Gets a Divorce.

Mrs. Marie Dobie has obtained from the New York Supreme Court a decree of absolute divorce from "Bud" Doble, the horseman. Mrs. Doble was his third wife.

Moving Villages to a Railroad.

Village moving is an order of things in South Dakota now. Work on the moving of the villages of Old Platte, Old Selby, Castalia, Bloomington and Edgerton to points on the line now being built by the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Company between Platte and Napa, a distance of eighty-three miles, is being carried on. Two or three of the villages are four or five miles from the new line. The houses are placed on skids and hauled over to the railroad by traction engines.

TARS RECEIVE NO BOUNTY.

Men Who Destroyed Cervera's Fleet Waiting for Prize Money.

The Navy Department at Washington states that up to date there has been no distribution of bounty money to the officers and crews of the American squadron which destroyed the Spanish fleet off Santiago. The matter has been pending in the court of claims, and while bounty money has been allowed it has not been determined as to what the amount or the individual allowances shall be paid by the court of claims or the Navy Department. Moreover, even after these questions have been determined it will be necessary to secure an appropriation by Congress to enable the payments to be made, so that it will be several months at least before these can begin.

FIGHT AGAINST CHILD LABOR.

St. Louis Tobacco Workers and Cigar Makers Begin a Crusade.

The National Tobacco Workers' Union of America, with division headquarters in St. Louis, and the two cigarmakers' unions there have decided to take up the fight against child labor. Its plan of action will be to take away the tobacco union label from all factories which give employment to anyone under 16 years of age. Notofication will be sent out to the tobacco factories all over the country, giving them until May 1 next to recognize the order. It is estimated that between 4,000 and 7,000 more men would find work in Missouri cigar factories were not children employed in various capacities.

TEN ARE KILLED BY A TORNADO.

Family Wiped Out, While Others Meet Death or Injury in Minnesota.

A cyclone passed through a Finlander settlement on Pike River, about two miles north of Biwabik, Minn., wiping out an entire family of six—husband, wife and four children. The body of a Mr. Marowitz was missing after the cyclone had passed Biwabik, but was found a quarter of a mile from his house. Ten persons were killed and thirty more or less seriously injured. The shaft houses of three mines were wrecked and the engine house of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railroad was torn to pieces.

Picnickers in a Crash.

Seventeen picnickers returning to their homes in a wagon were all more or less seriously injured by a collision with a suburban rapid transit trolley car at Pittsburg. One of the occupants of the wagon, a child named John Schmidt, was seriously injured. The accident was caused by the failure of the motorman to control his car on the slippery rail.

Eight Convicted of Boodling.

Judge George Johnson of Media, Pa., who presided over the trial of the five councilmen and three agents for brick companies who were convicted during the May term of court for conspiring to defraud the borough of Shamokin in street improvement contracts, handed down an opinion refusing to grant a new trial to the defendants.

Kills Woman for a Wolf.

While Nelson Fernstrom was hunting near St. Stephen, Minn., he mistook Mrs. Stromer for a wolf and instantly killed her. The woman was out searching for cattle and climbed up a strawstack to see if she could locate them. Night was approaching and in the darkness Fernstrom made his fatal mistake.

Boy Fatally Bitten by a Dog.

John Thomas, 14-year-old son of Jack Thomas of Rhinehart, Mo., had an encounter with their Newfoundland dog. The dog made a plunge at his throat. Several teeth penetrated deeply into his neck. The boy died.

M. B. Curtis a Bankrupt.

M. B. Curtis, "Sam'l of Posen," the actor, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court at St. Paul. Mr. Curtis confesses that he owes $117,000 and that he has $25 in assets.

New Hampshire's Population.

The census bureau has announced the population of the State of New Hampshire in 1900 to be 411,588, as against 376,530 in 1890, an increase of 35,058, or 9.3 per cent.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Col. Aaron S. Daggett of the Fourteenth infantry, slated for promotion to a brigadier generalship, is one of the few remaining officers of rank in the army who fought through the Civil war. He had a reminder of his powder-smelling days at El Caney when he led the negro soldiers up the Mauser-swept steep and wrested the stone fort from the Spaniards. This was the most conspicuous achievement of a single regiment in the whole campaign before Santiago. Col. Daggett was born sixty-three years ago in Maine, and went to the front in 1861 as a lieutenant in the Fifth Maine infantry. He was several times wounded and fought in most of the famous battles of the Civil War.

By the retirement of Justin McCarthy from the House of Commons, British public life loses one of its ablest men and the Irish cause an ardent champion. As a writer and parliamentarian McCarthy has chieved an enviable reputation. He was born in Cork Nov. 22, 1830. At the age of 16 he began newspaper work on the Cork Examiner. Later he did reportorial work in Liverpool and London and eventually became chief editor of the London Star. In 1868 he traveled in the United States and lived for a time in New York. His entrance into Parliament occurred in 1879 and, with the exception of a few years, had since sat for an Irish constituency. Mr. McCarthy achieved a reputation as a writer as well as a parliamentarian.

By her singing of the part of Juliet to his Romeo, Bessie Macdonald so charmed Baron Rudolph de Hirsch that he proposed marriage when the final curtain fell on the opera. The young Chicago girl had been invited to the Ortenberg castle, in the Black Forest of Germany, to sing in private theatricals. Thus began the engagement that culminated in the marriage of Miss Macdonald to the baron Wednesday at the baronial castle, the ancestral home of the Hirsch family. Baron Rudolph de Hirsch is a nephew of the late Baron Hirsch, the noted philanthropist.

Cadet George B. Pillsbury of Massachusetts graduated at the head of his class at West Point this year. Pillsbury is one of the most brilliant students that ever entered the military academy. At the examination he made the highest mark of any man in his class in every subject. Pillsbury entered the academy on June 5, 1896, and was 19 years old. Immediately he forged to the front in his class, and from that time on he has led every class during his career. An instructor on duty at West Point for a quarter of a century past expressed the opinion that Pillsbury is the most remarkable student that ever entered.

WOMAN IS THE VICTIM.

Alleged Insurance Swindle Rebounds on Fellow Conspirator.

Dr. August M. Unger, F. Wayland Brown and Frank H. Smiley are prisoners in the jail at Chicago, where they are being held in default of $15,000 bail each, to answer charges of conspiring to defraud insurance companies. A charge of murder may be placed against the physician, and an investigation now being conducted may lead to the arrest of a number of persons who are thought to be involved in a wholesale attempt to swindle insurance companies. Unger is suspected of such a connection with the mysterious death of Marie Defenbach, as may result in his being held on a graver charge. The woman, who was 23 years of age, died on Saturday, Aug. 25.

The plain charge is made that Miss Defenbach and the men under arrest entered into a conspiracy to defraud the insurance companies, and that one of the men, fearing exposure, caused the woman's death. Edward Maher, who represents the Mooney & Boland detective agency, of which Brown and Smiley were employes, and which conducted the investigation, said that he had evidence to prove that Miss Defenbach, with the assistance of Unger and Brown, secured policies on her life from the New York Life Insurance Company for $5,000; from the Canadian Order of Foresters for $5,000, and from the Knights and Ladies of Honor for $2,000 with the intention of securing the payment of the policies by fraud. He declares that Unger and Brown induced Smiley to enter the plot and become the beneficiary as the "intended husband" of Miss Defenbach.

"I am ready to prove that these conspirators planned to make it appear that Miss Defenbach had died and by substituting a corpse they expected to be able to collect the $12,000 insurance," Maher said. "The physician became involved with Miss Defenbach in such a manner that he feared her, and predicting the outcome of the insurance frauds on trial in the criminal court recently, he adopted desperate measures to try and protect himself."

Maher says that Miss Defenbach was poisoned and that the men under arrest attempted to collect the insurance on her life. This led to the investigation.

YOUTSEY CAUSES A SENSATION.

Shouts Arthur Goebel Is a Liar and that He Is Innocent.

One of the most remarkable scenes ever enacted in a Kentucky court occurred Tuesday night in the Youtsey trial at Georgetown, Ky. Arthur Goebel, who had been put on the stand, testified: "I talked with Youtsey the day he was arrested in the jail in Frankfort in reference to the murder of my brother."

Youtsey jumped up and shouted: "It is untrue—it is a lie—I never spoke a word to that man in my life, nor he to me."

Youtsey's wife sprung to his side, and while endeavoring to make him sit down could be heard saying: "Now you have killed my husband, I suppose you are satisfied." Youtsey hysterically shouted again: "I am innocent; there is no blood on my hands; those men are swearing my life away."

"Mr. Sheriff, if the defendant does not behave himself put handcuffs on him," said Judge Cantrill. Meanwhile the audience could not be forced to keep their seats until the judge threatened to fine those who stood up. Youtsey cried hysterically, and finally the trial was postponed till the next day on account of the defendant's condition.

BANK ROBBED OF $100,000.

Model Youth Used His Employers' Money Lavishly.

The Elizabethport, N. J., Banking Company has been robbed of $100,000, which is more than its capital stock and surplus. William Schrieber, a clerk at a salary of $900 a year, did it, and his operations, which cover a period of several years, were so smooth as to completely fool the State bank examiner. The loss came to light after young Schrieber had left for his vacation Aug. 1. The money was used to aid the clerk to keep pace with the extremely fast set in New York, with which he associated. At home he was a "model boy." The directors of the bank have made good the amount stolen.

Civil proceedings will be instituted against Mrs. Anna Hart by the officers of the Elizabethport Banking Company for the recovery of $20,000 worth of diamonds, $12,000 in cash and personal property valued at $5,000, which they alleged were lavished upon her by Schrieber.

ASKS HELP FOR GALVESTON.

Clara Barton Appeals for Material for Building Houses.

Miss Clara Barton, president of the National Red Cross Society, has issued a statement to the manufacturers and business men of the country in which she appeals to them for aid in the way of material to be used in the building of homes for those who lost all in the recent storm. She says:

"The number of homeless is estimated at 8,000 or more. Winter is less than two months away. Although a mild climate, still snow and ice are known here. If tents would protect, which they would not, the sea sand and the quicksand would not hold them down. The first norther would leave their occupants as unsheltered as before, and hardships, colds, pneumonia and consumption would finish what the storm has left. Some substantial shelter must be had at once for these people, and it would seem to be the duty of those on the ground to put the facts in an intelligent form before the people of the country, who are not here and cannot see for themselves and who could not comprehend without seeing.

"With this view the National Red Cross has, with the co-operation of the general committee, obtained estimates of the best architects of the vicinity regarding the material needed for the construction of the necessary number of houses, tenements or homes for the suitable sheltering of these now unsheltered thousands of suffering people."

A summary is then given, representing substantially the lumber and building material that would be required to shelter about 8,000 people in the most ordinary one-story weather-proof houses, built singly or in blocks of tenements.

OUTBURST BY DOWIE.

Zionist Leader Opens His Campaign in London.

Zionist Dowie opened his campaign in England Sunday night at Holborn town hall. He told his hearers that he had come to give London a spanking, and intended to wage relentless war against the Church of England. He denounced the archbishop of Canterbury as an incompetent, and said his place ought to be filled by somebody who could manage it. Some of the listeners interrupted Dowie, and he lost his temper. He said he would not tolerate interruptions, and one man was ejected.

The diplomatic tangle over the Chinese settlement seems in a fair way to be unraveled. Germany has receded from the proposals which threatened to break the European concert. France has submitted plans, indorsed by Russia, which may aid materially in reaching an agreement satisfactory to the powers. The United States has practically agreed to Germany's modified views. The German and American notes deal almost entirely with the question as to how and by whom the punishment of guilty Chinese officials shall be inflicted. The French proposals cover the entire range of settlement and are likely to be acceptable to all the powers. Whether they are acceptable to China, however, remains to be seen. The punishment of guilty officials, many of them princes of the realm, will be a difficult task for the Chinese government to undertake, and may bring on a revolution which would tax the resources of the powers to deal with. The indemnity demanded by the several powers is likely to be so enormous that China will be unable to pay without the loss of territory, while the razing of the Taku forts will be a severe strain on Chinese national pride. The powers may have agreed between themselves as to the methods to be adopted in negotiating a final settlement, but the day of settlement is evidently far off.

News comes from Japan that Field Marshal Yamagata, who laid aside the sword to take up duties of state as premier of the cabinet, has resigned, and that Marquis Ito, the statesman, has again resumed control of the ministry. The change has not been unexpected. A year ago one of the best recognized authorities in oriental politics made the prediction that ultimately Russia and Japan would settle their long-standing quarrel by the arbitration of the sword, and that when the crisis came Yamagata would resign the premiership to resume the sword, while Ito would take the helm of the ship of state. At any event the resignation of the soldier and the return of the statesman at the present juncture of affairs in China is significant. Ito is known to be opposed to any policy looking to the partition of China.

The British elections have been actively in progress during the week, and the results have been those predicted. Lord Salisbury's administration has received an indorsement emphasized by largely increased Conservative and Unionist majorities and a diminished Liberal vote. Chamberlain's policy, whether for the good or ill of the empire, has been accepted by the English electors. The only possible construction to be placed on the verdict of the English electorate is that the conduct of the war in South Africa, with all its mistakes and errors costly to life, has been indorsed, and that the annexation of the two Boer republics is approved. All other issues were lost sight of. No other question was raised.

Paul Kruger seems to be no longer identified with the destiny of South Africa. He will be received by Queen Wilhelmina with all the honors accorded a ruler of a free and sovereign people, and the British public will hardly resent the homage of the Dutch people to a man of their own race who dared face on field of battle the mightiest empire of Christendom.

William Anderson was killed west of Geneva, by the collapse of a bridge over which he was running a traction engine.

Joseph Brown, a Pan-handle switchman employed in the yards at Logansport, was killed by falling under the wheels of a switch engine.

James McMullen, aged 23, near Geneva, in a delirium due to typhoid fever, escaped from his room and was drowned by jumping into a well.

Carl Ruff, a young man of Union City, who swallowed a piece of glass while eating canned peaches, had it successfully cut from his stomach.

Newton County's commissioners have ordered the erection of a Court-house at Kentland, to cost $10,000. This will end the long county-seat controversy.

There is widespread indignation in Wabash because of the action of the directors of the Logansport & Wabash Valley Gas Company in requiring the use of meters.

When Samuel Yeager, a farmer residing five miles west of Sullivan, went into the barn to feed his stock, he was assaulted and knocked unconscious by an unknown man. He will die.

Charles Armstrong and William Leachman of Windfall, were probably fatally hurt by the blowing out of a plug in an eight-inch gas main. They were thrown several rods by the pressure.

Nathan Huddleson of Dublin, aged 65, while repairing the roof of his residence, fell to the ground, a distance of twenty feet, and died in a short time. He had lived in Dublin over sixty years.

Horses in Clay Township, Wayne County, are suffering from a very dangerous disease similar to pink eye. Many horses are sick and a number have died. The disease is said to be not contagious.

Oscar Dougherty, aged 20, who lived eight miles north of Washington, was instantly killed recently by the discharge of a shotgun which he was cleaning. The greater portion of his head was blown off.

John Johnson of Ross Station, near Valparaiso, aged 70 years, while out in the field talking to his son who was running a mowing machine, met death in a peculiar manner. The team made a sudden move and caught the old gentleman, cutting off both his limbs. He died to death before physicians reached him.

The strike of oil on the County Farm, near Muncie, has sent the price of land in that locality skyward. In twenty-four hours after the strike was made every foot of unleased land in the township had been secured, while quotations for the sale of farms were absolutely unobtainable. The indications are that the well will pump 125 barrels a day.

Two tanks containing 500 barrels of crude oil exploded on the Baker farm, eight miles east of Marion. The tanks were completely demolished and one derrick was hurled a hundred feet from its foundation. Five men who were working near the tanks were slightly injured. The oil was the property of the Ohio Oil Company. The cause of the explosion is a mystery.

Patents have been issued to Indiana residents as follows: C. A. Baylor, Laporte, driving gear; H. L. Beveridge and C. E. Frye, Indianapolis, cylinder paper machine; G. E. Feeney and J. E. Schroyer, Indianapolis, stove; G. R. Jackson, Palmyra, wood sawing machine; J. A. Lemmons, et al., Ingalls, invalid bed; H. A. McIntosh, Liberty, inhaler; R. F. McKinley, Bedford, stub holder; T. E. George Fuller, aged 45, one of the best known fishermen about the Falls, was drowned at Willow Point near Jeffersonville. He was stepping from the dike into his boat when he missed his footing and fell, striking his head on a rock, rendering him unconscious. Fuller was an expert river man, and knew the Falls perfectly. He had the record of having saved the lives of thirty-two people from drowning. The feats of the Fullers in saving so many lives on the Falls had been considered by the Government, and it is understood that a life-saving station was to have been established on the Falls and the Fullers were to have been placed in charge of it.

The extension of rural free delivery routes in Cass County is meeting with opposition. At Young America a remonstrance bearing 280 names has been prepared. The rural route will stop the bus line between that point and Kokomo, and this is the cause of the objection. On a new route north of Logansport the old postoffice at Metea has been abolished, which has caused its patrons to enter strong objections.

The Indiana canneries have broken all records, the Wells County plant having put up 260,000 cans of tomatoes, while the plant at Wabash have packed 300,000 cans. The factories at Kokomo, Winamac and Newcastle have done almost as well.

GREAT AUK'S EGGS.

RELIC OF THE EXTINCT BIRD SELLS FOR $1,678.

Fabulous Price Paid for It at Stevens' Auction in London—Skeletons of the Bird Are to Be Found in Some Public Museums.

More than half a century ago the last living specimen of the great auk was destroyed. Now an egg of that extinct bird has been sold at what seems, perhaps, except to scientists, to be a fabulous price. For it at Stevens' auctions, London, $1,678 was paid. It took spirited bidding to get it at that figure.

The great auk was a water bird, closely resembling those sea birds known as guillemots, little auks and puffins, which are familiar to visitors at the seaside. All these species, however, possess the power of flight, and hence they have succeeded in preserving their lives in spite of the persecution of man. But the great auk was pre-eminently a water bird. Its power of swimming was great, but, in spite of the celerity of its movements, its inability to fly insured its destruction. It formerly inhabited Iceland, the Faroe Islands, and the Hebrides, and in Trinity College, Dublin, is a specimen that was taken alive in Waterford Harbor as late as 1834. In Funk Island, off Newfoundland, two centuries ago they were so numerous that the French sailors made inclosures of stones, into which they drove large numbers of the birds, killed them, and then salted them down for food.

THE GREAT AUK.
From the Last Specimen Captured in Britain. One-sixth Natural Size.

All that remains of the great auk now are eighty or ninety skins, which are preserved mostly in public museums, and valued, according to their state of preservation, at sums varying from $500 each to that realized by the last one offered for sale at Stevens', which was sold for $1,800. There are also a few skeletons, mostly in public museums, a good many separate bones, and about eighty eggshells. The skins and the eggshells are in great demand and realize at the present time most extraordinary prices.

The length of the egg is 5 1-4 inches, its greatest width a little over 3 inches. It is blotched, streaked, speckled and scrolled with black and varied shades of brown and gray. The boldest streaks adorn the large end of the egg. The paler blotches in the figure show the pale ochreous-brown markings, and the lightest streaks are of a leaden gray. The ground color is nearly white, and the surface is finely granulated. No two of the known eggs of the great auk are alike in markings, some of them being very distinct. Sometimes the markings are much smaller and closer than those in the figure represented, and other specimens are to be seen marked in varied patterns.

When it was first learned that the great auk was an extinct bird the price of its remains began to rise. In 1859 a specimen was sold as high as $90; in 1864 four specimens were sold for $120, $125, $150, and $225 respectively. In 1882 a single egg sold for $550. The price still went up, and in 1895 Messrs. Stevens sold one, after a brisk competition, for $825. In 1899 a specimen realized at Stevens' auction $1,500. Then it was known that several specimens would probably come into the market, but a reaction shortly took place, prices again rose, and the specimen figured was the one that has realized a higher price than any previously offered.

A Guest's Mistake.

An Englishman recently visited friends in Donegal, Ireland. Going to bed soon after his arrival he dropped his watch into a handsome pocket above his pillow. Not till morning did he discover that there was water in the receptacle, which, indeed, was not a watch pocket at all, but a place for holy water. The watch was ruined.

a true Christian will do as Christ bids all to do. This theory has attracted much attention to the eminent Russian. His religious convictions are set forth in his books, "Christ's Christianity" and "My Religion," and have long been condemned by prominent orthodox teachers, who do not agree with him in first principles. Tolstoi is now 73 years old. His first book, "War and Peace," was published in 1860.

IMPROVED HAND STAMP.

Device by Which the Style of Type May Be Varied.

Here we illustrate a convenient hand stamp which is an improvement over those now in use. With the old style of stamp it has been possible to use but one set of type, and when the stamp was purchased the desired lettering had to be set in place permanently. By the addition of the little hook shown at one side of the frame and by a slight change in the type base the lettering may be varied without limit. A full font of rubber type is provided, and by pressing the knob downward and locking the mechanism against revolution the type-receiving plate is presented in position to insert the desired lettering. The device will also be found convenient in altering the dating stamps in common use.

SCHOOLS AND SCHOLARS

He who argues that history does not find an appropriate place in the grammar school must, as it seems to me, conclude to deprive the child of exquisite delight and genuine mind-discipline in the story and picture phase of history. —American Journal of Education.

Politics and politicians have no rightful place in the schools or the school boards. The way to keep politics out of the schools is to keep the politicians off the school boards. Good, vigorous men with broad views on all educational policies should be chosen to serve on the school board. When this is done, wide-awake, up-to-date and first-class schools will follow as a result.—Missouri School Journal.

Our schools can never be what they ought to be until the very best men can be kept in them as teachers. It is not enough that each State can boast a few educators on an equal in ability with the best lawyers, editors and business men. Every community with a hundred or more children to educate should have at the head of its schools a man the equal in ability, in education, in experience, in culture and in business tact to the best. And what right has the community to expect this unless it is willing to pay what the best men can obtain in other callings? Make teaching the most honorable, the most lucrative of callings, and, above all, free it from the petty annoyances of politics and meddlesome busybodies, and education will take a great leap forward for the better.—The Educator.

So few parents remember that, though they have only two or three children, and have studied their dispositions from the time of birth, know all of their inherited tendencies, all their little oddities and contradictions, they make mistake after mistake in their management; while the teacher has all the way from thirty to ninety, no two alike, from different homes, having different influences, different surroundings, different standards of right and wrong, and she has known them at best only a few short weeks, having to study them all at once instead of singly. Knowing this, the parent should make allowances, and try to help rather than hinder the teacher. Mothers in particular should be interested in what the children are doing; above all they should visit the school.—Arkansas School Journal.

PLUCKY DEEDS OF MODERN HEROINES.

Real heroines are not as scarce as the story books would have the public believe. Scarcely a metropolitan newspaper is printed which somewhere does not contain the doings of a heroine, young, middle aged or old. But unlike the heroines of the story books, the real heroine may be as homely as ginger cake and not nearly as piquant. In a string of emergencies chronicled in the daily papers during ten days the reader will be able to class the heroism of women.

Nora O'Neill, daughter of a small farmer near Aspen, Colo., saved a Rio Grande passenger train from destruction after the most stilted conventionality. The train was coming thundering down the mountain when Nora saw in the dusk a big bowlder lying between the rails. She dashed some kerosene over a bunch of kindling wood, laid it on the rock, and set fire to it. The engineer saw the signal and stopped the train.

Mrs. Kleintop of Stroudsburg, Pa., went to a woodbox and was piling sticks on her arm, when a pilot snake nearly five feet long began to coil around her arm, which was bare above the elbow. Without moving a muscle or raising her voice Mrs. Kleintop called her husband's attention to the snake. He, with a corn knife, severed its head from the body. Then, womanlike, Mrs. Kleintop fainted.

Benjamin Arkwright, a farmer near Muskegon, Mich., was attacked by a vicious bull. He defended himself with a pitchfork, but was finally tossed in the air. Still keeping the animal at a distance with the fork, he shouted to his wife for help. Mrs. Arkwright seized a shotgun, and under her husband's directions fired a charge of birdshot into the animal's flank. This routed the beast. The man suffered a dislocated shoulder and was badly cut and bruised.

Nellie Bullock, 13-year-old daughter of George B. Bullock, farmer, in Spencer County, Ind., sat playing an organ in the parlor when she heard screams from a brother of 3 and a sister of 5, coming from the front porch. She ran out and was confronted by an immense wolf. The child had no weapon, but she sprang at the creature and seized it by the throat, hanging on with such grim persistency that the animal finally broke away and fled, and Nellie was not injured.

A Massachusetts grandmother weighing 200 pounds climbed fifteen feet down a well and rescued a neighbor's child, who had tumbled into three feet of water at the bottom. Mrs. Philip Turner of Newton Center did this. She saw the child fall in and no other help was near. She seized a ladder and went down it, though the well was only two and one-half feet in diameter.

Mrs. C. W. Hewitt, alone and friendless in Alaska, built a raft and floated for 750 miles down the icy current of the Koyukuk river on her road back to the civilization of San Francisco. Her food was from the body of a moose which she shot near the river's edge and tumbled aboard the float.

Miss Darda Polyot of South Brewer, Me., was offered $5 if she would go up a spidery iron ladder 126 feet to the top of a new chimney. She put on short skirts and went up like a monkey. She got the $5 and the cheers of all the men in town—and some of the women.

A SHADOW OF THE ROCKIES.

The mountains from my window lie outrolled
Their solemn peaks with coronals of snow
O'er which the fires of dawn and sunset flow,
And keen, high ridges by fierce winds patrolled.

With evening comes a mighty shadow cold
Across my doorway as the sun sinks low,
And, high above, the loftier summits show
Faint, as the twilight tames their outlines bold.

Then from the heights the spirit of repose
Steals earthward, with the peace that long has lain
Secure amid the deep untrodden snows—
A shadow stream, for which my soul is fain,
That from the towering peak of silence flows,
And pours its balm upon the toiling plain.

THE TALISMAN.

VIOLA LEIGH was sweet enough to fascinate any man who was a judge of beauty. It is not singular, therefore, that Bert Dalton and Carl Devereaux were in love with her. Bert was the more manly of the two. He had no very exalted opinion of Carl and warned Viola against his attentions.

So, after a summer's flirtation with her, Mr. Carl Devereaux was going away to Boston to be married, and Bert Dalton——

But Viola was not discouraged. She went home and opened a little glass-lidded box, where, in a fragrant nest of dried rose leaves, half a golden heart lay shrouded with a narrow pink ribbon passed through it. Bert Dayton had the other half; he had broken it in two pieces in the days before Carl Devereaux had come, like a serpent, into their Eden.

"You shall keep one, Viola," he had said, "and I the other, and if I am at the world's end, Viola, it will bring me back to your side."

The years crept by, and the people began to talk of Viola Leigh as an old maid. And yet she was not unhappy in her quiet way, and so Viola lived serenely on.

She was sitting at work at her fire in the November afternoon, when Mrs. Deacon Spriggs knocked at her door.

"Alone, eh?" said Mrs. Spriggs. "Well I'm dreadful glad to find you at home. The fact is we're getting up a gift box for the St. Miles mission in New York, and I've come to get a contribution from you."

"I shall be glad to give all I can," said gentle Viola.

"Well, we calculated you would," said Mrs. Spriggs, drawing out a crumpled sheet of paper and a paper of pins and a pencil. "And we thought, dear Miss Leigh, if you could spare us some of your cranberries——"

"With pleasure," said Viola. "I will send a box down in the morning."

And after the box was gone Viola came into the sitting-room with a troubled face.

"Hannah," said she to her maid, "I have dropped a pink ribbon from my neck—a pink ribbon with half of a golden heart attached to it. See if you can find it when you sweep the carpet."

"Sure, miss, it's bad luck to lose the like o' that," said Hannah.

She looked with falcon eyes for it, but never found it.

The patron of St. Miles was unpacking the Lyndedale box when the rector came in.

"Good!" said he, rubbing his hands. "Another box, eh? Well, we need it, for I've an idea our poor little people won't have any too much good cheer this winter."

"It's a box, to be sure," said she; "but there's not much in it."

"Charity in good earnest," said the rector, with a good-humored grimace. "But here's a box of cranberries. That looks something like it!"

"Yes, sir, and sugar to cook 'em in," said Mrs. Worth. "That's what people don't often think of."

And she turned to the reinspection of Mrs. Nuttonton's mildewed "comfortables" just as the rector started at the sight of something like gold through the berries—half of a golden heart, with a pink ribbon passed through it.

"Good heavens!" he ejaculated, "it is Viola's token. I should know that bit of gold in Patagonia. And how comes it here? Yes——" glancing at the lid of the package, "the box is from Lyndedale. It means—it must mean——"

And the staid, 30-years-old rector blushed like a schoolgirl as he stood looking down at the golden talisman.

Alone—all alone!

Viola Leigh was sitting down to her solitary dinner, with the snow clicking softly against the window panes outside, and the Maltese cat purring on the hearth within.

"I don't feel like eating," Viola said, as the door bell sounded. "Who should come here, just at dinner time, of all hours in the world?"

Viola started to her feet with glowing cheeks and eyes that shone with fitful fevered fire, and sprang forward.

"Bert!" she cried, holding out both her hands, "it is Bert Dalton."

The rector advanced smiling.

"Viola, are you glad to see me?"

"Oh, so glad. But how did you chance to come?"

"You sent for me, Viola, and I came."

"I sent for you, Bert?"

He drew from his pocket the little gold talisman.

"Look, love; it was in the box of berries you sent to the mission. And although you did not know who the rector of St. Miles——"

"No, indeed, I did not," protested blushing Viola.

"God knew, dearest," in a low and reverential tone, "and He has brought us together after all these years."

"Miss Viola," whispered Hannah, who had been endeavoring to attract her mistress' attention for some time, behind the kitchen door, "shall I set on another plate?"

"Of course, Hannah," said Viola, radiantly.

"But, Viola"—the rector had come close to her now—"is it to be with us as in the days of the golden token?"

"If you think I am worthy of it, Bert."

And so the old love became new again, and Viola and the rector of St. Miles live happily together in the little village of Lyndedale, where they spent all those happy days of the little gold talisman.

Must Obey the Law.

Charles Rigby of Waterloo was arrested last week and sent to jail for refusing to obey the law and send his children to school. He finally concluded that the law had the advantage of him and arranged to procure books, for the children and send them to school. Our opinion is that all laws should be obeyed, and if not good laws then they should be repealed. This law seems to be a good one. Schools are made free to all and all should attend.

Got Mixed.

The "Head Man" of the St. Joe News got a good joke on himself last week. He set up a head "Dastardly Deed" and placed it over the report of the democratic caucus. The other head was "Democrats Nominate", which he placed over an account of the assault on a little girl, over in Allen county. Try it again, brother. You don't need to go back on Concord democrats like that. We know a whole lot of them and they are good fellows.

Political Notes.

Roosevelt met a real Kentucky frost in the Blue Grass state last week. The crowds were small and not very enthusiastic. He lost much of his good nature, and at Covington was foolish enough to say Kentuckians were cowards. Only the strong hand of the local democratic leaders prevented trouble.

The entire administration, from the president down, is playing partisan politics for all it knows how, and the public business is getting on in any way it can. The White House has been turned into a political headquarters with the president filling the duties of lieutenant to Boss Hanna. Anything to keep the republicans in power is the basis of all the White House consultations and conferences. That even single votes are not being overlooked was shown by the official order sent from Washington for the immediate dismissal of a woman clerk in the Indianapolis post office, who got married the other day, and the appointment of a voter in her place. Besides the political work that members of the administration are doing in Washington, the following prominent officials, and this is only a partial list, are on the stump for McKinley, with their salaries being paid by the taxpayers while their official work in being neglected: Postmaster General Smith, Secretary Gage, Secretary Wilson, Attorney-General Griggs, Solicitor-General Richards, Third Assistant Postmaster-General Madden, Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Bristow, Assistadt Secretary Meiklejone, commissioner of pensions, Evans, and director of the mint, Roberts. In addition to these there is an army of smaller officials in the field speaking or pulling wires to influence voters, and the people are footing all the bills.

More government clerks will go home to vote this year, than have done so since the days when Zach Chandler bossed the republican machine and made them do as he pleased. Clerks will register and vote who have not done so for twenty years or more. Every government clerk residing in a state considered anyways close has received a circular letter from the republican bosses of his state, telling him that if he fails to register and vote, his name will be handed to the republican state committee, which is merely another way of telling him that if he fails to vote, he will lose his job. The heads of the government departments are doing their part to help along the exodus of voters, at the expense of the taxpayers of the country, by allowing it to be known that the clerks will be paid for the time lost in going home to register and vote, and will not have the time deducted from their annual leave. Judge Penfield has been at home in Auburn about a month.

The office of state statisician of Indiana, shows that Indiana mortgages have increased during McKinley's term to the amount of $55,000,000 and over. The condition is really worse than this for a great many mortgages reported "paid off" were "paid off" by the property being sold at sheriff's sale, and were therefore not paid up. The man lost his land. It is the same in Kansas where so much has been reported "paid off."

See that no one serves on the election boards, who has a relative on the ticket. It might cause the precinct to be thrown out.

The socialist democrats are running a side-show ticket to draw off as many votes from the democratic ticket as possible, and so help the republicans. They had no vote two years ago, and so all objected to get signers to a petition to enable them to get on the ticket. Take notice that the signers on their petition are mostly republican's. Don't be caught by this trap. It is not the democratic ticket. Mark the rooster only, and do not mark anywhere else.

Court.

A good deal of scattering business has been done. The jury tried the replevin case of Parker vs. Keesler, deciding in favor of the defendant.

Lamphere, the fellow who has been doing so much dirty business down in Butler township, plead guilty and was given to 21 years in the penitentiary.

John McNohon, the man who stole Ben Franklin's overcoat, gets a fifteen-day stay in jail.

The jury were discharged today to meet Monday, as the cases were not ready for them.

A good deal of time of the court has been taken up in settlement of estates, etc, as is usual at the first part of the term.

School Report.

Report of school district No. 7, of Fairfield township, for the first month of school. The names of those who have been neither absent nor tardy are: Raymond Albright, Henry Albright, Agnes Metzger, Earl Farrington and Cora Potts.

Those who have been present every day but who have been once tardy are: Guy Myers, Jay Myers and Earl Myers. Those who have been absent but one day or less are: Edna Albright, Edgar Rowe and Mabel Rowe. For a school of twenty-seven pupils, we think this is a very good report especially as the few days which have been missed were caused by sickness in almost every case.—BLANCH GOODRICH, Teacher.

Had A $10 Bill.

A dispatch from Columbus, Ind. has a sensational item. It says a stir has been created in county circles here. The commissioners met in special session to recieve bids on a county bridge. Among the bids was one from the Newcastle Bridge company, and when President May of the board opened the bid, a $10 bill was found in the envelope. The bill fell on the Presidents table, in full view of the board, the bidders and the spectators, and for a time there was a confusion. Finally President May asked Eugene Runyodn who represented the company, to explain the presence of the money, and he said that he had no revenue stamps and placed the bill in the bid to take the place of a 50-cent stamp. As there was already a stamp on the required bond, his statement did not clear the situation, and he then stated that he had secured the stamp afterward and neglected to take the bill out. The commissioners threw out the bid, although it was the lowest, and awarded the contract to the next lowest bidder. Mr. Runyon was indignant, and threatened to take the matter to the circuit court. He denied that the money was intended to influence the board.

Auburn Culture Club.

The Auburn Culture Club met at the heme of Mrs. Baxter, thirteen members responding to roll call. Under head of unfinished business, it was decided to send programs in the nature of greeting to clubs by our members.

Miss Elsie Caruth's resignation was read and accepted by the club with regrets. It was moved seconed and carried to put Mrs. Dr. Baxter on the active membership list. Mrs. McClellan was elected treasurer by informal ballot. A letter was read from Mrs. Stewart, president of the Indiana Federation of Clubs, extending to the members a most cordial invitation to attend the state convention at South Bend November 15 and 16, and also for one of our members to give a short talk on "Manual Training" in our public schools.

Mrs. Roby led the lesson in literature which proved to be very interesting. In the absence of Mrs. West, Mrs. Sheets gave the map and geographical description of China. After current events given by the club, the meeting adjourned to meet in one week with Mrs. Caldwell.

How He Was Killed.

We have a copy of the Greenville, Ohio, Democrat, showing how young Burrowes met his death. He and his sister Grace had been visiting relatives near there. He had just bought a new bicycle and that evening rode it to town to practice football with some friends. He met a friend on a wheel, and tried a race. The men at football did not notice the approaching wheels. as one man stopped to catch a descending ball, young Burrowes ran into him, as it was too late to avoid collision. The man was thrown into the air and badly hurt. Young Burrowes flew forward over his wheel, turned a summersault and fell on the back of his head. When picked up, blood was gushing from his mouth, nose and ears. Doctors tried to revive him, but he died within eight minutes, without regaining consciousness.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met with Mrs. Guild Saturday afternoon with a fair attendance. The first lesson in ethics for the new year was conducted by Miss Hague as a substitute for Mrs. Lackey. The lesson proved to be very interesting and those who were present testify that the outlook for the coming year will prove both pleasant and profitable.

Mrs. Willis read the beautiful poem "Seedtime and Harvest," by Whittier, as a substitute for Mrs. Zimmerman who is out of town. This was followed by a paper entitled "Unused Power" by Mrs. Barns, after which Mrs. Rose conducted current news. Communications were read from Mrs. Steuart, President of the Indiana federation of clubs notifying the club of the change in the date of the state convention at South Bend to Noyember 15th and 16th, with an urgent invatation for all to attend that possibly can. An attractive literary program is promissed beside drives and receptions.

Club adjourned to meet next Saturday with Mrs. Swineford.

Does Food Offend?

You've a Right to Keen Appitie and Sound Digestion.

People who complain to Dr. Stone about poor appetite are often told that they will get the appetite as soon as they need it. He means that if you thoroughly digest the food you eat, appetite will take care of itself. If appetite is fickle or absent, you can be sure that digestion is bad. In his practice as a stomach specialist for thirty years, has relied principaly on two preparations, one to strengthen the stomach and help digestion, the other to regulate the liver and expell waste matter from the system. This done, keen appetite returns. You enjoy your food and it does you good. If what you eat seems tastless, if it distreesse you, if you suffer from constipation, billousness or hedd ache, try Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. Each package contains Dr. Stone's two specific remedies in tablet form. The remedy is easy to take and you will notice benefit almost at once. Appetite will become normal digestion will become perfect and you will enjoy new strength and energy. Every package of Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is guaranteed. If you are not perfectly satisfied with results you can have your money back. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

A "Feathered Dog."

For months past a man has been coining money by exhibiting in various parts of Kansas a "feathered dog." A reporter went to view the alleged freak He pulled half a dozen feathers out of the dog's back, but the animal never winced. Then it was discovered that the dog had been covered from head to tail with a tight-fitting coat of Canton flannel on which pigeon feathers had been so skillfully sewn on as to seem natural.

Pearls in Missouri.

Pears are being found in great quantitief in the Black and San Francis rivers, in southwest Missouri. A Poplar Bluff fisherman found the first gem in an ordinary mussel which he picked up on a shoal in Black river. He sold the gem to a St. Lewis jewler for $125, and since then hundreds of people have flocked to the rivers to engage in pearl fishing. Many valuable gems have been found.

of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life, and enjoyment of life to thousands: men women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food, when you hate it, and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

BUTLER.

Mr Smith, our Wabash day agent has moved into the Rev. Thomas' dwelling at the East end. Rev. Thomas has taken a work at Edgerton, Ohio, and has moved there.

It is reported that Lester C. Harding is about to go into business at Adrain, Mich.

The canning factory is still running, but the tomato crop is comparatively light and the output will be less than for many years.

Kinney's yard is well filled with logs, and the destuction of the little forest in this part of the country goes merrily on.

Mrs. John Crouse, sr. is very low and little hope remains for her recovery.

Edith Wilson gains very slowly; is not yet able to sit up.

A great many Butler people attended the Angola fair. In point of number the fair was a great success.

Mrs. Ellen Hollinger, who was stricken with paralysis, has slightly improved. She is now visiting her son, Rev. Daller Hollinger of Montpelier, Ohio.

Geo. Coffrin has gone to Ann Arbor for treatment.

R. C. Campbell has put down a nice piece of cement walk on the west side of his lot, filling a long felt want. The walk heretofore was a mixture of gravel and clay many times mudy and nasty through which hundreds of school children plodded back and forth to school.

A large number of cases of typhoid fever, is reported in different parts of this vicinity.

—Mrs. Brosy was called to Butler this morning by the death of her grandmother, Mrs. John Crouse. The funeral service will be held tomorrow. Mr. Brosy will go over this evening and will preach the sermon, as this was the last request of grandmother Crouse.

—A wolf escaped from the zoological garden in Robison Park, near Fort Wayne, a week or two ago, and several farmers in the northern part of Allen county had sheep killed right away afterward. Last Saturday a big round-up hunt was organized, and the wolf was shot and killed near Academy Station.

Horse Dropped Dead.

While Overdeer & Bowers were in Peabody's mill yard Thursday after noon with their dray, getting out a load of wood, a large roan horse owned by them suddenly began to weave and sway and in almost an instant was dead. The animal was apparently in usual health, and the owners think a blood vessel was bursted which caused the sudden death. The was ground rather soft where they first attempted to get out of the yard' but the horse did not drop over until going some distance. The beast was taken at once to the woods and buried.—Columbia City Post.

OLD-TIME LOTTERIES.

MONEY FOR COLLEGES FORMERLY RAISED IN THIS WAY.

Harvard College Owes Holworthy and Harvard Hall to This Now Unlawful Method of Procuring Funds—Public Drawings in South America.

When one reads, as has frequently been the case of late, of the arrest of such and such an individual for the maintaining and promoting of a lottery, it is hard to conceive that within the present century Harvard College sought and obtained permission from the Legislature to hold such an affair. Such is the case, however, if we can rely on history.

In 1806, when the finances of the college were in a decidedly critical state, the corporation, having represented the situation and duly petitioned, were accorded power by the general court to raise by means of a lottery the sum of $30,000 for the erection of a new building in the college yard. With the proceeds of this lottery the college was enabled to begin in 1811 the new building, which was completed in 1813.

The entire cost of the building—Holworthy—was $24,000, so that the balance which remained of the $29,000 produced by the lottery was "applied to reinstate the stock which the college had expended in erecting Stoughton Hall and to other objects specified in the act granting the lottery."

This new building, which to-day is probably the one most sought after by undergraduates at the annual drawing of rooms, and in which it is not allowed that freshmen shall live, received its name in honor of Sir Matthew Holworthy, the greatest benefactor of the college in respect to the amount of his bounty, during the seventeenth century.

He was a merchant of Hackney, in the county of Middlesex, and was knighted by Charles II. in 1665. At his death in 1678 a part of his will was found to read as follows: "I give and bequeath to the college or university in or of Cambridge, in New England, the sum of £1,000 (enormous at that time), to be paid over to the governors and directors thereof, to be disposed of by them as they shall judge best for promoting of learning and promulgation of the gospel in those parts; the same to be paid within two years after my demise."

The above case of a lottery, however, was not the first in the history of the college. As early as 1765 one had been authorized for the purpose of raising funds for the erection of a new building (now Harvard Hall) to replace its predecessor, destroyed by fire. The fire which destroyed the former building was supposed to have originated under the hearth of the library, where a fire had been kept for the use of the general court, which was sitting there on account of the prevalence of smallpox in Boston. The new building, erected from the proceeds of the lottery, contained a "chapel, dining hall, library, museum, philosophy chamber and an apartment for the philosophical apparatus." Such description sounds not unlike a catalogue of the machinery and cogs stored in a mans' head.

Again the lottery wa s resorted to (1794) for the purpose of replenishing the treasury of the college. On this occasion the capital prize of $10,000 was drawn by the college itself, the lucky number being 18,547.

With such precedent as this certainly it would not seem unnatural that judges, particularly if they had graduated from Harvard and had happened to have lived in Holworthy, should be inclined to deal gently with those accused of breaking the lottery laws.

In many of the feverish South American republics to-day the lottery is in full swing, the proceeds presumably being devoted to the support of hospitals and to various other charities under the supervision of the government. There the drawings are held in public, usually once a week, and are attended en masse by the leisurely class of philosophers, who usually constitute the majority of the citizens, and who look upon the whole thing as a form of recreation as good as the play.

Another point which might perhaps be said to argue in favor of the lottery is that in 1898 the steamer Stillwater, on which the Honduras lottery was drawn at sea, after its expulsion from Louisiana, served the government in transporting troops from the United States to Porto Rico.—Boston Globe.

IDEAL HERO HAS CHANGED.

The Commonplace Man of Fiction Replaced by the Man of Action.

Robest Grant in an article on "Heroes and Heroines" in the Woman's Home Companion turns from the heroes and heroines of every-day life, and says:

"Incidentally here it is interesting to note how quickly and completely this same world is capable of changing its taste in respect to the heroes and heroines of fiction. Only ten years ago Mr. Howells was gravely assuring us that the sophistocated public had dismissed forever from favor and faith the engaging but impossible beings of romantic literature. He intimated that Dumas was a gross offender against naturalism, and hence truth. He even described the author of 'Vanity Fair' as 'that caricaturist Thackeray,' and deplored that Trollope should have yearned to imitate him rather than be satisfied with the workaday realities of 'Mrs. Proudie.' He announced almost convincingly that realism has come to stay, and that any hero or heroine must be false to art unless to be met with in one's daily walks. We were told that fiction henceforth was to deal with real life.

"And what is the case?.....But ten years have elapsed since Howells spoke, yet ever since we have been undergoing a deluge of heroes and heroines whose doughty deeds and exalted sentiments as men of arms and lovers have no real counterparts in this prosaic world. And in their wake has followed the romantic historical novel, the novel of admirably successful adventure on flood and field performed by pseudo ancestors of ours, whose flesh and blood when confronted by Basil March and his wife suggest the comparison of Hyperion to a Satyr. 'The Gentleman of France,' 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' 'Richard Carvel,' 'Janice Meredith,' 'To Have and To Hold,' with their editions mounting to the hundreds of thousands, attest that the world is still foolish enough to laugh with and to cry over sheer puppets of the imagination. For the moment the pendulum of literary hero-worship is far to the pole of thorough-going romance, and the heart of the realist is sad within him save for the comfort which flows from 'David Harum' and 'Mr. Dooley,' those sane carnal twins among an army of fascinating, flawless cardboard creations."

BOSTON BAKED BEANS.

How New England Housewives Prepare Their Most Famous Dish.

Of baked beans, the genuine New England kind, Sallie Joy White writes in the Woman's Home Companion. This is the way she says the famous dish should be prepared:

"The best bean to use is the pea-bean—which is the smallest white bean that is grown.....A quart of the beans should be carefully picked over the night before they are to be used, and all the specked ones removed. If the beans are over a year old they may be soaked over night in cold water, the water being turned off in the early morning and renewed with fresh water. If the beans are not a year old they have not to be soaked over night, as they would grow too soft, and would break and become mushy when cooked, a result that is to be sedulously avoided. In the morning put them over the fire in cold water, and parboil them very slightly. Allow the water to come just to a boil, then take them off, drain them through a colander, and pour cold water over them, rinsing them thoroughly. This not only rinses all the water from them in which they have been boiled, but gives them an additional firmness, which tends to prevent their breaking while in the process of further cooking. Furthermore, the beans will have a much more delicate flavor, and will be less likely to disagree with a person who has a delicate stomach or a tendency to dyspepsia.

"Lay a thin slice of fat salt pork on the bottom of the bean pot, and on this a small onion; pour in the beans. Have ready a piece of salt pork weighing about half a pound, the rind scored every quarter of an inch, and put it in the pot with the beans, arranging it so that the top shall be even with the top of the beans and the rest buried in them. If the pork is very well salted, and partially lean, very little salt will be required—about one-third of a teaspoonful; but if it is fat use one full teaspoonful. Add one salt spoonful of ground mustard, one heaping tablespoonful of granulated sugar or two tablespoonfuls of molasses—most people prefer this to sugar, but it is a matter of taste—cover with cold water, set in a moderate oven, and bake from eight to ten hours slowly and steadily."

HOW TO CARRY A GUN

DURING a hunting season, if all the accidents by shooting could be gathered, it would be found that the casualty list would be greater than was that of the Spanish-American war. Most of the accidents from firearms are due to the carelessness of the men handling them, and if the aggregate of accidents of late years is smaller it is due entirely to the modern improvements made upon guns, rendering them less dangerous to the careless or inexperienced hunter. The hammerless gun with a safety lock has prevented innumerable accidents, as they can be handled without much danger, but the average amateur sportsman is not usually equipped with these up-to-date firearms. They use the old-fashioned shotgun or rifle, and in the custody of a careless or ignorant man they are as dangerous as dynamite. The experienced hunter, even with the latest pattern of the hammerless kind, always takes the precaution of drawing the charge if the piece is laid around in the camp for a few hours.

Fence climbing is often necessary, and in getting over or through these obstructions the majority of accidents occur, because of careless, awkward or ignorant handling of the fowling piece. Numerous cases have been recorded when the fatality or serious wounding of the victim has been caused by the idiotic habit of pulling the gun after him after the man has passed the fence. There is always danger of the hammer or trigger of the weapon getting mixed up with a splinter or twig, and when it does the usual result follows, the hunter or some one standing around gets the full discharge. The practice of holding the gun down on a level with the knee is just as reprehensible as the gun-pulling habit, and about as deadly. Should the man slip and pitch forward the contents of the gun, should it be discharged, will be lodged in his body. The only correct and entirely safe method of carrying a loaded gun in climbing a fence is to place it over the shoulder stock foremost, with the hammer turned downward. If this method is rigidly followed there is very little danger of an accidental discharge.

In getting in or out of a boat or a wagon with a loaded gun the utmost caution should be observed. In either case never draw the gun out with you holding the barrel, as there is always a chance for the hammer to catch on an obstruction, with the usual result. For several reasons a gun should never be carelessly thrown down into the bottom of a wagon or across the thwarts of a skiff or boat. In handing a gun to another person it should be held well out from the body with the muzzle pointing upward and above the heads of both; in that case if the gun is accidentally discharged the contents will disappear in the air. The best way, however, is to always draw the load when the gun is being transported in boat or wagon, and when it is laid aside for the day or night it should invariably be unloaded.

When a party of hunters are hunting in a wooded country, and separated for the time, ignorance of the actual whereabouts of the other members of the party is a fruitful cause of distressing accidents. In cases of this kind each man should be careful to see that none of the other hunters are within a reasonable distance from where he discharges his piece in any direction. In walking through a wooded trail the gun should be carried on the shoulder, muzzle in the air and to the rear, with the lock close to the shoulder; in this position there is no possibility of the hammer catching on a twig or branch and causing a premature explosion. Another rule that should never be violated under any circumstances is, never point the muzzle of a gun, loaded or unloaded, intentionally or unintentionally, at any person.

In hunting partridge or deer, if the whirr of the bird is heard close to the feet, or the animal breaks cover close by, even cool-headed and experienced hunters may blaze away at the game regardless of what may be in his range of fire. In regions where moose or deer are found fatal accidents often occur when hunters are killed by accident by some other hunter, for at a distance a man may be mistaken for game in the uncertain light of the woods and underbrush.

These simple rules seem so very simple and self-evident that they appear almost useless, yet a great many men who ought to know better violate them almost daily during a season.

The Hour of Death

A study of statistics by Charles W. Pilgrim, M. D., superintendent of the Hudson River State Hospital at Poughkeepsie, which has been published in the American Journal of Insanity, has been reprinted in pamphlet form and attracts some attention, particularly by reason of Dr. Pilgrim's citations and deductions concerning the hour of death. Dr. Pilgrim's paper is entitled "The Study of a Year's Statistics." At its conclusion he says:

"An examination of the hour of death showed that 26 per cent died between midnight and 6 a. m., 19 per cent between 6 a. m. and noon, 31 per cent between noon and 6 p. m. and 24 per cent between 6 p. m. and midnight. By adding these percentages together we find the curious fact that the deaths were evenly distributed between the hours of darkness and light, 115 patients having died between 6 p. m. and 6 a. m., and 116 between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m. Desiring to pursue this question still further, I examined the deaths for the ten preceding years, nearly 1,500 in all, and found this statement strikingly confirmed, as a change of one-half of 1 per cent would have made the deaths exactly even during the hours of day and night.

"A chart which I made of the deaths for the year—and I might also add that the statements which I am about to make were corroborated by a chart made of all the deaths during the preceding decade—showed when divided into sections of three hours each, that the highest point of the curve was reached, both for men and women, between the hours of 3 and 6 p. m., nearly 20 per cent of all the deaths having occurred between those hours. The next highest point was between the hours of 3 and 6 a. m., although there was a decided fall for both sexes for the single hour from 4 to 5, when the line went down to the lowest point reached in any hour of the twenty-four. There was also a decided fall, especially for women, between 11 and 12 in the morning.

"These figures, therefore, show that there is some reason for the popular belief that many deaths occur during the early morning hours, but they show still more plainly that the majority of those who suffer from long continued mental disease give up their lives toward the close of day. As a general rule 'death softly follows life' and suffering at the end, either physical or mental, is of rare occurrence. In fact, it is not an uncommon thing to notice a clearing up of the clouded brain a few hours before the final change. This fact was noticed by Rush a hundred years ago, and, in my opinion, too little has been written of it since. From my own observations, and from the reports of reliable nurses, many patients, especially those dying of phthisis, or after surgical operations, or from acute intercurrent diseases, or injuries which produce a profound shock upon the general system, become calm and coherent shortly before death."

A UNIQUE COMMUNITY.

Calhoun County, Ill., Has No Debt, Crime, Nor Paupers.

Calhoun County, situated on a peninsula which for fifty miles divides the waters of the Mississippi from those of the Illinois, is proud of many distinctions that make it the most unique county in all the great State of Illinois. It has no debt, no crime, no paupers and no prisoners. It has set its face against many modern improvements, and attributes its Utopian conditions largely to this fact. There are no theaters, no telegraphs, no water works, no street cars, no pavements, no factories, and no railroads. No automobile has ever penetrated to its fastnesses, and no golfer has ever made his little ball spin over its green sod. There is not a photographer within the limits of the county. Foreigners are barred out as if by a stone wall. There is not a Chinaman or an Italian on the census list. The shiny collar and the hand-organ are unknown.

A MODERN UTOPIA.

Petty crime is almost unknown. Now and then the tramps or gypsies passing through the county will steal a pumpkin or a fat chicken, and if the transgressor is caught the owner of the stolen property is quite able to deal with him without the expense of a trial. A mild reproof, or, in severe cases, a few well-directed kicks prove salutary penalties. At the last term of the Circuit Court there were only three cases on the docket, and all of these were civil suits. In twelve years the State's Attorney has had but one crime of importance to prosecute, and that so shocked the county that it has not yet recovered. This was the trial of a 13-year-old boy for the killing of his father.

Calhoun County boasts of its red-cheeked apples and is proud of its pretty girls. Nowhere in the State are there to be found finer-looking women. The girls are of the old-time type in so far as they are good housekeepers. They know how to make currant jelly and apple butter; they can bake bread, and they are adepts at pies. While the golf stick has not yet displaced the churn-dasher and the broom, the girls have plenty of amusements. They can ride like Dianas, and they are able to manage the most spirited teams. There are no better dancers anywhere. The Calhoun girl knows the value of clothes, and she dresses well.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Extent of the Florist Business.

The florist business in the United States is by no means an unimportant industry. It is estimated that the retail value of flowers sold annually is $12,500,000 and of potted plants $10,000,000. There are no less than 10,000 establishments in the United States devoted to the growing of plants under glass.

A Coincidence.

It is a curious coincidence that while the old Confederate cruiser Alabama was for a long time known as "No. 290," the new battleship Alabama was numbered "290" at the builder's yard before her name was decided upon, and without any thought of the original.

DIE AT THE THROTTLE.

Many Locomotive Engineers Expire at Their Posts.

Within the last few years there have been so many engineers who have dropped dead while running their engines that the suddenness of the death of so many men employed in the same capacity has caused considerable comment. There is scarcely a road in the country on which one or more engineers have not thus suddenly departed life while on duty in the locomotive cab. There have also been a number of instances in which engineers have met with death by accident while seated in the locomotives.

It is not, however, the accidents to engineers, but their deaths from heart failure, paralysis, etc., which are of the greatest significance. Many railroad people will well remember a sudden death which occurred on an engine of one of the great western roads not very long ago. A fast train was thundering along over the rails at its usual rate of speed. Suddenly the fireman noticed that the train shot over the grade crossings of a country road without the usual preceding whistle. The fireman looked over at the engineer and wondered what in the world was the matter. The engineer was sitting on the little seat on his side of the engine, with his eyes on the track ahead. The fireman concluded that by just a little oversight or forgetfulness the engineer had neglected to pull the whistle. About the next minute the train flew over another crossing without the whistle blowing. The fireman grew a little uneasy, but he was disinclined to call the attention of the engineer to his mistake for fear his correction might not be kindly received. But a few minutes later the train ran by a station where it was scheduled to stop. Then the fireman's eyes began to stand out—a queer lump came up in his throat, and for a few minutes he remained frozen to his seat and staring at the engineer, who still kept his seat and looked steadily ahead at the glittering rails. Another station seemed to fairly fly past the train and the fireman began to regain his senses. He slowly got down from his seat and stepped over to the engineer.

"Say," old man," he said half hesitatingly, as if fearing he would get called down for interrupting his superior's thoughts. There was no reply.

"Say, John, I though maybe you——" here the fireman reached forward and touched the engineer's arm. He sprung back with a startled look on his face; then he jumped forward and with both hands shook the engineer. Then the fireman knew why the train had sped over the crossings without whistling and why it had run past stations where it stopped every day. The engineer was dead. The fireman sprang to the throttle and brought the train to a stop as it was entering the next town. A physician was hurriedly summoned, but he was too late to be of any service. He said the man had been dead for nearly an hour. "Heart failure" was his verdict. The fireman ran the train until it arrived at one of the larger towns, where another engineer was taken on to finish the trip.

This was a typical case of the engineer expiring at his post. All of the many cases of death are of almost exactly this same character. The engineer fails to whistle, runs past stations or fails to slow up when going down grade or passing through stations where the law requires slower speed, and then for the first time the fireman discovers something is wrong and steps over to his chief to find that without the least warning life has departed.

"I have been thinking much lately about these sudden deaths of engineers," said an old railroad man the other day, "and I have just about come to the conclusion that it is caused by pure nervous strain and nothing else. Few people realize what great strain an engineer, a conscientious one, is under. He has hundreds of lives in his hands all of the time and the responsibility of these, together with the fear that he may sometime run over some innocent victim, is enough, when long continued, to try the nerves of the strongest."

DOCKAGE OF BUENOS AYRES.

In Proportion to Its Shipping Trade No City Excels It.

The Argentine government has spent in the past twelve years nearly $50,000,000 in building a series of docks and basins at Buenos Ayres for the accommodation of the shipping at that largest of South American ports. These great stone constructions are fine specimens of engineering. Immense warehouses and the best of machinery afford every facility for the care and handling of freight. In proportion to its shipping trade no city excels Buenos Ayres in the extent and adequacy of its dockage and warehouse facilities. But the government made the mistake of building a port without an entrance to it. The docks might as well be rickety wooden piers for all the good they do the larger shipping, which is unable to reach them.

The money was spent without studying the peculiar conditions of the great river on which the city stands. The idea prevailed that the first thing to be done was to provide shore accommodations for the largest vessels and then dig channels miles out into the estuary so that they might reach the port. o study was given to the variable currents of La Plata; no heed to the fact that enormous quantities of silt surcharge the river waters. Channels were dug right across the currents and the result was extremely disappointing. One might as well expect td keep a way through a snowdrift open by digging across the direction of the wind. The channels filled or partly filled with silt nearly as fast as they were dug. A great deal of money and labor have thus been expended without perceptible advantage. The result is that the approaches to these splendid docks are lamentably inferior to their capacity and to the demands of commerce.

The government has now begun to do what should have been done in the first place. It has appointed an expert commission to make a thorough study of all the conditions that must be met in providing an adequate entrance to the port. After mastering the details of the peculiar and as yet little understood river regime the commission is expected to report a practical plan for the construction of an enduring approach. The problem may be a difficult one, but it is believed that hydrographic engineering can solve it. Buenos Ayres has hopes that before very long it will have not only first-class docks, but also adequate facilities for reaching them.—New York Sun.

MARTINEZ CAMPOS.

He Was One of Spain's Foremost Soldiers and Statesmen.

Spain lost one of her greatest military heroes in the death recently of Marshal Arsenio Martinez Campos. For the past thirty years he has figured largely in the affairs of his country. He was nearly 66 years of age. He joined the military at an early age, and his conspicuous ability won him rapid promotion. He went through the Morocco campaign in 1859, and first served in Cuba from 1864 to 1870, the rank of brigadier general being conferred upon him for his services on the island. He was in several engagements with the Carlists, and aided greatly in placing Alphonso XII. on the throne of Spain. He was afterward made captain general of the army and in 1877 was appointed commander-in-chief of the army in Cuba, where he brought the ten-years' war to a close in 1878. He again went to Cuba in 1895, but his liberal policy of treating with the Cubans resulted in his withdrawal and the substitution of the notorious Weyler. He was twice premier of Spain, had held the portfolio of war, and at the time of his death was president of the Senate.

BARONESS VON SWARTZENSTEIN

Wife of Germany's Minister to China Was An American Girl.

Maud Roosevelt La Vinsen, now Baroness von Swartzenstein, whose husband has been recently appointed Minister from Germany to China, was one of the belles of Washington three winters ago. She is an American woman of the highest type—beautiful, well educated and well born. She is a blonde, whose blue eyes are the glory of a face that is delicate of feature. Her figure is slender and graceful. A member of the Roosevelt family, and a second cousin of Governor Roosevelt, she was, after her debut in New York City, a conspicuous beauty in the most exclusive sets, but she was truly "a penniless lass in a long pedigree," and her face was her fortune. She spent her winters with her mother's cousin, Baroness von Orendorff, in Washington, with whom she frequently went abroad. The acquaintance with Baron Mumm von Schwarzenstein began in Washington, when the diplomat was attached to the German legation. The Baron was also principal of an international school of languages, for Germans do not think it beneath them to turn their talents and accomplishments to account, even though they may be possessed of wealth. The handsome young Baron was 35 years old when he first met the beautiful American girl. They fell in love at first sight. When the Baroness von Orendorff took her niece abroad, the baron followed, and their little romance had for a background many European countries. There was a wedding by and by in Germany, and the bride said to her friends: "I would have married my dear German fiance if he had been plain Tom Smith, without a coat to his back."

BARONESS VON SWARTZENSTEIN.

ABLE TO SKATE ON WATER.

How a German Sea Captain Moves in Shoes Thirteen Feet Long.

Capt. Grossmann, a German sailor, is the inventor of a pair of shoes for walking on water. He recently gave an exhibition on the Rhine at Worms near the new and imposing bridge across the stream named. The shoes are made of tin, weigh twenty-two pounds each, and together are capable of sustaining a weight of more than 220 pounds. They are about thirteen feet long and are provided with three-hinged metallic flukes, which admit of easy movement forward, but retard movement backward in the water. Capt. Grossmann uses a paddle to assist him in his watery promenade, and finds it especially useful in turning. It is said he has saved twenty lives by the use of these shoes.

A Summer Ice Hole.

Near Coudersport, Potter County, Pennsylvania, is a hole in the mountain from which flows freezing air. A man was sinking a well for mineral wealth. At the depth of twenty feet he was compelled to quit or freeze. About May ice begins to form in it, and continues to freeze until October. There is no ice in the hole in winter. The warmer the day, the more ice there is in the mine. The air becomes more frigid the closer one goes to the cavern. There is no water in the bottom of the shaft, but the water dripping down from its sides freezes. The ice begins to form less than a foot from the top and coats the sides of the shaft several inches thick. What causes the intense cold and where the air comes from are questions that have not been satisfactorily answered.—Philadelphia Press.

Diamonds Said to Be Alive.

A diamond is as much alive as a man. Thus declares Professor von Schroen of the Naples University. According to him the so-called inorganic bodies possess quite as much life as organic ones. He also claims to have photographs of the chief events in the life of a crystal, from its birth inward. One of the most curious of these is thus described: "The crystal meets another one from a different mother. The two strike at each other; they fight, strive and clasp with each other. It is war to the death. It is a case of the survival of the fittest. One must die. But no two crystals from the same mother ever fight, no matter when they meet." In which particular crystals seem to be superior to human beings.

Great Britain's Locomotives.

Last year the number of locomotives in Great Britain and Ireland was 19,825. In 1860 the number was 5,801, all told. Taking the average value of a new locomotive as £3,000, the railway companies have not far short of sixty million pounds invested in engines. The London and Northwestern possesses 3,000, valued at about nine million pounds.

BLOOD ... DISORDERS

are simply kidney disorders. The kidneys filter the blood of all that shouldn't be there. The blood passes through the kidneys every three minutes. If the kidneys do their work no impurity or cause of disorder can remain in the circulation longer than that time. Therefore, if your blood is out of order your kidneys have failed in their work. They are in need of stimulation, strengthening or doctoring. One medicine will do all three, the finest and most imitated blood medicine there is—

KOCH INVESTIGATES MALARIA.

Bacteriologist Says Total Extirpation of Disease Is Possible.

Prof. Robert Koch, the Berlin bacteriologist, who has been conducting scientific investigations in German colonies for a year past, has arrived at Hongkong on his way home. He announced to physicians there that he has discovered means of preventing the spread of malaria in malarial districts, and even of stamping out the disease itself. His experiments in this line were conducted in New Guinea, where a large number of natives die yearly of malaria.

Dr. Koch's treatment consists of giving the patients a medicine he has discovered, the chief ingredient of which is quinine. This is for both curative and preventive purposes. He also found it necessary to expel the malarial parasites as well, chief among which were mosquitoes. To accomplish this most stringent efforts were necessary, but reports received do not give details as to how it was accomplished.

By adoption of his methods Dr. Koch believes that every malarial district may be absolutely purged of malaria. In temperate climates it will be much easier than in tropical.

TAMING THE WILD INDIANS.

Intermarriage with Whites Solving the Redman's Problem.

Uncle Sam's agents are now trying to marry off all of the young Indians living in the Indian territory to respectable white persons. Last February the United States took charge of the schools in the Indian territory, and Supervisor J. D. Benedict was placed in charge. He found that the Indians were not being taught properly; in fact, they were not being taught at all, although their government had erected fine stone and brick colleges and appropriated the sum of $50 for the education of each child yearly. This money, Mr. Benedict found, was going into the pockets of Indian politicians

Mr. Benedict decided to discharge all the teachers and import young women fro mthe East. "Make the Indians learn our ways," he told them. These young women found the Indian boys falling in love with them. One woman fell in love with a wild full-blood buck and wedded him. Last spring many other teachers followed her example. Then the young male professors found some charm about the red squaws and their pile of cash, so they married them and made good housekeepers out of them.

The Military Salute.

When did the military salute come into use? It certainly dates from the earlier half of the fifteenth century. In the "Speculum Humanae Salvationis," which was issued before the invention of printing by movable types, there is an exceedingly quaint illustration in which Abraham is represented as saluting Melchisedec. The patriarch is in medieval armor, and apparently on guard, and it would seem that Melchisedec is bring him refreshments of water, and the salute is distinctly the military one still in use.—London Chronicle.

Abe's Opinion.

Long and earnestly they had argued in the grocery about the way in which the world would be destroyed. For four long weary hours these residents of Sawville had set forth their theories.

And finally they had asked the opinion of old Abe Hartley, who, among them all, had alone remained silent.

Taking his pipe from his lips for one brief moment, he answered:

"It will probably be talked to death."

Without a word the debaters led the way to the cider barrel, Abe bringing up the rear.—Indianapolis Sun.

Drying preparations simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs and use that which cleanses, soothes and heals. Ely's Cream Balm is such a remedy and will cure catarrh or cold in the head easily and pleasantly. A trial size will be mailed for 10 cents. All druggists sell the 50c. size. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N.Y.

The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation.

With Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against Nasal Catarrh and Hay Fever.

Volcanoes in Africa.

Eastern Africa is said to have six active volcanoes and western Africa four. Those in the Camaroons are said to have been in eruption as late as 1838. The islands westward are all of volcanic origin. The Canary Islands are famous for the great peak of Teneriffe, which became quiet long prior to discovery. Other vents in the islands have been in eruption at intervals during the eighteenth century and hot vapors and smoke rise from them at the present time.

WOMAN'S KIDNEY TROUBLES

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing this Fatal Woman's Disease.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women.

The following letters will show how marvellously successful it is:

Aug. 6, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am failing very, fast,—since January have lost thirty-five or forty pounds. I have a yellow, muddy complexion, feel tired, and have bearing down pains. Menses have not appeared for three months; sometimes I am troubled with a white discharge, and I also have kidney and bladder trouble. . . I have been this way for a long time, and feel so miserable I thought I would write to you, and see if you could do me any good."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio.

Sept. 10, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound according to directions, and can say I have not felt so well for years as I do at present. Before taking your medicine a more miserable person you never saw. I could not eat or sleep, and did not care to talk with any one. I did not enjoy life at all. Now, I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough for what you have done for me. You are surely a woman's friend. Thanking you a thousand times, I remain,

Ever yours
MISS EDNA FREDERICK,
Troy, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and cannot praise it enough. I had headaches, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, and kidney trouble. I also had a pain when standing or walking, and sometimes there seemed to be balls of fire in front of me, so that I could not see for about twenty minutes. Felt as tired in the morning when I got up as if I had had no sleep for two weeks. Had fainting spells, was down-hearted, and would cry."—MRS. BERTHA OFER, Second and Clayton Sts., Chester Pa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot find language to express the terrible suffering I have had to endure. I had female trouble, also liver, stomach, kidney, and bladder trouble. . . I tried several doctors, also quite a number of patent medicines, and had despaired of ever getting well. At last I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, thanks to your medicine, I am a well woman. I can not praise your medicine too highly for I know it will do all, and even more, than it is recommended to do I tell every suffering woman about your Vegetable Compound, and urge them to try it and see for themselves what it will do."—MRS. MARY A. HIPLE, No. Manchester, Ind.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

10 prizes of $5 each	50.00
25 prizes of $2 each	50.00
25 prizes of $1 each	25.00
	1,000.00

NOTE—The result will be decided from the vote cast for the head of the democratic electoral ticket.

If the unexpected should happen and Mr. Bryan not carry the state, then the lowest plurality guess, or the one nearest the result, will get the prize.

Where two or more guesses are the same, the first one received will be awarded the prize.

Guessers should be careful to write name and address plainly, and also state whether they are an old or new subscriber.

76 Guesses

$1,000 To The Winners

Conditions.

Any subscriber, old or new, is entitled to one guess on payment of 50 cents—one year's subscription—received at this office before the close of polls on election day—Tuesday, Nov. 6, 1900. The name of subscriber remitting the money will be recorded with the figures of his guess. The receipt of money, as well as his estimate of Bryan and Stevenson's plurality over McKinley and Roosevelt in Indiana, will be acknowledged, and should be laid aside by him until the official vote of Indiana shall have been ascertained, when the names of prize-takers will be duly announced in these columns.

If your subscription is not paid in advance pay it now and participate in this great distribution of actual money. If your subscription is paid in advance, send us 50 cents for another year and give a guess. You stand a chance of getting $300 for 50 cents, and if you do not hit a prize you have your money's worth in The Indiana State Sentinel, the greatest family newspaper in the West.

SEND in your 50 cents with your guess at once. Your judgment is as likely to be correct at this time as it is the day before election. Be careful to date your guesses, and remember you can have as many guesses as you take subscriptions to The Indiana State Sentinel.

—On last Thursday evening Mrs. F. P. Seiler remembering that it was Mr. Seiler's birthday, planned a pleasant surprise by inviting to their home on North Main street, Mr. Seiler's Sunday school class of eight young ladies. After refreshments the evening was spent in games and music. Mr. Seiler acknowledges that for once his better-half was master of the situation.

—M. B. Masters is in the twin vegetable business yet. Today he brought here for exhibition a fine little squash or rather a pair of squashes that had grown just like the twin ears of corn he raised. It had but one stem for both squashes and they were grown together at one side by the stem. But except that they were two distinct bodies with two flower ends. It is a queer vegetable freak.

—Great minds often think and act alke and great cities often without consultation, do the same thing. This reminds us that at McVickers in Chicago, last evening, they produced Kathleen Mavourneen to a crowded house, while at St. Joe, the Auburn people did the same. At McVickers, Chauncey Olcott, who takes the Irish part that our Eugene Douglas takes, was called before the curtain and given a large bouquet by Irish admirers of Chicago.

—A. Lewis has just received a new car load of Bronson cement, the third he has used of it this season, made by the Bronson Portland Cement Co., of Bronson, Mich. He says this is the best American cement he has ever handled, and he has handled at least a dozen of the best brands. It is equal to the celebrated foreign cement, the Lagersdorfer, of Hamburg, Germany, which is the leading brand of imported cements. The Bronson cement is faultless, no cracks or crumbling. Always solid and it retains its white color. It can be seen at Mr. Beuret's, west 4th street, in his new walk and in several others. Call on Lewis for the best cement.

Certificates Gone.

That a certificate of nomination to office should disappear from the office of the county clerk, is a surprising thing. Yet this is just what happened. Yesterday Auditor Seiler received a 'phone call from Congressman Robinson, then at Angola asking him to look over the certificates of nomination that had been filed for him, Robinson, with the clerk of this county. Mr. Seiler called on the clerk, it was found that Mr. Robinson's certificate was not in the office. It had disappeared, together with that of his opponent, R. B. Hanna, and several others. It is a mystery how, or why this was done. No one accuses Mr. Long the clerk, or any employe of his, but it must have been done by some one who has access to the office, which like all the offices is a public one. And whoever took them, must have known where to find them. What the object of taking them can be, is a difficult thing to determine. Take the case of Mr. Robinson. He already had the certificate of the clerk showing that his certificate had been properly filed. That of itself would have saved Mr. Robionson's vote from being thrown of this county. Yet it may have caused him trouble and even a contest in the House. It was probable under this belief that the person who got them thought himself doing a good thing. Of course it is barely possible, but not probable, that these certificats are merely lost by being misplaced. It however, has been made right as far as Mr. Robinson is concerned, as he has filed a new certificate.

It Happened in a Drugstore.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and ask for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandon, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know to what cough preperation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by H. B. McCord.

New Thing in the Election.

Indiana voters will be called upon to cast their ballot for the first constitutional amendment since the Australian ballot system went into effect. The amendment is to the effect that the number of members of the state supreme court may be changed from five to eleven and will be designated as amendment No. 1. The second amendment is to the effect that the legislature shall prescribe what qualifications are necessary for lawyers to practice law in all courts of justice. This ballot will be a white one and under each amendment will be placed the words "For the amendment" and "against the amendment." The voter signifies his intention by croesing in the square t the left of whichever set of words he desires to vote. The result will be counted out by the boards the same as the state, national and county tickets.

Buys Land For Dunkard Colony.

Rev. Ira P. Eby, a Dunkard minister from North Manchester, Ind., closed a deal for the purchase of about 15,000 acres of swamp land near Poplar Bluff, Mo. Mr. Eby represents several thousand Dunkards residing in Northern Indiana, who are anxious to emigrate to that section of the country. He says the exodus from Indiana will begin before the winter sets in.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

INFORMATION FOR VOTERS.

Some Pointers Which Should Be Considered by Every Voter.

At the election to be held on the 6th of November next, the voters will find four pieces of paper to be used in the election—a national and state ticket, a county ticket, a township ticket and a ticket to vote yes or no on two constitutional amendments. The national ticket will be red, the county ticket white, the township ticket blue and the amendment sheets white.

The voter will use a blue pencil to mark his ballot and if he wants to vote a straight ticket he must mark an "X" in the circle at the head of the ticket he wishes to vote. If he wishes to vote other than a straight ticket he must put an "X" in the little square to the left of every name for which he wants to vote.

On the amendment ticket there will be a square in front of the words, "For Amendment No. 1." Under this will be, "Against Amendment No. 1." Then, there will be the further words, "For the Amendment No. 2;" "Against the Amendment No. 2." Those who vote for either of these amendments mark a cross in the square in front of these words. Those who desire to vote against the amendment mark in the square in front of the words, "Against the Amendment."

The first of these amendments is to authorize the election of eleven supreme judges instead of the five that we now have. The second amendment provides for the qualification of the lawyers who shall be admitted to practice in the state.

Many votes are lost every year because men think they know how to vote and are mistaken. Be sure you know how to mark your ballots so they will be counted.

Sale of Bibles.

No book in the world has a sale, year in and year out to compare with the sale of bibles. The bible society reports the total issue for 1899 by the American society alone was 1,406,800 copies, which is below the average for the last few years. During the eighty-four years since the society was organized it has sold 67,369,306 bibles. The biggest year was 1895, when the total reached 1,750,484, and the next largest issue was 1,531,128, in 1896. Last year the American Bible society issued the bible in fifty eight different languages. The sales in the United States amounted to 720,050 copies, of which 194,293 were complete bibles, 339,700 the new testament alone, 184,706 were portions of the bible (mostly the Gospels and the Book of Psalms) and 1,351 copies were raised letters for the use of the blind.

The number of bibles distributed in foreign lands by the American Bible society was 686,751, of which 21,133 were complete bibles, 661,926 new testaments and 603,692 portions—as in the United States, mostly the Gospels and the Book of Psalms. The greater portion, a total of 458,662, were issued in the Chinese language, and it is a remarkable fact that of this number 447,858 were sold for money. The remainder, about 11,000 copies were given away; 296,919 were sold by peddles; 129,496 were sold at stores and shops in China, and 21,443 were sold at the depositories of the American Bible society. One Chinese colporteur sold 15,120 copies. The bible was printed last year in eight different Chinese dialects, the largest number, 453,887 copies, in what is called the mandarin dialect, that is, pure Chinese.

"Oleo" Plant Seized.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.--The Fertile Valley creamery compan'ys oleomargarine factory at 23¼ State street, was seized by internal revenue agents today, together with the contents of a store conducted by the company at 120 Thirty-first street.

The seizure was made on the ground that the oleomargarine was being manufactured illicitly. Eight men were taken into custody by the United States revenue department, together with all the paraphernalia and materials necessary for the manufacture and sale of the product.

Good Advice.

When that distressing pain seems to grab you by the back of the head and neck and your eyes seem fixed on a given point straight ahead, do not make yourself sick by taking Drastic Cathartics, but take a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It relieves the pressure on the nerve centers of the brain and aids digestion by curing constipation permanently. In 10c, 50c and $1 sizes at H. B. McCord's.

Horses Poisoned.

James Fortner and Rufus Rhodes drove to Van Wert yesterday and left their horses at a hitching rack for an hour. Shortly after arriving home both of the animals became sick, and Rhodes' soon died.

They showed unmistakable symptoms of poisoning, and by whom or how the poison was administered is a mystery to the owners.

A Comedy of Errors.

Last night just as Ed. Walmer was sitting on the edge of his bed in the act of pulling off his shoes preparatory to laying himself away for a good night's sleep, the telephone bell at his home rang and when he answered the call the operator at the Muncie depot informed him that he had received a telegram for him which read as follows:

"Meet me at the train,"

"GEORGE."

Ed's mother is visiting in Muncie where he has a brother-in-law named George, and the natural conclusion was that his mother had been taken ill and was being brought home.

Ed. telephoned the fact to his sister, Mrs. H. L. Troutman, and then dressed and started for the train, where he was joined a few minutes later by Mr. Troutman. When the train came in they watched the passengers get off but saw no George or no mother. They then searched the train with the same result. The mystery begins.

Then thinking that she had become seriously sick and had left the train at Montpelier to stop with her son, D. A. Walmer, they resolved to telephone to him. This idea was strengthened by the brakeman telling them that an old lady had gotten off at Montpelier.

Mr. Walmer then called up Montpelier and was informed that nothing had been seen there of his mother or George. The mystery deepens.

Now thoroughly aroused he resolved to telephone to Muncie to make sure they had left that place.

He then went to the home of Harry Gutelius and roused him up to get him to go to the store and call Muncie. Harry kindly consented to do so after he had heard the thrilling tale of the lost mother, but before he could leave it would be necessary to get some one to stay with his wife to keep the burglars off, so he went over and awakened Mrs. Minnie Smith who consented to act as guard during Harry's absence.

Ed. and Harry then went to the store and had just opened conversation with their party when the United Telephone bell was rung violently and in answering it Ed. was informed by his wife that it was all a mistake and that the telegram was intended for the girl that works at their home whose best fellow's name happened to be George.

Of course it was a happy ending of the scare but the laugh was on Ed. and he left Gutelius swearing vengeance on his domestic's George. There has been no murder case reported so is is supposed they made a peaceful settlement on his arriving at his home.—Bluffton Banner.

Funny Boat.

The Columbia City Post catches on like this: G. B. Widdifield has had a new boat made on the sub-marine style for duck hunting. It is made out of galvanized iron and only the top is visible above the water. The boat is operated by oars and will carry but one passenger, and only a portion of the body can be seen. It has been tested and works to the satisfactian of the designer, who says he expects to sail along the water's edge and merely reach up and pull down Mr. Duck by the leg. When the boat is loaded with game he will apply a hydraulic pump and fill it with air, so as to float.

PRINTING BALLOTS.

They Are Counted and Sealed As They Come From Press.

The printing of the 1,600,000 state ballots for the coming election began at Indianapolis Thursday. The rooms of the State Board of Election Commissioners were busy places. Preparations were being made for receiving and counting the ballots as they come from the presses. They will be taken to the basement of the state house, where they will be counted again and sealed up in packages of the right size for the precincts. There are 3,302 precincts in the state, and there will be a package for each of these. In addition there will be a package of 2,000 extra ballots for each county, so that the total number of packages to be sent out will be 3,394. The counting will continue for a week, and Monday the county clerks will begin coming in by appointment to get the number due each. All of the ballots will have been given out by a week from Saturday.

Fifty men are at work counting the ballots and preparing them for transportation. The force is composed of twenty-five republicans and twenty-five democrats. Applications for these positions have been very numerous.

More of the Wreck.

An accident occured on the Baltimore & Ohio, at Edgemore, six miles east of South Chicago, on Saturday night at 12:45 o'clock. It was a double header and a high rate of speed had been attained when Edgemore was reached. Without the slightest warning the rails spread, and the two locomotives lurched forward and left the track.

Albert Grabel, a brakeman, whose home was at Garrett, was thrown from the top of the train and his neck was broken in the fall, killing him instantly.

Fireman, E. W. Hooper and S. A. Trustall, both of Garrett, were seriously injured. Hooper was caught between the engine and tender, and had his hand severley mashed, his head bruised and it is thought his back is broken. Trustell received a dislocated hip and was severley bruised otherwise.

Mr. Hooper is a brother-in-law of the editor of this paper, and is now very low at Mercy hospital in Chicago, with a small chance of recovery.—St. Joe News.

From an Old Soldier.

KNOX, Ind., Jan. 14, 1899.

Gents:—I have every confidence in recommending your Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I am 72 years of age and am broken down, the trouble having been brought on by my experience in the war. Your medicine has done me more good than a hundred doctors and I am just about well of my stomach troubles.

Yours truly, JEFFERSON WILHELM.

J. N. is Here.

The veil was lifted on the streets of Auburn this morning when J. N., the Philosopher reached town. He scattered the crushing and mysterious force, before an excellent crowd and showed plainly how an element stronger than brain had destroyed reason for over two score years. He fully annihilated in his short address and announced to his truly sympathetic audience that he would more fully unvail the force, at the court house this evening. No admission at the door. The truth is free. All are invited to come especially ladies to hear the truth vindicated and the elements annihilated by J. N. the Philosopher. He will also soon lift the veil at Defiance Ft. Wayne and other towns.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

LIII.

Auburn, said to be "the loveliest village of the plain," has its dark spots. It is not merely the old school park, nor the new school park, though these have long been eyed askance, by the staid and proper citizens of the town. There are shady places elsewhere. Only last evening, walking home late after leaving the speeches at the opera house, we passed in the dark shadows of heavy trees, a couple, presumably young people, who were having a sharp quarrel. We do not know which came out ahead. But why should such things be and be so public?

WHY IS THIS, THUS?

Why is it that late travelers so regularly see a horse and buggy hitched at a house in the southwest part of town? Why should a horse stop there in the night rather than in the day time? Is it a force of habit or is it by accident? Does he stop of his own accord or is he forced to stop by the driver? Does he balk regularly, as he passes that particular house, or does the driver draw his rein at that place? Is there a sign up of "Refreshment for horses?" It is not a doctor making professional calls. The horse is evidently not hungry. He is a discreet horse, and never blabs. If he did, we would go to him and ask all these questions. Yes, those who travel late may see strange sights. It is especially the case along about midnight, when as Shakespeare says, "Dooryards yawn, and sports troop forth." At this hour Venus is "out of sight," but Mars is a winkin' and a blinkin' and the passerby is a thinkin' and a thinkin' that perhaps the man has been drinkin.' But still the horse waits, and now and then turns his westward eye aside, hoping to see a new one come and drive him to a more comfortable stall. Poor horse! Poor man! Poor ——

GAMBLING DEN ON WHEELS.

Chicago leads in all things, good and bad, the latest being a gambling den on wheels. The Chicago papers, a few days ago described this new fad:

"Beware of the dogs" is the notice that adorns the one entrance to the Chicago Monte Carlo that James O'Leary and Thomas McGinnis have just completed on the main line of the Illinois Central railroad, twenty-five miles from Chicago, on the line between Will and Cook counties. A stockade ten feet high surrounds the gambling place.

The improvements, furnishings and land have cost the projectors $50,000, and the intention of O'Leary and his friends is to run every sort of gambling game twelve months in the year, beginning Nov. 7. The building is mounted on rollers, in order that it may be transferred from Cook county to Will, or vice versa, depending on the locality from which the officers of the law hail."

Auburn has always claimed to do things "same like Chicago," and surprising as it may seem, she finds herself able to make good her boast in some things. So she also has "gamblers on wheels." Whenever an Auburn sport, or rather several Auburn sports find the fever for gambling, coming on, he he takes his little grip and his smaller wad, mounts a train and hies him to some neighboring town, to remain over a night or two. In this way he readily seems to be like the Chicago product, a gambler on wheels. And that tickles him. But more than that. He does not have to explain to his wife where he has been all night. And he does not have to explain to anyone, why he does not prosper in business. This use of wheels as a gambling adjunct is bound to be popular.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Samual Morley, that prince of philanthropists, who, during his life gave away about ninety thousand a year of his income, and whose name is associated with every great work that affects the welfare of the people, said not long before he died:—

"I am broken-hearted in this inquiry into the bitter cry of outcast London, for I have proved beyond the possibility of contradiction that quite three-fourth of the misery is preventable, and it is to be traced to the fact that the minimum of resisting power if confronted with the maximum of temptation, and it is attributed to the flaring drink houses and gin palaces that are spread broadcast like a net around the homes of the people."

The criminal record of the American army in the Philippines cannot, it is said, is equaled by any army in Europe. The official reports show that during a period of less than eleven months, with an average number of 21,078 enlisted men, there were 12,481 cases of court-martial—an average of thirty-eight a day. The report further shows that from two to twenty American soldiers a day were brought before the police courts, charged with drunken outrages. And still we are told by supporters of the administration that the canteen is an aid to temperance and morality in the army!

Queer Lawsuit.

One of the most peculiar suits at law ever brought before any court is soon to be tried in VanBuren county, between two neighbors and old friends. One of the men, H. D. Burrell of South Haven keeps about sixty colonies of bees. The other is a peach-grower. A few weeks ago the latter complained of the former's bees destroying his early Crawford peaches, claiming that the bees came into his orchard in large numbers, bit holes in the fruit and rendered it unmarketable, for which he demanded $200. Prof. J. M. Rankin of the agricultural college and the entomologist of the agricultural department at Washington will be called as expert witnesses by the defense in a suit for damages.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

Locomotive Crashes Into Crowded Street Car.

A Lake Erie and Western switch engine truck an electric car at Thirteenth street, Indianapolis. There were twenty-one passengers in the car at the time and of this number fifteen were more or less injured, two of them perhaps fataly. The engine struck the front end of the car reducing it into kindling wood and carrying it fully twenty feet away, finally throwing it against a freight car standing on a sidetrack. One whole side was torn out and the car was turned completely around. The passengers, many of whom were in the demolished end of the car were pinioned down by the broken and twisted timber.

Kruger Gets Away.

A dispatch from Lorenzo Marquez says: President Kruger of the Transvaal, was secretly taken aboard the Dutch cruiser Gelderland. It is believed that Kruger will land first at Marseilles and proceed via Paris to Belgium. The report that the French Government will prohibit his landing in France is untrue, according to late Paris dispatches. England will offer no hindrance to his journey, being doubtless glad to escape the responsibility for his future. President Kruger boarded the Dutch cruiser Gelderland, fearing the local Boers would attack him because of the feeling against his quitting the country.

Von Hohenlohe Out.

A special edition of the Berlin Reichs Anzeiger announces that Emperor William has acceded to the request of Prince Von Hohenlohe that he be relieved of the post of Chancellor. The Emperor will confer upon Prince Von Hohenlohe the Order of the Black Eagle and will present to the retiring Chancellor a magnificent set of diamonds. Count Von Buelow, it is announced, has been appointed Chancellor, President of the Prussian Ministry and Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Died of Yellow Fever.

Havana special: Major Peterson, the Chief Commissary of Cuba, died of yellow fever. Mrs. Peterson, his wife, who arrived here from Cincinnati to nurse him, shot herself in the head with a revolver one hour after the Major's death and died instantly.

Major Peterson was of the Commissary Department, and held the rank of captain in the regular establishment. He was a graduate of West Point and was appointed from North Carolina.

A Sensational Case.

Berlin special: A sensational case is reported from Nassaulitz, near Dresden. Eighteen years ago a railway official named Dittrich was run over there. He had remained ever since in a cataleptic condition. Scores of noted physicians, after examining him, had declared themselves unable to explain the phenomenon. The other day his wife shot and killed him and then hanged herself.

Killed His Sweetheart's Father.

Dr. Conda Beck of Waymansville, Ind., shot and instantly killed William Barton because Barton objected to Beck keeping company with his daughter. Two years ago Beck killed Miss Grace Cohee because she refused to marry him. Beck was acquitted of the crime. The tragedy has caused great excitement. Beck, at latest accounts, was still at large.

Robbers Kill an Officer.

Three masked men dynamited the safe of the Farmers' Bank at Nevada, Mo. Constable Maron, who heard the explosion, fired his revolver to alarm the citizens. The robbers returned the fire, killing Maron instantly. Sheriff Ewing, with a posse and bloodhounds, immediately started in pursuit of the robbers, who, it is said, secured about $3,000.

Shortage in Potato Crop.

The potato crop of the United States according to Orange Judd Farmer's report in its issue of october 20, at the practical completion of harvest, approximates 239,000,000 bushels, or nearly 5,000,000 bushels less than last year. The total aera under this crop is placed at 2,897,000 acres, an average yield of 83 bushels per acre, against 82 bushels in 1899.

Negro Is Hanged.

The negro, Millery Dodson, who wounded Conductor Wm. Jordan at Baton Rouge Junction, La., was hanged by a mob of white men, who took him from the jail.

Soldiers from Philippines.

The transport Sherman has arrived at San Francisco from Manila with 500 sick and invalided soldiers. Nine men died en route.

Fort Wayne Masonic Temple Attractions.

Week commencing October 22.—Irene Meyers.

Oct. 29.—"We-uns of Tennessee."

Population of Arizona.

The Census Bureau announces that the population of Arizona is 122,212, an increase of 62,592, or 104.09 per cent. The large increase is due to the enumeration of 28,623 persons on the Indian reservation not enumerated before.

Dillingham Elected.

Former Gov. W. P. Dillingham was elected United States Senator by the Vermont Legislature. The choice was made on the third ballot, C. A. Sprouty, one of the four Republican candidates, having withdrawn.

Great Damage by Typhoon.

Arriving steamers bring news of terrible ravages by a typhoon in Formosa and Southern China. Thousands of persons were killed. Numerous town were destroyed. Nineteen hundred houses were washed away or inundated at Taipeh, Formosa, and many lives lost.

To Make Flying Machines.

In the presence of a crowd of about 200 persons the corner stone for a flying machine factory to manufacture airships on the Carl Dryden Browne patent was formally laid at the Freedom labor colony, a socialist settlement eighteen miles northwest of Fort Scott, Kan.

FROM THE FOUR QUARTERS OF THE EARTH

COMBINE OF INCENDIARIES.

Gang Charged with Burning Buildings for the Insurance Money.

There is a conspiracy, with headquarters in Chicago and Detroit, to burn buildings throughout the country. This is the sensational charge made by Attorneys Campbell, Bates, Clendening and Myers of Cincinnati. The details cannot at present be given out, but it is said that evidence of a most startling nature is in the hands of the attorneys. It is ready to be sprung in a case which will come to trial in the near future, so it is expected. Insurance companies have been heavy losers, and Cincinnati agencies are interested financially in the outcome of the case. The testimony will be sensational in the extreme, and in one suit alone the allegations, if proved, may cost the insurers $6,500. The plans of the conspirators, as alleged, are simplicity itself. It all depends on getting heavy insurance on property. They go to a certain city and select a house for purchase. They pay for it and then wait till they get a tenant. This is the first step. The next is to prepare plans, and some night when everyone is away to fire the building.

GREAT FIRE IN OSHKOSH.

Lumber and Mills Burned, Loss Being Nearly $300,000.

Fire broke out in the sawmill district at Oshkosh, Wis., and in three hours it destroyed nearly $300,000 worth of property, mostly lumber stock. The fire spread over an area of nine acres, the district burned being between Black Hawk, Osceola and Pearl streets and the river. The Diamond Match Company is the heaviest loser, its loss being placed at $175,000. The company had between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 feet of match splint lumber, valued at from $25 to $35 per thousand. This was nearly all destroyed. The fire started in the dressed lumber shed of the Hollister-Ames Company and spread with remarkable rapidity throughout the lumber-yard. The Hollister Ames Company places its loss at $30,000. In the same block as the Diamond Match Company the Challonde Safe Foundry Company suffered a loss of between $15,000 and $20,000, its wood pattern-shops and several small story buildings in which were stored finished ice machines and shingle machines being destroyed.

FULLY UP TO LAST YEAR.

Value of Business Equal to Corresponding Week of Last Year.

Bradstreet's says: "Though some measures of business volume and value make unfavorable comparison with a year ago, and speculation is certainly on a reduced scale in nearly all lines, other registers of trade activity are still very favorable, and it is hard to resist the conclusion that, with few notable exceptions, the actual business of the country is, as a rule, fully equal to, if not slightly in excess of the corresponding period of 1899. Prices of staples as a whole are firm. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 4,292,855 bushels, against 4,459,167 last week. Corn exports for the week aggregate 2,896,037 bushels, against 2,360,249 last week."

Mistakes Man for Rabbit.

Arthur W. Green was instantly killed in mistake near Denver, Col., by C. W. Johnson, a rabbit hunter. Green and his sweetheart, Katie Mockridge, were in the foothills on a photographing trip. He had donned Katie's hat, a gray felt, and she was just in the act of taking a comic picture, when Johnson mistook the moving gray object for a jackrabbit and sent a bullet through Green's head.

Ten Killed Over One Girl.

George C. Beveridge, a resident of San Francisco and one of the owners of the famous Dolores mine of Mexico, brings news of a horrible tragedy enacted in the vicinity of his mine. A handsome young girl was abducted from her home by a man who was enamored of her and kept a close prisoner in a cave for three months. During that time ten men were killed because of her.

Pennant Goes to Brooklyn.

The closing of the National League base-ball season finds the clubs in the following positions. The pennant goes to Brooklyn

Brooklyn	82	54	Chicago	65	75
Pittsburg	79	60	St. Louis	65	75
Philadelphia	75	63	Cincinnati	62	77
Boston	66	72	New York	60	78

B. & O. Wreck Kills One.

Spreading of the rails on the Baltimore and Ohio tracks at Edgemore, Ind., wrecked a heavy freight train and the two engines pulling it and killed one of the train crew. Without the slightest warning the two locomotives lurched forward and left the track, dragging with them six freight cars.

Oil Thrower Ruins Woman's Tan Coat.

The St. Louis police are looking for a man who is known only as "Jack, the oil thrower." A year ago he ruined scores of women's dresses by squirting oil on them, apparently from a syringe. His first victim this season is Mrs. Ida Schwartz, whose tan coat was ruined.

Trains Collide at Lima, Ohio.

An east-bound passenger train on the Lake Erie and Western road hit a freight as the latter was taking a siding near St. Mary's, Ohio. Conductor A. L. Heath, of Lima, was made unconscious and may die of his injuries. All on board were severely shaken up.

Rogers Works Are Sold.

Bernard Katz of Katz Brothers, the well-known brewers of Paterson, N. J., announces that the Rogers locomotive works have been sold by Jacob Rogers to a syndicate of New York capitalists and a number of Paterson's most wealthy residents.

Port Limon Is Burned.

Dispatches from Costa Rica tell of the almost total destruction by fire of Port Limon, the principal port of the republic. The business section of the city was entirely wiped out. More than $2,000,000 worth of property was burned up.

Meet Death at Crossing.

A grade-crossing accident in which three persons were instantly killed and one fatally injured occurred five miles west of Newcastle, Pa. Four persons occupied a double-seated rig which was struck by Monongahela traction car.

Woman Disguised as a Boy.

Louise Kuhn, a woman 38 years old, caused a commotion in Grace Church, New York, by entering in boy's clothing. She was ejected by the usher, and then began to do a song and dance turn on the street, when she was arrested.

BUTLER STEALS CASKET OF GEMS.

Servant of Mrs. Charles Pfizer Replaces Jewels with Large Nails.

Some of the splendid jewels with which Mrs. Charles Pfizer dazzled the frequenters of the New York horse show last winter disappeared from her summer home at Bernardsville, N. J., recently, and with them her model butler, known to her as David Richard. When Mr. and Mrs. Pfizer went to New York, Mrs. Pfizer gave her jewel casket to her maid to keep. The maid secreted it in her room. David Richard went about in his silent fashion, ears and eyes wide open, mouth shut. "Going to church, David?" asked the maid on Sunday. "I think not, today," said David. The silent butler stole over the house to see if everything was in order. He or some one employed gobbled the jewel case of his mistress and substituted an equal weight of nails. The casket had contained a diamond necklace worth $2,000, two handsome diamond rings, four diamond sunbursts and a number of other pieces of jewelry, the whole valued at $20,000.

ROBS THE MAILS OF $15,000.

Burglar Steals from a Postal Station in New York City.

Tempted by the knowledge that thousands of dollars were within his grasp and fortified by an intimate acquaintance with postoffice methods, some one robbed the United States mail of the entire receipts for the day of station H, the "second general postoffice," at Forty-fourth street and Lexington avenue, New York. Such an occurrence is unprecedented in the annals of New York. Subordinate officials place the loss at from $15,000 to $40,000.

Train Wreck at Lawndale.

Carelessness on the part of a gang of section men at work on the Chicago and Alton Railroad at Lawndale, Ill., caused a bad wreck which resulted in the death of two men and seriously injured another. A rail had been removed from the track and the section men were putting in new ties Failure to flag the train was responsible for the accident.

BANKS NIP $5,000 SWINDLE.

Missouri Telegraph Operators' Clever Scheme Fails to Work.

A well-planned attempt to rob the City National Bank of Kansas City and the Commercial Bank of Lawson, Mo., of $5,000 was frustrated and Harry Turner and Robert O'Connor, telegraph operators, both of Kansas City, were put under arrest. Turner and O'Connor went to Lawson and pretended to be looking for land. O'Connor passed under the name of R. J. Rief. The other evening a telegram was sent to the Kansas City bank signed "Commercial Bank," asking that $5,500 in currency be sent by express to Lawson. The Kansas City bank wired that it had sent the money, but the telegram never reached the Lawson bank. O'Connor presented a telegram, apparently from the City National Bank, ordering the Commercial bank to pay him the amount stated. The bank officials telephoned the Kansas City bank and learned that the order was forged. The two men had telegraph instruments located outside Lawson and had sent the telegrams themselves.

INCREASE OF FIRE LOSSES.

Large Increase Over Last Year as Shown by Recent Reports.

The records show that the fire losses in the United States and Canada, while they were $3,000,000 less for September this year than in September, 1899, for the first nine months of the two years were $38,000,000 greater in 1900 than in 1899. The total of fire loss this year to Oct. 1, according to official figures was $136,316,550. Whereas this is an increase over last year of about $38,000,000, it shows an increase over the fire losses of 1898 of $47,250,000, or 50 per cent increase. This situation, of course, is alarming to the fire insurance men.

TUG MAXWELL BURNED.

Crew of Boat Owned by Booth Packing Company Has Narrow Escape.

The crew of the fishing tug William Maxwell had a narrow escape when fire broke out on the boat as she lay at her dock Michigan City dock. They had barely time to get to the dock, leaving all their clothing on board the burning boat. The decks and cabins were destroyed, and the engine and boiler were badly damaged, but the hull may be saved. The Maxwell belongs to the A. Booth Packing Company.

Trains Crash on Vandalia.

North-bound passenger train No. 9 on the Vandalia ran into an open switch at Verona, Ind., and collided with a south-bound passenger train. Engineer Squeers and Fireman Houghton were slightly injured. Mrs. McSheehy, a passenger, was painfully bruised. An engine and one car were demolished.

Carloads of Oatmeal Saved.

John Bruce ran a locomotive into a flame-sheeted shed of the American Cereal Company's plant at Chicago, where his conductor, Edward Kitchen, coupled the engine to fire cars loaded with oatmeal. A minute later the cars, with flaming roofs, were pulled out into the open, where they were saved by firemen.

RUIN FOLLOWS STRIKE.

Bare Necessities of Life Seem Luxuries in Coal Region.

A special from Hazleton, Pa., says that want and ruin have followed in the wake of the strike in the anthracite region. Families who lived in comfort while the mines were in operation now feel the pinch of starvation and the bare necessaries of existence seem like luxuries; business men, upon whom prosperity had smiled, have been brought to the verge of bankruptcy; thriving towns have become stagnant, casual travelers have forsaken them, and newspaper correspondents and labor leaders constitute the most important element in the floating population.

The production of coal constitutes the sole industry of the section. There is no farming in the neighborhood of the collieries. The land is rocky and barren. It has been stripped of timber, and stunted pines, oaks and underbrush straggle over hill and dale. Vast breakers are scattered about, each one supporting a settlement of miners, with shabby, rectangular cottages. Enormous culm banks show how great the underground work has been. There are miles of subterranean passages in mines that have been in operation for half a century, and in which the supply is expected to last for three centuries to come.

When President Mitchell's order for a strike went into effect every mine in the Lackawanna and Wyoming valleys came to a sudden stop and work was suspended in many parts of the Schuylkill and Lehigh districts, leaving only the comparatively small Panther Creek section in full operation.

Since then the missionary efforts of organizers of the United Mine Workers have resulted in the closing of the majority of the remaining collieries, the neighborhood of Tamaqua alone escaping. Strikers who had some little money on hand for an emergency have cut their living expenses down to a minimum, buying nothing but food, and little of that. In many instances they are able to obtain some credit from local dealers, but the bills cannot run very high.

Merchants who had large orders outstanding when the strike began promptly canceled them, refusing to make purchases until the trouble ended. Commercial travelers, usually the best patrons of the hotels, changed their routes, as they could sell nothing in the coal regions. The theaters have been unable to attract audiences, and many of the best attractions canceled their dates, to the further detriment of the hotelkeepers.

As there was little coal to be hauled the coal railroads had to lay off the crews of most of their coal trains. In many towns it is now impossible to obtain coal for domestic use at any price. Appeals are being made to the United Mine Workers' organization for funds for the relief of destitute strikers

Few-Line Interviews.

Goldwin Smith thinks that marriage is a protection against suicide. He says: "Statistics show that suicide is largely on the increase. The inference which some would draw is that progress has failed to produce happiness. It is true that mankind has grown more restless, and that with multiplied desires and heightened aspirations there have come new sources of discontent. But the general fact probably is that sensibility has increased with civilization. It seems to be proved statistically that marriage is a safeguard against suicide, while divorce is specially productive of it. Marriage no doubt is too often the disillusion of love. Yet the immense majority of marriages are happier than a lonely life."

Of the relief work in Galveston, Stephen E. Barton, second vice-president of the Red Cross Society, said: "So far there has been donated for the flood sufferers about $1,000,000 cash. Of this amount $750,000 has been donated to Galveston. It will require every cent of this amount to clean up debris and pay the expenses of distributing the materials donated, and nothing will be left for reconstruction of the 4,000 homes destroyed. The broken lumber that can be extracted from the debris is not worth the cost of the labor necessary to recover it. However, it is utterly impossible to think of burning any part of it without removing it to some distance from the remaining buildings."

Kato Takaki, Japanese minister in London, says of the empress dowager: "She is the heart and soul of China. So long as she lives, so long as she remains in China, whether the supreme power is taken from her or not, she will always be the greatest force, the one above all others to be reckoned with. The difficulty will be to get any one who can speak for her. I fear that the influence of Li-Hung-Chang is now of extremely little weight."

Emperor William says that the Boxer chiefs should suffer for the death of the Christians, and he also says: "I also long for peace which atones for the guilt, which makes good wrongs done, and which offers to all foreigners in China security for life and property, and, above all, for the free service of their religion."

Said Conrad G. Hubbard to a Washington Post reporter: "American tourists rave over the glorious scenery of the Rhine, when it is immeasurably inferior to the scenic charms of the Hudson or the St. Lawrence. There is not in any corner of Europe, nor elsewhere on the globe, anything comparable to the Thousand Islands for natural beauty."

SOME BETS ON THE ELECTION.

Some of the big election wagers are here compared. Never before, it is said, has there been so much money wagered upon an election. Wall street alone has put up $1,000,000, and $2,000,000 has found its way into stakeholders' hands in New York.

WILLIAM L. WILSON DEAD.

Framer of Tariff Bill and Ex-Postmaster General Passes Away.

Gen. William L. Wilson, ex-Postmaster General, soldier, lawyer, educator, a member of five Congresses and author of the famous "Wilson bill," died suddenly at Lexington, Va., Wednesday. Gen. Wilson's death was unexpected and was a great shock to his townsmen. Mr. Wilson was one of the oldest men in Congress during his long service at Washington.

William Lyne Wilson was born in Jefferson County, Virginia, May 3, 1843. He was educated at Columbia College and at the University of Virginia; served in the Confederate army and after the war was professor of Latin in Columbian College for six years. He studied law at the same time and when he was admitted to the bar in 1871 he engaged in practice at Charlestown, W. Va.

He was a delegate to the Democratic national convention in 1880 and was a presidential elector in that year. In 1882 he became president of the University of West Virginia. On being elected as a Democrat to the House of Representatives he resigned that office and took his seat Dec. 1, 1883. As a member of the ways and means committee in 1888 he had much to do with framing the Mills tariff bill, passed in that session, and as chairman of the same committee in 1893 he was the principal author of the tariff bill known popularly by his name. He was nominated and confirmed as Postmaster General to succeed Wilson S. Bissell, resigned.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

In the first eight months of this year the imports of raw materials for manufacturers aggregated $200,000,000 and the exports of manufactured goods amounted to $304,000,000, against $163,000,000 in the same time in 1896.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Hiding Place of Gold Revealed in a Dream—Pickle Crop of the State—Young Millionaire Chase Disappears—Train Wrecked and Burned.

David Schwarze of Galena, a wealthy miller, has just found $150 in gold as the result of a dream. The money was hidden by Mr. Schwarze during the Civil War, in anticipation of the raid of Gen. John Morgan. After Morgan had passed Schwarze looked in vain for the money, and concluded that some one had stolen it. He moved to Galena years later. A few nights ago he had a dream, in which he located the spot where the money was hidden, and, going there, found it intact.

Indiana Pickle Crop Booms.

The pickle crop of Indiana, though a comparatively new one, is rapidly increasing from year to year, and the deliveries to the salting houses established by a big Pittsburg concern are the largest this year since the firm began buying the vegetables from Indiana growers. There are several establishments which are operating in northern Indiana, but the Pittsburg house is the largest, with its thirty salting houses scattered over the country.

Searching for Young Chase.

Detective William J. Sutherland of the Mooney & Boland agency of Chicago has reported to the police the mysterious disappearance in Paris of Moses Fowler Chase of Indiana. Chase is a millionaire and had been placed in a private asylum by his aunt, Mrs. Duhme of Cincinnati. He was held in restraint because of a dispute over his sanity and the case has already gone into the courts of America.

Train Wrecked and Burned.

An accident occurred on the Evansville and Terre Houte Railroad seven miles south of Vincennes, in which three men were badly hurt, one fatally, and five are missing. A freight train ran into a cow and the engine was ditched and eighteen cars, four having oil tanks, were piled on it and burned.

Eyesight of Four Destroyed.

During a session of a class in chemistry in Shelbyville in which chemicals were used an explosion occurred, destroying the eyesight of Teacher John Jacklin, Roy Lee, Frank Amos and George Billingsley. Jacklin carelessly held a lighted lamp near the pipe through which he was passing the chemicals.

Fire did $4,000 damage in the carpet department of the Golden Rule dry goods store, Logansport.

Independent window glass manufacturers have signed a scale of 5 per cent in advance of that signed by the trust.

Muncie window glass flatteners will receive $10 weekly benefits from their union, pending a settlement with the trust.

Amos Coffman, a Dublin farmer aged 67, while working in a cornfield, was thrown from his wagon. His neck was broken.

Joseph Brown, 24, Panhandle switchman, killed at Logansport by being thrown under the wheels of an engine that jumped the track.

Hobart dedicated its new German Lutheran Church with all-day services. Rev. E. H. Scheip of Peru and Prof. H. Dan of Hammond conducted the dedicatory services. The building cost $8,000. Over 2,000 persons were present from surrounding towns.

The Kankakee land owners will combine in sending an agent to South Africa and Holland to encourage the settlement of Boer colonies in the Kankakee valley in La Porte, Lake, Porter and Stark counties. The Kankakee lands are adapted to the raising of cattle and of recent years immense crops of corn have been produced. The Kankakee valley promoters took the initial steps to encourage colonization during the last stages of the Boer war.

A bill is to be introduced in the Legislature this winter creating the office of State fire marshal. Auditor of State Hart is behind the proposition. The duties of the officer would be to investigate the cause of fires and fix the responsibility. It is believed he would be able to discover danger from spontaneous combustion in large manufacturing concerns in season to save heavy losses, thus saving the insurance companies large sums and thereby aid in reducing rates. The experiment has been successful in several States.

Wesley Hummer, a well-known resident of Greene township, was arrested in Elkhart on a charge of passing counterfeit money. He had nine $10 gold pieces, eighteen $5 coins and three $1 silver pieces, all spurious, $13.25 in good money and a die for making the counterfeit. His plan was to make a small purchase, tender one of the gold pieces and receive good money in change. The gold counterfeits were poorly executed, consisting of stamped white metal, bronzed with a powder that rubbed off on the paper in which they were wrapped. Hummer confessed, telling the officers that no one else was directly implicated. He said he bought the spurious money from a man who met him regularly at a point between South Bend and Plymouth.

Joseph Poker, 27, was killed by a falling rock in a coal mine at Shelburn.

Pittsburg capitalists paid $85,000 for the oil holdings of Alford & Heald, around Van Buren.

Benjamin Steele's family, Elwood, was poisoned by drinking tea. Narrow escape from death.

Servant girls in Hartford City are so scarce that there are four or five situations open to every girl.

Harry Swartz and William Walters, farmers, near Strawns, fought with stones. Both were dangerously injured. Old feud.

John Rushton, Bedford, master mechanic at the Gillette bent wood works, was fatally injured by the bursting of an emery wheel.

WHAT'LL WE GROWL ABOUT?

When the craps are all gathered—the barns are piled high,
What will we growl about then?
When the pumpkins are spiced with the frost o' the sky,
An' the cider is sweet, an' the bead's on the rye,
What will we growl about then?

Why, we'll shiver and shake as the winter winds blow—
That's what we'll growl about then!
We'll gaze o'er the wearisome leagues of the snow,
An' sigh for the blistering summer, you know—
That's what we'll growl about then!

Ah, how can life please us! . . . And when it is past,
What will we growl about then?
Why, we'll land in the next world—that region so vast—
An' wonder if still the hot weather will last?—
That's what we'll growl about then!

BEAUTY'S POWER

"PUT some finishin' touches to yer hair today, Margaret. There's a new summer boarder comin' and he'll be here fer supper," said Farmer Brown to a beautiful girl who stood on the doorstep of the old farmhouse.

"How exciting! Who is he?"

"Never saw him. He wrote that his name was Rex Carl—Carlisle—or suthin' like that."

Three hours later, when the bell rang for supper, Margaret put a few "finishin' touches" to her hair and went into the dining room, where the farmer's family and the new boarder had already assembled.

Margaret took her place without looking at the young man opposite.

"Let me introduce you to Margaret, Mr—er——"

"Carlisle."

"Yes, yes—Carlisle. Never was good at remembering names," stammered the old farmer. "Mr. Carlisle—Margaret," and with that informal introduction he turned his attention to "dishing up."

Rex Carlisle watched Margaret from under his lashes.

"A perfect little beauty," he thought. "She would grace any New York drawing room—but such a name!"

Margaret did not once look up after their introduction, and at the close of the meal she quietly slipped from the room.

But, living under the same roof, she and Carlisle often met. Many afternoons found them together, and all the long evenings, while the afterglow lingered in the west, were spent in each other's society.

Carlisle was a society man. He told Margaret much of his life in the city, to all of which she lent a willing ear.

He was looking over the society notes in a big New York daily one afternoon.

"Hello!" he said suddenly. "Marjory Atherton makes her debut in October. This paper says she will be 'the bud of the season, if only because of her great beaty.'"

Carlisle laughed heartily.

"I wonder how much her father paid for that 'ad.'" he exclaimed. "Marjory Atherton's 'great beauty!' Now that just shows how much you can believe what the papers say. She is the plainest girl I have ever known. We were schoolmates and were graduated the same year. Marjory had red hair and freckles. But she was clever. The cleverest scholar in the whole class. I was only eighteen then, and imagined that she favored me more than she did the other fellows. But not being a susceptible youth to anything but beauty, Marjory's red hair and freckles did not appeal to me."

His companion arose and unconsciously dropped the bunch of flowers that had filled her lap.

The days flew on. Carlisle's vacation was nearing a close.

He found himself wishing that he might remain forever near the farmer's daughter. He marveled at the power exercised over him by this simple little country girl.

One evening as they were sitting on the piazza he remarked:

"There is something about you that reminds me of some one I have known."

Margaret looked up at him curiously.

"It seems that I have known you forever," he went on.

"Yet you have only been here three weeks," she replied.

"Yes, but I have not reckoned time by days or weeks, Margaret. You can never know how I have enjoyed your companionship."

He would have taken her hand, but she arose as if not noticing the gesture and wandered into the sitting room.

She took a seat at the little old-fashioned organ and began playing. She started an old song, one that he had so often sung in the old days at the high school. He began the song with her, then stopped and listened to Margaret. How strangely familiar her voice, and how sweet.

He went back to the piazza and listened to her sweet girlish tones. She wondered at his abrupt leave taking. Quitting the organ she went out on the porch. Rex came toward her.

"Margaret," he faltered, "I love you; can you give me one little word of hope that my love is returned? I am going away tomorrow."

Margaret stepped back and looked up into his face in astonishment.

He saw the look.

"I know that you are surprised," he said eagerly. "I have only known you three weeks. Yet I love you. Will you be my wife?"

"Rex," she answered softly, laying her hand on his arm, "you do not love me, you only love my beauty, and it will fade. I am Marjory Atherton."—New York Evening World.

HEADGEAR FOR A SQUAW.

Woman Who Lost Her Hat in the West Sees It a Year Later.

"Talking of buying expensive hats," said a woman, "reminds me of what happened to a cousin of mine. She was a young widow with two small children to educate. Her income being small, she came to Chicago from her Montana home to study art in order to open a studio herself. The lessons were expensive and when the time came for her to return home she was short of money. However, she saw a hat in a shop window that pleased her fancy. Of course it was expensive; what pretty hat isn't? She knew the price was more than she could afford, and for some days she resisted the temptation to buy. But the day before her departure for Montana she bought the hat, and decided to wear it on the train, thinking it would be injured less than if packed.

"While changing cars at a railroad junction in a gale of wind her hat blew off and it went sailing over the plains. There was no time to run for it, as the train was late and moved right on. Besides this my cousin had both children with her, the younger one in her arms. Trying, wasn't it? And now what do you think happened a year after? My cousin came East again and naturally as the train reached the place where she had lost her hat just a year before, she looked out of the car window, and there on the platform of the newly erected little station stood a squaw rigged out in all the splendor of her native costume and on her head reposed the very hat that had been such an expense and annoyance to my cousin. It was a comical sight and almost reconciled her to the loss, especially as the glory of the hat had departed, the feathers looking forlorn and the trimming generally the worse for wear."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NEW MINT IN PHILADELPHIA.

Will Not Be Ready for Occupation Before May Next.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new mint building at 16th and Spring Garden streets, Philadelphia, but Contractor McCaul does not think it will be completed before May 1, the time named in his contract. The building is being constructed of gray granite from Mount Desert and will be plain in style except in the numismatic room, the decorations of which will be on a magnificent scale. Many rare kinds of marble will appear in this room. The entrance in Spring Garden street will also be somewhat ornate. The carvers are at work at this point, but find their work difficult, the granite being very hard. The grain is coarse and tough, rendering it difficult to get the smoothness necessary for every piece used in the building. The carvers have been at work on the stone for more than a year.

Within the walls workmen are still busy putting in place the rafters. Several huge boilers have been built in already, but none of the new machinery has been brought to the building yet. No machinery will be put in place until the interior is completed. All machinery will be of the latest design. Only a few machines will be moved from the present mint.

PHILADELPHIA'S NEW MINT.

Almost any one in these days of "photography made easy," if he uses good plates and developers, can produce a clear, crisp negative. Very often, however, a good negative fails to result in a good picture. The fault in the majority of cases lies in bad grouping and poor arrangement of the subject. Don't begin by making portraits. Of course, every one tries this, the result being very often freaks and curiosities which astonish and bewilder us. The professional knows that a special lens is necessary for a really good portrait, which, however, would give him but poor results were he to use it for landscape work.

Suppose you take a house for a subject. It seems easy to make a picture of a building, but a little study will show you that there are several important details to be observed. In the first place, don't point your camera directly at the front of the house. You may think that if the sun shines directly on it you'll get a good picture because there is plenty of light. But shadow is necessary as well, and you will secure a better result if you can arrange your camera so as to include not only the front, but one side as well, which, if the front is in the light, will necessarily be in shadow. This will give you a better idea of what the house looks like, as well as a more artistic picture.

Then again, suppose you wish to take a landscape or a view of the street. Choose the view you think best suited for your purpose, but remember that the prettiest view does not always make the prettiest picture. If you're taking a landscape, focus so as to get a good background, and bring the foreground into correct focus by stopping down your lens. Always try to have a shrub, a heap of stones, or some figure in the foreground. If you don't your picture will have a flat effect. A really pretty scene is often completely spoiled by a flat, uninteresting expanse of grass or water in the foreground.

Indoor photography requires a longer exposure, for no matter how strong the light is outside, it is very much diffused when it reaches objects in an ordinary room. If, however, you want to take a picture indoors, try to have as much light as you can from the tops of the windows. Sometimes it is better even to block up the lower halves of the windows. An upstairs room is always preferable to one downstairs.

SAVED BY POOR GRAMMAR.

Hilarious Students Caught the Professor Before He Caught Them.

Students of a certain Western State university which many Kansas City boys attend are telling a story on a professor of English that will bear repeating. Some time ago several of the students were gathered in a fellow student's room far past the midnight hour. A few bottles of beer, a light luncheon and a game of "draw" were among a few of the forbidden enjoyments that made the hours slip rapidly by. About 2 o'clock in the morning, when the fun was at its height, a knock came at the door. Everything became as quiet as death in an instant.

"Who's there?" said the host.

"It's me," came back a voice, at the same time mentioning the name of the professor of English.

A shout went up from the room.

"Not on your life," called a voice from the room. "You should brush up on your grammar, old sport, before attempting to play a joke on us. Our professor says 'It is I.' But whoever you are come in and have a drink."

The door was thrown open, and before the astonished characters actually stood the professor of English.

One of the students, quicker to take advantage of a bad situation than the others, said calmly:

"Look here, professor, you've got us dead to rights, but if you 'peach' on us we'll tell about that hideous mistake in grammar. Oh, professor, 'it's me.' Quite reprehensible, sir; extremely careless, sir."

This last was said in a way mimicking the professor's classroom tones. The shot went home. Rather would the professor have had a crime fastened on him than that it should get noised about that he, an authority on English, had actually said "It's me."

The students' transgressions were never reported.—Kansas City Star.

WHAT LONDON WOMEN ARE WEARING.

STYLISH SEASONABLE COSTUMES FOR THE STREET AND HOUSE.

NEW JACKET DESIGN.

Military Girl's Coat Is a Marvel in Nattiness.

The American girl is too patriotic to quickly lose interest in the gallant soldier boys, and as if to show very positively that she thinks of them she has revived the military styles which were so popular last year. This season, however, instead of the gray jacket she affects a very natty design in musicians' blue cloth, which will be one of the smartest materials of winter.

NEW JACKET.

There is an almost rigid air about the military jacket. The back is cut severely plain and fits the figure as closely as if it were a bodice. The sides, too, are shaped into the most graceful curves and are opened for a few inches upon the hips to preserve a strictly military effect. There is a touch of femininity, though, in the trimming. This consists of bands of cream broadcloth stitched over the seams at the front and over the shoulders in such a way that they simulate a broad collar effect. The white cloth is then outlined with the tiniest bands of gilt braid. White cloth buttons are used for the purpose of adjustment and adornment, but as these are both expensive and perishable others of gold or silver are substituted.

WORK OF WOMAN SCULPTOR.

Fraulein Ries Receives First Medal at the Vienna Exhibit.

The jury of this year's art exposition at Vienna has bestowed the highest honors on Fraulein Theresa Feodorowna Ries, sculptress of extraordinary talent.

What is most remarkable about this artist is the fact that nearly every one of her chefs-d'oeuvre betrays masculine characteristics. For instance, she seems to have no talent whatever in the execution of female busts or figures, but she seeks her peer in the reproduction of the form divine of the military, the stalwart toiler or hardy peasant.

THERESA FEODROWNA RIES.

A work of Fraulein Ries greatly admired is a bust of Mark Twain, which is pronounced an excellent likeness by one who met the great American humorist during his long sojourn in Vienna. Mark Twain himself remarked to friends that it was a surprise to him that the delicate hands of a woman were able to reproduce so faithfully his "very coarse" facial lineaments.

Fraulein Ries is the daughter of a Russian general, who, after having lost his fortune, took refuge with friends in Vienna. His daughter supports him in his old age by the work of her hands.

FOR FILLING A PIPE.

Tobacco Pouch with Filling Device Which Prevents Waste.

Filling a pipe from a pouch of tobacco is a task which cannot be accomplished without more or less waste, to say nothing of the time usually consumed in the operation, and so perhaps smokers will be pleased with the improved pouch illustrated in the cut, which was recently patented by David H. Allen, of Miamisburg, Ohio. The inventor claims that the pouch will not only fill the pipe quickly, but also avoids the necessity of taking the tobacco in the hand, which generally results in spilling it. The mode of operation is as follows: The operator loosens the drawstring of the bag and inserts the charge nozzle in the bowl of the pipe. The tobacco is shaken into the charging end of the bag, and the operator with his finger readily feeds and presses into the bowl of the pipe the desired charge of tobacco, the surplus being shaken back into the bag and the drawstring again tightened. There is no opening at the rear of the filling compartment, but the fabric is sufficiently loose to allow the finger to be inserted between the folds to manipulate the tobacco.

Mafeking's Famous Ape.

Mafeking's ape, that famous animal whose intelligence during the siege of that beleaguered town merits a claim to be the "missing link," is offered for sale in London. The officer who trained it to perform a share of duty in that memorable period of suffering carried it to England, but for some reason is unable to provide the comfortable home it deserves. It was this ape's duty to ring the alarm bell the moment the Boers began firing, and it never failed to do the work in so indefatigable and conscientious a manner as to merit the approval of all the residents. Having sounded the tocsin and warned the inhabitants, the ape scurried off to its underground bombproof hole, thus proving that it thoroughly realized the danger to itself as well as to others. Not only should a happy home be awarded to this "man and brother," but a medal should be given to commemorate the gallant service it performed under fire.—Boston Herald.

Misrepresenting and exaggerating are simple lying.

HEATS THE UPPER ROOMS.

Hot-Air Drum for Fireplaces Which Economizes on Fuel.

Fireplaces in a house are both a convenience and a luxury, and it is certain they would be used more frequently if any reliable means could be provided whereby the upper chambers of the building could be heated without the necessity of using separate stoves for the purpose. In the drawing we show a fireplace recently designed by John F. Beck, of Atlanta, Ga., which seems capable of heating the upper rooms to a comfortable temperature. It consists of a metallic casing, which is inserted in place of the brick partition usually placed between fireplaces set opposite each other in adjoining rooms. The lower portion of the drum is narrow, and any pattern of grate can be attached to it, while the upper portion flares out over the grate, leaving, however, sufficient room for the passage of smoke through the chimney. Inside the drum a series of plates are so arranged that the air is caused to circulate back and forth in a circuitous route before entering the pipe at the top of the drum. The fresh air is conducted into the bottom of the drum through a tube laid under the floor and extending to one of the basement windows. As the air is heated it rises through the pipe to the chambers, causing the fresh air to enter and providing not only sufficient heat for the upper, but also a perfect ventilation of air free from all smoke of the fireplace.

HOT-AIR DRUM FOR FIREPLACES.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

It pays if you live up to your advertisement.

It pays if you have for sale what you advertise.

It pays to advertise if you have anything to sell.

It pays if you know how to spend your money for advertising.

Money spent ignorantly and injudiciously for advertising is all thrown away.

It pays if it goes into papers that have subscribers who can and will pay for what they buy.

Advertising surely pays. If it did not, A. M. Rothschild & Co. of Chicago fooled away a lot of good money last year. They paid the Chicago Record $98,445.05 for advertising.

SUBSTANTIAL JUSTICE.

The Method of Rendering It Adopted by an Old Town Magistrate.

A few lawyers were sitting in one of the city restaurants a few days ago eating lunch and discussing different subjects, when one of them told the following story:

This occurred some years ago in the office of a former justice of the peace. An attorney, who has since left Sioux City, had been engaged to defend a man for the crime of petty larceny. The lawyer knew that the case against his client was a pretty strong one, and he decided to beard the lion in his den. As he entered the room he told the justice of the case, the name of his client, and added he did not think there was any evidence to convict. At the same time he slipped a $20 gold piece in the hand of the justice, and gave him a knowing wink. The court said nothing, but, pulling open the cash drawer, slipped the money in. The case went to trial, and after the evidence had all been introduced there appeared to be no question of the guilt of the defendant. But his counsel was confident, thinking the gold piece had done the work. The court then summed up the case, and, to the astonishment of the defendant's counsel, said:

"The court finds the defendant guilty as charged in the information, and fines him $100, of which $20 has been paid. The defendant will be committed to the county jail until the remainder is paid into this court."

Nothing more was said, and the justice settled back in his chair, satisfied that the laws of the State had been upheld and a dishonest attorney had been left in the lurch.—Sioux City Journal.

Clever Criminals Confess Identity.

Before the introduction of the Bertillon system the Paris detectives did not succeed in identifying a score of recidivistes "on the prowl" per month. The number of those identified has been more than trebled of recent years. Anthropometry is, however, only indirectly responsible for this. The most knowing criminals, when caught, no longer deny their identity. They have come to the conclusion that such denials would be a waste of time, and in nine cases out of ten they confess voluntarily. It is only those who have been absent from the capital for many years, and who, in virtue of that absence, are not up-to-date, who still resort to prevarication. They have never had the ceremony of measurement performed, and they are still under the pleasant delusion that the memory of detectives may fail now and again.—London Telegraph.

Tree that Resists Fire.

In the savannas of South America there grows a tree called by the natives chaparro, which not only is not injured but actually benefited by prairie fires. The thick bark resists the action of the flames, and the hard seeds are supplied with a kind of wings owing to which they are scattered broadcast by the strong wind which accompanies a fire.

Light and Heavy Woods.

Cork and poplar are the lightest woods in the world, and pomegranate one of the heaviest; it is more than one-third heavier than water.

His One Loss.

Some of the skaters on the London Serpentine hire their skates from men whose business it is to let them out at a certain sum per hour.

Thackeray once asked one of these men whether he had ever lost a pair through the omission to exact a deposit, and he replied that he had never done so except on one occasion, when the circumstances made it almost pardonable.

A well-dressed young fellow was having his second skate fastened on, when he suddenly broke away from the man's hands and dashed on to the ice.

The next instant a thick-set, powerful man was clamoring for another pair. "I shall nab him now," he called, "for I am a dab at skating."

He was a sheriff's officer in pursuit of his prey, and a very animating sight it was to watch the chase. The officer was, as he had boasted, a first-rate skater, and it became presently obvious that he was running down his man. Then the young fellow determined to take a desperate risk for liberty.

The ice, as usual, under the bridge was marked "dangerous," and he made for it at headlong speed. The ice bent beneath his weight, but he got safely over. The sheriff's officer followed, with equal pluck, but being a heavier man broke through and was drowned.

"His skates," said the narrator of the incident, "I got back after the inquest, but those the young man had on I never saw again."

Her Age.

It is not an ordinary lawyer who can overcome a woman's reluctance to tell her age. The Detroit Free Press reports one of many failures in that line of effort.

"And what is your age, madam?" was the attorney's question.

"My own," she answered promptly.

"I understand that, madam, but how old are you?"

"I am not old, sir," with indignation.

"I beg your pardon, madam. I mean, How many years have you passed?"

"None; the years have passed me."

"How many of them have passed you?"

"All. I never heard of them stopping."

"Madam, you must answer my question. I want to know your age."

"I don't know that the acquaintance is desired by the other side."

"I don't see why you insist upon refusing to answer my question," said the attorney, coaxingly. "I am sure I would tell how old I was, if I were asked."

"But nobody would ask you, for everybody knows you are old enough to know better than to be asking a woman her age, so there."

And the attorney passed on to the next question.

Military Automobiles.

The advantages presented by automobiles have a great fascination for all military men. Large sums have been offered for the best automobile. In war, as in everything, it pays to use the best weapons. The best shield with which to protect the stomach is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It cures constipation, indigestion and dyspepsia, and prevents malaria.

Pepper Started His Fortune.

William K. Van Alen is a charter member of the California Pioneers. He is now 83 years of age. He went to San Francisco from New York in 1849.

"When I landed in California from Panama," he said, in telling how he laid the foundation for his fortune, "I had but $1 in my pocket. I felt quite an empty spot in the region of my stomach, and I knew that to fill it would take the whole of that dollar. But I was bound to have a square meal. When my dollar was spent, therefore, I looked about for work. Seeing a lot of sacks of pepper piled up in front of a store, I made a bargain with their owner to try to sell them for him. At the end of the day I was $40 in pocket. With this I started in buying and selling, and laid a good foundation for the future."

Mr. Van Alen is now one of the wealthiest men in San Francisco.

Eat Mrs. Austin's famous pancakes, ready in a jiffy, so good you always want more.

Another Soul Misjudged.

"So that old miser uncle of yours is dead? Well, I suppose you feel better now that he isn't here to scandalize your family by his niggardly way of living."

"No, confound him! He didn't leave anything behind to show that he was a miser after all."—Washington Star.

The County Candidates.

The candidates on the democratic ticket are all good men, honest and capable. They are to say the least, the equals of their competitors. Then not one of them should be scratched. Democrats have done too much of this sort of thing to accommodate a friend, and have seldom been thanked for it. Some of the poorest officers we ever had, were republicans elected by democratic votes. Say Geo. Crane who beat one of the best and purest men in the county, and H. P. Stroh, the poorest stick of a sheriff we ever had, who beat one of the best. Why will democrats be so foolish? And half the time a man scratches his ticket he spoils it and loses his vote. Mark the rooster and your vote will be counted for good men from top to bottom of the list. Let us give every one a big majoryity.

Tom Taggart Coming.

A telegram from Mayor Taggart at Indianapolis says he will be here on the noon train from Fort Wayne, Friday of this week, Oct. 26, and spend the afternoon here, and the evening in Garrett. He envites every democrat in the county to come in at one place or the other, and get acquainted with him. He is no speaker but used to live in the county, and wants to talk with old friends and meet new ones. He is one of the ablest democratic mangers in the state.

Stevenson Coming.

The Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, democratic candidate for vice president, will speak at Auburn on Friday, Nov. 2, 1900, at one o'clock. A grand rally of the democracy of DeKalb county and the twelfth congressional district will take place on that day. Other announcements will be made later.

Political Notes.

Rockfeller's profit in the Standard oil trust for one day, would fil 900,000 full dinner pails. He is the man who is getting full benefit of prosperity.

Charles Bash, the No. 1 of the Big Four, that addressed the Republicans here, started by saying he was not going to hurt the feelings of anyone. Then he began to call names and bully rag generally. Bryan was a blatherskite and a little better than an anarchis. He said there were no trusts, and then went right on to say trusts were good things, and he named a few. The fellow was evidently crazy. He tried to scare people about 16 to 1 dollars, but forgot to say that all the new silver dollars we are using were made under McKinley, a million and a half a month, and at the rate of 16 to 1.

B. F. Moffett went on our 1901 list Saturday. He has the audacity to say that old Jackson township is going Democratic this year.

John Shugers says that the report that he is going to vote for McKinley is wrong. He says he has had enough of trusts and similar republican institutions. He is an ardent admirer of the manly course of Bryan, and wants a president with more backbone than McKinley-Hanna.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says Mr. Bryan has fallen into the habit of attributing every thing that is evil, no matter how trivial to the Republican party, and adds, "Mr. Bryan's attention is called to the fact that the latest nipple on a nursing bottle is not sanitary and causes colic." This can be traced directly to McKinley's door. Charley Bash who attempted to make a Republican speech at the opera house last week commenting upon the increase of prices said that four years ago, the farmer received eight cents per dozen and now they are sixteen cents per dozen for eggs. He would have us believe this can be traced direct to McKinley's door. Has the American rooster failed in its mission here on earth?

Hon. J. M. Robinson.

Our congressman seems to be the continued object of all sorts of misrepresentations. One of the latest is that he talked against trusts, but that in congress he voted against a bill to control trusts. Now for the facts.

There are already plenty of laws to control trusts, but as was the case in Ohio under their state law, republicans in position of power would come in the way of the law and save the trusts.

When republicans had this thrown in their teeth and could not deny it they resorted to a trick. They got up a bill providing for an amendment to the constitution giving congress the power to legislate on trusts, a power it already had and had exercised. This was a plan merely to gain time and to let the trusts go free till after the election, when the whole thing would be dropped. It takes two or three years to get an amendment to the constitution, as it must go before all the state legislatures and be ratified by two-thirds of them. Then after that it might be several years before congress would make a law under this amendment and then several years more before a case could be got into court and finished. In the meantime the truats would be going on at a great rate. It was against this snide amendment that Mr. Robinson and other democrats voted. It was not a plan to hurt trusts, but a plan to save and shield them. Mr. Robinson was serving the interests of the people as he always does. Even leading republican papers like the New York Sun pronounced the bill a snide at the time.

There is another matter in which injustice and that of the rankest, is attempted against Mr. Robinson. It is in regard to the pension of Mr. Parker, of this place, who lost both hands in firing a firing a 4th of July salute at Mayaville several years ago. This rendered him helpless and under the little pension he was getting under the general law left him almost a beggar. He went to Washington in his trouble and tried to get members interested in his case. But he was met only by cold looks or hollow promises. When Robinson got there however, he turned in and helped so vigorously that there was a private pension bill passed both house and senate. The house bill was for $50 a month. But in the senate Gen. John Palmer, late gold democrat, secured a reduction to $40 a month. This is the substance of this matter and shows Mr. Robinson the strongest and best friend the ex-soldiers had in congress.

Bad Runaway.

About forty teams more or less have been hauling gravel on the roads down in Jackson township and on Saturday there was a bad runaway. Just as Warren George was passing James Farvers, Warren fell oves in a fit dropping the lines, which started the horses, and away they ran, the teams ahead hustling out of the way. When Warren passed James McClellan, he was hanging helplessly over the side of the wagon and when near the Magginis school house, he was thrown out. His head, it is supposed struck the fence and he was picked up unconscious, with bad cuts and bruises about the head. He was taken home and Dr. Hines sent for, and his wounds dressed. After he was thrown out the horses ran on and finally the tongue of the wagon fell and stuck into the ground, the force of the motion forcing the wagon up into the air on the tongue. The horses got away then. Dr. Hines says Warren will get along all right in spite of several bad cuts on the head and a mashed face.

Is 96 Today.

Andrew Casebeer of Butler is 96 today, and his friends are gathering there to celebrate the event. Gene Trout, a grandson, and family, went over as well as Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Klotz of Waterloo, she being Mr. Trout's mother.

Mr. Casebeer came from Ohio in 1834, and from Defiance to Fish Creek, he had to cut a path through a forest, so his ox team could get through. Think of the pluck required in a case like that. He settled on land on Fish Creek where the Casebeer mill was built and stood so long, and there was his home for so many years. For a time he has been living with a daughter, Mrs. McCurdy in Butler. He is still hale and hearty feeling about as spry as many younger men and doing a good deal of work. The COURIER unites with several thousand friends in wishing him many happy returns of the day.

Dispatch Changes Hands.

Saturday the Dispatch was sold by Smith & Higley to Geo. W. Gordon and Charles Spake, who took possession this morning.

The retiring proprietors have proved very rgreeable neighbors and although we and they occupy opposite sides of a very robust political fence, we have never had any little "tiffs" over the matter. We have generally been agreed that in a free and intelligent republic, political parties are necessary and wholesome, and that a change of sides now and then is not so very dangerous in such a government as to cause enmity or bloodshed. We trust the new propritors will take the same view. We have not heard what Mr. Smith will do in the future, but hope his lines may be cast in pleasant places. He is an able writer, good business manager and an agreeable competitor in business and politics.

Thugs at Large.

One night last week, someone went into the barn of Wm. Magginis, southwest of here, evidently to steal a horse. They didn't find a horse but found a good buggy, and took that, leaving in its place an old thing worth about fifty cents.

At Concord they succeeded in getting a horse at Dragoo's barn, and now having a good rig, they went on for more conquest. Soon after this, they met a man and assulted him, knocked him down and took his watch and $30 in money. People who met the men at several points say they were colored men, or if white that their faces were blacked to disguise them. They are evidently a tough gang, and got out of the county before the alarm could be given, as they had all night to get away in.

Cold Steel Or Death.

"There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation," was the awful prospect set before Mrs. I. B. Hunt, of Lime Ridge, Wis., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvellous power of Electric Bitters to cure Stomach and Liver trouble, but she heard of it, took seven bottles, was wholy cured, avoided surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feel better than ever. It's positively guarnteed to cure Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at McCord's drug store.

Youtsey Convicted.

GEORGETOWN, KY., Oct. 20—Henry E. Youtsey was found guilty of complicity in the Gobel murder and sentenced to life imprisonment this morning. Youstey was somewhat better this morning but is still unable to make himself understood. A new trial will be asked for.

Judge Cantrill ordered the motion for a stay of execution filed 2nd term Feburary court.

Silver Wedding Bells.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Nelson of Jackson township celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary Sunday, Oct. 21, by entertaining a large number of their friends and relatives. The day was a typical one of the season, the sun warm and hazy while the trees were in their most gorgeous dress—a veritable repetition of the day upon which Mr. Nelson and Miss Keeran took the solemn vows that have held them as one during this quarter century.

Although twenty-five years seem a long time, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson declare it has slipped by rapidly, and certainly time has sat lightly upon them, for they are as young as they used to be. Four boys have come into the home. Mr. Arthur Nelson, a traveling salesman, is the eldest. Mr. Frank Nelson holds a position as teacher in the Garrett schools. Mr. Ray is a lad of seventeen, a sophomore in the Auburn high school, while Master Stanley a stout youngster of twelve, is his father's right hand man on the farm and the pest of his music teacher and the district schoolmarm.

By far the most important event of the day was the sumptuous banquet served under the direction of Mrs. Nelson assisted by her sister Miss Ellen Keeran, whose culinary ability is well known to all Auburn people as well as many all over the county. The pleasant rooms of the farm residence were prettily decorated with branches of gayly tinted oak, maple and dogwood, while the favors at dinner were bouquets of pansies.

After dinner a program of music and recitations was given by the guests. Mrs. Nelson made a neat address in which she said they had enjoyed their life together, that they had been prosperous, and that they had especial reason to be thankful in that death had never entered their home. When the guests had all joined in a few hymns, they dispersed to their various homes. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are ideal entertainers and may they have many happy returns of the day.

MT. HOPE.

Farmers are husking corn now.

Sherd Platner has gone to De Moines, Iowa, to visit his brother.

Mrs. J. J. Coleman entertained company from Concord Sunday.

F. Sebert contemplates a trip west soon.

The basket factory at Mt. Hope is in order now, but owing to the business situation, will not employ a larger force until after election.

Our Mudsock correspondent to the Dispatch writes as follows: The once prosperous store at Mt. Hope has been turned into a bill board for democratic cartoons. O no neighbor Mudsock, we have only pasted up a few statistics which seems to throw the average republican into convulsions. We advise you to come in daylight and read them before arriving at such hasty conclusions.

Everything is lively here: goods at cost; prosperity in the distance.

Notice to Lot Owners.

Notice is hereby given that the lot owners of the Cedar Creek cemetery incorporation are called to meet at Cedar Chapel in Butler township, DeKalb county, Indiana, on Saturday, the 17th day of November, 1900, at 1 o'clock p. m. of said day for the purpose of considering and deciding the building of a fence around said cemetery. Every person owning a lot or lots in said cemetery is earnestly requested to be present at said meeting. By order of the board of directors—A. C. Griffin, President, Gloyd, Allen county, Ind., Philip Noel, Secretary of Incorporation DeKalb P. O., Ind.

A Night Of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought she must soon die from Pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying it had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After three small doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at McCords drug store.

Opportunity For Business.

During the past year the Chicago & North-Western Railway Company built 474 miles of line through the most fertile portions of Iowa and Minnesota. These new lines of railway are now in full operation and are dotted with promising towns, which are trade centers for well located communities. A descriptive pamphlet with a list of business opportunities in each town may be obtained upon application to agents of the Chicago & North-Western Railway or to W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger & Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Sale of Colts.

Forty head of colts from four to six months old, bred by John Kelliher at his stock farm at Rapid City, South Dakota. These colts will be sold at private sale, in the lot by the Lake Shore stock yards, on Saturday, Oct. 27, beginning at 10 a. m. These colts are not branded, are drafts and roadsters. Here will be a good chance for farmers to get desirable young stock. They can be seen here from Thursday on.—JOHN KELLIHER.

Club Notes.

The club met with Mrs. Swineford Saturday last and was fairly well attended. Several excuses were granted on account of house cleaning. The lesson was conducted by Miss Nellie Buckley and was freely discussed by all the members. The poem, "The Ladder of St. Augustine," by Longfellow, was read by Mrs. Busselman. An excellent paper, "How the Russian Peasant Lives," was given by Mrs. Ralston and was full of interest to the members and brought to their knowledge many new things. A committee for the "Social Evening" to be given Nov. 2, was appointed as follows: Mrs. Swineford, Mrs. Ralston and Mrs Nusbaum. Club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Emanuel next Saturday.

A Small Cyclone.

The rainstorm last evening brought a little flurry of wind in Auburn, but a mile or so west of town it got down to serious business, in fact it was a small cyclone. The path of it was wide enough to take down ten telephone poles for the Postal line, and men came through early this morning and fixed them up, so that the line is now all right. From here the men followed the line up to Waterloo to see to the other repairs.

Charley Rugman's barn came in the line of the storm, and was partly wrecked. Shocks of corn were blown about and considerable other damage done, some of which is reported in another item. There was no damage in Auburn and we hardly realize there was anything except a hard shower, which has washed the staeets clean.

Died.

Court.

The case of Parker vs Kessler reported before, appears to have been a queer one. Parker is the man who lost both hands in firing a fourth of July cannon at Maysville. He was in Washington City for some time trying to get a better pension on account of his helpless condition. Hon. J. M. Robinson and others took up the case and he finally got $40 a month in a special bill Then he came home and later took an extended visit in Ohio. During his absence his Maysville house was occupied by Kessler, and when the latter left the house Parker claims he took a lot of his, Parker's furniture and never returned it. So Parker sued for its return, but failed.

The case between G. W. Gordon and Harry Draggoo to quiet title of the postoffice block was settled in Gordon's favor. This was the cause of the long wait in the sale of the Dispatch. Mr. Gordon trades the block to Smith of the Dispatch, but the latter objected to the title, but it is now all right.

The matter of appointing a guardian for D. W. Jenner came up, and it is likely this will be done.

Ella Lochner was given a divorce from Henry and $100 alimony, $20 attorney fees. She is to get $10 a month till court gives further orders.

John B. Hill damages against city of Auburn, called up but nothing done

Joe Newcomer had two cases against him for petit larceny. On one he got one hour in jail and on the other 15 minutes, on a plea of guilty.

In the case of assault and battery against Harry Hammon, he pleaded not guilty.

BUTLER.

The Christian church of Butler seems to be in a prosperous condition. A new minister is at its helm.

Clarence Douse of Atchison, Kan., is reported sick with typhoid fever at Garrett. He is a nephew of Mrs. Russel Stevens of this plabe.

Mrs. John Crouse was buried last week. Her funeral was preached by her grand daughters husband, Rev. Brosy of Auburn. She has been a sufferer for a long time, and had reached an advanced age. Her husband, two children, fifteen grandchildren and ten great-grand children survive her. Her parents came from Switzerland about seventy years ago, and met first on shipboard. Upon their arrival at Philadelphia, they were each sold for their passage as was then their custom, when passengers were unable to pay their fare. They were bought by a kind hearted Omjahman, who kept them until they had worked out their passage money, when they were married, and at which place Mrs. Crouse was born. Her death leaves her aged husband alone.

We begin to hear a little quiet political discussion around the corners, and the back rooms of shops. People seem wonderfully well satisfied that be.

John M. Lowe, will soon become a citizen of Butler.

Many people are getting ready to move after the election.

Edith Wilson has materialy improved in the last week.

The Bowling Alley is folding its tent, and will soon be a thing of the past. We wonder if any one can figure up the good or the evil it has done during its stay here of about a year. Maybe some arms are stronger, if so purses are emptier.

ATTEMPT TO STEM THE TIDE.

WILLIS J. ABBOT.

Republicans Are Resorting to All Kinds of Desperate Means.

Chicago correspondence:

The Republicans are resorting to all kinds of desperate measures to turn the tide that is running so strongly towards William Jennings Bryan and the Democratic party. The latest attempt—and one of the most despicable—to stem the tide is a direct misuse of the mails. The officials of the Democratic National Committee have received evidence that Republican postmasters and postal employes are not only tampering with letters sent from Democratic headquarters and delaying the delivery of campaign literature, but that letters and literature are being returned almost as soon as delivered to the postoffice address of the addressees.

Otto Doederlein, in charge of the German bureau of the national committee says hundreds of letters have been returned to his department stamped "Unclaimed," "Refused," and "Not Found." All letters sent out from Democratic National headquarters are identified as coming from Democratic headquarters by the following printed directions on the envelopes: "Return in five days to rooms 21-26, 306 Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill."

Although the postal department boasts of its ability to trace addresses from the most meager descriptions, there is, it is said, a disposition on the part of postmasters in all parts of the country, particularly in the doubtful states, to take advantage of every technical error in the superscription.

So notorious has become the conduct of Republican postmasters in the treatment of Democratic mail matter that Democratic bureau chiefs have advised doing away with return directions on envelopes used by the national committee. It is generally believed at Democratic headquarters that hundreds of thousands of Democratic documents have suffered at the hands of Republican postmasters.

William Lloyd Garrison, ex-Governor George S. Boutwell and Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, all of Boston, and well known to the negroes of the United States, have issued an address to the colored people, advising them to renounce the Republican party as its national policy of imperialism is dangerous to the future of the colored race. The address has been given out by the National Democratic Committee.

H. H. Hanna, chairman of the executive committee of the Indianapolis Monetary convention, is in distress. He has been looking over the political situation and sees that the Republican party is in danger. His chief concern, however, is the permanence and promotion of the gold standard, and for success in that direction he declares, as an "honest non-partisan," that the Congressional outlook is unfavorable. Of late he has been sending out doleful letters urgently appealing for contributions to save the standard and the party. In one of them he says:

"There is very great danger of the Bryanites securing control of the next Congress. There is every reason to expect they will gain three Representatives in North Carolina and serious risk of gaining one in Kentucky, two in Indiana, one in Missouri and one in Texas. There is possibility of loss in many other districts. But few districts are absolutely safe."

In another one of these privately addressed letters, H. H. Hanna still more dolefully writes: "We have made appeals to the general public for funds, but so far there has been very little response." The contracted expenses are already large, he says, and each delegate to the monetary convention is asked to secure subscriptions of $25. Disraeli once exposed the political iniquities of an opponent by quoting from a letter which he described as a "plundering and blundering" one. The description aptly characterizes H. H. Hanna's epistolatory appeals. He is learning that there is disheartening apathy in the ranks of Republicans. Indeed, from the fact that there has been "very little response" to his appeals, there must be something like positive disaffection if not downright revolt among those he would victimize. It is only a favored few that have profited by the pious pretenses, vacillation and hypocrisy of the President, and the summing up of his character and acts is not such as to inspire enthusiasm.

Besides, it is patent that the "plundering and blundering" H. H. Hanna makes the gold standard and his "honestly non-partisan" organization the excuse for partisanship which is none the less bitter because it is veiled.

Two great meetings were held in this city last week, and as indications of the trend of the best public thought and of the revolt from the policy and assumptions of what Mr. Olney well characterized as McKinleyism, their significance can hardly be overestimated. One of the big mass meetings was addressed by Senator Wellington of Maryland, who was chiefly instrumental in making that State Republican, and who has publicly charged the President with having lied to him on the Philippine question. The other was held under the auspices of the Iroquois Club, one of the leading Democratic organizations of the country, from a social and financial standpoint, and which refused to support Bryan in 1896. The principal speakers at this gathering were Sigmund Zeisler, Judge Thomas A. Moran and S. S. Gregory. All of them are prominent in public life, and as gold Democrats helped the Republican party to victory four years ago. They have not changed their monetary convictions, but loving the republic more than currency schemes they have taken this stand without qualification or condition for Bryan.

Mr. Zeisler, after referring to his position in the last Presidential contest, declared that imperialism was now the paramount issue, and said:

"I take no stock in the Republican cry of the danger of Bryan's financial views. But, if I did, I would insultingly prefer to see a derangement of our financial institutions than see trampled under foot all the traditions of our country and the breaking down of the ideals upon which our nation is founded. Shall it be said that we consider our pocketbooks of more value than the interests of generations yet unborn? Is it right to blot the stars from our flag and leave but the stripes? Is it right that the escutcheon of our grand republic should be stained, and that we should be found a filthy empire on the lines of that of George III.?"

Judge Moran scathingly referred to the policy of the administration towards the Philippine Islands and the cruelties and injustices imposed upon their people by the causeless war waged upon them. He cited authorities and historical facts to demonstrate that the position taken by McKinley and his advisers is not expansion, in the American sense of that word, "but is colonialism and imperialism pure and simple, and as such is a violation of our Constitution, of the Declaration of Independence and of the fundamental principles of American institutions." In referring to the new attitude of the Republican party and Secretary Gage regarding the gold standard, and their fears for its safey, Judge Moran said:

"If it has not been secured the Republican party in convention assembled in Philadelphia has put in its platform a bare-faced lie. If it has not been secured by appropriate Congressional legislation, the Republican party is seeking a continuance in power on the proposition that it was faithless to the trust reposed in it when it was last given power by the people."

He concluded his speech, as did Mr. Zeisler, by appealing to the people to put forth every effort towards the election of William Jennings Bryan, and so lead back the imperiled nation to the paths of national honor and virtue.

S. S. Gregory, referring to the cry of Mark Hanna and the Republican looters that the sole issue is one of prosperity and the full dinner pail, denounced such hypocrisy as an insult to the intelligence and patriotism of the American people.

PRINCIPLES OF THE PARTY.

Declaration of Independence Expresses What Democracy Stands For.

The fundamental principles of the Democratic party are best expressed in the Declaration of Independence. The Democracy stands for individual freedom, for equality of rights and opportunities, for political, religious and industrial liberty. Its trend has always been in the direction of popular government, although more than once its machinery has fallen into the hands of the enemies of the people and has been devoted to the interests of special classes. This had happened before the great re-birth of the party of Thomas Jefferson in 1896. That year witnessed a revolution in the party and the beginning of a revolution in the country. The Democracy again took solid ground upon the great principles of the Declaration and it has since held that ground with courage, with zeal and with lofty determination.

The Democratic platform in 1896 declared no new or strange doctrine. It but rested and reaffirmed old truths for which the party had stood in its best days and under its greatest leadership. The spirit of it was long before voiced in the philosophy of Thomas Jefferson and in the heroic policy of Andrew Jackson. It dealt with new phases of old questions; and in essence it marked the revolt of the tribute-payers against the tribute-takers.

In 1900 the Democracy stands again upon the old foundations. It is still the champion of equal rights. It is still the evangel of liberty. It still stands in solid phalanx against the forces of privilege. In 1896 the apparent issue involved the question of coinage; but the real issue was whether this country should continue to be governed by the people or whether it should give up its old ideals and become the submissive appanage of a grasping plutocracy.

The real issue is the same this year that it was four years ago. New manifestations have been developed, but it is still a question whether a class for a class shall control the country or whether it shall be controlled by the people for the people. The ancient war between Hamilton and Jefferson is being fought again under the opposing standards of McKinley and Bryan. The latter stands as Jefferson stood for the principles of the Declaration of Independence. The former stands as Hamilton stood for government of a class, by a class, for a class.

The Democratic party believes that governments were instituted among men, not for the purpose of exploiting the masses and the enrichment of favorites, but for the purpose of securing to all their inalienable right to life, to liberty and to the pursuit of happiness. It believes that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. It therefore stands in unalterable and inflexible opposition to imperialism, which is the denial of the right of self-government. It holds that we cannot hold a subject colony without violating the fundamental principle of the republic; and it condemns as wicked and wanton a war that is being waged without legal authority for the overthrow of free government in a foreign land and the establishment there of sovereignty against the wishes and in defiance of the rights of its inhabitants.

If the United States have a right to overthrow the Filipino republic they have the right to overthrow any other republic or any other government they may select for a victim. They may go to Central America and to South America or to China or to Africa and under pretext of civilizing and christianizing the inhabitants they may destroy their governments and institutions and compel them to submit to American rule. The pretense that we bought from Spain the sovereignty of the Philippines in no sense saves us from the inherent wickedness of our assault upon the liberties of a foreign people. The latter had rights; and these rights were not owned by Spain. Spain therefore could not sell them. Nor could we buy them. What Spain sold was her outlawed claim to trample upon those rights. What we purchased was this claim; and the Republican party is asserting it with brute force in defiance of morals and law and the foundation principles of our own free institutions.

But the Democratic party stands for freedom at home as well as for freedom abroad. It is therefore in favor of trial by jury and against government by injunction. Trial by jury for hundreds of years has been considered the strongest defense of freemen. It is now challenged by the Republican party and in the name of law and order its overthrow is foreshadowed in judicial usurpation—the worst of tyrannies. Thomas Jefferson feared the encroachments of the judiciary in his time; and it was Marshall whose interpretation of the constitution was the first great triumph of imperialism over democracy. In later years the federal government has steadily encroached upon the liberties of the citizen; one by one the safeguards of freedom have been overborne; and now the common people must face the threat of irresponsible power exercised by the federal bench through the subtle enginery of the injunction.

If men have a right to themselves they have a right to use their own powers; and if they have a right to the use of their own powers, they have a right to the use of those things which they produce by the exercise of their powers. They have the right to work; they have a right to the things they make; and if this be so, they have the right to exchange the results of their labor with their neighbors or with any one they please. In other words, they have the right to trade; they have a right to buy where they can buy to the best advantage; to sell where they can secure the most for their product. The Republican party denies this principle. Under the false name of protection it compels workers to exchange the products of their labor in a market artificially restricted; to purchase in a market where free competition has been throttled by law for the benefit of certain favored classes. The result is a robbery of labor; it is compelled to accept the terms and conditions offered by the beneficiaries of the restrictive law.

The Democratic party stands for free competition and for the right of all men freely to exchange with each other the results of their toil. It is therefore opposed to trusts and to all devices for the killing or even the restriction of trade. A protective tariff is a declaration of war against trade; it is an invitation to combination and monopoly; it puts a premium upon engrossing and forestalling; it is the handmaiden if not the mother of trusts.

The appalling manifestation of modern industrialism is the centralization of wealth in the hands of the few. It has come about in the last generation and it is the shining product of Republican legislation. All the forces of privilege have been centered on the effort to secure larger privileges, and the Republican policy has been that of consistent favoritism; it has never failed to give to those that had and to take away from those that had not even that which they had. It gave boundless territory to favored railways; it granted monopolies to iron and coal and lumber and stone; it gave bounties to sugar and protection from competition to mills and factories and shipping; it has shut out foreign goods while letting in foreign labor; it has loaned its credit to favored bankers and changed the terms of contracts for the benefit of bond-holders; it has discredited silver in order to vest a monopoly in the hands of owners of gold; and in every instance it has enacted laws and administered the government, not for the common welfare, but for the enrichment of special classes.

Democracy opposes all this. It wants to strike the shackles from trade and to relieve labor from the levies of privilege. Its whole spirit runs in the direction of freedom and its candidates stand pledged by the platform and by their own records to promote the ends of liberty and of righteousness. The party makes appeal to the heart and conscience of the country. It opposes foreign conquest both because it is a wicked wrong to alien peoples and because it is a direful threat against our own rights. For this country cannot be half republic and half empire. Imperialism will not be satisfied with foreign subjugation; it will hunger and thirst after the subjugation of those at home from whom tribute can be wrung. Already the intrenched forces of imperialism are levying tribute upon American labor; labor's opportunities have been narrowed to a choice of masters; armed men in the service of plutocracy war against the right of men to seek better conditions from those who have cornered industrial chances; and if McKinley shall win in the great fight now in progress it will mean further restriction, further narrowing of opportunities, further aggressions of privilege and still harsher exactions from those who work for the aggrandizement of those who toil not.

Apology, Not Argument.

President McKinley's letter of acceptance resembles a folding bed with a piano front. When you look at it first you think it is a financial argument, but when you let it down you find it is an apology for imperialism.—New York World.

GREAT RECORDS MADE

TRAILS LEFT BY BRYAN AND ROOSEVELT.

Hundreds of Speeches Have Been Made During Journeyings of Thousands of Miles—Remarkable Physical Endurance Shown by These Two Candidates

In the trails which William Jennings Bryan and Theodore Roosevelt have left upon the map of the United States are evidences of the intricate civilization which each would represent. These itineraries are only the evolution of the methods which in early days prompted a candidate to saddle his horse, throw a pair of saddlebags in front of him, and to ride into a neighboring county to feel the pulse of the people. To-day the horse has become a 120-ton locomotive; the saddle-bags are baggage, library and buffet cars; the cross-roads inn is a palace sleeping car that is home to the candidate in all weathers, times, and places; the scores of miles of muddy or dusty roads have become the thousands of miles of steel-bound road-bed over which these palace trains thunder with the swiftness of a carrier pigeon.

That "there were giants in those days" has become accepted of the past, but that the old-fashioned orator of the circuit-riding days of Lincoln and Douglas could have stood the strain of the modern inter-state canvass is impossible in the opinion of physicians. Roosevelt, traveling 15,000 miles, making more than 300 speeches of nearly 600,000 words, sleeping at sixty miles an hour and waking at all times and places made a record that would have astounded a politician of fifty years ago. Bryan, not traveling so far, but taxing himself even greater in speech-making and in the other activities of a campaign of which he has been the head, possibly did even more. In voice, Roosevelt suffered; perhaps in nervous strain he felt the work. Bryan, more trained in the art of public speaking, knowing better how to save and spare himself, and having the experiences of a great campaign on similar lines in 1896, has been a phenomenon in endurance, even in the eyes of the medical profession.

Bryan's Active Work.

Bryan's first active work began on Aug. 31, when he visited Chicago for a conference with the national committee. His letter of acceptance had been weighing upon him, but in response to calls he went South and East as far as Cumberland, Md., back through West Virginia, Ohio, and Indiana, to Chicago. Then to Milwaukee, back to Chicago, and from that city westward through a group of the central-Western states. These were only preliminary movements. His campaign proper began at Papillion, Neb., on Sept. 24, full three weeks after Governor Roosevelt's special train had pulled into Detroit, Mich., for the opening speech of his campaign.

As an example of just how many duties devolved upon these candidates, some of the figures from Mr. Bryan's tour of Indiana have been gathered. They show:

Miles traveled	700
Speeches	28
Counties touched	27
Towns passed	96
Towns spoken to	28
Receptions	27
Visitors	600
Persons addressed	100,000
Bouquets received	32
Speakers on train	50
Newspaper men	8
Words by telegraph	234,000
Words spoken	98,000

Governor Roosevelt's train followed almost the same route as this in Indiana, touching twenty-four places for set speeches. About the same general experience was his. Indiana being considered a most important state, the work was in excess of the general Western average, but even with that allowance the figures are significant of the demands made upon the physical and mental sides of these men.

Vocal Exertion.

In considering the campaign work of a man, the voice is the one thing that gives uneasiness to the speaker and his friends. With voice gone, his work is at an end, and it is known that the voice is more likely to give away than any other physical necessity in a campaign. If hand-shaking be thrust upon a candidate until the bone and tissue of the hand are a pulp, the public will still come and will respect the fact that the man's right forearm is in sling. But if he cannot talk, most of the attractiveness of the candidate takes wing.

Nerve tax and the consequent loss of tone in the system are regarded as having a direct and vital influence on the voice. Dr. Oscar A. King, neurologist and professor in the medical school in the University of Illinois, has found a most subtle relation between the nervous system and the voice.

"As a basic proposition," he said, "you may trace every impediment in speech to nervous influences. Starting with this, the effect of a depleted nervous system on the voice is plain. The mechanisms of the vocal organs are intricate of themselves, and the nerves which control these organs multiply their complexities. In a failing voice, then, one must always look to the condition of the nervous system. In the cases of Bryan and Roosevelt, the things most calculated to derange their nerves are those which react upon these nervous systems. Unquestionably the two things which most do this are excitement and the sense of opposition in an audience which every political speaker has to face."

Gets Little Rest.

"Physically, too, the work of a great campaign on the railroads tells upon a speaker. There is a loss of sleep always. Towns through which a train may pass in dead of night often turn out crowds who at least awaken the candidate. Then the exigencies of an itinerary force him to get up early and go to bed late.

"But even if a man sleeps soundly the night through on a railroad train he is not rested as he would have been had he slept in a stationary bed. There is reason to believe that in the soundest sleep possible in a fast-moving train the muscles are making unconscious efforts to neutralize the movements of the body caused by swayings and joltings of the train. The nerves prompt this, and to the extent that they are kept awake the whole system is affected. As the nerves are affected, too, the tendency toward impairment of the voice is increased. In many ways they tend to this, chiefly by disconcerting the speaker and causing him to waste lung power.

"Irregular meals and exposure to night air and to changes in the weather are physical causes for breakdown. Most often such speakers have been regular in all their habits of life. They cannot adjust themselves at once to bolted food and irregular hours for eating. Food is not digested as it should be, and the body lacks its usual nourishment.

"Above all this, as in the case of Mr. Bryan especially, the weight of being the head of a party's machinery has been distressing. He has had more than the details of his own tour upon him. Telegrams, letters, and all the machinery of modern correspondence have bound him to his party's management and have obtruded upon him when he should have been resting.

"Nothing in athletics, in prize-fighting, running, riding, wheeling, or physical-record breakings of any kind in its physical aspect can compare with the campaign work of William Jennings Bryan. His performance, in the light of mere physical effort and endurance, has been wonderful. In the matter of training and experience, of course, he has had the advantage of Governor Roosevelt, but he has been taxed as Roosevelt has not been. His campaign stands out as a marvel of physical endurance."

SPEECHMAKING AND TRAVELING RECORDS OF BRYAN AND ROOSEVELT

NAMES SPOKEN IN FULL.

Familiar Abbreviated Nicknames Have Been Disappearing for Years.

"Have you observed," asks a correspondent, "how the Jims, Sams, Bills, Toms and other old-time abbreviations of boys' front names are disappearing from among the youths of the present generation, together with the diminutive Jimmy, Sammy, Billy, etc., which time out of mind prevailed among masculine youngsters? For some reason the boys have largely discarded the free and easy way of addressing one another that comes natural to ingenious youth, substituting for the more rollicking Tom, Dick and Harry, sanctioned by immortal usage, a stiffer form of address which does not match well with the freshness of boyhood. The same appears to be the case with the female juveniles. Even among little girls playing 'ring-around-rosy,' the Bessies, Maggies and Katies are disappearing, giving place to the stilted substitution of Elizabeth, Margaret, Catherine and the like. This change has not had its origin in the volition of either the boys or the girls. They have evidently been 'put up to it.' Some higher authority must be responsible for this priggishness, and from its general extent it is likely due to misdirected instruction in the schools. To no other source could be attributed expressions now heard among boys at play, such as 'Samuel, do not throw the ball so hard; William cannot catch it.' No boy, who is not a prig, either by nature or education, but would say on a subject of that kind: 'Sam, don't throw the ball so hard; Bill can't catch it.' This is as idiomatically as correct as the other form and colloquially preferable, while devoid of the stiffness unsuited to youthful expression."—Philadelphia Record.

DRIVING OUT THE HOODOO.

Marcus Daly's Story of How a Southerner Changed His Poker Luck.

Marcus Daly, the Montana millionaire, tells of a poker game with some peculiar features. "The game," said Mr. Daly, "was in progress the second night after we sailed. I don't believe much in hoodoos and signs and that sort of thing, and I don't put much faith in luck, but I was pretty nearly converted on this trip. A blonde-mustached Virginian named Mack Hardy was a steady loser for the first two hours. He played 'em well, but whenever he had a big hand somebody else always had one just a bit bigger, and on a bluff some fellow with more curiosity than nerve or judgment would call him down. At just 11 o'clock he got up from his chair and walked backward around the table thirteen times, offering no explanation for his strange conduct. On the next deal he had a pair of treys, raised it when it came his say, stood two raises from other players and set it back the limit. Both the others stayed in, holding up an ace—and didn't improve; each of the others drew only one card. Hardy put up a magnificent bluff—I never saw a low hand played better, with all the feints of assured nervousness, frequent glances at his hand, etc.

"He drove one man out who had aces up and had the other on the run, when a gust of wind through the open door scattered the third player's hand, one card getting mixed up with the discards. Of course, that hand was dead—the four remnants of what had been a queen straight—and Hardy swept something like $375 into his hat. He didn't even have to show his treys, for his opponent had not put up on the last raise, although just about to do so when the wind killed his hand. Now, wasn't that luck? Or what do you think about the thirteen walk-around queering the other fellow's hand?

"An hour later Hardy took a fresh pack, pinned the ace of diamonds from it on a waiter's shirt front, tore up the other fifty-one cards and then marked a skull and crossbones in creme de menthe on the waiter's shirt bosom just above the ace. On the very next deal, with only three nines on a one-card draw, he bluffed a $150 pot out of a fellow who held a deuce full! Now what do you think of that?"

How to Choose Good Meat.

Let us imagine ourselves before a butcher's block having on it four pieces of beef presenting faces from the round or sirloin. One is dull red, the lean being close-grained and the fat very white; the next is dark-red, the lean loose-grained and sinewy and the fat white and shining; the third is dull red, the lean loose-grained and sinewy and the fat yellow; the fourth is bright cherry-red, the lean smooth and medium-grained, with flecks of white through it, and the fat creamy—neither white nor yellow. The first of these is cow beef; the second, bull beef; the third, beef from an old or ill-conditioned animal; and the last is ox beef. Ox beef—that from a steer—is the juiciest, finest flavored, sweetest and most economical to buy of all beef. It is called "prime" when the lean is very much mottled with the white fat-flecks, and when it is from a heavy, young animal (about 4 years old), stall-fed on corn. Beef from a young cow that has been well fed and fattened is next in merit to ox beef. Beef from an unmatured animal is never satisfactory, being tough and juiceless. It may be easily recognized, as its color is pale and its bones small.—Woman's Home Companion.

The Practical Side of It.

"There is so little money in literature," said the wife, "that I think you would be wise to choose some other profession. Why, the man who runs the ice wagon makes more than you do; the butcher goes out driving every Sunday; the baker wears a beaver and a linen collar, and the real estate man has three diamonds in a white shirt, to say nothing of the coal man, who goes to sleep in church on a velvet pillow every Sunday the Lord sends!"

"But—Molly, think of Genius; what am I to do with that?"

"The Lord only knows, John! But how nice it would be if you could only split it into kindling wood at so much a cord, or swap it off for a barrel of flour and a sugar-cured ham!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Oysters Have Many Foes.

The oyster appears to be the most perfectly protected creature in the sea, yet it falls a victim to the soft and apparently helpless starfish. The method of attack is curious but effective. The starfish clasps the oyster in its five arms and quietly waits. Presently the oyster opens its shell in order to get food. This is the chance that the starfish has been waiting for, and it prompt injects into the shell a little reddish fluid.

This acts as a poison, paralyzing the muscles of the oyster and thus making it impossible for the creature to close its shell. The starfish does not take the trouble even to remove the oyster from its shell, but eats it in its own home and eventually crawls away, leaving behind the gaping, empty shell.

When the Lord finds a surplus lot of babies on hand, he leaves them with people traveling over the country in movers' wagons.

WHERE THE GUNBOAT NASHVILLE WENT WHEN SHE LEFT ST. LOUIS IN 1899.

When the United States gunboat Nashville visited St. Louis in the spring of 1899, the demonstration attending her reception marked an epoch in the city's history. The Nashville was the first ocean-going war vessel that had ever steamed up the Father of Waters to the metropolis of the Mississippi valley. Hence the interest attending her arrival. All the railroads entering the city ran excursion trains, and people came from the surrounding States, anxious to gaze upon the pioneer from Old Ocean's depths.

Leaving the city amid the acclamations of the multitude and to the music of the bands, the gunboat proceeded down the river, across the gulf, rounded the peninsula, stopped at Hampton Roads, crossed the Atlantic, passed through the Mediterranean sea and the Suez canal, on to the harbor of Tokio, Japan, and has since been in Chinese waters. St. Louis people declare that the vessel might just as well have carried merchandise as implements of war, and they intimate that the destiny of St. Louis is to become a deep water port.

THE VESSEL MIGHT JUST AS WELL HAVE CARRIED MERCHANDISE AS IMPLEMENTS OF WAR.

GOVERNOR M'CORD

Recommends Peruna to All Catarrh Victims.

Hon. M. H. McCord.

Hon. Myron H. McCord, ex-Governor of New Mexico, in a letter to Dr. Hartman, from Washington, D. C., says:

Dear Sir—At the suggestion of a friend I was advised to use Peruna for catarrh, and after using one bottle I began to feel better in every way. It helped me in many respects. I was troubled with colds, coughs, sore throat, etc., but as soon as I had taken your medicine I began to improve and soon got well. I take pleasure in recommending your great remedy to all who are afflicted with catarrh.—M. H. McCord.

Thousands of cases of chronic catarrh have been cured by Peruna during the past winter. There are no successful substitutes for this remedy. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free catarrh book.

Good Reason.

When Mr. Ephraim Maxwell was taken to see his son's new house in the center of Hortonville, he found much to admire, but nothing to make him discontented with the old farmhouse in which he had lived for sixty-nine years.

"Now, father," said his son's wife, laying an affectionate hand on his arm and speaking most persuasively, "don't you see how nice these windows are? Wouldn't you like to have those little old panes taken out of the farm windows—downstairs, at any rate—and have this big, clear glass put in instead?"

Mr. Maxwell looked thoughtfully out of the window at which he and his daughter-in-law were standing. He drummed on the sill for a moment, watching the people pass up and down the busy town street.

"No, Mary," he said at last, with a whimsical smile, "this kind of window-pane is all right for your house, where there's constant passing; but up there on the farm, where sometimes only one man and a cow goes by in a day, it's better to have the old-fashioned glass that makes one man look like a general muster."

HUMOR OF THE WEEK

STORIES TOLD BY FUNNY MEN OF THE PRESS.

Odd, Curious and Laughable Phases of Human Nature Graphically Portrayed by Eminent Word Artists of Our Own Day—A Budget of Fun.

"Does your husband speak French?"

"No, he's too lazy; but before we went abroad I made him learn a few French swear-words."—Indianapolis Journal.

Too Much to Bear.

"Julia's engagement is broken."

"Dear me! How did that happen?"

"Well, it was one of those awfully hot nights; Jack dropped his last cigar and she stepped on it."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Partnership Concern.

"Are you interested in your wife's Indian corner?"

"Yes; I get off whoops over the money she spends."—Indianapolis Journal.

Demoralizing.

"I always run from a braggart."

"Why?"

"If I talk to one a few minutes I get to telling lies myself."—Indianapolis Journal.

Had a Handicap.

Constance E.—Do you think you can get my husband acquitted?

Lawyer—I'm afraid not, madam.

Constance E.—Why, everybody knows my husband!

Lawyer—That is just the trouble.

No Matches Needed.

"Mamma, I heard somebody to-day say that matches were made in heaven; how about that?"

"I believe that is the fact, Willie."

"Well, what in thunder do they want matches there for if there's going to be no night there?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Unruffled.

"Say, you!" cried the victim in the crowded trolley car, glaring up at the transgressor, "my feet are not there to stand on."

"That's so," replied the other pleasantly. "You don't need 'em for that while you've got a seat, do you?"—Philadelphia Press.

Proof.

Tess — "He is a very intellectual man."

Jess—"What led you to think that?"

Tess—"I judged so from his talk."

Jess—"What does he talk about?"

Tess—"He always talks about how intellectual he is."—Philadelphia Press.

Strong Encouragement.

"Bixby has given up his job to devote himself entirely to literary work."

"He must have had some strong encouragement lately."

"Yes, he married a wealthy girl."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Why He Lost the Sale.

Miss Oldham—I want a birthday cake sent up to the house to-morrow with eight candles in it.

Baker (slightly deaf)—Did you say eighty candles?

What, Indeed?

The Mild Anarchist—But you must bear in mind that kings work as hard as anybody nowadays.

The Radical Member—That's one reason why I hate 'em so. What business have they to set such an example?—Indianapolis Press.

Had Watched His Father.

Teacher—How much is twice four?

Tommy (the huckster's son)—M-m; er—why—er——

Teacher—Well, try it this way. How much are four peaches and four peaches?

Tommy—Oh! that's about a half peck.—Philadelphia Press.

Of Course.

No man proposes to remain single. When he proposes he expects to get married.—Philadelphia Record.

Had to See the Boss.

Jones—I say, Jim, will you go with us down to the shore to-morrow night? We'll get back soon after 12 o'clock, I guess.

Brown—I should like to go, and I don't know but I will. I can't tell you positively just now.

Jones—I understand. You want to ask your wife.

Brown—No such thing. I want to ask the janitor if he is willing. I live in an apartment house, you remember.—Boston Transcript.

Another Theological Problem.

Parson—And so you have lost all your marbles? Now, let that be a lesson to you; for that's what happens to all little boys who play marbles on Sunday.

Boy—Oh, does it? Well, how about the other little bloke that's won 'em?—Scraps.

A Touch of Nature.

"The sentence of this court," said the judge, "is that you be confined to solitary confinement for the term of two years."

"Thanks, judge! My profoundest thanks!" exclaimed the culprit, with effusive gratitude.

His honor, detecting the genuineness of the prisoner's appreciation, spontaneously returned:

"I don't know, my friend, but I almost envy you; I am a married man myself."—Richmond Dispatch.

Certainly.

A woman who will not forgive a man for forgetting her will almost love him for striving to forget her, for she knows that in this is the essence of remembrance.—Life.

Will Keep Him Busy.

"What did Aunt Minerva say about the shirtwaist man?"

"She said now he had to keep his belt in the right place all the time he'd find out he wasn't any smarter than woman."—Indianapolis Journal.

To Send Away.

"Well, that caps the climax."

"What's that?"

"Cook says those folks in that little house on the corner came over while we were gone and had their photographs taken sitting on our veranda."—Indianapolis Journal.

Sizing Them Up.

"How do you like your new quarters?" asked the landlord pleasantly.

The new tenant in the new apartment house looked the rooms over sadly and rejoined: "These aren't quarters. These are eighths."—Washington Star.

Adapted.

She—What was that old saw about "When in Rome——"

He (who has traveled)—When in Rome do as the Romans or they'll do you.—Philadelphia Press.

Not for Hern.

McGuire—French fried potatoes, is it? Niver! I have nayther the money nor inclination ter indoolge in impor-rted delicacoosies!—Kansas City Independent.

Matter of Fact.

Mrs. Floodyer—Oh, Mr. Batts, how I enjoyed your lovely volume of poems!

Batts—You're very kind, indeed. Do you like the Alcaic meter?

Mrs. Floodyer—Alcaic meter? Oh, I see, you want to change the subject. Modesty's the crown of genius. But really I can't say. Does it save much gas?—Brooklyn Life.

Up to Date.

"Where did you Sunday, old man?"

"I didn't Sunday; I Sabbathed."

"Eh?"

"Went to church morning and evening."—Detroit Journal.

Helping Him Out.

Graphter—Hang it! I left my pocketbook home, and I haven't a penny in my clothes. Say, lend me a fiver, will you? I'll return it to-morrow.

Phoxy—I'll do better. Here's a nickel; you can go home and get your pocketbook.—Philadelphia Press.

Time Flies.

She—This love that you tell me about all seems so new, so strange.

He—Why, hasn't anyone ever made love to you before?

She—Oh, yes. But not for fully three weeks.

Evidence Against Him.

Shrewd Deacon—Go ahead; I guess you'll not catch me napping.

Trader—I don't know about that, if I'm to judge of what I saw in church last Sunday.

The New Phonograph.

"How did you catch up the golf dialect so easily, Madge?"

"Oh, we took our parrot out to the game several days, and then we learned it from her.

Somewhat Odd.

Jiggs—It's rather odd about my wife.

Diggs—How do you mean?

Jiggs—Why, she says she is bound to have the last word, and yet she always gives it to me.

Hard to Believe.

He (returned from a tour around the world)—Awfully ugly little beggars, the Japs. Why, I was considered quite a good-looking chap out there.

She (absently)—Really?—London Tit-Bits.

Not the Kind She Meant.

She—I think your friend Rickey is so very entertaining; he is always making such dry remarks.

Rickey's Rival—Yes. One can't come anywhere near him but it's, "Let's go take something."—Richmond Dispatch.

Giving Her Time?

Hobb—I've just made an appointment with a clairvoyant for next week.

Nobb—Why not sooner?

Hobb—She's got to look me up, hasn't she?

It Depends.

"Pa," asked little Willie, "how long is a 'decade?'"

"That depends, my son. In the census department a decade means ten years, but to the women who hand their ages in to the census man it means anything from 0 to 10."—Philadelphia Press.

Gen. Grant and Mrs. Tom Thumb.

My first meeting with General Grant interests me now, in the light of all that has occurred, but at that time I thought little of it. While I was traveling on the Mississippi our boat stopped at Galena, and Grant, recognized then only as a private citizen, came down to the museum to see the "little woman" of whom the papers had spoken. He was introduced to me, and stayed awhile, showing in his conversation at that time little of the reticence afterward pronounced one of his leading characteristics. When he went away he said he would bring his family next day. This he did, and they, too, remained quite a while. I found Mrs. Grant a most genial and pleasant woman, with the same unaffected kindness of manner which so graced the White House when she became the First Lady of the Land. Mr. Grant—how odd it seems to say "Mister" Grant! yet that is what he was then called—bought my photograph, and asked me to put my autograph upon it.—Countess Magri (Mrs. Tom Thumb) in Woman's Home Companion.

REFORM IN MAN'S ATTIRE.

John M. Hubbard, a Cultivated Yankee with a Strange Fad.

John Merwin Hubbard, of West Haven, Conn., stalks out to church every Sunday arrayed in a flowing white robe with a golden girdle and a bonnet fashioned after those worn by ancient Jewish priests. On the Fourth of July and other patriotic occasions Mr. Hubbard appears in his true glory, for then he dawns upon the startled gaze of the summer boarders at Savin Rock most gorgeously arrayed in a robe of red, white and blue.

Father Hubbard wishes it recorded that he does not wear his diaphanous drapery because he wishes to excite vulgar attention or to prove to the world that he is the only real genuine Father Hubbard. He is a philosopher, a soldier, and a poet. He wears the strange drapery because he says he has discovered that modern ideas of dress are entirely opposed to the consistency and teaching of the scriptures. Therefore he has invented several new and original costumes, which, however, he declares are built according to the descriptions given in the Bible.

Mr. Hubbard says of his reasons for wearing his robes: "Gay colors keep the mind in an excited condition and exclude all peaceful and holy thoughts, consequently on the Sabbath I wear a long robe of white, chaste and simple, with a golden girdle. I am then ready to conceive and comprehend the true meaning of a church service. I have the Bible for authority. In Revelations the angels are spoken of as clothed in pure white linen, with girdles of gold. Daniel and St. John in other visions saw 'a certain man clothed in linen whose loins were girdled with fine gold.'"

Mr. Hubbard is organizing a society to be known as the S. O. G. G., which means the "Sunday Order of Gowns and Girdles." The motto of the S. O. G. G. is "A Heavenly Sabbath," and membership is open to all. While one object of the order will be the preservation of the Sabbath as a day of rest, the principal object will be, as Mr. Hubbard says, "To bring together all of the male sex who are dissatisfied with the ungainly attire which custom compels them to use."

COURAGE OF A GIRL.

She Climbed Through a 'Bus Window and Stopped a Runaway Team.

Miss Ada Mayo Railey, who proved her courage in New York recently by climbing out of an omnibus and stopping a runaway team turned loose by a drunken driver, is the only single daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Railey, of Lexington, Ky. She went to New York to visit friends and was returning late at night from a dinner, accompanied by three girl friends and a male escort in a bus. Noticing that they were going unusually fast, Miss Railey looked through the window and saw there was no driver on the box. The man with them, in attempting to get out the back way, fell and was left on the road. Miss Railey says: "I wiggled through the little window and reached the driver's box to find that the lines were lying on the whiffle-tree. I climbed over the dashboard and getting hold of one of them managed to throw the off-horse to the ground. I then jumped down and reached their heads before the horse could regain its feet and held them until assistance reached me."

MISS ADA MAYO RAILEY.

The Baby Was Healthy if Homely.

Two Irishmen who had not seen each other for a long time met at a fair. They had a lot of things to tell each other. "Shure, it's married I am," said O'Brien. "You don't tell me so," said Blake. "Faith, yes," said O'Brien, an' I've got a fine, healthy bhoy which the neighbors say is the very picter of me.' Blake looked for a moment at O'Brien, who was not, to say the least, remarkable for his good looks, and then said: "Och, well, what's the harrum so long as the child's healthy?"

Pay of Paris Policemen.

The policemen of Paris, generally young, able-bodied men, receive from $22 to $30 a month, according to their time of service. Only a few receive over $25 a month.

Chinese Present.

Among the Chinese a coffin is considered a neat and appropriate present for an aged person, especially if in bad health.

How David Harum Was Written.

An interesting little anecdote is told about how David Harum came to be written. It is rather pathetic. It seems that Mr. Wescott, the author, was the kind of a man who could do pretty much anything—paint a picture, plan a house or compose a sonata—but he had never made much money; so when he became ill, and realized that he might not live long, and would leave his family with little or no money, he was desperate.

"Write a book," suggested a friend and neighbor to him one day when they were talking over the situation.

"I did make an attempt at it once," answered Mr. Wescott; "I tried a love-story, but I couldn't make it go."

"Add a little local color to it," said the first speaker; "take one of the people about here that you know, and work him up—old——, for instance," mentioning a character familiar to them both; "he'd be first-rate."

"That's a good idea!" exclaimed Mr. Wescott, and the result of this conversation was David Harum; and yet "David" was never in the story at all as it was first conceived.—Woman's Home Companion.

Libby's Food Products at the Paris Exposition.

The Grand Prix d'Honneur and two gold medals have been awarded by the International Jury of Awards at the Paris Exposition, to Libby, McNeill & Libby of Chicago for the purity, excellence and superiority of their canned foods. Here in America the "Libby" Brand has always been recognized as typical of the highest standard of excellence attained in the preservation of meats, and it is a noticeable fact that the products of Libby, McNeill & Libby have received highest awards at every exposition held in the United States during the past two decades.

Took the News Philosophically.

When the Yellow river flood carried off its thousands a Californian attempted to break the news gently to his cook, as it must, he thought, shock a Chinaman to learn that so many of his fellow countrymen had miserably perished. So he approached the climax of horror by degrees, expecting a perhaps passionate outbreak. But the cook's only comment was the eminently practical reflection: "Plentee Chinamen left."

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your Grocer to-day to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha and Java, but it is made of pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15c and 25c per package. Sold by all grocers.

As to Strikes.

"What's the matter with that man?" asked the clock. "He doesn't seem to have anything to do but wind me up."

"No," replied the calendar, "he isn't working. He and his companions struck some time ago."

"Huh! Suppose I should stop working every time I struck?"

"That's so, but I notice it freshens me up every time he takes a month off."—Philadelphia Press.

Ants will leave closets where sea sand is sprinkled or where oyster shells are laid. They dislike iron. If you raise your sugar barrel upon a piece of iron no ants will enter the barrel. Place your cracker box upon a piece of iron; no ants will enter there.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sel it. 15c and 25c.

"I could'nt Sew another Stitch to Save my Life."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball room. The queen of society is radiant to-night.

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary form and aching head have known no rest, for the dress must be finished in time.

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One through hothouse culture, luxury and social excitement, and the other through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause.

Nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, all indicate serious trouble, which has been promoted by an over-taxed system.

For the society queen and the dressmaker alike, there is nothing so reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore strength, vigor, and happiness.

Mrs. Lizzie Anderson, 49 Union St., Salem, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you how grateful I am to you for what your medicine has done for me. At one time I suffered everything a woman could. I had inflammation of the ovaries, falling of the womb, and leucorrhœa. At times could not hold a needle to sew. The first dose of your Vegetable Compound helped me so much that I kept on using it. I have now taken six bottles and am well and able to do my work. I also ride a wheel and feel no bad effects from it. I am thankful to the Giver of all good for giving you the wisdom of curing suffering women. I recommend your medicine to every woman troubled with any of these diseases."

MRS. SARAH SWODER

Mrs. Sarah Swoder, 103 West St., La Porte, Ind., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

"I had been a sufferer for years with female trouble. I could not sew but a few minutes at a time without suffering terribly with my head. My back and kidneys also troubled me all the time. I was advised by a friend to take your medicine. I had no faith in it, but decided to try it. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was cured. There is no other medicine for me. I recommend it to all my friends."

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a certified copy of a Decree to me directed from the Clerk of the DeKalb Circuit Court, in a cause wherein Timothy J. Knisely, David H. Knisely, George E. Boots, Lyston C. Harding are plaintiffs, and Ezra E. Loutzenheiser, Elizabeth Loutzenheiser, Jacob Stotz, Henry W. Ellis, Publius V. Hoffman, Daniel M. Link and John A. Campbell are defandents requiring me to make the sum of Thirty-seven hundred and thirty-six dollars, and sixty cents, with interest on said Decree and cost, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder, on SATURDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1900,

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

The north one-half of the northwest quarter and the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section nine (9) in township thirty-five (35) north of range fourteen east, except nine (9) rods off the south side of the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of said section in the shape of a parallelogram and except the piece, commencing at the southeast corner of said north half of the northwest quarter of said section and running nine rods north, thence west to the Hamilton and Auburn road, thence with and along said road to the quarter post and thence along said line to the place of beginning; all in said township and range in DeKalb County, Indiana, containing 112 acres.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

Stevenson Day.

The big democratic demonstration of the campaign in the Twelfth congressional district will occur on Friday, November 2, when Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, ex-vice-president of the United States, will be in Fort Wayne to address the voters of the district. He will come to Fort Wayne after speaking at Auburn at 1 p. m. With him will come Hon. Joseph W. Bailey, the brilliant Texan, and arrangements are being made for other prominent speakers. There will be two parades, one by the farmers in the afternoon and a grand torchlight procession in the evening. There will be low fare rates on all railroads within a radius of seventy five miles and from Huntington, Columbia City, Decatur, Auburn, Monroeville, Kendallville, and other cities it is probale special trains will be started.

Members of clubs in all these cities and all other cities of the Twelfth and adjoining districts are invited to participate and help swell the crowd. In return for the visits the Hendricks club, the Jefferson club, the Bryan Railroad club and the ward clubs of Fort Wayne will visit as many of the towns as possible It is the desire of the local committee to have at least 3,000 people in parade at night and as the city of Fort Wayne will furnish more than 2,000 of these there is every reason to believe the parade will come up to expectations. William Meyer has charge of all arrangements for the parade and clubs or persons desiring to turn out should notify him. There will be numerous bands to make music and the Hendricks and Jefferson clubs and detail from the railroad and other clubs will act as escort to visiting clubs and delegations.

Annual Reunion of the 88th.

There was a large gathering of the boys of the 88th volunteers at Butler Oct. 21. The welcome address was given by Elder Thomas who delivered the keys of the city to Col. Bryant. Then followed other addresses by Comrade Museon of Ligonier, Capt. Wildman of Illinois, Judge Hench of Fort Wayne, and also many other speeches and recitations by comrades and children of the 88th. While Elder Thomas sang "Rally 'Round the Flag," the two old flags were brought out, the old 88th flag being given to the boys when they left Fort Wayne, and both, having been carried through the war by Johnnie Jones, were so ragged and torn that they could not be unrolled to be displayed. As the little white headed old man stood between those flags, the boys rose to their feet and gave three cheers. Tears were shed by many as the memories of the old times were revived.

The evening exercises were also very impressive and much enjoyed by those present. They then adjourned to meet again next year in another reunion hoped to be as successful and interesting as the one of this year.

Gypsy Traders Cheated.

A horse trade between a party of gypsies and employes of the Lacy livery barn attracted a large crowd on Main street yesterday afternoon and although of very little inportance the deal caused much excitement when the gypsies were ordered from the corner of Main street and Lincoln avenue and threatened to fight if their horse was not returned. The traders exchanged horses and after the dark skinned traveler's animal had been hitched to the heavily laden wagon he discovered that the horse was suffering from the heaves. The outfit rattled over the pavement to the Lacy stable. After the officers were notified a large crowd assembled and the gypsies became so excited that they took the coughing horse and the $7 "boot" and left town amid the cheers of the crowd. The women swore wildly and threatened to kill the first person who approached the wagon.—Goshen Democrat.

Arm Crushed.

Callie Forsythe, while working at the Miller tile mill in Jackson township this afternoon, got his right arm into the machine that crushes the hard clay. It tore the entire skin off from a point above the elbow to half way from the elbow to the wrist. The skin was pushed down in welts like a loose stocking, leaving the muscles bare. No bones were broken, but Drs. Casebeer and Swarts think it will have to be amputated. They are examining it as we go to press.

Opportunity For Business.

During the past year the Chicago & North-Western Railway Company built 474 miles of line through the most fertile portions of Iowa and Minnesota. These new lines of railway are now in full operation and are dotted with promising towns, which are trade centers for well located communities. A descriptive pamphlet with a list of business opportunities in each town may be obtained upon application to agents of the Chicago & North-Western Railway or to W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger & Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

The Miller Case.

This case was brought by Miller's wife, who made affidavit of information that her husband was living unlawfully with another woman. The facts brought out at the trial were these:

Marshall Miller and his wife were married in 1891 and until a year or so ago, lived in Peru, he being employed by the Wabash railway. By means of some letters that Mrs. Miller found, she learned that he had taken a fancy to a woman named Workings, who lived at Mexico, a small town a few miles away, on the Eel River branch of the Wabash railroad. On accusing him she saw that there was truth in the charge, and he told her he thought more of the Workings woman than he did of her. There was a separation and Mrs. Miller went to live with a sister at Andrews.

Soon after this she began a suit against her husband in the court at Peru, for abandonment and failure to provide. But later on, this suit was settled in some way.

About two months ago, she heard he was living at Garrett with Mrs. Workings. So she came up here and after looking matters up, had him arrested. It appears that Miller had thrown up his job at Peru and had come to Garrett and finally got a job of the B. & O. After boarding for a time, it is charged that he got Mrs. Workings to come to Garrett and he went to board with her, in a house she had rented from a Mr. Otto Luty. It is claimed he was the only boarder, and paid the rent for Mrs. Workings. The defense, however, claimed that this was not an improper condition of things, but that Miller was a boarder and no more.

Rose & Rose were for Miller, while the side of the state was by Rhodes and Pomeroy, assisted by M. T. Stokes, an attorney of Fort Wayne who represented Mrs. Miller.

The case was well fought over, by both sides. The testimony closed yesterday afternoon and arguments began. At about 5 p. m. the Judge had charged the jury and they retired to consider the case.

This morning the jury returned a verdict against both defendants. Marshall Miller was fined $45 and given ten days in jail. Mrs. Workings was given $10 fine and two days in jail.

OBITUARY.

Charles Bertice Probst, was born Sept. 11, 1884, and departed this life Oct. 23, 1900, aged 16 years, 1 month and 12 days. He was converted under the pastorate of Rev. W. W. Lineberry in the winter of 1896, and became a member of the St. Joe M. P. church, where he remained a member until death claimed him. It is the unanimous sentiment and expression of a large circle of relatives and friends that he was a good boy. He prayed often during his last illness and we believe was resigned to meet death. His father died on Oct, 25, 1889. He leaves a mother, grandmother, one sister and three half brothers to mourn his early departure. The funeral was at Cedar Chapel, Oct. 25, at 11:00 a. m., and interment in the cemetery there. The services were by Rev. C. E. Evans, pastor of the M. P. Altona circuit.

The Vandalia Case.

It will be remembered by students of Indiana history that many years ago the Vandalia railroad received a charter from the state, conditioned that the road must pay a certain per cent of its earnings above a sum named, to the state for school purposes. The road never paid this money over, one reason given being that its earnings did not reach the sum named. This was true for a number of years, but for about twenty years past, the road's earnings have gone far above that sum and still they refused to pay. Cases in court were brought again the road and one of these was decided in the Indianapolis Superior Court last week. The decision is that the road must pay to state $910,000, which will when paid be added to the school fund. Of course the road will stave off the payment as long as can. It is certain, however that they have it to pay some time.

LIV

One of Auburn's rising young men will read with interest what we are going to say this afternoon. And while he will not get so very mad about it, he is not going to hurt himself laughing. Besides, we have concluded not to give his name. Also, we shall not name the two girls.

Not many generations ago, as the old reader used to say, several members of a distant family came to Auburn to visit a well known citizen of the loveliest village, etc.

Two of the newcomers were young ladies, bright, intelligent and handsome. They would have been an attraction at any evening party in the fashionable quarter of town. And it was these attractive qualities, that drew the attention of our young friend, John Smith.

So John Smith thought he had never seen such loveliness, and then he "made up his mind." He called on them. He called again. He kept calling. And by that time he had decided, that as a law abiding citizen, he must settle his affections on one only. So he made a choice, if there could be any choice in two such worthy girls so exactly alike.

And they were exactly alike, for they were twins, both of them.

The name of one fair twin was Louie; the name of the other was Droule.

The names were so near alike that John was often at a loss to know which belonged to which. And the girls themselves were just alike. That made matters worse, in fact dangerous.

Each was just five feet four inches high. Each wore No. 3 shoes. Each wore No. 6 gloves, with the same number of buttons, and of the same color. Each wore dresses of the same cloth, same color, same style of makeup with the same trimming. Each had the same kind of belt with the same style of buckle, and the same kind of jewelry. And to make it worse, each had dark hair and wore gold rimmed spectacles. So near alike were they in all things that John Smith don't know to this day, to which one he lost his heart.

However, he kept calling and finally decided to be a "steady" for Louie.

One day he sent a note by a lad, asking Louie to go with him to church the next evening, which was Sunday. Louie sent back a polite acceptance, and John was full of blissful dreams.

Sunday evening came, and John was promptly on hand, as the minute hand was at the promised mark.

It was not so very bright in the room and both girls were there. He chatted till the fair one was ready, and they went to church as all young people should.

When church was over they sauntered homeward, going as far around as possible to make seven blocks go as far as fifteen, and succeeded in that very well. Once John remarked in a doubtful way, "Louie, somehow you don't seem yourself tonight. And your voice is a little odd." And the young lady responded gaily that he seemed a little different from the fellow she had been walking home with. And they both stopped at the gate awhile and talked.

And John don't know to this day, that it was Droule he took to church instead of Louie.

Both girls knew it. That is one reason why we sometimes say that girls know more than boys.

And you couldn't fool a girl the way those girls fooled John.

Now let us hear from John.

This is a true story.

Notice to Lot Owners.

Notice is hereby given that the lot owners of the Cedar Creek cemetery incorporation are called to meet at Cedar Chapel in Butler township, DeKalb county, Indiana, on Saturday, the 17th day of November, 1900, at 1 o'clock p. m. of said day for the purpose of considering and deciding the building of a fence around said cemetery. Every person owning a lot or lots in said cemetery is earnestly requested to be present at said meeting. By order of the board of directors—A. C. Griffin, President, Gloyd, Allen county, Ind., Philip Noel, Secretary of Incorporation DeKalb P. O., Ind.

The Taggart Meeting.

Tom Taggart came here last evening over the Wabash road, and was met at the station by a few local democrats, the most of whom had known him before. Dr. Nusbaum took him and a few friends up town, and after supper all went to the democratic headquarters, where quite a number gathered in. Mr. Taggart addressed them briefly and in an informal way. Then there was a short speech by Mr. Fleming of Fort Wayne, when the party took a carriage and drove to Garrett.

Attention Farmers.

The Auburn Handle Factory will pay the highest cash price for ash handle block delivered at their factory on the Lake Shore tracks, cut 58 inches long. Also want ash logs cut 9½, 14½ and 19½ feet long. All timber to be smooth and sound. Will also take basswood cut 4 feet long and 8 inches in diameter and up, left round with bark on. Will pay $3 per cord.—J. M. CHERRY & CO.

The Theil Case.

Frank Theil and a companion, Ollie Hall over at Butler, were on a spree in the numerous saloons of that place, some months ago. Hall admits he got pretty full and coming in contact with Jacob Green in some of the saloons, and finding Green was pretty full too, Hall managed to relieve him of his money, $20 in $5 bills. He gave half this to Theil and went to spending the rest. It appears that Hall owed a saloon-keeper named Oberlin, some money, and wanted to pay it. Oberlin inquired where he got so much money. He said he got it of Green. Oberlin said he didn't want that kind of money Then Theil wanted to give back the $10 Hall had given him, but Hall did not take it and it was given to Ott Baxter to keep for Green. The next morning Green became aware of his loss and he got his money back. He got the $10 that Ott Baxter was holding, and Hall put back what he had left: and finally gathered up some more and paid it all, and so ended the case before the justice. The matter got before the grand jury and both Hall and Theil were indicted. When the trial came up Hall plead guilty and then accused Theil of being in the theft with him. Yesterday the case came up in court with Rhodes and Harper for the state and John W. Baxter defending Theil. Theil swore he did not help steal the money and was not present when it was done, and that he knew nothing of the matter till Oberlin's remarks called his attention to it. He said Hall had come to him and asked him to take care of part of his money as he, (Hall) was too drunk to take care of it himself. So he took it and held it till he found it was stolen. Then he gave it to Ott Baxter, as already said. Hall went on the stand and told substantially what we have already said, except that he claims that Theil helped get the money from Green. It now became a question which of the two men was telling the truth.

At three o'clock the judge charged the jury and sent them out.

After being out about ten minutes the jury came out with a verdict of "not guilty" for Thiel. They were satisfied he knew nothing of the stealing. It will be a lesson to him to keep better company. Hall had plead guilty to grand larceny and had been sentenced one to three years at Jeffersonville. But on the facts brought out by the trial the Judge thought this too severe and made it a thirty day sentence and $1 fine. The jury was sent home till Nov. 9, but the judge will hold court a day or two in the meantime.

Another Odd Bet.

At a joint meeting of populists and republicans at Wichita, Kansas yesterday a funny bet was made and signed by fifty populists, all middle-of-the roaders and fifty republicans: If Bryan is elected the republicans are to let their whiskers grow as long as he remains in power, while if McKinley is chosen the populists agree to cut their whiskers off and shave once a week.

This picture is the trade mark of SCOTT'S EMULSION, and is on every bottle of SCOTT'S EMULSION in the World, which now amounts to many millions yearly. This great business has grown to such vast proportions,

First:-Because the proprietors have always been most careful in selecting the various ingredients used in its composition, namely; the finest Cod Liver Oil, and the purest Hypophosphites.

Second:-Because they have so skillfully combined the various ingredients that the best possible results are obtained by its use.

Third:-Because it has made so many sickly, delicate children strong and healthy, given health and rosy cheeks to so many pale, anaemic girls, and healed the lungs and restored to full health, so many thousands in the first stages of Consumption.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

The Royal is made from the most highly refined and wholesome ingredients, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is cheaper at its price than any similar article.

Samples of mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food, and in many cities their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a corrosive poison, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The Record Prints the Ballots.

The county clerk took a very fair way to get the local balots priuted this year, by giving the work out to the lowest bidder. There are to be 15,000 county ballots, 15,000 township ballots and 15,000 ballots for the constitutional amendments.

The bids are now all in and have been opened and compared, and the Butler Record having much the lowest bids, gets the contract. There were but three bids as follows:

The bid of the Waterloo Press was:

County ballots, $46.90.

Township ballots, $48.90.

No bid for the ballots for the constitutional amendments.

The bid of the Butler Recoad, was:

For all the ballots both county and township, $42.50.

For the 15,000 ballots for the constitutional amendments $8.50.

The bid of J. A. Barns, was:

For 15,000 county ballots $35.

For 15,000 township ballots with the necessary charges $35.

For the 15,000 ballots for the constitutional amendments. $12.

With these three items were to be included without further charge the necessary sample ballots of ordinary size, but not the large sample ballots.

Campaign Incident.

There was an amusing incident at Pine Hill, New York, Tuesday, which caused no end of fun for Roosevelt's party. The Pine Hill brass band, composed of seven pieces drew up along side of the Roosevelt special to sound a welcome. Unfortunatelp thre of the members of the band were dyed in the wool democrats and when the leader gave the signal to play they went on a sudden strike. The leader found himself directing "Hail to the Chief" with a drum, bassoon, cornet and a lovely shrieking piccolo.

Store Entered.

G. H. Yesbera's store at Ashley was entered by burglars Saturday night or Sunday morning, and at least $100 worth of goods taken. All the jewelry was missing and some clothing, but no money lost. Sunday morning the store presented an appearance of confusion, goods being scattered on the floor and all about. There is no clue.

It Heals the Lungs.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

It is a well known fact to those in position to know that four out of every five, who are brought into the Auburn "lock ups' and county jail are victims of the drink habit. The convict taken to the penitentary this week; said to Mr. Brosy: "All my career of degredation began with drink."

'The men who like Paul have gone to the heathen lands with a message, 'We seek not yours, but you,' have been hindered by those who coming after have reserved the message. Rum and other corrupting agencies come in with our boasted civilization, and the feeble races that wither before the hot breath of the white man's vices.

"The great nations have combined to suppress the slave trade. Is it too much to ask that they shall combine to prevent the sale of spirits to men who less than our children have acquired the habits of self-restraint? If we must have 'consumers,' let us give them an innocent diet."—Ex-President Harrison, Honorary President of World's Missionary Conference.

"When the extra heavy tax was imposed on foreign spirits imported into West Africa, the region recently purchased by the English government from the Royal Niger company, the traders complained that these heavy dues interfered with the trade. The Colonial Secretary replied that it was the intention of the government to discourage the drink traffic, as it ultimately destroyed all trade by destroying the population." Rev. Henry Richards, Missionary to the Congo.

It is well known that the liquor power was back of the Griggs' decision, which nullified the anti-canteen law. Now, it is said, that Louis Schade, editor of the Sentinel, organ of the liquor interests in Washington, D. C., is openly boasting that it was he who suggested this anarchistic interpretation.

A well-known temperance worker says: "I once examined the inmates of the Christian Home for Intemperate Men in New York City as to the way they reached the last ditch of drunkenness, and 80 per cent told me that they began with beer. Only 20 per cent began with wine.

In 1896.

McKinley received 7,107,000, and Bryan 6,509,050 votes at the last election. McKinley's plurality was 578,824. McKinley received 305,752 votes over all the presidential candidates. McKinley received 271 electorial votes and Bryan 176. The total popular vote polled was 13,810,208.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

News of Crimes and Criminals, Accidents, Fires, Etc., from North, South, East and West, Sanwiched with Minor Affairs.

Bad Wreck on the Lake Erie & Western.

The Lake Erie & Western fast eastbound express train, crashed into a light engine at Tipton, Indiana, which had crept out from a switch on to the main line. John Fraiger, engineer of the express, applied his emergency brakes and then calling to his fireman, jumped. His head struck a sharp stone, crushing in his skull. He is dying. The fireman, whose name is not known, stuck to his engine and in the crash was much bruised. The engineer and fireman of the light engine escaped by jumping. The passengers in the day coaches were terribly shaken up but sustained no serious injuries.

Frightful Slaughter by Chinese Rebels.

The govenor of Hong Kong has been informed that 4,000 villagers in the Samtoehuck-Kwaishin district were attacked by rebels at Pengkok. The villagers were defeated and 2,000 of them killed. The rebels, who lost 400 killed, burned two villages containing 3,000 houses. A force of 2,000 troops went to the assistance of the villagers and engaged the rebels on October 22. No details of the result have been received.

General Ho, with 2,000 troops, has returned to Wong Kong, having burned the villages of Shanchautin and Malatinua.

City Officer in Jail.

Judge Wing, of the common pleas court, ordered President D. E. Steuer, of the Cleveland, Ohio, council, sent to jail for contempt in refusing to testify in the councilmaic bribery investigation. The court held that the council committee had full authority to compel witnesses to answer questions and that if witnesses refused to do so they were guilty of contempt. The writ of habeas corpus sought by Steuer was denied. Steuer has been committed to the county jail.

Authorized to Proceed

Minister Conger has been authorized by our government to begin negotiations at once with the Chinese envoys on the basis of the points in the German and French notes, upon which all of the powers are agreed. Upon those points where divergence of views has been found to exit the governments of the powers themselves will negotiate with a view to reaching a further understanding.

Five Children Suffocated.

A fire which broke out in a small tenement house of Archambault Lane, at Montreal, resulted in the death by suffocation of five children. The father, Arthur LeBlanc, a shoemaker, was badly burned, but will live. The mother was only slightly injured. The children were in an upper room and were dead before the fireman were near them.

Germany and the United States.

Berlin Special: Count Von Buelow, the imperial chancellor, authorized the Associated Press to say that his accession to the chancellorship will mean no change in Germany's friendly attitude toward the United States either politically or commercially.

To Disturb Hayti.

A dispatch from Kingston, Jamacia, says: The Gleanor publishes a report to the effect that a filibustering expedition, headed by a well-known Haytian exile, is being prepared here for the overthrow of the government of Gen. Simon Sam, the president of Hayti.

Crushed Under a Switch Engine.

John Roe, aged about 65 years, and employed at the Nickel Plate Railway yards at Bellevue, Ohio, was run over by a switch engine and had both legs cut off. It is feared that he cannot survive the shock.

Nickel Plate Office Robbed.

Three masked men bound Agent Backstine at the Nickel Plate depot at Vermillion, Ohio, and secured several hundred dollars from the safe and escaped. Backstine was released by a freight crew.

Shrewd $100,000 Forgery.

Operating under the cloak of agents of the Republican campaign committee, rogues have succeeded in obtaining probably $100,000 on forged checks in New York City and through the State.

Fort Wayne Masonic Temple Attractions.

Oct. 31.—"A Brass Monkey."
Nov. 5.—"The Little Minister."
Nov. 8.—Willie Collier.

Seven Killed in Texas Storm.

Late reports from the cyclone at Lodi, Texas, place the number of deaths at seven. Three others are fatally injured.

$5.00 Counterfeit Bill.

The secret service bureau of the treasury department has discovered a new Indian head $5 counterfeit. The note of the series of 1899, check letter B, face plate No. 20, back plate No. 23, J. W. Lyons register and Ellis H. Roberts treasurer.

Russia and Japs Work Together.

Russia and Japan have concluded an agreement whereby the former assumes the direction of railroad traffic between Yangtsun and Shanghai Kwana. The allies have the right to use the line for military purposes.

Banker and Cash Missing.

Robert Neal, president of the Waggoner National Bank of Vernon, Texas, is missing, and the assets of the bank are impaired to the extent of $110,000, of which $70,000 was for forged paper. This sum has been made good by the stockholders.

Fights with Broken Neck.

Walter B. Duryea has made a railway journey of 327 miles with his broken neck in a plaster of paris cast, to be in Brooklyn at the commencement of his legal battle to retain the fortune left him by his father. Duryea's sisters are contesting the will.

FROM THE FOUR QUARTERS OF THE EARTH

BUMS ROB THE BANKS.

Recent Safe Cracking Jobs Not the Work of Expert Burglars.

A Des Moines institution believes it has discovered a solution for the numerous bank robberies that have been taking place all over the country. It appears that most of the work is being done by bums and not by experts. These men choose some small place where the bank has an old-fashioned safe, and crack it with nitroglycerin. They do not try larger places, for the safes there are too well protected to be injured by this explosive. The fact that the work is being done by hoboes is proven by the fact that when searched large numbers of them have been found to be carrying this explosive. The investigation has been conducted by Pinkerton detectives. Bums have been searched in most of the large cities of the middle West and many of them have been found to be carrying nitroglycerin. Besides out of the nineteen convictions of bank robbers that have been secured with the assistance of this company, seventeen have been bums. It was a mystery for some time where they gained their knowledge of the use of the explosive, but it has been discovered that most of them were employed on the Chicago drainage canal and there learned how to use it with safety. Since then they have become tramps and put their knowledge to use.

SAVED BY HIS NIGHTSHIRT.

How George D. Meiklejohn Missed a Nebraska Torrent.

George D. Meiklejohn, assistant Secretary of War, spoke on a recent evening in a little town in Polk County, Neb., and later took a buggy for Clark's, fifteen miles northward. He had gone but a third of the distance when a cloudburst covered the whole valley through which he was passing. He and his driver had only three matches, and two of these were blown out in an instant by the fury of the gale. Meiklejohn had a nightshirt in his small grip that he was carrying with him and a bottle of cosmoline, one of the products of petroleum. He took the nightrobe out of his grip and wound it securely around the butt of the whip. He smeared the petroleum over the muslin and then with his remaining match set the hastily improvised torch on fire. The light which flamed up disclosed a torrent of water in front. Fifty feet farther they would have been precipitated into a gulch and swept out to the river. They got into Clark's six and one-half hours late.

OPEN SWITCH CAUSES WRECK.

Freight Trains on the Lake Erie and Western Collide.

Three engines, a number of freight cars wrecked and a section of track torn up are the results of a collision near St. Mary's, Ohio, on the Lake Erie and Western road, caused by an open switch. The west-bound local freight was in switch when an east-bound double-header fast freight train came around a curve and crashed into it. No one was injured, the engine crews leaping.

Dead in Each Other's Arms.

Harry Bettis and Daisy Blydenburg, prominent young people, were found dead locked in each other's arms, seated on a bench in Corry Park, at Corry, Pa. They were lovers, and it is supposed to have been a case of suicide. The girl was shot through the breast and the young man through the head. He still held the revolver in his hand with two chambers empty.

FAIL TO ABOLISH THE PASSES.

Western Roads Stick to an Old Agreement, but Add a Penalty.

All railroad lines west and southwest of the Mississippi river, comprising about 130,000 miles of trackage, have taken action on the pass agreement for the coming year. General Manager Howard Elliott of the Burlington was in the chair. The old agreement was reaffirmed and an additional clause adopted providing a $100 fine for violation of the agreement. A resolution to abolish free transportation entirely for the coming year was lost, but a committee was appointed to confer with other lines relative to the adoption of such action.

TO REMOVE WRECK OF MAINE.

Hull of Battleship Obstructs Navigation in Havana Harbor.

Work will begin soon on removing the wreck of the battleship Maine from Havana harbor, as it is a serious obstruction to navigation. Gen. Wood, on the recommendation of the harbor authorities of Havana, considers the necessity is imperative. The wreck is sinking deeper and deeper into the mud of the harbor, and the longer the work is delayed the more difficult it will be of accomplishment. Gen. Wood saw the Secretary of the Navy, and after laying the matter before him in detail secured the Secretary's consent for the removal of the wreck.

LONG VOYAGE IN AN OPEN BOAT.

Capt. Johansen and His 12-Year Old Son Cross the Atlantic.

There arrived at Punta Gorda, Fla., the other day a small open boat that had completed one of the most remarkable voyages on record. The occupants of the small craft were Capt. Peter Johansen and his 12-year-old son Peter. They had made the voyage from Gibraltar to Punta Gorda simply for the novel experience. The boat is an open craft, twenty-nine feet long, beam seven feet six inches. They left Gibraltar with 180 gallons of water and provisions for sixty days. They made the trip in exactly fifty-nine days. Capt. Johansen reports that they had a remarkably pleasant voyage. They came by way of the Canaries, the north coast of Santo Domingo, Porto Rico and Cuba, landing only at Boca Grande.

FLYING TEAM WRECKS TRAIN.

Passengers Unhurt, but Driver and Another Man Killed at Pittsburg.

The Pittsburg and Lake Erie flyer was partly wrecked in Pittsburg by striking a wagon. The accident resulted in the instant killing of two men and badly injuring another. None of the passengers was hurt. Harry Johnson was driving a heavy wagon and the horses became frightened by the train and ran on the track. Shafer and an unknown man ran to assist Johnson in getting his team off the track and the train struck the three men, hurling them several hundred feet. One of the horses was literally torn to pieces and it was a piece of his flank becoming wedged between the track and a bridge girder that derailed the rear portion of the train.

WANT IN YUKON VALLEY.

Survivors Are Not Able to Care for the Bodies of the Dead.

A report has just reached the Treasury Department from Alaska that has opened the eyes of the officials to the horrible condition of the natives living along the Yukon. All the people are in want, and the dead have accumulated so fast that the living are unable to give them proper burial. In some instances the dogs of the villages have dug up the dead. In a special dispatch from Agassiz, B. C., it is said that 200 Indians are in a starving condition at Hamberton Meadows, 150 miles north of Agassiz.

REMARKABLE CAMPAIGNING OF BRYAN AND ROOSEVELT.

"WELL, BOYS, YOU'VE CERTAINLY BROKEN THE RECORDS."

This presidential campaign has been remarkable in more ways than one. In the first place, there has been the most systematic and thorough canvass ever made in the whole history of American politics. Again, there has been employed by each party the largest number of orators ever put on the stump; and there has consequently been made the largest number of speeches of all presidential campaigns. Most remarkable, however, have been the feats performed by Mr. Bryan and Mr. Roosevelt, who up to Oct. 20, the former beginning Aug. 31 and the latter Sept. 24, had made the following unexcelled records:

	Roosevelt.	Bryan.
States covered	19	14
Cities visited	350	280
Speeches	300	285
Total words	600,600	997,000
Number of auditors	700,000	550,000

Thus Roosevelt averaged each day 12 speeches of 2,000 words each, and Bryan seven of 3,700 words each. Roosevelt addressed an average of 30,000 persons a day, and Bryan one of 13,000. Bryan broke his own record of 1896, a comparison being made between equivalent periods. Surely, these men have performed wonderful feats of physical and mental endurance and have made the campaign of 1900 more memorable than that of 1896, which was then considered wonderful from what Mr. Bryan did in the way of making speeches from the tail end of the "campaign special" train.

ROBBED OF $700,000.

First National Bank of New York Suffers from Trust in C. L. Alvord.

Cornelius L. Alvord, note teller in the First National Bank of New York, 2 Wall street, stole $700,000 of the bank's funds and absconded. The bank's officers positively deny that anyone in the bank or that any of its depositors was in collusion with Alvord. He had been twenty years in the bank's employ, six years as its note teller, and had the implicit confidence of its officers. It is probable that Alvord lost the greater part of the money he stole in speculating in the street, at the very entrance to which he handled millions of dollars.

President George F. Baker of the bank gave out the following statement: "The note teller, who has been in the employ of the First National Bank for many years, is a defaulter to a large amount. His operations have continued for a considerable period and have been skillfully concealed through a manipulation of his balance books. The discovery was made by one of the bank's employes a few days after the completion of an examination of the bank by the United States examiners. During the continuance of his peculations, periodical examinations have been made by several distinct corps of examiners representing the comptroller's department, all expert accountants, and the bank has also had frequent independent examinations, none of which have developed any irregularities. The aggregate of the false entries amounting to $700,000 has been charged off on the books of the bank out of the reserve fund. It is expected that the shortage will be materially reduced by a substantial sum of which there is a fair prospect of recovery. Alvord's stealings extended over a period of several years. The discovery of his peculations was made during his absence on sick leave. It has been learned that Alvord played the races heavily and frequented gambling houses. He had been in the bank's employ for twenty years."

Alvord has a wife and three children. His home was at Mount Vernon and he was respected there as well as in Wall street. The loss in money is hardly disturbing to the bank, which is one of the strongest in the city. The deposits amount to $35,000,000 and its resources are said to be $50,000,000.

Alvord's stealings are the largest known in the history of New York's banking institutions. Cashier S. S. Seeley of the Shoe and Leather Bank stole $354,000 in 1894, up to which time he held the record. He is now serving a term in the penitentiary, having been caught at Chicago a few weeks after his flight. Following are some of the bank defalcations in New York City and vicinity:

1900—C. L. Alvord, First National	$700,000
1900—W. Schreiber, Elizabethport, New Jersey	106,750
1899—G. M. Valentine, Perth Amboy, N. J.	150,000
1897—L. L. Rosse, Bedford, Brooklyn	6,200
1895—E. O. Quigley, Mercantile National	144,000
1894—S. S. Seely and Fredk. Baker, shoe and leather	354,000
1894—S. E. Aymar, shoe and leather	20,000
1894—E. R. Carter, Bank of Commerce	30,000
1894—John R. Tait, Chemical National	1,500
1894—David Morgan, Bank of Republic	5,200
1894—F. E. Eager, Tradesman's National	17,000

The first annual report of the Hocking Valley Railway, for the year ending June 30, 1900, shows gross earnings of $4,417,266; operating expenses and taxes, $2,641,207; net earnings, $1,776,059.

Another big contract for freight engines has been awarded by the Burlington road for thirty locomotives to be known as the prairie type. The cost of each engine will be $14,000, or $420,000 for the thirty.

The Mississippi Railroad Commission declined to recede from its original schedule of rates on cotton seed, which is 4 cents minimum to 12 cents maximum, with 25 per cent added for joint hauls. The courts will have to settle the matter.

Railroads operating in the territory west of Chicago are in the throes of a car famine which threatens to result in a general blockade. Notwithstanding the pessimistic crop reports from certain districts during the past two or three months, the movement of grain in the total promises to be extraordinarily heavy.

The special campaign trains which have been run by the railroads in the central States have not proved very profitable to the transportation companies; in fact, officers of many of the lines that have engaged extensively in operating these political trains say that they have been run in a majority of instances at large net losses.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

State Wins Railroad Tax Case—Vicissitudes of a Young Farmer's Love Affair—Shoots His Beloved's Son—Hidden Treasure Revealed by Dying Man.

Judge Carter in the Superior Court at Indianapolis handed down his opinion in the suit by the State of Indiana to recover nearly $3,000,000 from the Vandalia Railroad. He holds that the State is entitled to recover $745,154.65 instead of nearly four times that sum, which was demanded. This action was based on the provisions of a special charter granted to the railroad company which built the Vandalia road from Terre Haute to Indianapolis. The charter provided that any excess of profits earned by the company, after repaying the stockholders all that they had invested with 10 per cent interest and a dividend of 15 per cent per annum and setting aside a sufficient reserve fund, should be paid over to the State. The company operated under this charter about fourteen years.

Ends Life with a Bullet.

An attempt at suicide, a wedding and a second and successful effort at suicide is the record of Frank Daniels, a young farmer south of Peru, in a few months' time. He fell in love with a young woman of his neighborhood. He was too young to get a license and his uncle refused consent. He became desperate and sought relief by poison. His relatives saved him, with a physician's aid, and then, relenting, got him a marriage license. The wedding took place at once and all has been well seemingly, but the suicidal mania returned and he ended all with a bullet.

Woman Forger at Muncie.

A stylishly dressed woman, giving the name of Mrs. James McCormack, attempted to cash a forged check for $1,000 at all of the Muncie banks and escaped while the check was being investigated. SORROW IS BUT FOR A DAY.

Let us dream—let us sing by the way,
"Sorrow is but for a day!"
The world is rolling beneath the blue
With ever the sweetest of songs for you,
And answered shall be the prayers we pray:
"Sorrow is but for a day!"

The rivers in music say,
"Sorrow is but for a day!"
The hills and the rills the song repeat
To the listening violets at your feet,
And the high stars sing on their heavenly way:
"Sorrow is but for a day!"

It is but for a day—for a day;
It will fade—it will vanish away;
And over the darkest—the thorniest sod,
We shall reap in the beautiful lilies of God,
And the wearisome winters shall blossom like May
"Sorrow is but for a day!"
—Frank L. Stanton.

A Thunder Shower.

THE sun was shining brightly when Lucy Manning went downtown, and it was oppressively hot, but she looked dainty and cool in her crisp ruffled lawn and white hat. Having bought a few yards of ribbon, a shirtwaist, "marked down to half," and an ice-cream soda, she started home. The trolley car was almost empty and she took a corner seat, near the front.

Suddenly the sky grew dark, lightning flashed, thunder roared, and rain came down in torrents. The conductor struggled nobly with the curtains, but before Lucy's were down she was wet through. She looked at her gown sorrowfully; the color was running; it was ruined. She minded the gown's plight more than her own.

"THERE'S THE GLOVE I LOST LAST WINTER."

"What a pity," she said to herself; "I was sure that it would wash."

Just then a tall, good-looking young man appeared at her side.

"Good-morning, Miss Manning," he said; "pardon me if I offer you my overcoat. You will catch cold in that thin gown, I am afraid."

Lucy drew herself up haughtily. "No, thank you, I shall do very well as I am."

"But I insist," and Lawrence Fulton dexterously wrapped the coat around her. Then he sat down on the same seat, but so far away as to be almost in a puddle. Lucy eyed him furtively.

"I don't care if he does get wet," thought she. "Mean thing. I wonder how he happened to have his overcoat with him this hot day."

Presently her conscience began to trouble her. "Mr. Fulton," she said, "why don't you sit farther over this way? You are in the wet."

"I am perfectly comfortable, Miss Manning, thank you."

"That's absurd," answered Lucy. "You are almost in a puddle."

"It doesn't matter," said Lawrence. "Nothing matters now," he added, half under his breath. But Lucy heard him, although she gave no sign.

The car sped three blocks, but neither of the young people said another word. At Superior street Lawrence arose, bowed, and left the car.

"Goodness," exclaimed Lucy, almost aloud, "he has left his overcoat." But the car was already at Chicago avenue.

When Lucy arrived at her getting-off place the rain had ceased. She emerged from the overcoat a much-bedraggled object. "I feel like a freak," she said to herself, impatiently, as she walked two blocks in her wet and spoiled finery, with the heavy overcoat on her arm. The sun had come out again and added to her misery.

Arrived at home, arrayed in dry garments, and, happily, feeling none the worse for her wetting, she ruefully surveyed the overcoat.

"I suppose I must send it back; he will never come for it after last night."

She shook it out, preparatory to folding it, and a long white glove fell to the floor.

"Why, there's the glove I lost last winter at the McDonald's dance," Lucy cried. "Stupid boy, to take it and carry it around." But her heart softened a little. "That was the night after he asked me to marry him. O, we had such a good time at that dance."

"Lucy, have you heard the news?" cried a younger sister, bursting into the room. "Grace Anderson is engaged to Mr. Worthy."

Lucy gasped. "Who told you, Molly?"

"Grace herself. She was here this morning. I can't stay to talk now. I want to tell Frances," and the impetuous young lady whisked herself away.

"And to think—to think that I sent Lawrence away because I thought that he and Grace were—were too much together. Sam Worthy is Lawrence's best friend, and of course he was nice to Grace. And he wouldn't tell Sam's secret even to clear himself. O, dear, dear!"

"Mr. Fulton, ma'am; come for his coat," said a maid, at the open door.

"I'll see him, Nora."

Lucy gathered the great coat in her arms and carried it to the drawing-room.

"Miss Manning," said Lawrence, as he came forward, "why didn't you send it down by Nora? It was inexcusable for me to leave it on your hands, but I forgot all about it."

"About me, too?" asked Lucy with a blush.

Lawrence started. "Lucy, what do you mean?"

"What I said. Did you forget me?"

"My every thought was of you, Lucy."

"Well, I forgive you, Lawrence. I don't like quarrels."

Lawrence was wise enough to accept "forgiveness," and to assume that it covered last night's offense as well as to-day's."

By and by Lucy asked curiously, "How did you happen to be carrying that heavy coat on this hot day?"

"O, that's easy enough, dear. I was bringing it home from the office for mother to pack away in camphor or something. She asked me to do it way last April."

"Just like a man," commented his fiancee, sagaciously.—Chicago Tribune.

BOAT THAT IS INDEED AMPHIBIOUS.

This is a peculiar boat called "a warping barge" that is in use on British Columbia rivers. Navigation on many of these streams is obstructed by falls and rapids over which it is impossible for a boat to pass. The Alligator crawls around these obstructions in the manner shown in the picture. It is a flat-bottomed craft with a strong winch and cable in the bow. When it is necessary for the boat to make a trip overland the cable is carried out ahead and hitched to a tree, the steam winch is started, and the winding in of the cable pulls the boat ahead.

ARE AUTHORIZED BY LAW.

Trades' Organizations Have a Legal Standing in New Zealand.

Trade and labor are organized throughout New Zealand, and as such are recognized and legalized by the state in the act of 1894, says the London Daily Mail. The very title of that act, though not changed, originally ran: "An act to encourage the formation of industrial unions;" and the whole spirit of the movement is that both employers and workmen should form their unions and associations on representative lines under the provisions of the act, and that all questions should be dealt with by the unions and societies up to a certain stage, and then brought by them, and them only, before the boards of conciliation, and ultimately, if necessary, to the arbitration court.

The trade and industrial unions of New Zealand are required to comply with all the ordinary business safeguards which should surround the corporate bodies which they form, and then—but not till then—they are registered by the state and placed in a position to act and be heard in industrial disputes. Penalties are attached to all breaches of the provisions controlling the unions, and in some cases to enforce the award of the court they are heavy, the maximum being £500 for each union, and failing the recovery of this there falls a maximum liability of £10 on each member of it.

The effect of this registration is to make the union and all its members subject to the jurisdiction established by the act, and although the registration may be cancelled on the application of any union, this is done under due safeguards; and no cancellation is permited during the progress of any conciliation or arbitration proceedings affecting the union which applies. Neither does such cancellation relieve any union or its members from obligations incurred in any previous award of the court. No workman may leave his work, or employer lock out his workmen during a dispute.

A Singular Occupation.

There is a celebrated cook in London about whom it is said that he makes an income of over ten thousand dollars a year. He is attached to no house, but in his own brougham sets out toward evening for the house of some rich man who is going to give a dinner, at which every dish must be above criticism. Here he alights, and, making for the kitchen, goes through the

POSTOFFICES OF THE SEA.

How Mail Matter Is Taken Care of on the Big Ocean Liners.

A work with which but few persons are familiar is that performed by the men of the postal department of the big ocean liners. Twelve hours for each of six or seven days occupied in passage, they labor on a pitching, tossing vessel in a small space about fifteen feet square and three stories high. Electric lights gleam night and day in the compartment where the postal clerks work, for it is hard enough to decipher the addresses on the foreign mail matter, even in the light of years of experience. The sea postal service is now in its tenth year and is in operation on twelve trans-Atlantic vessels. It has proven such a success and is of so great an advantage in expediting the foreign mails that the government is considering the establishment of the service in other vessels.

The postal clerks are usually located in a small room below the berth deck with low ceilings and narrow berths. In this compartment the separation racks are placed. The compartment of the racks are labeled with the principal cities of the country towards which the vessel is bound, and it is the duty of the postal clerk to have all the mail delivered to the ship upon leaving port ready for distribution when its destination is reached. On one side of the room is a separation table on which registered packages are sorted and which holds a small pair of scales for weighing them and stamps for marking supplementary mail.

INTERIOR VIEW OF A SEA POSTOFFICE.

One deck below, reached by a narrow companion way, are the newspaper racks—great iron gridirons with big yawning sacks of canvas suspended beneath. Into these pouches the third and fourth class mail matter is thrown with marvelous precision and rapidity.

A trap door in the third floor leads to the cellar of the floating postoffice, one deck lower, and here the bags of mail are deposited when the ship leaves port. As fast as a dozen or so are emptied by the men at the separation table and distributed at the cases, another bunch is hauled up. Thus hour after hour, in fair weather and foul, toil the men who earn their livelihood by facilitating the exchange of news, of business matters and other expressions of the human emotions. It is no sinecure to hold the position of postal clerk and great experience is necessary to enable one to fill the place properly. The worth of good men is appreciated and the government pays well for service in this line.

process of tasting all the soups, sauces and made dishes—advising when his palate suggests a little more salt here, a pinch of herbs there, a dash of sugar in this entree, a suspicion of onion in that salmis, etc. This done, he pockets his fee of twenty-five dollars and drives on to the next dinner-giving patron who has bidden him to his feast in this strange fashion. There are now about 40,000 miners at work in the gold mines of Siberia. The grains of Siberian gold are said to be on an average larger than those of any other part of the world.

A great deal is said about the notorious lack of moral courage in men. The women are nearly as bad; when a woman is carrying a package of dry goods, and goes into a rival store, she nearly always hides it.

Knew the Gun.

Sympathizing Friend—Weren't you awfully scared when you saw that the fellow took aim at you with a gun?

Pawnbroker's Man—I was at first, until I recognized the weapon as one I had sold the day before. Then I sailed in and knocked the stuffing out of him.

Unsatisfactory From the Start.

"Well, what about the new neighbors?"

"Oh, Edgar, it was the meanest moving-in I ever saw. Everything was boxed and barreled up so I couldn't see a thing they have."

Was Too Mild.

"I'm writing to Sam about his hay fever."

"Why, what of it?"

"Why, when he was here I thought he made too much fuss about it; now I have it myself, I want to tell him that he didn't make half fuss enough."—Indianapolis Journal.

When Missionary Boxes Are an Insult.

There have been missionary boxes sent to the heroes and heroines of the church, fighting her battles in the van, that have done more harm than good, in hurt pride and damaged self-respect. To a lady and a gentleman—I use the terms advisedly—were sent clothing, old shoes, old hats, old collars, cravats, gloves, fit only for the ragbag. Ashamed to send them anywhere else, the donors sent them to the unknown missionaries, and as everything that came to the church to be sent was jammed in without care or discrimination, the arrival of the box partook of the nature of an insult to these heroic, gently-bred people. Fortunately this state of affairs is not often found; it ought never to be.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Oysters Must Have Salt.

Oysters cannot live in the Baltic Sea. The reason is that it is not salty enough. They can only live in water that contains at least thirty-seven parts of salt in every 1,000 parts of water.

Little girls and boys don't know what trouble is. Why, you can pull their teeth with a thread!

BABOON AS A SOLDIER.

Man-Like Animal the Pet of a British Regiment in South Africa.

During the war in South Africa the amusing mad boulevard Parisians became sadly wrought up about a rumor that the British were using trained baboons and even gorillas to fight the Boers. France seized on the story with avidity, for it pointed at once to a pleasing shortage of men in the British army and a satisfying ferocity.

The entire story grew out of the fact that one British regiment, the Duke of Edinburgh's Own Volunteer Rifles, really did have attached to it an immense baboon as the official pet of the soldiers. He had been caught on the Fraserburg road, and Sergeant Pearson took him under his personal charge. It was not long before the man-like animal had made himself at home, and after the first engagement, he took a positive delight in the sound of artillery fire. When the troops were crossing the Vaal River, General Warren rode up to the officers of the D. E. O. V.'s and demanded, in hot rage, what in the name of the God of War he meant by leaving the wagon with the men's kits in charge of a monkey. Investigation showed that the convoying soldiers had missed the road, and that the baboon, who had stuck to the wagons, was working bravely, picking up the kits as they rolled off and holding fast to movable articles that were bouncing up and down wildly, as the wagons jolted along the rocky road.

Not long afterward the monkey was playing with the men in the Maxim detachment when the Boers attacked fiercely. A terrible fire was poured in on them, and the colonel and several men fell mortally wounded. Jocko, instead of scampering away, imitated the action of the survivors and sought cover. He found it behind an upturned leather bucket, and remained there, showing no fear, but taking infinite pains to keep out of the way of projectiles.

This exploit made him a popular favorite with the entire army corps, and the men even excused him when they discovered, during an arduous march in heat and dust, that Jocko had found out how to unscrew the stoppers of the canteens, and that he had drunk or wasted almost all the water of the regiment.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

If you want business in this end of the century, you must go after it in an "end-of-the-century" manner.—Rhode Island Advertiser.

If an advertisement is so plain that the veriest dunderpate cannot mistake its meaning, it will certainly not be misunderstood by others whose mentality is of a higher character.—Printer's Ink.

Advertising is the foe of monopoly. If advertising should cease, it seems probable that all business would eventually drift to two or three of the largest dealers in each commodity.—Profitable Advertising.

The merchant who would leave a city for New York in a stage coach to-day instead of a Pullman would not be further behind in business principles than the man who quietly sits down without advertising and expects the rapid moving, hustling world to bother itself in hunting him up so as to do business with him.—Huntsville (Ala.) Tribune.

Advertising promotes cordial relations between seller and buyer. Newspaper readers become interested in an advertisement which appears daily, and quickly feel a like interest in the advertiser, speaking of him as familiarly as they do of personal friends. These relations are not only desirable but necessary in business, for upon them wholly depends the merchant's success.—Philadelphia Record.

Legislator Charms Snakes.

Ex-Representative Harvey Horner, of Sumner County, Kansas, is a snake tamer, and usually carries around with him in his pocket a live bull snake, with which he makes lots of fun. A pickpocket "touched" Horner at the circus at Wichita and happened to get his hand into the pocket where the snake was kept. The shock made him scream, and Horner held him until the police arrived.

Many Royal Palaces in Siam.

The royal palaces of Bangkok form a city in themselves. They consist of several hundred individual palaces, surrounded by magnificent gardens and pagodas. Bangkok is really a city of waters. It is an Indo-Chinese Venice. More people live in floating homes on the Menam, "the Nile of Siam," and in many canals, than in permanent buildings.

Nothing makes a woman buy a thing she doesn't want so quick as to have the clerk act like he thought she couldn't afford it.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Labor.—What is labor? Labor is life. Life is profit.—Rabbi Philo, Hebrew, Akron, Ohio.

Practical Sympathy.—The spirit of practical sympathy is a fruit of Christianity.—Rev. C. M. Alford, Presbyterian, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Best.—Every human being should earnestly extract from life, out of his environment, that which is the best.—R. B. Gruelle, Spiritualist, Indianapolis, Ind.

Evil Habits.—Evil habits grow rapidly. Sin speedily gets such a momentum that it is almost impossible for a young man to stop.—Rev. Dr. Vosburgh, Baptist, Denver, Col.

Man.—Man is never wholly independent of the humblest creature beneath him. We are all bound together in the same bundle of life, and from this bundle we gradually develop and unfold.—Rev. A. S. Hoyt, Congregationalist, Auburn, N. Y.

Disbelief and Disobedience.—Disbelief must be replaced by faith and disobedience by obedience. Inheritance will come as certainly as God is true, and life will be ours instead of death.—Rev. B. Brown, Christian Church, Denver, Col.

Tammany Hall.—China might well send a few missionaries to Tammany Hall. It may well be doubted whether there ever was in China or any other part of heathendom a political organization so vile.—Rev. Dr. McArthur, Baptist, New York City.

Jesus' Mission.—For this did Jesus come upon the earth. He came to put the soul redeemed in a higher and larger atmosphere, with pure souls, so that both might work together for the honor of God and the good of mankind.—Rev. Dr. Brown, Methodist, New Orleans, La.

God's Love.—God's love, like our mother's, is never dying. If in the darkest hours you can trust God as you would your mother and hold to the belief that he chastens you for profit, you are very near the throne of God.—Rev. Madison C. Peters, Baptist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

All Life a Fight.—All life is a fight. I care not where you stand, it is a fight to hold your footing. Some say only Christians have to fight. I claim every one has to—the good to maintain their goodness, the bad to keep from getting worse.—Rev. William B. Leach, Methodist, Chicago, Ill.

The Present.—How few attempt to understand the present. How seldom do we put a proper estimate upon that history of which we ourselves are a part. We do not study the days as they are passing and notice their relation to the past.—Rev. S. W. Dana, Presbyterian, Philadelphia, Pa.

Doubt and Unbelief.—What a pitiable sight to behold men in this brightest and best day the world has ever known groping about in the graveyard of doubt and unbelief, digging up dead theories and dead philosophies with which to beat down the living Christ.—Rev. J. M. Cromer, Lutheran, Kansas City, Mo.

Temple of the Soul.—The body is the temple of the soul. I should be ashamed to face Jesuse Christ unless I had kept my body pure and undefiled. It is the temple in which my soul dwells. We preserve it clean and undefiled for a place in which to commune with our maker.—Rev. Dr. Paddock, Episcopalian, New York City.

Revolution and Civilization.—Revolutions are related to civilization much as the blast is related to the quarry and the mine. We put gunpowder under slavery and blew it up. To-day China is being blasted by the nations of the earth, or preparations are in progress to that end.—Rev. William Rader, Congregationalist, San Francisco, Cal.

Creative Power of God.—As soon as a thing is realized in matter it has its own existence, apart from that of its creator. A piece of sculpture will last after the sculptor is dead. A painting on a canvas will call forth the sentiment of those regarding it without thought of the hand which produced it. But not so in the creative power of God.—Father Mahony, R. C., San Francisco, Cal.

Old and New.—These terms old and new are subtle question-begging expressions. By the law of association "old" suggests stagnation, feebleness, aversion to change, decay; "new" suggests vigor, push, enterprise, the van of the procession. Thus their use tends to catch the unwary. A truth once revealed or discovered loses none of its truth through lapse of years.—Rev. George H. Trever, Methodist, Milwaukee, Wis.

One's Fellows.—Plainly all men winning and man building begins with the recognition of one's fellows as made in the image of God and as possessing of a divine worth, accompanied with sympathy for their faults and kindliness toward their frailties. Confessedly contempt for men is a poor bait for winning them. Many who seek influence over their fellows are themselves full of harshness, cynicism and fill their days with biting sarcasms. Our literature is filled with expressions like the "herd," the "masses," the "common people," as if any creature made in God's image could be common and ranked with herds and beasts. Our editorials also teem with thinly disguised contempt for the multitudes.—Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Congregationalist, Chicago, Ill.

Silk Plush a French Product.

The silk plush out of which hats are made comes almost exclusively from France, all attempts to produce it in the United States having ended in failure. Nine-tenths of the hats worn in America are made from the fur of the rabbit and hare.

Late Hours and Longevity.

The Constitutional Amendment.

There still seems to be some uncertainty as to how we are to vote on the constitutional amendments. There is no politics in them,and so there will be no rooster or eagle and no circle. It will simply be a small square to the left of the words "for the amendment," and "against the amendment." Those who wish to vote for the amendment make a cross in the little square at the left of the words "for the amendment. If they wish to vote against the amendment, then make a cross in the little square at the left of the words "against the amendment. The following is the form of the ballot:

FIRST AMENDMENT

To change the state constitution so that the number of judges of the supreme court of the state may be changed from five to eleven.

☐ For the first Amendment.

☐ Against the first amendment.

SECOND AMENDMENT.

The second amendment to the constitution is to fix a qualification for persons who wish to practice law in courts.

☐ For the second Amendment.

It is likely that nearly everybody will vote for these amendments. Take the case of the first. In 1850 when the constitution was made the state was in its infancy and the number of supreme judges was fixed at five. But since then the state has grown so that the work of the supreme court has got behind several years in spite of the fact that we have at different times provided help for them in "commissioners" and "appellate judges." The work must be done and we might as well have enough men to do it.

As to the qualifications of a practicing attorney there has been no restriction except such as local courts choose to establish and enforce. But as a matter of law, no one could be prohibited from practicing law Parties, we presume, often suffered by following advice of a so-called attorney who knew little about law.

So we say it looks as if both amendments are good. And there is no politics in either.

What Mark Twain Would do.

Mark Twain, being accused of Mugwumpism, defined himself as follows:

"I understand that I am the only living member of it. I will maintain its respectability to the end. Do you know what a Mugwump is? It has one plank. Out of howsoever many candidates there may be before the public select the best man. Don't pay any attention to principles. If I had a vote on November 6, I would inquire into the character of McKinley and Bryan, and vote for the one who had the soundest morals. Everyone has some moral principles, I suppose, but I woul rather support a man without principles than a man with principles and without morals.

Our Candidates.

We have already said that the democratic candidates are in every way the equals of their republican opponents. We repeat this with emphasis. Look at the list. Congressman Robinson compared with Hanna, should be the test, and so on with all the others. No democrat can give a good reason for voting for a republican nominee when he has just as good a man on his ticket. Make a cross with your pencil in the circle containing the rooster, and you will get as good men as there are on the ballot in any ticket.

OPPOSES EXPANSION.

W. H. McIntyre Says People are Too Indifferent on This Question.

J. C. Lochner, the correspondent of metropolitan newspapers at Auburn, in response to an inquiry from some of his papers, interviewed Mr. W. H. McIntyre, president of the Kiblinger Carriage Company, with reference to his attitude in the present campaign, Mr. McIntyre was an ardent supporter of McKinley in the campaign of 1896, being at the head of the gold democratic organization. Mr. McIntyre informed the reporter that he would not take any active part in the campaign this year, and had not changed his mind in regard to the money question, but considers the question of expansion of paramount importance. He paid an extended visit to Europe this summer and while there was so impressed with the baneful results of large standing armies, which are a menace to the prosperity of the masses and so un-American that he cannot view the policy of expansion with favor. He says the people are too indifferent in regard to to this question, and that we are being taxed to death with large armies and navies, and fears the time is soon at hand when we will be taxed to see the sun

Defends Trusts.

The Republicans have at last come out flatly in favor of trusts. Senator Scott of West Virginia, speaking at a dinner Friday evening at the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, in honor of Roosevelt and of O'Dell, the Republican candidate for Governor fully committed the party. His exact words were:

'Right here I want to say that I believe in trusts. They are good things. The Standard Oil company put in its pipe lines in all the small towns where oil is produced and if it was not for the Standard Oil Company this prosperity that we have would not be here today.' "Seeing the consternation his remarks created, Senator Scott turned to the only newspaper reporter present, I. H. LeVeen, representing the New York City News bureau, who officially reported the remarks, and added, "If that newspaper man puts that down I'll make trouble for him." Frantic efforts were made by those present to suppress this statement and Associated Press refused to send it out."

And the next day, Col. Diehl, manager of the Associated Press, said that Scott's speech was put on the wires, but at the urgent request of the Republican managers, a bulletin was sent out killing it.

Sets Him Right.

BUTLER, IND., Oct. 29, 1900.

EDITOR COURIER, Auburn: Ind.

Dear Sir:—I wish to make a statement in regard to an article which appeared in the Waterloo Press of Oct. 25, entitled "Democratic Falsehoods." It winds up with an ill-natured fling at what he calls an ignorant populist who was a member of the board of equalization which met in the commissioners' room at Auburn in June 1899, to equalize the taxes as returned by the several township assessors. Now, the facts are these:

Any one who is familiar with the law under which such board acts and how organized, need not go astray as has the Press. Now the equalization board at that time consisted of the county assessor, who is chairman, the county auditor as secretary, the county treasurer and two members appointed by the judge of the circuit court. Then in the year 1899 Judge Hartman, whom I have always held up to the people as an honest, upright judge and citizen, saw fit to appoint an ignorant pop and for the other member he appointed a man whom the republicans of this county have seen fit to honor by placing his name upon the county ticket as their candidate for commissioner in the north district, whose name is Elmer D. Case, of Franklin township, and Mr. Case authorizes me to say that the above said ignorant pop had no more to do with the raising of Mr. Taylor's taxables up to where it was placed by said board than he or any other member of said board who found it necessary to do what we did, or violate our oaths.

And here let me say that if Mr. Taylor or the editor of the Waterloo Press whose intelligence surpasses that of an ignorant pop, will investigate the matter they would readily see that no one member of the board can raise or lower the taxables of any individual without the consent of all, or a majority of said board. If the voters who wish to know what was done by the board that sat in 1899, will go and look up the record at Auburn, they will find it signed by Mr. Schultheiss, Mr. Seiler, Mr. Hines, E. D. Case and J. S. Lowe.

I want to say further that I never caused to be published in the Clipper, the article referred to in the Press. Again I say if the time has come when an officer discharges his whole duty and by doing so happens to hit some man who has wealth, must be trodden down and assailed by the Press, and opposed by the voters, I think things have reached a deplorable condition. I repeat, shame on a paper or a voter, who would abuse or punish a man for doing his sworn duty.

J. S. LOWE

A Ringing Letter.

Republican managers have been sending out to all heads of factories a circular to the ones they sent out in 1896, asking employes to support McKinley, and trying to bulldoze them into the belief that their jobs depend on McKinley's election. The directions that came with these circulars were that the manager should put them in the pay envelope Saturday night, so that each employe would be sure to get them. A bundle of their circulars came to E. A. Myers, secretary and treasurer of the Garrett Gas Engine Co. and he promptly sent back the spicy but ably reple:

GARRETT, Ind., Oct. 29.—Edwards, Deutch & Heitman, Chicago, Ill, Gentlemen: I am in receipt of your favor of the 17th, addressed to the Garrett Engine, Boiler and Machine Works, inclosing folder and letter of indorsement from the Republican National Committee and note what you say about the use of the same in an effort to influence the vote of our employes. I am pleased to inform you that this company does not vote or attempt to vote for its employes: We pay our employes for their service as machinists and not for their votes, and the methods proposed by you should meet with the righteous wrath of every fair minded person, no matter what his political faith may be.

When you assume that the skilled machinist or the common laborer is not endowed with a sufficient amount of intelligence to be intrusted with the ballot, except under the instructions and advice of his employer, you insult the intelligence of hundreds of thousands of the best citizens of this country, and I for one cannot believe but what every employe of average intelligence will resent any such assumed authority over his political liberty and be only too willing to forever stamp out such disreputable methods as you set forth in your letter.

In my humble opinion we should have laws making it a criminal offense for any employer to attempt to coerce intimidate his employes as you propose. We could then draw the line between the honest and the dishonest business men, and the great army of men employed in the factories of this country should rest assured that they possess the same rights under the constitution as any other man—the right to cast their votes in accordance with their convictions.

Trusting that this letter sent out by you on this subject will reach the hands of people who will give them such attention as they merit. I am, yours truly,

E. A. MYERS.
Secretary-Treasurer.

HOW TO VOTE CORRECTLY

READ THIS COLUMN CAREFULLY

The device at the head of the Democratic ticket is a rooster.
The device at the head of the Republican ticket is an eagle.
Other tickets on the ballot have different devices.
The Democratic ticket is in the first column, the Republican ticket is in th second column, and so on.

Below is a sample of the Democratic and Republican tickets, with the respective party devices, in the order in which they will appear on the officis ballot.

SAMPLE BALLOT

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

DEM. For Governor, JOHN W. KERN.

DEM. For Lieutenant-Governor, JOHN C. LAWLER.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

REP. For Governor, WINFIELD T. DURBIN.

REP. For Lieutenant-Governor, NEWTON W. GILBERT.

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS

FIRST. You must get your ballot and a blue pencil from the polling clerks in the election room. Remember that a blue pencil is now used instead of a stamp.

SECOND. If you want to vote a straight ticket make a cross, thus X, within the large circle at the head of the ticket containing the device of the party for whose candidates you wish to vote. If you do not wish to vote a straight ticket, you must not make a cross in the large circle containing the device of your party, but you must make a cross, thus X, on the small square to the left of the name of each candidate for whom you desire to vote, on whatever list of candidates it may be. If the large circle at the head of the ticket is marked, and the ballot is marked at any other place, it is void and cannot be counted, unless there be no candidate for some office in the list printed under such marked device, in which case you may indicate your choice for such office by making a cross, thus X, on the square to the left of the name of any candidate for such office on any other list. The cross must be placed within or on the circle or square or the ballot is void and cannot be counted.

THIRD. Do not mutilate your ballot, or mark it either by scratching a name off or writing one on, or in any other way, except by marking in the circle or on the squares as before mentioned. Otherwise the ballot will not be counted. You must not put any mark of any kind on your ballot except as before mentioned.

FOURTH. After marking your ballots, and before leaving the booths, fold them separately so that the face of each cannot be seen, and so the initial letters of the names of the polling clerks on the back thereof can be seen. Then hand your ballots to the inspector, the pencil to the polling clerk, and leave the room.

FIFTH. If you are physically unable to mark your ballot, or cannot read English, so inform the polling clerks, and make an affidavit to that effect, and tell them how you wish to vote, and they will mark your ballot for you. But neither you nor the clerks must permit any other person to hear or see how your ballot is marked. It is a penal offense to declare that you cannot read English or cannot mark your ballot, if, in fact, you can; and in no case shall the ballots be marked by the poll clerks if the voter can read the English language or is physically able to mark his ballot, and then not until the voter has made the affidavit.

SIXTH. If you should accidentally, or by mistake, deface, mutilate or spoil your ballot, return it to the poll clerks and get a new ballot.

SEVENTH. You must not accept a ballot from any person outside of the election room. Any ballot outside is fraudulent, and it is a penitentiary offense to have such a ballot in your possession whether you attempt to vote it or not.

EIGHTH. You must not attempt to hold any conversation in the election room except with members of the election board and poll clerks.

NINTH. Use only the blue pencil handed to you by the polling clerk in marking your ballot. If you mark with any other pencil your ballot is void and will not be counted.

TENTH. You must not put any mark of any kind on your ballot except as before mentioned.

ELEVENTH. Constitutional amendments to be voted on at the November, 1900, election are printed on a white ticket and the voter must indicae his preference upon these questions by marking the small square to the left of the words "For the amendment," or "Against the amendment. If the voter is in favor of the amendment he should mark in the small square to the left of the words "For the amendment," if opposed, he should mark in the small square to the left of the words "Against the amendment."

The New Census.

The census figures have been given out. The population of the United States is 76,295,220. New York comes first with its 7,268,009; Pennsylvania is second with 6,301,365. Illinois is third; Ohio, Missouri, Texas, Massachusetts, Indiana, Michigan, Iowa, Georgia, Kentucky, Wisconsin and Tennessee follow in order. These are all over one million.

Those of a million and under are: North Carolina, New Jersey, Virginia, Alabama, Minnesota, Mississippi, California, Kansas, Louisiana, South Carolina, Arkansas, Maryland Nebraska, West Virginia, Connecticut, Maine, Colorado, Florida, Washington, Rhode Island, Oregon, New Hampshire, South Dakota, Vermont, North Dakota, Utah, Delaware, Idaho, Wyoming and Nevada.

The gain in our population in ten years has been 11,796,007.

Boy Shot.

Sunday some men up in Fairfield were out hunting rabbits and finally chased one into a pile of wood. One of the men leaned his shot gun up against the woodpile and they were trying to drive the rabbit out. Just then a lad about twelve years old, Karns Martin, son of Harry Martin, climed up on the pile and then took hold of the gun barrel and pulled it up to him. The hammar caught as he pulled the gun and the load was discharged into his right wrist tearing the bones to pieces. The shot also went into his face. His arm had to be amputated below the elbow. Drs. Gilbert and Williams of Kendallville and Dr. Phillips of Corunna performed the operation and the boy is doing well. But he will always regret that Sunday hunting.

out of a cross current nearly in front of his lair the lion caught my scent!

Instantly the gliding, graceful figure was transformed, and a fierce, snarling beast reared upon its hind feet, snuffing in eager anxiety to find the prey. The lion whirled about several times, then made a leap to the right, then directly toward me. Then he lost the scent and crouched, his red muzzle quivering, his ears twitching curiously, while his tail whipped to and fro.

Now he rose again and moved, sniffing cautiously along the rim of the gully. He seemed to reason that the scented creature must have shifted its position. Again his nose took wind of me, and crouching, he sniffed down at the gaping cut as if to make sure of the direction. Then, as his ears were laid flat, and his yellow talons were unsheathed to take firm grip upon the rock, I gave myself up for lost.

With his snarls menacing me and growling louder and louder, I knew the creature was certain of his ground. He had not been blind always, and he had leaped many times upon the shelf where I lay. Horror-stricken, I watched him gather himself, and then vault in a sweeping curve above the chasm and alight upon the rocks within four or five steps of where I lay.

I expected instant death. My nerves were suddenly racked with cutting [illegible] its abyss.

Was it a case of suicide? It has always seemed so to me, and yet, in his sudden sense of loss, in his great fear and excitement, the creature may have had no other aim than mad flight, and may have gone to his death quite by accident.

I was as much overjoyed as Pete was astonished at our meeting. Before noon the Indian had hung up a deer on the ridge, and when he returned to get the meat he found three lions had torn down the carcass. He fired and missed, and as the lions ran he had followed, shooting at them as long as they were in sight.

By making a strenuous effort I found that I could stand on my feet, but I was not released from my shelf until the Indian procured an axe and bridged the gulch with poles.—Youth's Companion.

Elizabethport Bank Clerk Squandered $40,000 to Please a Woman.

Elizabethport, N. J., furnishes a startling case of a young man who, fascinated by the glamour of the wild life in which women, wine and horses are the principal features, stole from his employers to meet the expenses of his fast living. William Schreiber, a bank clerk, became a fugitive from justice, his aged mother was placed at death's door as a result of the shock, and the directors of the bank where he was employed must make good the amount he stole—$100,000. A reward of $5,000 was offered for his capture.

Schreiber is 24 years old and entered the Elizabethport Bank a few years ago. His attentiveness to his duties speedily gained him a good position. About two years ago he began to affect the airs of a man about town and was known as a good fellow. The bank directors suspected nothing, however, until he failed to return from his summer vacation and investigation showed the enormous extent of his defalcation. The detectives discovered the facts which constitute a remarkable story.

Much of Schreiber's stolen money went to the support of Mrs. Anna Hart, a belle of the New York Tenderloin. It is estimated that over $40,000 was spent for jewelry, horses and carriages, dresses, etc., for this woman. She first met young Schreiber two years ago and she has ever since, in the language of her class, "played him for a sucker." The young man became infatuated with her, and spent thousands of dollars. There was high flying, winning and dining, theaters for the woman and all her friends, horses and carriages and clothes and diamonds. Mrs. Hart introduced her Willie to all her set. His money put her on the top wave in the Tenderloin. Joe Vendig was one of her friends. She made the bookkeeper and the bookmaker acquainted. It was a fine thing, the young Jerseyman who had worked for $900 a year in Elizabethport thought to know this friend and patron whose name was constantly in the newspapers, who knew all the prize fighters and gamblers in New York. "Circular Joe" was good to the boy who had both money and sporting blood. They went around to the prize fights together. They bet on them together, and according to Joe they made money. They "bunched their bets," the youngster following the veteran's tips. Altogether, according to Vendig, they profited more than $7,000 apiece. But Schreiber's share did not do him much good. He spent it on the woman who was leading him about by the nose and showing him high life in the Tenderloin.

While she was showing him life in the Tenderloin, he was doing his best to show her a little high life outside of it. Last fall he sent her down to the Lakewood Hotel, where her gowns and her jewels were just as resplendent as any that the swellest of the swell could sport. Later nothing would do for the high-flying woman but she must needs go to the Paris Exposition. It cost the ardent Jersey financier a pang to have her go while he must stay to steal the wherewithal to pay for the trip, but he did not deny her. She went and he remained. About the first of August she returned, gorgeous beyond compare with new Paris raiment. She went through the Tenderloin with a splurge that rent the heart of every jealous rival.

When Schreiber disappeared an attachment was placed on all her goods and the bank directors hope to recover from her some of the stolen property. She says that Schreiber never gave her more than a gold ring and a poodle and says she will fight for her property.

AVOID TOADSTOOLS.

THEY ARE OFTEN MISTAKEN FOR MUSHROOMS.

Some Interesting Information by Dr. Farlow, Professor of Cryptogamic Botany in Harvard University—How to Tell Edible from Poisonous Fungi.

Besides the chance that the toadstool may be mistaken for the edible mushroom, danger is said to lurk in that which under ordinary circumstances might be eaten with impunity. It is absolutely essential that mushrooms intended for the table should be gathered in their prime and prepared for eating as quickly as possible. In their chemical construction they are much the same as meats. In fact, many authorities claim that they are a good substitute for meats, and in some countries the peasants and poorer classes have no other meat for weeks and months. Just as the meats taint and become unfit for human consumption, so the mushrooms decompose and become dangerous.

Probably the deadliest of all, as well as one of the most violent and fatal of vegetable poisons, is the amanita vernus, and of all the poisonous varieties it is the one that may most easily be mistaken for the wholesome variety. With this variety all tests for distinguishing, such as pleasant odor, boiling with a silver spoon, tarnishing indicating poison, change of color when broken and peeling of the cap are said to be at fault. The amanita has an inviting odor, its taste is very pleasant and it peels easily. The latter tests are not considered conclusive, however, for the reason that many of the varieties that are edible do not peel easily. The one unerring mark by which amanita may be distinguished is a little socket in which the stem sets and which is denominated the poison cup. This cup may be under ground and must be searched for if the novice would be certain that he has not plucked his own death. Any mushroom that has even a suggestion of such a socket should be left severely alone.

In an extensive paper entitled "Some Edible and Poisonous Fungi," prepared by Dr. W. G. Farlow, professor of cryptogamic botany in Harvard University, for the United States Department of Agriculture, are given some rules for distinguishing the common mushroom from the deadly agarics. Dr. Farlow says:

"The common mushroom has a pileus which is not covered with wart-like scale; gills which are brownish purple when mature; a nearly cylindrical stalk, which is not hollow, with a ring near the middle, and without a bulbous base sheathed by a membrane or by scales.

"The fly agaric has a pileus marked with prominent warts; gills always white; a stalk with a large ring around the upper part, and hollow or cottony inside, but solid at the base, where it is bulbous and scaly.

"The deadly agaric has a pileus without distinct warts; gills which are always white, and a hollow stalk with a large ring and a prominent bulb at the base, whose upper margin is membranous or baglike. Other minor points of difference are the different places in which these species grow, and also the colors, which, although they vary in each case, are brilliant yellow or red in the fly agaric, white, varying to pale olive, in the deadly agaric, and white, usually tinged with a little brown, in the mushroom.

"A word should be said as to the size and proportion of the pileus and stalk in these three species. In the mushroom the pileus averages from three to four inches in breadth and the stalk is generally shorter than the breadth of the pileus and comparatively stout. The pileus remains convex for a long time, and does not become quite flat-topped until quite old. The substance is firm and solid. In the fly agaric the pileus, at first oval and convex, soon becomes flat and attains a breadth of six to eight inches, and sometimes more. The stalk has a length equal to or slightly exceeding the breadth of the pileus and is comparatively slenderer than in the common mushroom, but nevertheless quite stout. The substance is less firm than in the common mushroom.

"The pileus of the deadly agaric is thinner than that of the common mushroom, and, from being rather bell-shaped when young, becomes gradually flat-topped, with the center a little raised. In breadth it is intermediary between the two preceding species. The stalk usually is longer than the breadth of the pileus, and the habit is slenderer than in the two preceding species. All three species are pleasant to the taste, which shows that one cannot infer that a species is not poisonous because the taste is agreeable. The fly agaric has scarcely any odor. The other two species have certain odors of their own, but they cannot be described."

While there are over 100 varieties of mushrooms and toadstools which may be eaten, there is no general rule for their identification, and each must be learned as a species. The gatherer may safeguard himself to some extent by avoiding all varieties that give out an unpleasant odor, those which are tough or in a state of decomposition, and by examining the insides to see that they are free from grubs and the larvae of flies and beetles.

Common field mushroom, edible. Poisonous fly agaric. Poisonous deadly agaric. Horse mushroom, edible. Horsetail, edible.

ELECTION DAY.

How It Came to Be Tuesday After First Monday in November.

The designation of the day for holding the presidential election is left to Congress. The first act passed by it relating to that subject was in 1792. It provided that presidential electors should be appointed "within thirty-four days before the first Wednesday in December." This left each State free to select a day to suit itself within those limits. Pennsylvania chose electors on the last Friday in October. Other States elected theirs on different days between the beginning and middle of November.

When Harrison was elected in 1840 the Democrats asserted that his success was due partly to fraudulent voting, which was made possible by the lack of a definite election day. It was alleged that Kentucky and Ohio Whigs had voted in both States, the election being held on different days. So in 1845 the Democrats passed the law now on the statute books making the first Tuesday after the first Monday election day.

At that time but five of the twenty-six States had their State elections in November. In Michigan and Mississippi voting was carried on through two days—the first Monday and the following Tuesday. New York had three election days—the first Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday—but had finally confined voting to the middle day, or the first Tuesday after the first Monday. Massachusetts chose State officers on the second Monday in November, and Delaware on the second Tuesday. So Congress selected the first Tuesday after the first Monday to consult the convenience of three States out of five, one of the three being the important State of New York.—Chicago Tribune.

GREAT NAPOLEON'S DOUBLE.

His American Cousin So Like Him that He Was Excluded from France.

"During the next ten years the cherished ambition of Mme. Bonaparte was to marry her son, Jerome, to a girl of rank," writes William Perrine of Elizabeth Patterson, the American wife of Jerome Bonaparte, in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Various plans were meditated, particularly his proposed marriage to one of the daughters of Joseph Bonaparte, who was then living in comfortable exile at Philadelphia and at Bordentown, New Jersey, and who was even solicited to place himself actively at the head of the Bonaparte interest in France after the death of Napoleon at St. Helena. But "Bo," the pet name she gave her son, was little inclined to help along these matrimonial speculations. Her especial desire was that he would not fall in love with an American, and that he would always bear in mind the possibility that the French people might call a Bonaparte like him to their throne.

"But all Mme. Bonaparte's darling hopes for her son were doomed to disappointment. In 1829, while she was in Europe, she learned that he had married an estimable young woman in Baltimore. While the second Jerome Bonaparte, who was a graduate of Harvard College, was never naturalized as an American citizen, he became a highly respected gentleman both in this country and abroad. It was frequently observed in Europe that he resembled his uncle, the great Emperor, more than Napoleon's own brothers or any other of his kinsmen. Indeed, his figure, the cast of his head, the regularity of his features and his eyes were so much like the Emperor's that there was some fear in France during the Louis Philippe monarchy that the resemblance might stir the Napoleonic affections of the people, and he was forbidden from visiting Paris even while traveling incognito."

BELLE ARCHER.

A Well-Known Actress Who Died Recently of Embolism.

Belle Archer, the well-known actress, died recently of embolism at a hospital in Warren, Pa. She had been long known as one of the most beautiful and talented members of the theatrical profession in America. Before she made her hit in "A Contented Woman" Miss Archer won fame as the leading lady of Alexander Salvini, whom she was compelled to sue for her contract money in 1895. Soon afterward Salvini was attacked with the disease of which he died not long ago in Italy. Since that time Miss Archer had been very successful as an actress. She was born at Easton, Pa., in 1860.

HOW JELLY FISH EMIGRATE.

One Investigator Says They Climb Mountains and Cross Deserts.

The problem of how the apple got into the dumpling sinks into insignificance beside that of the jellyfish, the crustaceans and Lake Tanganyika; but J. E. S. Moore, who has just come back from Central Africa, believes he has discovered how the fish from the sea got into the lake in the middle of the continent.

Mr. Moore is one of the young men at the Royal College of Science, South Kensington, England. He was leader of an expedition largely subsidized by the Royal Geographical Society, and after a year's march of over 2,000 miles from Zambesi to Uganda he has come back with hundreds of specimens and several important additions to the knowledge of Central Africa.

Mr. Moore and the twenty Ujiji boys who accompanied him lived on goats during the ascent and descent, driving the goats and killing them when food was wanted. The Ujiji boys were so struck with the phenomenon of ice that they tried to carry bits down to Ujiji. The tropical sun nearly boiled the ice on the way.

Between Tanganyika and Lake Albert Edward is a lake called Kivu. The best atlas published gives it as about one-tenth the size of Albert Edward. Mr. Moore, who was accompanied by Malcolm Fergusson, an English geologist and geographer, found that Kivu is larger than Albert Edward. The north end of Tanganyika was found to be fifty miles westward of its ascribed position.

The primary object of the expedition was to dredge and sound the lakes, with reference to the marine forms which Mr. Moore found there four years ago. The question was whether the jellyfish and crustaceans originally got into Tanganyika by way of the Nile or the Congo. Having determined that these marine species are to be found in none of the lakes north of Tanganyika, Mr. Moore believes that Tanganyika was once joined to the sea by way of a great basin in the Congo state.

When Tanganyika was left high, if not dry, in the center of Africa, the jellyfish and crustaceans of the sea remained behind, and their descendents are flourishing to-day. They have been there many thousands of years, for fossils they resemble are to be found below the chalk level.

FEATS IN STREET TRAFFIC.

Hauling Pine Logs More than Fifty Feet Long Through Chicago.

The greatest feat to be seen in street traffic in Chicago is the handling and transportation of the loads of Norway pine logs designed for use as piles in building foundations. The trunks of these pine trees are of such great length that the average passer-by on the street often wonders how in the world the load of piles ever turns a corner.

It is not an uncommon sight to see a knot of people collected at a street corner watching the approach and skillful turning of the long wagon with its load of three or four piles. Turning the corner and entering another street at right angles is such a difficult feat that as a rule the piles are taken through the streets at night when there is no traffic to interfere. Recently, however, loads of them have been driven through the heart of the city in the daytime. Naturally during business hours taking them through the streets is attended with far greater difficulties than at night. When corners are turned the long poles, as they are transported in an angling direction from one street to another, practically blockade traffic. Often when going straight across a street a small blockade is caused, for the poles are so long and are carted so slowly that when they cut a thoroughfare all of the cross current of cars, wagons and carriages is held at a standstill for as much as a minute, sometimes more, and a minute is a much longer period of time in such a case than it seems in print.

All of the poles are fifty or more feet in length, and the largest ones are in the neighborhood of a foot in thickness at the largest end and a few inches smaller at the tip end. The wagons are about forty feet in length. They are very simply contructed and are of great strength. The wheels are over five feet in diameter, and the two sets are placed the full length of the wagon, or about forty feet away from each other. The load moves slowly enough at the best, but when it approaches a corner where a turn is to be made the driver pulls up a little and goes still slower. Several rods before he reaches the corner he begins drawing up as closely as possible to the curb opposite to the direction in which he is about to turn, in order that he may have as great a space as possible for making the turn to prevent running the sides of the long, straight poles into the buildings.

PILOTING LONG POLES THROUGH THE STREETS.

POPULATION OF THE CAPITALS.

A Decrease, as at Albany, Since the Last Census Not the Rule.

The population of the capital cities of two States, New York and Nebraska, is less at present, according to the census reports, than ten years ago. Albany's present population, 94,000, shows a decline of 772 compared with 1890, and Lincoln's present population, 40,000, shows a decline of 14,985. This fact has suggested that State capitals throughout the United States may have declined in population—such is not the case. Thus Providence, the capital of Rhode Island, has gained 23 per cent in population during the last ten years; Hartford, Conn., has increased from 53,000 to nearly 80,000, or 50 per cent; Trenton, N. J., has increased from 57,000 to 73,000, a gain of 27 per cent, and Columbus, Ohio, increased from 88,000 to 125,000, a gain of 42 per cent.

In fact, considering that the capitals of American States have been fixed chiefly with reference to their geographical situation and without reference to their facilities for business communication with other places, it is cause for surprise that American capitals should show so large an increase this year. Thus Indianapolis, the capital of Indiana, almost exclusively dependent upon railroad connections, has increased from 105,000 to nearly 170,000 population in ten years, a gain of more than 50 per cent, and 6 per cent greater than Cleveland's and 50 per cent greater than Cincinnati's. Des Moines, the capital of Iowa, has increased in ten years 24 per cent in population. Harrisburg, the capital of Pennsylvania, has increased 50 per cent. Denver, the capital of Colorado, shows a gain of 25 per cent; St. Paul, Minn., a gain of 23 per cent, and Salt Lake City, Utah, of 19 per cent. Richmond and Nashville, the capitals of Virginia and Tennessee, show a considerable gain in population, and Topeka, the capital of Kansas, shows 8 per cent increase, though census figures indicate some falling off in the population of that State. Trenton, the capital of New Jersey, has gained more proportionately during the last ten years than Jersey City.—New York Sun.

Should Avoid Certain Shades.

A famous Parisian dressmaker declares that blue and pink of any shade whatsoever are fatal to the beauty of a woman with red hair. He refuses pointblank to use even the most frugal touch of either color, no matter how earnestly his red-haired patrons may desire them, and tells them with deep regret but unyielding firmness that only black and white in judicious combination, soft, warm browns and delicate purples are permitted to them. Another Paris dressmaker says that there is a touch of green in every woman's coloring, and that he makes it a point to discover it and to bring that especial shade into the finishing of the gown. He also adds a touch of white to every costume that issues from his atelier, claiming that all colors are improved by its contrasted effect.

HELP FOR WOMEN

WHO ARE ALWAYS TIRED.

"I do not feel very well, I am so tired all the time. I do not know what is the matter with me."

You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.

Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women. No other medicine has made the cures that it has, and no other woman has helped so many women by direct advice as has Mrs. Pinkham; her experience is greater than that of any living person. If you are sick, write and get her advice; her address is Lynn, Mass.

Revenues of the Riviera

A writer in a French paper says every year there are 270,000 foreigners who pass from a fortnight to a whole winter on the Riviera. Every person is supposed to expend on an average 1,000 francs, or £200, in the country. In other words, the foreign visitors spend in the country every winter the sum of $54,000,000. This is enormous. The English are put down as contributing one third of this amount, the French themselves contribute another third; Germans, Belgians, Dutch and Russians do the rest. Nothing is said about the Americans. Perhaps they are jumped up with the English. From being quite a poor country when it was annexed by France, Nice has become one of the richest departments.

Tolstoi's Sense of Honor.

The family of Count Tolstoi has a large circle of acquaintances, and hardly an evening passes but there are guests. At one music party a lady's singing displeased Count Tolstoi's boys and they adjourned to another room and made a noise. Their father lost patience and went after them, and a characteristic admonition ensued:

"Are you making a noise on purpose?" he asked.

After some hesitation came an answer in the affirmative: "Y-y-yes."

"Does not her singing please you?"

"Well, no. Why does she howl?" declared one of the boys, with vexation.

"So you wish to protest against her singing?" asked Lyeff Nikolaevitch, in a serious tone.

"Yes."

"Then go out and say so, or stand in the middle of the room and tell everyone present. That would be rude, but upright and honest. But you have got together and are squealing like grasshoppers in a corner. I will not endure such protests."—Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

THE HAPPY TIME.

The man who cannot rest to-day,
But says he will to-morrow,
Finds, when his work is cleared away,
New tasks or sits in sorrow—
The merry time, the happy time,
The blissful day in view
Is never gained by them that wait
To triumph and to celebrate
With nothing more to do.

The man who folds his hands to-day
And contemplates with sorrow
The pressing task that's put away
Unfinished till to-morrow
Has neither rest of heart nor mind,
For he that looks ahead
To duties long delayed destroys
The sweetest of sweet leisure's joys—
But borrows doubt and dread.

The man who mixes work and play
At present and to-morrow
Keeps life's poor little ills away
And finds few cares to borrow;
The merry time, the happy time,
The blissful day in view
Is every day for him whose hand
Is tuned each day to fair deeds, and
Who plays in reason, too.

The Blind Cougar.

BY FRANKLIN WELLES CALKINS.

It was a good day for deer-hunting. Two or three inches of snow had fallen, and the air seemed soft and heavy, as it does before a storm. We determined to utilize the favorable weather for the killing of our winter meat. Therefore, at about sunrise, my partner, Curtis, our Indian helper, Pete Debaw, and myself set out from our shack to make a circuit of the nearer hills.

In 1875 this rough Black Hills country abounded in big game—elk, deer, sheep, grizzles, black bears and mountain-lions. On that November day, at one o'clock or a little later, I had killed and hung up four blacktails and one cotton buck. Then, in close pursuit of a wounded doe among a rough tumble of rock ledges, a serious accident befell me. Hot upon the trail, I was pushing through an undergrowth of cedar, when I burst from cover upon a precipitous slope and fell headlong. I dropped my gun upon the snow, and grasped in vain at bush and boulder to stay my downward flight. I pitched down an incline, rolled over and over, and dropped off the rim of a ledge some fifteen or twenty feet in height.

For some time I lay paralyzed, physically, by the shock of my fall. My face lay on the edge of a narrow shelf of rock and one of my arms overhung it. I had no power to retire from this perilous position, yet with a curious sense of helpless indifference I looked down into a black and dismal gully which I knew well was the "hidden canon," as we had named it, of Spring Creek.

It was from twelve to twenty feet in width, a huge split between two masses of rock. It must have been nearly one hundred feet to the bottom, and a small stream leaped and tumbled through the boulder-filled channel.

So narrow was the cleft where I lay that an active man could have leaped it at a running jump. On the opposite side was a mass of rocks rounding off to the left, and below this a rough, narrow slope along the rim of the notch.

"A poor place to look for deer," was my thought, and there was little likelihood of my hunting companions finding me soon, unless I could send my shouts to their ears. But as yet I had no voice for shouting.

At the end of half an hour the paralysis of my nerves had partially abated, and I succeeded in rolling over and gaining a reclining posture against the ledge. In so doing, I discovered that my right shoulder was dislocated, and that probably two of my ribs were cracked. I found that I was upon a shelf of rock some thirty feet in length, and not more than seven or eight in width.

Still nothing seemed to matter greatly, and when presently a gust of wind whirled by and great feathery flakes began dropping spirally into the notch, I felt a lethargic sense of indifference.

From this hazy condition I was roused by seeing a great reddish-yellow beast come out of a cleft in the rocks just across the narrow canon. It was a "mountain lion" of great size, and it paused upon the slope with uplifted head and pricked ears, apparently listening and looking away toward the higher ground.

Now, for the first time since I had fallen, I felt a thrill of fear. If the big cat were hungry, how easily it might leap the gully and devour me where I lay! Most feverently I hoped the creature might trot away beyond the rocks.

But the lion turned its head and seemed to be looking directly at me. It walked deliberately down to the edge of the cleft, and for an instant I thought my time had come.

Still the animal showed no sign of having seen me. On the contrary, it turned immediately to one side, and began trotting back and forth in front of its lair. It travelled over a beat of some forty yards or more, wheeling with precision at the same point in each turn, and going over its path each time with precisely the same movement—a shuffling, gliding trot. It thus passed and repassed within ten or twelve yards of where I lay. And now, with awakened faculties, I discovered that this big male lion was blind. Instead of the yellow-green balls with cruel slits there were two prominent grayish-white disks under its half-closed lids.

It was a blind cougar out for exercise. Surely, with the notch between us, there could be little danger from this unfortunate beast! Fascinated, curious, and forgetting my helpless condition, I watched the lithe, powerful, enormous cat promenading his beat—a path which he had doubtless trodden many thousand times. Just so many steps in one direction, just so many back over the same line. At one point he avoided a projecting boulder; at another passed round a broken cedar sapling. He swung himself back and forth with the regularity of a pendulum stroke.

Here, despite his infirmity, was no caged, hampered and rod-beaten creature of the menagerie. By some means, the blind lion had been well kept. His red-yellow coat was sleek and handsome, and his great muscles moved and glided over each other like well-oiled parts of perfect machinery. He dropped his lower jaw now and then, and once gave a mighty yawn, displaying rows of fangs which might have rent the skin of an alligator. Once only he halted upon the stone in a horribly suggestive fashion. I rejoiced, indeed, that he was blind. And so I lay watching, while the big panther glided back and forth and the whirling snowflakes slipped off his glossy coat and padded the path for his feet.

And now again the wind whirled by in eddying gusts, flinging snowflakes and dry leaves across the notch; and out of a cross current nearly in front of his lair the lion caught my scent!

Instantly the gliding, graceful figure was transformed, and a fierce, snarling beast reared upon its hind feet, snuffing in eager anxiety to find the prey. The lion whirled about several times, then made a leap to the right, then directly toward me. Then he lost the scent and crouched, his red muzzle quivering, his ears twitching curiously, while his tail whipped to and fro.

Now he rose again and moved, sniffing cautiously along the rim of the gully. He seemed to reason that the scented creature must have shifted its position. Again his nose took wind of me, and crouching, he sniffed down at the gaping cut as if to make sure of the direction. Then, as his ears were laid flat, and his yellow talons were unsheathed to take firm grip upon the rock, I gave myself up for lost.

With his snarls menacing me and growling louder and louder, I knew the creature was certain of his ground. He had not been blind always, and he had leaped many times upon the shelf where I lay. Horror-stricken, I watched him gather himself, and then vault in a sweeping curve above the chasm and alight upon the rocks within four or five steps of where I lay.

I expected instant death. My nerves were suddenly racked with cutting pains, which ran through my chest until I gasped for breath. And yet the snarling, sniffing lion did not spring upon me. He had jumped to windward of me, and the air currents no longer carried the scent. He reared again upon his hind feet, snuffing anxiously. Then to my joy his bristles lowered, his savage espect changed to one of distrust, and he turned and leaped back across the cut.

He stood upon the brink for a moment in a listening attitude of suspicion, and then, trotting away, disappeared with his lair.

It was now snowing very fast, and in the next few minutes, relieved of intense reacting pains, I did some hard thinking. I dared not shout to attract the attention of my fellow-hunters, and I was in momentary fear of a reappearance of the puma, or, worse yet, of its mate.

The weather was warm, hardly at the freezing point, and I was warmly clothed. I might, I concluded, survive twenty-four hours and longer if let alone by the lions, and long before that time Curtis and Pete would be scouring the hills for me. Camp was not more than two miles distant. I decided to lie quiet in the snow until I should hear some sound of searching.

Within half an hour the wisdom of this course was made apparent. Then I saw, coming down out of the storm upon the far slope, two more red-yellow beasts, which soon proved to be the blind lion's mate and her well-grown cub.

I shrank in fear under my covering of snow. Some taint of my presence there was yet in the notch, for both the lions paused, at twenty steps or so, and snarled angrily, with bristling backs and nervous twitching of their tails.

For a moment the two seemed to be glaring straight at me, and I closed my eyes in fearful suspense. I waited, hardly breathing for some seconds; then, hearing no more of the cougars, I looked again, to find that they had passed on and gone into their lair. It was but a moment, however, before they reappeared; and this time the blind male was with them. The three passed together up the ridge beyond. There had been a kill somewhere, and the blind lion's mate and cub had come dutifully to conduct him to the feast.

Under safer circumstances, I should have felt the keenest interest in this evidence of family devotion among fierce beasts, and, with perfect opportunity, I should have hesitated to kill either the dam or her cub. As it was, I was to witness something very like a tragedy.

The lions had been gone a half-hour, perhaps, when I heard the booming crack, crack of a rifle just over the rock ridge in front of me. I answered the shots with a hallo as lusty as I could give, and hitched myself to a more conspicuous posture against the ledge. I shouted again and again, a rather feeble wail, but loud enough to be heard at a considerable distance.

Then, as if by magic, I was confronted by the three lions, which had slid down an inward curve of the rock ledge upon my left. They came on in great bounds to within fifteen or twenty yards of my perch. There catching sight of me, the two foremost came to a halt, and united their voices in menace. It was easy to be seen that something exciting and unusual had happened to the puma family. The blind one, apparently cowed by his helplessness, slunk to his cavern, muttering hoarsely as he ran. Despite their savage demonstrations, the dam and her cub did not attack.

Some new fear seemed to possess them. They whirled about repeatedly, to guard against surprises. They flung themselves upon the snow, and lashed their tails excitedly.

I understood that some one—Curtis or Pete, doubtless—had been shooting at them. Perhaps for the first time they had heard the thunder of a gun and the hissing whine of bullets.

Then a rifle cracked again, this time close at hand, and I saw the cougar dam flatten out upon the snow with a bullet through her brain. The cub bounced about wildly, spitting and hissing, until two or three more shots were fired, when it, too, dropped in its tracks, dead. Looking in the direction of the firing, I saw our Indian, Pete, searching for a way to descend the ledge.

While Pete was hunting for a path, the blind lion ran out of his lair, which he must have considered unsafe against the new foe. The beast showed intense excitement. He stopped over the bodies of his dead mate and cub and sniffed at them in apparent great anxiety. Then his tail drooped and his hair shrank upon his skin. A great fear seized him. Suddenly he uttered a strange, whining lament, sprang toward the canon cleft and leaped into its abyss.

Was it a case of suicide? It has always seemed so to me, and yet, in his sudden sense of loss, in his great fear and excitement, the creature may have had no other aim than mad flight, and may have gone to his death quite by accident.

I was as much overjoyed as Pete was astonished at our meeting. Before noon the Indian had hung up a deer on the ridge, and when he returned to get the meat he found three lions had torn down the carcass. He fired and missed, and as the lions ran he had followed, shooting at them as long as they were in sight.

By making a strenuous effort I found that I could stand on my feet, but I was not released from my shelf until the Indian procured an axe and bridged the gulch with poles.—Youth's Companion.

SHEDS HIS SKIN.

A Man Who Has This Peculiarity of a Snake.

A man who sheds his skin in its entirety once a year, and who has done so regularly for the last forty-three years, is one of the curiosities that Butte, Mont., boasts of. The man—J. M. Price, a fairly well educated miner—is at the present time engaged in the curious pastime of skinning himself. The methods that he adopts is to first skin his hands and face and then strip it in an immense sheet from his body.

The process of skinning his hands and face was completed August 6, and it came from the face like a mask. The skin from the hands resembled a pair of gloves and was exhibited on the streets. The toughness is something remarkable, and two men tried with might and main to tear it. They were not successful, although the skin is not thicker than the leather of a man's street glove. Price talks freely about the matter, although he is rather tender about any publication in the newspapers. Many physicians have examined him during period of the skinning, but not one has been able to solve the problem. In speaking of the matter, Mr. Price said:

"My mother told me that she first noticed the trouble when I was about six months old, and regularly every year since then I have shed my skin. It is a phenomenon that no physician has yet satisfactorily explained, although hundreds have made examinations and investigations. The fact is, that I shed my skin, and that is all there is to it. Regularly on the twenty-fourth day of July of each year I feel the premonitory symptoms, and on very few occasions has it missed the 24th of that month. The first thing I feel is nausea, and then I know that I am in for it. The skin becomes perfectly dead, and the perspiration that should come through forms in blisters under it, and the whole thing becomes loose. I generally cut a circle around my wrists, and with the aid of a lead pencil strip it off whole for the purpose of preserving it in the shape of a glove. I take it off from my face in the same manner, but am compelled to remove it from my hair like dandruff. I took a long walk this morning for the purpose of getting up a perspiration, and, as you see, my whole body is blistered. I will strip it off to-day or to-morrow. It comes off in great strips, as you can see by this photograph, which was taken last year. There is no particular pain accompanying the operation, although the new skin is very soft and tender during the first week or ten days. I have to lay off for about two weeks each year to attend to it. My children do not inherit the disease from me. There is one of them, and she is nine years of age, and there has been nothing of the kind ever noticed with her. Several years ago I was in San Francisco when I shed my skin, and the doctors there preserved it in its entirety and then stuffed it. I am a miner, but my work in the mines does not affect my condition in any way that I can see. My general health is good, even if I do have skin to throw at the birds.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"Gall of the Earth."

The faculty of the Chattanooga Medical College is now making experiments with the weed known as "Gall of the Earth," with which a mountaineer recently cured himself of a mad dog bite, and by which he cured others suffering from snake bites. It is sometimes known as the "rattlesnake's master." The weed is now being transplanted for cultivation and experiment. It bears a small white flower. The Horticultural Department of Clemson College, Charleston, S. C., is also experimenting with it.

Dr. Braubacher has made a series of investigations, which showed that 72.5 per cent. of dyspeptics examined had unsound teeth.

SCHREIBER STOLE A FORTUNE.

Elizabethport Bank Clerk Squandered $40,000 to Please a Woman.

Elizabethport, N. J., furnishes a startling case of a young man who, fascinated by the glamour of the wild life in which women, wine and horses are the principal features, stole from his employers to meet the expenses of his fast living. William Schreiber, a bank clerk, became a fugitive from justice, his aged mother was placed at death's door as a result of the shock, and the directors of the bank where he was employed must make good the amount he stole—$100,000. A reward of $5,000 was offered for his capture.

Schreiber is 24 years old and entered the Elizabethport Bank a few years ago. His attentiveness to his duties speedily gained him a good position. About two years ago he began to affect the airs of a man about town and was known as a good fellow. The bank directors suspected nothing, however, until he failed to return from his summer vacation and investigation showed the enormous extent of his defalcation. The detectives discovered the facts which constitute a remarkable story.

Much of Schreiber's stolen money went to the support of Mrs. Anna Hart, a belle of the New York Tenderloin. It is estimated that over $40,000 was spent for jewelry, horses and carriages, dresses, etc., for this woman. She first met young Schreiber two years ago, and she has ever since, in the language of her class, "played him for a sucker." The young man became infatuated with her, and spent thousands of dollars. There was high flying, winning and dining, theaters for the woman and all her friends, horses and carriages and clothes and diamonds. Mrs. Hart introduced her Willie to all her set. His money put her on the top wave in the Tenderloin. Joe Vendig was one of her friends. She made the bookkeeper and the bookmaker acquainted. It was a fine thing, the young Jerseyman who had worked for $900 a year in Elizabethport thought, to know this friend and patron whose name was constantly in the newspapers, who knew all the prize fighters and gamblers in New York. "Circular Joe" was good to the boy who had both money and sporting blood. They went around to the prize fights together. They bet on them together, and according to Joe they made money. They "bunched their bets," the youngster following the veteran's tips. Altogether, according to Vendig, they profited more than $7,000 apiece. But Schreiber's share did not do him much good. He spent it on the woman who was leading him about by the nose and showing him high life in the Tenderloin.

While she was showing him life in the Tenderloin, he was doing his best to show her a little high life outside of it. Last fall he sent her down to the Lakewood Hotel, where her gowns and her jewels were just as resplendent as any that the swellest of the swell could sport. Later nothing would do for the high-flying woman but she must needs go to the Paris Exposition. It cost her ardent Jersey financier a pang to have her go while he must stay to steal the wherewithal to pay for the trip, but he did not deny her. She went and he remained. About the first of August she returned, gorgeous beyond compare with new Paris raiment. She went through the Tenderloin with a splurge that rent the heart of every jealous rival.

When Schreiber disappeared an attachment was placed on all her goods and the bank directors hope to recover from her some of the stolen property. She says that Schreiber never gave her more than a gold ring and a poodle and says she will fight for her property.

HOW WEAK CHILDREN ARE MADE STRONG, VIGOROUS AND WELL

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hallows, of Peckham St., Globe Village, Fall River, Mass., have cause to thank Dr. Greene's Nervura for restoring to health, and probably preserving the life of their little son. Almost from infancy Everett Hallows was troubled with indigestion and nervous troubles, and nothing seemed to help him. Finally Dr. Greene's Nervura was recommended and tried with success. A few bottles were sufficient to effect a cure, and to-day the little one is enjoying the best of health. By the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura the sickly child was transformed into a happy, hearty, robust boy.

Dr. Greene's Nervura for the Blood and Nerves

Thousands of other children can thank Dr. Greene and his wonderful remedy for the strength and health they enj . . Children to whom it is given have less sickness, better health, better growth, and longer and more vigorous lives. Parents should realize that it is their duty to give it to every child who is not in perfect health. There are no diseases more dreaded by parents than fits, epilepsy, and St. Vitus' dance. Yet no child would be troubled by them if Dr. Greene's Nervura were given when the first symptoms appear.

Charles L. McBay, a highly esteemed police officer, who resides at 14 Myrtle St., New Bedford, Mass., says:

"About two years ago my little daughter became run down in health and suffered from St. Vitus' dance. Soon after she was prostrated by rheumatism, which severely affected her low limbs.

"After trying various remedies without obtaining relief, she began taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and experienced immediate benefit. She continued its use, and after taking five bottles her rheumatism was practically cured. Her appetite returned, her pains disappeared, she was again able to walk without lameness, her general health was restored, and she was able to attend school and to play like other children."

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the prescription and discovery of the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th Street, New York City, who is the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic complaints, and he can be consulted in any case, free of charge, personally or by letter.

It Happened in a Drugstore.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and ask for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandon, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know to what cough preperation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale by H. B. McCord, —An overall factory wanted $5,000 cash, free rent and exemption from city taxes for ten years to locate at Franklin. The proposition was turned down.

From an Old Soldier.

KNOX, Ind., Jan, 14, 1899.

Gents:—I have every confidence in recommending your Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. I am 72 years of age and am broken down, the trouble having been brought on by my experience in the war. Your medicine has done me more good than a hundred doctors and I am just about well of my stomach troubles.

Yours truly, JEFFERSON WILHELM.

—Little Willie—"Paw, is ma a microbe?" Mr. Henpeck—"Why, no, Willie. What makes you ask such a question?', Little Willie—'Well, the teacher told us that baldness was caused by a microbe."—Baltimore American.

Good Advice.

When that distressing pain seems to grab you by the back of the head and neck and your eyes seem fixed on a given point straight ahead, do not make yourself sick by taking Drastic Cathartics, but take a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It relieves the pressure on the nerve centers of the brain and aids digestion by curing constipation permanently. In 10c, 50c and $1 sizes at H. B. McCord's.

—The local editor has had a peep at McClellan's new fall and winter styles just received from The Royal Taylors, of Chicago. The line is a most prolific one, and to see it at high-tide is to make Hope throw its blissful glamour over the grave of dead desires. The variety of exquisite fabrics and the low prices at which The Royal Tailors make them up simplify the usual baffling effect of limited recources when talking to the average tailor. "I can't afford it" is a phrase which The Royals have relegated to the depths of "innocuous desuetude." It isn't a question of price, but simply a question of whether you want to dress well or not. McClellan hit it when he got in with The Royal Tailors.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says; "I was taken with Typhoid Fever, that ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of Consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave me great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvelous medicine is the surest and quickest cure for all Throat and Lung Trouble. Regular size 50 cents and $1. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store! every bottle guaranteed.

The B. & O. Bridge.

The new bridge the B. & O. is building across Cedar Creek below the city is a big affair. The old wooden bridge is a high one, but the new structure will be higher, enabling the road to be raised at that point and in that way reduce the grade. Then by lowering the track on the rise at the east, it will greatly improve the grades in that section. The abutments are of stone, large blocks of sandstone being used. These will be about twenty feet high besides being several feet below the ground. They are large enough to accommodate the two tracks now being prepared. In the middle of the stream a crib has been sunk and in this will be erected a middle pier for the greater strength of the bridge. The bridge itself will be of the usual style of steel truss bridges used by the B. & O.

No Right To Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, skin eruptions and wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate the stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming, woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at H. B. McCord's Drug Store.

Worse Than Fat.

At Roann, Wabash county, Frank Smith, a prominent mill owner, aged fifty-three, is dying from the use of remedies for obesity. Mr. Smith, two ears ago it is said, weighed 350 pounds, and on the advice of a friend, he began anti-fat treatment. He lost flesh rapidly, but impaired his constitution, ulceration of the stomach and liver and an Indianapolis specialist who was called in Saturday, said that Smith's death was only a matter of a short time.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

—When you cannot sleep for coughing, it is hardly neccessary that any one should tell you that you need a few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to allay the irritation of the throat and make sleep possible. It is good. Try it. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—The wise man makes hay while the sun shines, but the fool sows wild oats by gas light.

—"For three days and nights I suffered untold agony from an attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating cucumbers," says M. E. Lowther, clerk of the district court, Centerville, Iowa. "I thought I should surely die, and tried a dozen different medicines but all to no purpose. I sent for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and three doses relieved me entirely." This remedy is for sale by H. B. McCord.

To Stop a Cold.

After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on, take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to stop a cold if taken in time. H. B. McCord.

Will Vote Twice.

Arnold Green, a democrat of Cleveland, Ohio, will attempt a striking international voting performance next week. Although he has lived in Cleveland thirty three years, Mr. Green was born in Prince Edward county, near Picton, Ont., and holds some property there. Under the Canadian law it is held that in view of his ownership of property his American citizenship does not deprive Mr. Green of his right to vote at his old home. His mother lives at Picton and has taken a deep interest in the parliamentary election of next Wednesday. She insists her son shall come there and vote. So Green will vote as early as possible Tuesday for Bryan and at once start for Canada to vote there for his mother's parliamentary idol the following day.

Court House Pickups.

Mrs. Futter is going to try and fix up matters with her husband who is now serving a sentence for beating her. She will be here tomorrow and if matters can be fixed up he may secure a release. It appears that his mother is the cause of much of the trouble.

Mrs. Diltz, the head of that sweet scented establishment that has got into court, is boarding at the county hotel. One thing in her favor is, she is willing to do something and informs Mrs. Hathaway that she will help to do any kind of work needed.

The fun comes in when we consider the man Miller and his flame, Mrs. Workings. They are now in jail all right, he for a fine of $45 and ten days in jail, she for a fine of $10 and two days in jail. Both prefer to "work" out the fine. That means a stay of some time. So Mrs. Workings, careful body that she is, brought her little dray over when they came over here They had been out on bail, but last night 'phoned over to know how they would get their belongings over here when they came. Mrs Hathaway, not thinking they were going to bring their household goods, told them a dray was the thing to move with. She was surprised this morning when the dray came bringing Mrs. Workings' center table, stool, a lot of fine house plants and a good sized trunk with clothing, etc. It looks as if she thinks she is thinks she is going to play lady. She expected to be one of the family and was considerably taken aback when Mrs. Hathaway gave her to understand she would not occupy the parlor. She was taken to the room for women prisoners. We don't know what she will do with the center table. And alack and alas! for her dreams of happiness in the most ornate brick building in DeKalb county.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met Saturday with Mrs. Emanuel. There was a good attendance and the lesson conducted by Mrs. Mabel Hodge was very interesting, and the members took part in the discussion with much earnestness. "Sacrifices of Jean Valgean" was told by Miss Hague; "Enoch Arden" by Miss Buckley. These stories were told to illustrate the principal thought of the lesson "Heriosm." The members took a lively part in the discussion that followed.

Mrs. Nettie Eckhart gave a brief, but bright paper on "Egotism, a Root of Evil." The members of the club were pleased to have with them as visitors, Mrs. E. T. DeLapp of this city and her friend, Mrs. Kemp, of Tecumseh, Mich., Mrs. Kemp being a club woman, was invited to address the club, which she did in a few words, expressing her pleasure in being invited to meet with the club, and commending the work of the afternoon. The club then adjourned to meet with Mrs. Emanuel next Friday evening to enjoy a social evening with the following program: Music, Miss Edna Davis "My Trip Abroad" by Rev. T. M. Guild, Music, Mrs. Maud Robbins. The next regular session of the club will meet with Mrs. Willis Nov. 10.

Henry Smith Dead.

Mrs. D. Y. Husselman received a message yesterday afternoon that her father, Henry Smith, at the old home near Hamilton, in Franklin township, was lying at the point of death. To-day came word that he died that day, and the funeral will be to-morrow, Nov. 2, at 2 p. m. Mrs. Husselman left this evening over the Wabash to attend the funeral.

Mr. Smith was one of the best known and most highly regarded of our early pioneers, and his death marks the departure of another of those determined men whose industry subdued the wilderness of DeKalb county.

Attention Farmers.

Our Saturday Evenings.

IV

Mr. Guild, Frank Eckhart and Frank Zimmerman saw the great Passion Play at Oberammergau, in Bavaria last summer. It is one of the unique things of the world. There is nothing anywhere else like it.

But there is a tendency to bring out something of that sort in this country.

Last summer some of the relatives of the poet, Longfellow, visited the Indians in the country where were laid the scenes of his famous poem, Hiawatha. In honor of Longfellow's relatives, the Ojibway Indians got up in the form of a play, a part of the scenes of the poem.

It is now proposed by the Ojibways to present this every year. It will be dramatized by T. C Armstrong of Montreal, and the scenes will be painted by Francis West of Boston, both of whom have been a great deal with the Indians and have made them special study.

Among Mr. Armstrong's intimate acquaintances are Kabaosa, grandson, and Wabanosa, great-grandson, of Shingwauk, the Ojibway chief, who before his death told the legends which make up the story of Hiawatha to Schoolcraft, who married one of the chief's daughters, and from whom Longfellow obtained them. Seventy-five members of this band were in the cast. The initial performances were in the open air at Kennington Point, Desbarats Dock, on the north shore of Lake Huron, twenty-eight miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

On Monday, Aug. 6, the Hiawatha representations began in a natural amphitheater on the mainland overlooking the hundred Desbarats Islands. The only canopy under the blue sky for the players was the shade of a red pine tree.

SCENES FROM THE PLAY.

The first scene is the meeting of the warriors of all nations at the signal of Gitchie Manitou, or Great Spirit. A large smoke is seen arising to the heavens. This signal is repeated from hilltop to hilltop The braves assemble in all their war paint and with menacing looks, which disappear gradually as they are induced to join in a universal war dance. After this they are addressed by Gitchie Manitou, who pleads for universal peace and amity with such power that the braves throw down their arms and garments of deerskin and plunge into the lake to wash off their war paint. Then re-assemble and sitting in a large circle, they smoke the pipe of peace and return to their homes to tell of the dawn of peace. It is a striking scene, full of action and color.

In the second scene the boy Hiawatha is being educated by Nokomis. His arrow-shooting in this scene is very effective, and the plaudits of the warriors and the dances in honor of the young Hiawatha are most entertaining.

In the third scene Hiawatha, grown to manhood, makes his first trip to the Rockies. Meeting Minnehaha, he falls in love with her, and on his return tells the warriors of his adventure. An illustration of this scene is one of many photographs taken.

Then follow intensely interesting picture-writing by Hiawatha on birch bark, skins, etc. Some most instructtive information is given in this scene, which is followed by Hiawatha's second journey and the winning of Minnehaha. Most realistic is the living picture at the door of the old arrow maker's tent when Hiawatha prevents himself for a second time and Minnehaha brings him refreshments—"water in bowls of basswood," etc. The dances at the wedding feast are the much the most correct and thoroughly Indian yet presented.

They consist of the wedding dance, when a picturesque old squaw with a tomahawk guards a bevy of Indian maidens from the ambitious warriors who seek to steal them from her. In spite of her vigilant care and ready blows they are stolen away one after another; all to the time of the Indian war drum chant.

The Stevenson Day.

Yesterday's turnout for the democratic rally was alarge and enthusiastic one. Bands and delegations came from different directions and met in town, consolidated and marched through the streets as one body. Mr. Stevenson was in the first carriage and was greeted heartily at all points. There were numerous bands and quite a number of large wagons filled with enthusiastic people. But the finest part of the parade was the great number of horses, many of them being very fine ones There must have been several hundred of these. The crowd was generally estimated at 10,000. Mr. Stevenson spoke at 1:30 p. m. but was very hoarse and could be heard only at a short distance. Those who could hear him were well pleased with his speech.

There were three others who spoke besides Mr. Stevenson. Gen. Blair opened with a short speech and Mr. Stevenson was followed by Hon. John Welty of Canton, Ohio. and Judge Robinson, who was to speak in the evening, made a short, closing speech.

Mr. Stevenson took the afternoon train to Fort Wayne where he spoke in the evening. The crowd that remained that in Auburn were vanously entertained till evening.

In the evening there was a sort of partnership arrangement with Garrett, where the republicans had a rally. A train came over from Garrett, and up to the Lake Shore station, bringing nearly 400 democrats to Auburn, and taking back a load of nearly 300 republicans to Garrett. After the Garrett rally was over, the same special brought the Auburn people home and took the Garrett people back, The big procession came down town and there was some marching, but it was not as fine a parade as the day time, as so many horses had gone home. The opera house was not able to hold but a small part of the crowd. Altogether, the rally was the nearest like old times of any this year.

Hallowe'en Tragedy.

A dispatch from Rochester, N. Y., yesterday says:

The authorities of Allegany county are looking for persons who manufactured a skeleton out of bones of domestic animals, which frightened Mary Oldfield of Karrdale to death last night. Miss Oldfield, accompanied by two friends, was returning from a Hallowe'en party, where they had listened to grewsome stories until their hair stood on end.

When about to enter the woods a rattling of bones was heard overhead and looking up the trio were overcome with horror to see a skeleton of gigantic proportions sweeping down on them from above. With a cry of terror Mary dropped dead in her tracks. A searching party found a wire leading from the ground to a tree top to which the skeleton was attached by a pulley.

It's Easy To Take

Thin, pale, anæmic girls need a fatty food to enrich their blood, give color to their cheeks and restore their health and strength. It is safe to say that they nearly all reject fat with their food.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

is exactly what they require; it not only gives them the important element (cod-liver oil) in a palatable and easily digested form, but also the hypophosphites which are so valuable in nervous disorders that usually accompany anæmia.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is a fatty food that is more easily digested than any other form of fat. A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health. You can get it in this way.

We have known persons to gain a pound a day while taking it.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.

"1847 Rogers Bros"

"Silver Plate That Wears"

SPOONS, FORKS, KNIVES, Etc.

have been made for over fifty years, steadily gaining in character of designs, finish and general popularity, but best of all, the good old "Rogers" quality has been maintained. It would be hard indeed to improve upon the wearing qualities first exhibited by this brand, and which have made "1847 Rogers Bros." the most famous of all silverware. Do not experiment by trying something that has not stood the test of time. Buy "1847" goods, which have a well-known and well-earned reputation, and you run no risk. There are other "Rogers." The original and genuine has the prefix—"1847."

Sold by leading dealers everywhere. Send to the makers for catalogue No. 90 containing newest designs.

Their Guest Day.

Last evening was "guest day" for the Ladies' Literary Club, and they assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Emanuel. Their spacious rooms, always attractive, were made more so for this occasion. In this case the guests were to be the husbands of the members, but not all these could attend as political duties took them elsewhere. But those who did attend were treated to something better than politics. It was a talk by Rev. T. M. Guild about his recent journey in Europe, and some sweet music.

Mr. Guild went rapidly through the most salient points of his trip in an informal way, his object being to bring up fresh information and let his hearers, as far as possible, see a part of what he had seen. It was all very interesting and much of it new to the audience. It was interspersed with entertaining incidents that had occurred in their varied experiences. D. Swarts, another of the Auburn pilgrims, was an interesting listener and at the close there was a short exchange of experiences between the two. The ladies also had many questions to ask which Mr. Guild answered to their edication.

Mrs. E. L. Robbins gave one of her sweetest solos and then there was a lovely supper in courses. Their suppers and lunches are always enjoyable

This may be given as one of the lesser reasons why the fortunate husbands are so proud of being brothers-in-law. The COURIER on behalf of the husbands thanks the ladies and the host and hostess for a pleasant and profitable evening.

Collins-Maxwell.

Last evening at the home of the bride,s sister, Mrs. James Baxter, occurred the wedding of Mins Maxwell Mr. and William Collins both of Auburn. The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by the Rev. Guild in the presence of twenty-five guests, relatives and near friends, after which an elegant repast was served. The bride was very becomingly gowned in cream cashmere with cream satin trimmings, and carried carnations and roses. The groom wore the conventional black. The decorations were very fine and the arch under which the ceremony was performed was of evergreen, carnations and roses, with a background of palms and ferns. The wedding march was beautifully rendered by Miss Maud Trover.

The young people are both popular in Auburn and received some beautiful and useful presents. They left for Fort Wayne this afternoon to be the guests of the groom's people a few days, after which they will be at home to their many friends in their neatly furnished home on Fourth street. The COURIER extends congratulations.

B. F. Kennedy.

Frank Kennedy, whose home has been Waterloo ever since before the war died there Thursday and will be buried at 3 p m. today. Mr. Kennedy was a printer and at one time a partner of C. K. Baxter in the Waterloo Press. But having lost his health in the service, he retired about 187 1 and since then has been in poor health. This finally affected his mind, and on Monday of this week, his friends had E. P. Dickinson appointed guardian in order to secure proper care for his property. But he continued to grow rapidly worse, and died as stated. A number of friends went up to attend the funeral, among them being Mrs. Swineford, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Geo. Schaab Mrs. Barns, Mrs. Ehlers, and Mrs. Shil.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

RUM DID IT.

The other day a notorious drunkard and one whom it was known that whisky converted into a raving maniac, went forth from a licensed saloon and began to run amuck in the street. The sheriff hearing the alarm hastened with a posse to arrest the madman. But he was armed as well as drunk, and shot the sheriff, who died in a few minutes. The murderer was lodged in jail. But the people were so excited that they threatened to lynch him. Yet no one thought of lynching the man who made him mad. He stood all the while in the door of his saloon and looked upon the tragic scene as a mere spectator. He did not seem to realize, nor did his fellowcitizens, that in the sight of God he was the real murderer. When the man who fired the fatal shot became sober, he said: "The sheriff was a good friend of mine. I am sorry that I shot him. I would not have done it under any provocation if I had not been drunk. The whisky is to blame." He should have said the whisky seller. When we make the saloon men responsible for the poverty and crime that result from their business, we will secure practical prohibition.—Herald and Presbyter.

One step farther back if you please! The rum seller is carrying on his business by the sanction and even the protection of the United States government. We, the people, have given the 250,000 licensed rumsellers in this country the authority to rob men of money, manhood, position, character and eternal life, if they will give us a stipulated sum of money each year for the privilege of doing this damnation work.

The saloon must go,
Though the devil shouts no!
While viewing the heartaches, the ruin and woe,
The brewer and blender,
In spite of their splendor,
Must shoulder; though for it they heaven forego.
The saloon must go!
Though the devil shouts no!
Awake! Face the foe!
Fan the embers aglow,
That still in the conscience are slumbering low.
While victims are weeping
Can Christians lie sleeping,
For God and His cause strike the death dealing blow.
The saloon must go!
For God's word says so.

—JOHN MCMASTER, in Ram's Horn.

In is encouraging to notice the increase of moral courage in the pulpit on the temperance question. This has been apparent since the agitation over the canteen in the army commenced. Congress by the attolcey general has aroused even preachers who were afraid to denounce the liquor traffic in their pulpits.

Stevenson Tickled.

Little Sydney Farmer sought and obtained an introduction to Mr. Stevenson at the Swineford yesterday, when the great and famous man grasped her little hand in both his, and said in polite earnestness, "My dear little girl, I esteem this call from you, an honor." The little girl fairly lost her usual self-pose, blushed, stood a little uneasily as he held her hand, then looking into his face said shyly, "I have been dying for a month to see you." And the dignified man, who had for four years held the gavel over the most dignified legislative body in the world, unbent and laughed like a school boy. And the little girl went away, demure, but happy.

An Important Record of the Week As Told by the Telegraph—Latest from Foreign Shores—Crimes, Casualties, Fires, Etc.

Debts of The Castellanes.

Paris special: Further details regarding the appointment of George J. Gould as trustee for his sister, the Countess of Castellane, show the indebtedness of Count Boni and his wife to be about 23,500,000 francs. Of this sum there was expended on real estate in connection with the charity bazaar and their private home on the Avenue Malakoff 3,792,000 france; mortgages 6,585,260 francs; loans, notes and tradesmen's bills 4,293,155 francs and on art and bric-a-brac dealers 9,100,000. Mr. Wertheimer, who is one of the art dealers interested, claims goods were bought, taken back and then resold, to the amount of 8,000,000 francs, and that in these transactions there now remains due him the sum of 2,000,000 francs.

Rockhill is Councilor.

Secretary Hay has cabled Commissioner Rockhill an appointment as councillor of the American legation at Pekin. He has been directed to proceed at once from Shanghai to Pekin to assist Minister Conger in that capacity in the negotiations for a final settlement. The purpose to appoint Commissioner Rockhill and General Wilson fellow commissioners with Minister Conger to conduct the negotiations was abandoned only because it appeared that no other power was to appoint commissioners.

At Sea in Small Boat.

Rouen special: The British tank steamer Oranje Prince, Captain Richardson, which arrived at this port Oct. 29, from Marcus Hook, reports having picked up, Oct. 12, two men named Patrick Roche and William Brown, in a small boat belonging to the American schooner Marshall L. Adams of Provincetown, Mass. They had become separated from their vessel during a fog and had been four days in the small boat when rescued, having drifted eighty-five miles to the southward.

A Society Lady Indicted.

Van Wert Special: Mrs. Emma Van Liew was indicted for murder in the first degree and was immediately arrested and committed to jail. Mrs. Van Liew threw vitrol in the face of Miss Alice Hammil, the later dying of her injuries after five weeks of terrible agony. Jealousy was the cause of the crime. Mrs. Van Liew had been prominent in society.

Anthracite Coal Goes Up.

It is announced that prices of anthracite coal have been advanced fifty cents a ton over the nominal price of the July circular by the anthracite mining and carrying companies. The change covers the whole country, beginning immediately.

Ferrell To Die.

Marysville (O.) special: The jury has returned a verdict of murder in the first degree, without recommendation, against Rosslyn Ferrell, the train robber, charged with the murder of Express Messenger Lane. The verdict carries with it the death sentence.

These Go to Work.

The Corbin colliery, operated by Andrew Robertson & Co., between Shamokin and Mount Carmel, Pa., resumed work, 500 men and boys being granted the 10 per cent. increase. The Excelsior colliery, also owned by the same firm, will resume with 600 employes.

Fatal Wreck.

The limited train on the St. Paul and Duluth road ran into an open switch near Heckley, Minn., and the engine and two cars were derailed. Brakeman William Rapp of St. Paul, was killed. It is reported that several persons were injured.

Shoes Cause a Murder.

William Jones was shot and killed by George Mitchell in a north side grocery at Columbus, Ohio. It was the result of a feud started six months ago over a pair of shoes. Mitchell was arrested.

The American Won.

T. F. Keane, the American runner, defeated E. C. Bredin, English, in a 350-yards race at Northampton, England, for a purse of £100. Keane, who had the best of the start, won by two yards. Time 38 3-5 seconds.

To Aid Red Cross Society.

The Russian government, for the second time within two months, has imposed a special tax for the benefit of the Red Cross Society. The first was a tax upon licenses to travel abroad, and now railway tickets are taxed 5 kopeks when the fare is 2 rubles or upward.

Trains Grind Body to Bits.

Pieces of the body of Mrs. Irev Bagstad were found over 100 yards from the railroad track at Grayville, S. D., where they had been scattered by three freight trains. Illness had temporarily unseated Mrs. Bagstad's mind, and while in this condition she escaped from her home.

FROM THE FOUR QUARTERS OF THE EARTH

TREASURE FOUND BY MARINES.

Bullion Valued at $376,300 Taken from Ruins of Burned Yamen.

The report of Brig. Gen. Heywood, commanding the United States Marine Corps, has been made public by the Navy Department. Its most interesting features are those covering the operations of the United States marines in China, including the heroic defense of the legations on Tien-tsin, which have been fully described heretofore. Gen. Heywood submits the following account of taking of a considerable amount of bullion in the siege of Pekin: "In a communication Col. Meade refers to the looting which had been going on in Tien-tsin. He stated that the treasury had been ransacked, but that all the vaults were not looted, and Maj. Waller with a force was searching for the treasure. The treasure, which consisted principally of silver bullion, fused with brick, mortar and other debris, was recovered from the ruins of the salt commissioner's yamen, which had been looted and burned before the marines arrived on the spot. The bullion was counted, estimated at $376,300, United States currency." Gen. Heywood says that the bullion was exchanged for three New York drafts, which have been forwarded by Paymaster Bryan of the navy to the Secretary of the Navy.

SAVED BY SISTER'S BRAVERY.

A Thirteen-Year-Old Girl Rescues Her Brothers from Burning House.

To the heroic efforts of Mary Dodds, 13 years old, is due the rescue of her brothers John and Norman, aged 9 and 3 years, respectively, from a shocking death at North Tonawanda, N. Y. During the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Dodds Mary and a younger sister, Jennie, went down into the cellar, leaving their two brothers asleep in the second story. The older of the two girls lighted a lamp at the foot of the cellar stairway and threw the match into a pile of rags. The rags became ignited and a blaze quickly sprang up. Mary found her escape by the stairway cut off. She rushed to a window in the front of the cellar and smashed it with both hands, then rushed into the burning house to rescue her brothers. Smashing a window in the front part of the house, she dragged the unconscious forms of her brothers to the opening and succeeded in getting them to the ground.

NEBRASKA MOB IS OUTWITTED.

Attempt to Lynch the Slayer of Rulo's Town Marshal Fails.

Town Marshal Wake of Rulo, Neb., was shot and instantly killed by a drunken man whom he had placed under arrest, and the lynching of the murderer was averted only by the outwitting of a mob by the authorities, who hurried him secretly away from the town. William Hunt was the man's name, and when Marshal Wake arrested him for drunkenness he resisted, and, pulling his revolver, shot the officer twice in the breast. He confessed to the crime and a determined mob quickly formed and advanced on the jail where Hunt was confined. The authorities received warning in time and hustled the man off to Falls City, the county seat.

Boxer Leaders Dead.

The Chinese minister in Washington has received a dispatch stating that Kang-Yi, one of the intense anti-foreign leaders, whose punishment was demanded by the powers, died of illness Oct. 18; also that Yu-Hsien, the late governor of Shansi, who is said to have been responsible for the death of many missionaries, has committed suicide by swallowing gold leaf.

Floods in England.

Violent gales, accompanied by snow and rain, have swept over parts of England, causing floods. The northern districts of the lowlands were flooded. At Newcastle, Hartlepool, Stockton, South Shields and elsewhere people have been compelled to seek refuge in the upper stories of their houses.

Finds W. M. Rice Was Poisoned.

Little by little the mystery which has surrounded the death of the aged millionaire, William Marsh Rice of New York, is being penetrated. Prof. Rudolph A. Witthaus positively declared that bichloride of mercury had been discovered in the stomach of the recluse in sufficient quantity to have caused his death.

Sues Three Cracker Concerns.

Attorney General Smyth filed suit in the District Court at Lincoln, Neb., against the Jones, Douglass & Co. Cracker Company of New Jersey and the American Biscuit Manufacturing Company of Illinois, charging them with having combined as a trust in restraint of trade.

Girls to Carry Telegrams.

The truant officer in Tacoma, Wash., has picked up so many of the boys of that city's district messenger companies that they are about to put on a force of girls from 16 to 17 years of age for the delivery of telegrams in the business sections.

Crushed to Death.

Robert Pinney was accidentally crushed to a mass which bore small resemblance to the body of a human being at the government dam on the Mississippi between Minneapolis and St. Paul. Drawn upon a drum by a cable, his life was squeezed out.

Scourge Killing Northwest Indians.

Advices from Omenica, B. C., say that scores of Indians are dying of a new scourge, similar to grip. Thirty-five members of one tribe of 100 died within two weeks. The scourge afflicts the males only.

Find Bogus Money in East.

The New York Produce Exchange Bank announced that it has detected a counterfeit of the new $5 silver certificate with the vignette of Red Jacket, the Indian chief. The counterfeit is described as a photographic process print.

Strikers and Troops Fight.

Strikers in the cotton mills at Valley Field, Que., and militia, called out to suppress rioting, clashed with fatal results. Eight soldiers and fifteen strikers were wounded, two soldiers and one striker probably fatally.

TO STAY IN CUBA UNTIL 1902.

Little Possibility of Withdrawal Before Eighteen Months.

American troops will probably remain in Cuba for at least a year and a half more. The convention which is to frame the Cuban constitution will meet soon. It is expected that the work of this body will not be concluded until several months have elapsed. This will carry it beyond the close of the session of Congress on March 4. The new Congress will not meet in regular session until December, 1901. President McKinley does not intend to take the responsibility of declaring the constitution of Cuba satisfactory and terminating the mission of the United States in the island. He will refer the whole question to Congress. It follows, therefore, that the final evacuation of Cuba cannot be expected before some time in 1902.

ROBBERS RAID OHIO TOWN.

Blow Open Safes and Shoot at Citizens of Roundhead.

Robbers raided the town of Roundhead, Ohio, early the other morning. A terrific explosion aroused the residents and citizens who appeared on the streets were shot at by robbers, who finally rode away toward Lima, firing as they went. The heaviest loss was at Mertz & May's store, where the safe was blown and $400 taken. Six hundred dollars in bank notes was blown out of the reach of the robbers by the explosion.

Ferrell Is Found Guilty.

At Marysville, Ohio, the jury in the trial of Charles Rosslyn Ferrell for the murder on the night of Aug. 10 of Charles Lane, an express messenger on a Panhandle passenger train, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree without recommendation. The verdict carries with it the death penalty.

Joy Made Her a Suicide.

Mrs. Hattie Spear, aged 38 years, committed suicide by shooting herself at Franklin, Pa. The previous day Mrs. Spear made the final payment on her house and lot. Joy at the consummation of her great purpose—paying for her home—is thought to have unbalanced her mind.

Sheriff Outwits Armed Mob.

A mob numbering 500 armed men congregated at the Brazil, Ind., fair grounds and planned to raid the county jail and lynch Samuel Harmon, who murdered young Charles Reynolds. Sheriff Klingler heard of the coming of the mob and spirited the prisoner away to the Vigo County jail.

Indiana Bank Is Robbed.

The bank of Seeds Bros. at Bridgeport, Ind., was robbed of over $1,000 in cash and many notes about 3 o'clock on a recent morning. Although the explosion aroused the citizens at the time, the robbers escaped.

Boll Weavil Destroys Cotton.

W. S. Robson, one of the most extensive cotton planters in Texas, has gathered statistics from the Brazos and Colorado valleys, and declares that the boll weavil has destroyed $6,000,000 worth of this year's cotton crop.

Kipling Home Is for Sale.

Rudyard Kipling has offered for sale, through a Boston real estate concern, his place at Brattleboro, Vt., the home of his wife's people, which he built and it was understood he intended to occupy permanently.

Death in a Cyclone.

A cyclone struck some farm buildings in Gypsum township, ten miles from Wichita, Kan. John S. Moor, a farmer, was killed and his brother seriously injured.

Street Car Smashup in Chicago.

Nine persons were severely injured and many others painfully bruised by the demolition of a State street cable car at State and Madison streets, the busiest corner in Chicago.

Trolley Car Is Smashed.

A cut of cars at the Hocking Valley crossing on West Broad street, Columbus, Ohio, crashed into a trolley car in the fog. Four persons on the car were severely injured.

Riotous Welcome for Soldiers.

In a mad orgy of welcome to London's returning City Imperial Volunteers from Africa ten persons were killed, 200 injured, and the clothing of many torn to rags.

Four Children Drowned.

Four children of William Stark were drowned near Platsu Bed, on Sandusky Bay, Ohio, in a boating accident.

LIGHT ON A MYSTERY.

Body of Missing Cripple Found Near Caledonia, Minn.

The mystery which surrounded the strange disappearance of Peter Sac Mary, a cripple, aged 28, living with his parents on a farm near Caledonia, Minn., has finally been solved. The body of the young man was found in a badly decomposed condition about a mile from the Sac Mary farm. Across the remains lay two saplings, showing that the man did not meet death by his own hand. Immediately on the discovery of the body the parents and three sons were arrested, charged with murder. Sac Mary disappeared one Sunday last May. He was a cripple, both feet having been frozen off. A search was instituted for him, but not the slightest trace of him could be found. The farm of his parents was carefully searched by the authorities, but without results. The parents told several conflicting stories.

TAKE COW UP TWO FLIGHTS.

Sensational Acts of Students of Mount Union College.

At midnight the other night 100 students of Mount Union College, Alliance, Ohio, robed in white and closely masked, obtained entrance to the ladies' hall by breaking in a window sash. President Riker's family cow, which had been captured, was then taken into the building and shoved and carried up two flights of stairs to the third story and securely tethered. Then, amid cheers and songs, the students made their way to the college, overpowered the watchman and overturned the stoves and piano and threw all movable furniture out of the windows. The family were then serenaded, after which the white-robed figures made their way downtown and ended up the night's demonstration with a war dance on the public square.

PUNISHED FOR CRUEL CRIME.

Dakota Farmer Gets Life Sentence for Murdering Aged Neighbor.

Lorenzo Stevens has been convicted of the murder of Samuel Livingston and sentenced to life imprisonment at Elk Point, S. D. Livingston was a widower, 50 years of age. He became infatuated with Stevens' daughter, 20 years of age, and wanted to marry her against the wishes of her parents, who claimed Livingston had an undue influence over her. The two men had quarreled over the strange relations and on June 15 Stevens shot Livingston twice, killing him instantly.

SETTLEMENT HELPS BUSINESS.

Industrial Situation Is Improved by End of the Coal Troubles.

Bradstreet's says: "Perhaps the most notable feature of the week is found in the industrial situation, which has been distinctly improved by the apparently official and final action taken toward ending the anthracite coal miners' strike. In view of the fact that most of the miners have obtained increased wages, the effect on business in the producing regions can hardly be otherwise than beneficial, while the trade at large must reap benefits from the return to normal conditions."

Sues Executors of Will.

At Akron, Ohio, Mrs. Sophronia Ritchie has brought suit against Charles Baird and John B. Wright for the recovery of $500,000 in stocks and for $100,000 damages. The defendants are the executors of the will of the late Thomas W. Cornell, and Mrs. Ritchie alleges fraud.

Plans Big Smelting Plant.

The Imperial Gold Mining Company of Pittsburg, Pa., has secured a millsite in Deadwood, S. D., where will be erected the largest custom cyanide and chlorinating works in the Black Hills. Work upon the plant will commence this fall and it is to be completed by spring.

Says He Perjured Himself.

MERRIAM TELLS OF CENSUS BUREAU WORK.

In speaking of the work of the census bureau Director Merriam said: "It has been the custom heretofore to make a rough count, using the names on the schedule as a basis, but in this decade it was determined to avoid the errors likely to arise from a preliminary count, and also the necessary expenses and delay incident to such a proceeding. The plan was adopted of verifying the count at once by the use of the electrical tabulating machines.

"The early completion of the tabulation of the population of the States enables the census office to submit the figures to Congress as soon as it convenes in December, thus giving that body the information necessary to dispose of the question of the reapportionment of representatives at the coming session. All the field work of the twelfth census, so far as it relates to the collection of the data relating to population, agriculture, vital statistics, and manufactures, is now complete. It is the aim of the officials in charge of the work to push the tabulation of the returns so as to give the complete reports to the public in accordance with the law, which requires that they shall be issued by July 1, 1902.

"The enumerators' accounts, numbering something over 53,000, have all been paid, with the exception of fifty-five, whose accounts are held up for various technicalities. In the last census it took eight or ten months to pay all the enumerators. The cost of the administration of the bureau up to this date, including the expense incident to the preliminary work, as well as the cost of the enumeration and supervision, is $6,361,961.18, of which over $4,000,000 has been expended for supervision and enumeration."

APPORTIONMENT BASIS 200,000.

That About the Figure on Which the House Will Be Made Up.

Bitter partisan and sectional debates may be expected in Congress during the coming session over the bill to reapportion Representatives among the States in accordance with the twelfth census. The basis on which the last reapportionment was made was one Representative to each 173,901 persons or major fraction of that number shown by the census of 1890, and the present membership of the House is 368. It is not desired to increase the representation greatly, and it is the general opinion among politicians who have considered the subject that the basis for the new apportionment will be at least 200,000.

It is not the determination of the basis of an apportionment, however, that will excite the most acrimonious debate. It is th eproposition which the Republican leaders have under consideration of reducing the representation of those Southern States that have adopted constitutional amendments disfranchising the negroes. They find their warrant for this in the 14th amendment to the constitution of the United States. As soon as the count of the population by States has been completed at the census office the work of compiling the statistics of illiteracy will be taken up, so that if Congress determines to go into the question og reducing the representation in States where negroes are disfranchised on the ground of illiteracy the data will be available.

ELEVEN HEADS DEMANDED.

Allies Name Many Chinese Officials for Execution.

At a meeting of the ministers held Friday in Pekin the powers were found to be unanimously agreed to demand the execution of Prince Tuan and four other Manchu princes, one duke and three ministers, a total of nine named for punishment. In the imperial edict of Sept. 25 Gen. Tung Fuh Siang and the governor of Shansi were also included, bringing the number to be punished for aiding the Boxers to eleven.

A correspondent asserts that the list comprises most of the highest officials who were the leading spirits in the massacres and richly deserve death. There are many other guilty officers, but none ferocious and influential. The execution of these eleven will do substantial justice and will remove the worst obstacle to a satisfactory treaty and permanent peace. These men would prove a constant menace to future good government and amicable foreign relations.

Yu Hsien, governor of the province of Shansi, has committed suicide. It was he who organized the Boxer movement in Shan-tung and personally led the Boxers in the slaughter of the missionaries in Shansi. With Hsu Tung and Kang Yi, he makes the third notorious Boxer leader now removed by death.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

United States Judge Estee of Hawaii has decided that Chinamen from any part of the United States have the right to land in Hawaii.

Gen. Miles, in his annual report to the Secretary of War, will renew his recommendation for further use of the automobile in the army.

The government receipts of September aggregated $45,304,326 and the expenditures $39,169,971. The War Department's expenditures were $14,125,284.

Judge Day, arbitrator of the claim of John D. Metzger & Co. against Hayti for damages for the seizure of property, has decided that Hayti must pay $23,000 within six months.

The money orders issued during the last fiscal year aggregated $255,670,027, and those paid amounted to $249,120,285. The business of the year before aggregated $442,483,364.

UNCLE SAM'S CENSUS.

POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES IS 76,295,220.

Increase in Ten Years Is Twenty-one Per Cent—Inhabitants of the Forty-five States Number 74,627,907—Indians Not Taxed, 134,158.

The total population of the United States for 1900, as officially announced by Director Merriam for the federal census, is 76,295,220. The total gain in the population of the country since 1890 amounts to 13,225,464, representing an increase of nearly 21 per cent. Of the total population for 1900 74,627,907 are in the forty-five States, which number represents the basis for the reapportionment of congressional districts. The total population of the census of 1890 was 63,069,756, comprising 62,622,250 persons in the States and organized territories. The statement just issued by the director of census gives the population of the country in detail by States and territories. Hawaii contains a population of 154,001, as compared with 89,990 in 1890, while the number of persons in the service of the United States stationed abroad is 84,000. There is a total of 134,158 Indians not taxed.

A remarkable decline in the growth of the intermountain and middle Western States is shown by the State returns. The northwestern and middle States reveal the healthiest growth, while the Southern and Eastern States compare favorably with the growth recorded in 1890. Nevada has fewer people within its borders now than in 1890. Then the population was 45,761, and now it is 42,334. Kansas has remained almost stationary. The latest census gives that State 1,469,496 inhabitants, against 1,427,096 in 1890. Nebraska likewise shows small signs of populative growth. Colorado has made better progress, showing an increase of over 120,000 in ten years. Idaho has almost doubled its population. In the central States Illinois looms forth as the most progressive. Indiana has a population of 2,516,463, against 2,192,404 in 1890. Iowa increased from 1,911,896 to 2,251,829. Michigan shows a gain of 325,000 and Minnesota a gain of 450,000, while Missouri has also made a good stride with a gain of nearly half a million. Wisconsin has a gain of over 300,000.

Illinois' gain is considered most remarkable. In 1890 there were 3,826,351 persons in the Prairie State, which number has increased, according to the latest census, to 4,821,550. Illinois stands third in the list of States in point of population. New York State comes first with a grand total of 7,268,009, as against 5,997,853 ten years ago, while Pennsylvania is second with 6,301,365, against 5,258,014 in 1890. Following Illinois comes Ohio, with 4,157,545. Fifth place is accorded to Missouri, with 3,107,117 inhabitants, and Texas holds sixth place with 3,048,828.

PAY CLERK IS MURDERED.

Attempt by Highwaymen to Secure Cash Ends in Bloody Battle.

As a result of an attempt of four Italian or Russian highwaymen, armed with revolvers and dynamite, to steal $5,000 Tuesday afternoon, Paymaster W. H. Hosler of the Southwest Connellsville (Pa.) Coke Company, and two would-be highwaymen are dead, another robber is fatally injured, and another was wounded, but not seriously.

Paymaster Hosler and a colored servant named Harry Burgess left the Citizens' Bank in a light spring wagon drawn by two horses. They had $5,000 in a small safe with which the men at Alverton were to be paid. Near Mount Pleasant two men, who were walking just ahead of them, grabbed the bridles of the two horses. As Mr. Hosler sprang to his feet pistol shots rang out from the rear, and the paymaster sank back dead.

Hosler's assistant never hesitated. He whipped out a big revolver and fired at one of the men at the horses' heads. The man sank down in the road. Burgess, without looking to see the result of his shot, wheeled on the men in the rear. Two revolvers were on a level with him, but before either of them could fire Burgess dropped on his knees in the seat of the wagon, shooting as he knelt. A second robber fell forward. The remaining two hastily dashed into the woods.

A crowd of 3,000 men, armed with guns, tracked two of the robbers to a dense thicket, where one of them was shot to death. The other surrendered and but for the interference of officers he would have been torn limb from limb.

LORD SALISBURY STEPS OUT.

Premier Resigns His Post of Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The London Telegraph makes a spread on an announcement that Lord Salisbury has decided to resign his post of minister of foreign affairs, but to retain the premiership. His health, the paper says, causes no anxiety, but trusted physicians urge him to do less work. Lord Lansdowne, at present secretary of state for war, will, the Telegraph declares, succeed Lord Salisbury as foreign minister.

The London Times confirms the statement of the Daily Telegraph that Lord

LORD SALISBURY.

Salisbury will give up the foreign office portfolio, but it does not name his successor.

Lord Salisbury looks back upon a political career of nearly half a century. In 1853, when only 23 years of age, he was elected a member of Parliament for Stamford and he represented this borough for fifteen years. He took an active part in all public measures which affected the interests of the established church and the chief political questions of the day.

SEATTLE ASSAYS $20,166,687.

Gold Receipts at the Pacific Coast Point Since Jan. 1 Last.

A total of $20,166,687 worth of gold dust and bullion has been received at the Seattle assay office during the present year between Jan. 1 and Oct. 24, 1900. This gold came from:

Cape Nome	$2,710,427.01
Other Alaskan points	462,893.31
Total, Alaska	$3,173,320.32
British Columbia (Atlin)	493,116.27
Yukon district (Klondike)	16,374,488.15
Washington, Oregon, Idaho and foreign gold coin	125,762.80

Since Oct. 24 the office has received an additional $150,000 from Nome and $50,000 from other points. The probabilities are that before the season closes Nome will have furnished $5,000,000.

NEWS FROM OUR COLONIES.

The inefficiency of the mail service in the Philippines continues a source of great irritation to the soldiers on duty in the interior. A letter from an Omaha volunteer contains the assertion that the writer has not received a scrap of mail since the 23d of February. Eight or ten letters have been mailed to him since that time and a bundle of newspapers every week. This is not an isolated instance. Manila Freedom tells how mail, precious to the troops, is diverted from its proper destination. "For a whole dreary

Farmer Brown—Now that corn is so gosh dern low you orter shave me for half price.

The Barber—I think I ought to charge double, because when corn's down the farmers wear such long faces that I have to do double work.

Merely an Amateur.

Heiress—But, you see, you paint pictures to sell. It would never do for me to marry a man who works for his living.

Artist—Darling, no one could accuse me of working for a living. I've never sold a picture in my life.

A Wise Woman.

"Are you badly hurt, Mrs. Getalong?" inquired an anxious neighbor, sitting down by the side of the bed.

"I don't know how badly I'm hurt," said the victim of the railway accident, feebly, "until I've seen my lawyer."

Admirable Simulation.

A New and Terrifying Game.

"The sacredness of home" may soon be only a phrase in London. "Some ingenious fiend has invented a new amusement for the kitchen," says the Daily Express, "and if it becomes popular servants will know as much about our business as we do."

This little pleasantry takes the form of a game by which, each evening, the contents of the waste-paper baskets in the various rooms of the house are emptied upon a table, and a prize is awarded to the first ingenious and deft-fingered man-servant or maid-servant who puts one complete letter together.

Think of the joy of the servants when the contents of letters, which you have torn, as you fondly believed, into too small pieces to be restored, are made public!

OPENING OF THE HUNTING SEASON.

WHEN MOLLY LED THE MEETING

I wuz settin' with the sinners—'way back by the door,
In the pew that smiles a welcome—meetin' evenin's—to the poor.
I wuz jest the hardest sinner that salvation ever knowed—
A reg'lar ol' backslider that had lost the gospel road.

An' the word come that the preacher wouldn't be with us that night.
An' "Who would lead the meetin'?" A woman raised her han',
An' Molly, with the bright, sweet eyes, marched up an' took the stan'!

My heart wuz palpitatin'!—an' what would Molly say?
She didn't keep me waitin'—fer her bright eyes shined my way!
She give that ol' time hymn out—an' they sung with sweet accord,
With Molly's voice a-leadin' 'em—"Come Ye that Love the Lord!"

An' lots of 'em went up fer pra'r', an' got religion true;
An' Molly called acrost the pews: "John, ain't you comin', too?"
An' I come!—I couldn't stan' it! They hollered out, "Amen!"—
With Molly's han' a-holdin' mine I got religion then!

A BIT OF BRAID.

SHE turned her head very slightly, so that the man behind her caught the narrowing of her eyes with sudden anger, and the tilting of her rounded chin.

"Clumsy!" she said in a voice ringing with scorn. She caught up her skirt, just raising it from the ground, and hastened on. But she threw a few more or less acceptable home thrusts over her shoulder as she went.

"I can't think what you have been doing with yourself lately. Not improving, anyway. And you won't get on in the direction you are taking, I can assure you. It makes me very doubtful as to the truth of all your yarns of conquest—they are just what I took them for—fairy tales, every one. For no girl would be tame enough to be trampled on, if that is your habit. Oh, of course you saw the braid hanging. You could not be so blind as that."

She gave the offending skirt, with the loop of braid dangling uncomfortably, a further hitch. She had the daintiest ankles—the word expressed her altogether—and the man following her made no objection.

It was, indeed, his continued silence she seized on next—to misconstrue.

"At least," she said, with sisterly straightforwardness, "you might apologize."

They had reached the landing stage where the boat was moored. The girl proceeded to take her place in it with the calmness and ease which only can come to her sex through practice and long suffering. She was seated with the ropes in her hands before she really looked up at the man who had followed her—into the boat by this time.

"Now let me see the stroke which takes captive your best girls," she was saying, and then her eyes met his.

Though it would have seemed more appropriate that he should be the one to blush, it was to her cheeks the color mounted. She actually hesitated before she spoke.

So he was given the opportunity of speaking, and this time he availed himself, willingly.

"I do apologize," he said, "very humbly." His manner and the laughter in his eyes did not, however, accord wholly with such an attitude.

"Well—really——" she began, but he interrupted her.

"I will go further—you will grant it is a long way further—I will explain."

"There seems room for it——"

He was quite a genius at seizing his chances. He took her words as a concession, and dipped his sculls into the water at the same time.

"I shall be able to talk so much better when we are moving," he said, artfully. "I fancy my stroke may prove as worthy of comment as your brother's," he added. He was still smiling, and he noted, with growing satisfaction, that so was she.

"Well, of all the——"

"And you do not even know who I am! Cheek? Oh, don't be hard. Luck—if you like. I am proverbially lucky. I am not to blame for that, am I? Your brother told you he was expecting his college chum, Charles Dean? I was just coming along—neither of you saw me. I heard you send him back for your cape——" he paused, with sudden compunction.

"You are not cold?" he questioned, anxiously. "I forgot, and I have nothing in the way of a wrap to offer you."

"No, I am not cold," she said, as stiffly as she could.

"You walked on, you know, and then temptation seized me. An evil spirit disguised, most charmingly disguised, as a piece of braid! And I could not resist it. I was only afraid you would think I had been suspiciously quick—for a brother."

"I just wasn't thinking," she admitted, dimpling.

The mood for confession grew on him. "Or that you might look round," said he.

"I wish——"

"No, don't say it! Hear me out first. Honestly, I was not entirely actuated by motives of mere selfishness, as might at first appear. I put it to myself like this: Here is a charming girl going to spend a most perfectly delightful summer afternoon on the river, with no more exciting companion than the brother she has known from her earliest days, whose thoughts are as open to her as her own; who hasn't a peculiarity, or even a virtue, left undiscovered. I argued with myself about it. Should I let such a paltry thing as the lack of an introduction prevent me from giving this girl a treat——"

"Oh," she cried, "you really are——"

"Yes," he said, "it stands to reason even as a study, a sort of unexplored continent, so to speak; a strange young man, in such a case, must present himself in the light of an acquisition."

Her eyes were dancing. "Why don't you say such an exceedingly nice young man, while you are about it?" she asked mockingly.

"I will go one better," said he, "with your permission. Such an exceptionally nice pair!" and he bowed.

"Oh, you are dreadful—dreadful!" But she did not say it as a fact to be deplored. She looked away from the soft summer landscape, down to the edge of her serge skirt with its trimming of braid and the fateful loop.

"They do sew these so insecurely," she said. "You haven't a pin to spare?"

"It seems almost a pity," said he, while she busied herself over it; "but I suppose it will be just as well now."

The afternoon was, as he had said, delightful, and his swift stroke left nothing to be desired. It was not cold, after all, and she never gave another thought to the cape until she saw it, when at last they got back, hanging deserted on the boathouse door, where her brother had left it when he arrived there to find her vanished.

The brother and sister were very alike in disposition, and took things lightly and as they came. So he never openly resented her desertion—perhaps, as her new friend pointed out, he, too, had his more than adequate compensation.

This is just a story of the inevitable. For the man of resource was something of a character reader, and he had looked at the girl before he stepped.

She called it, in her kindest moods, an anticipation, but he maintained that he gave the incident its most appropriate title when he named it a "forerunner." And this it was.

The weather favored them, and his visit lengthened from a week's end to a week and more. Ample time for a man of such ready methods to win for himself a girl not indisposed to be won. Thus his visit to the brother ended in his marriage with the sister—an old tale, but often a very pleasant one.

It was later in the season, and boating interests had given way to the necessity of stock-taking in fashionable wearing apparel, and discussions on the relative merits of new and antique furniture.

"I could almost wish," she said sweetly, "that it was possible to trim a white satin wedding dress with braids in a sort of squiggly pattern of loops and turns."

"If you contemplate having one loop pendant to trip me up during the ceremony," he said, laughingly, "I am off."

"Then, perhaps, it is just as well to reserve braid as a trimming for serge and cloth," she said.

GRATEFUL FOR A KIND ACT.

How an Indian Rewarded a Man Who Rendered Him a Service.

In "Travels in New England and New York" President Dwight of Yale College tells a good story of Indian wit and friendship.

In the early days of Litchfield, Conn., an Indian called at the tavern and asked the landlady for food, frankly stating that he had no money with which to pay for it. She refused him harshly, but a white man who sat by noted the red man's half-famished state and offered to pay for his supper.

The meal was furnished and the Indian, his hunger satisfied, returned to the fire and told his benefactor a story.

"You know the Bible?" said the redskin.

The man assented.

"Well," said the Indian, "the Bible say, God made world, and then he took him and look at him and say, 'He good, very good.' He made light and he took him and look at him and say, 'He good, very good.' Then he made dry land and water and sun and moon and grass and trees, and took him and look at him and say, 'He good, very good. Then he made beast and birds and fishes, and took him and look at him and say, 'He good, very good.'

"Then he made man and took him and look at him and say, 'He good, very good.' Then he made woman, and took him and look at him, and he no dare say one such word!"

That last conclusion was uttered with a meaning glance at the landlady.

Some years after this occurrence the man who paid for the Indian's supper was captured by redskins and carried to Canada, where he was made to work like a slave. One day an Indian came to him, recalled to his mind the occurrence at the Litchfield tavern, and ended by saying:

"I that Indian. Now my turn pay. I see you home. Come with me."

And the redskin guided the man back to Litchfield.

No Alternative.

"Boys will be boys." Even as far away as South Africa they prefer compound fractures to simple fractions. Says Richard Harding Davis, writing from Pretoria to the Boston Herald:

There are many boys in the Boer army. Four of them are sons of Reitz, the Secretary of State. His father told me proudly of how the youngest, who was fifteen years old, covered a British Tommy and called upon him to hold up his hands. As his comrades had already surrendered, the Tommy threw down his gun, and said to the boy:

"I don't care. I'm blooming well sick of this war, anyway. Ain't you?"

"Oh, no," protested young Reitz, simply, "for father says that when the war is over he's going to send me back to school!"

TO LIVE A CENTURY.

VARIOUS RULES FOR REACHING A GOOD OLD AGE.

Numerous Helps to Longevity—Different Physicians Prescribe Different Rules of Living—Cleanliness, Repose and Exercise Recommended.

There are many helps to longevity, the latest being the Hundred Year Club. Join in, say its members, and you need have no further thought of sickness and death. However, everybody does not belong to the Hundred Year Club, and old-time doctors and physicians, as well as new ones, lay down many laws that must be followed if health is to prevail.

"Avoid fussy women," says one learned doctor; "they kill persons off by the dozens. Avoid being fussy yourself; it wears you out as nothing else will. Calmness can be attained."

"Make cleanliness your motto," says another. "Extend this to both the house and the grounds. Few women starve for food, but many do for fresh air. Every woman if unable to take a walk daily, should go out into the yard or to the window if an invalid and breathe deeply a hundred times or more for exercise.

"Throw away your corsets and never wear any tight clothing, and by all means sleep in a well-ventilated room. Beware of gluttony. If not hungry confine the eating to fruit and utilize the teeth instead of the stomach for chewing the food. Bathe often and keep the blood pure; exercise daily and do a kind deed on every opportunity.

"The effect of exercise on the mind is always good; the brain and nervous system are supplied with more blood and the repair of waist is more complete."

According to Sir James Sawyer, by observing the following nineteen rules one stands a good chance of being a worthy member of the Hundred Year Club:

1. Eight hours' sleep.
2. Sleep on your right side.
3. Keep your bedroom window open all night.
4. Have a mat to your bedroom door.
5. Do not have your bedstead against the wall.
6. No cold water in the morning, but a bath at the temperature of the body.
7. Exercise before breakfast.
8. Eat little meat and see that it is well cooked.
9. (For adults) Drink no milk.
10. Eat plenty of fat to feed the cells which destroy disease germs.
11. Avoid intoxicants, which destroy those cells.
12. Daily exercise in the open air.
13. Allow no pet animals in your living rooms; they are likely to carry about disease germs.
14. Live in the country if you can.
15. Watch the three D's—drinking water, damp, drains.
16. Have change of occupation.
17. Take frequent and short holidays.
18. Limit your ambition.
19. Keep your temper.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

The old-fashioned methods have been laid on the shelf. In another decade the local merchant who does not take advantage of the publicity offered by the local newspaper will not be in the business.—Hempstead (L. I.) Sentinel.

The advertiser seeks to know primarily how many of his customers his ads will reach through the medium of the periodical in which he inserts it, and secondarily the class of patrons he may appeal to.—Springfield (Ohio) Sun.

Assure yourself that you have a story to tell, decide carefully as to the people who will be most interested in the telling of it; then tell it concisely, emphatically and convincingly. Tell it to everyone who will listen, so long as the expense involved leaves a reasonable expectation of profit.—Pacific Coast Advertising.

The Rural New Yorker tells a story to the following effect that beautifully adorns the tale and paints a meaty moral: "A duck that had laid several dozen eggs during the season complained that while her work record was better than the hen's the latter had books and poems written in her honor, while no one had a word of praise for the duck. A wise old rooster near by said: 'You lay an egg and waddle off without saying a word, while that sister of mine never lays one without letting everyone in the neighborhood know it. If you want to cut any ice around here you must advertise.'"

Many men start in on an advertising campaign as though they did not expect it to pay. The general who starts into a battle expecting to be whipped is pretty sure not to be disappointed. The merchant who rents a store, buys a stock of merchandise and opens for business doubtful of success is reasonably certain to fail. The young man who goes on the road with the feeling that he will never make a salesman scarcely ever does. The boy who, in a fight, has one foot turned backward and one eye open for a chance to run is whipped at the beginning. So with advertising. Expect to win; determine to win. Make it "Pike's Peak or bust." Husband your strength, to be sure. Do not exhaust your every resource on the first blow. Make sure that you travel at a rate of speed that you can maintain to the end, and it will be "Pike's Peak."—Our Wedge.

Holland Has Been Long at War.

There are not many people aware of the fact that for the last twenty-seven years a war has been going on between the Dutch and the people of Acheen, in north Sumatra. Since 1873 up to the present time this war has cost the Netherlands something like $100,000,000 and over 100,000 lives have been lost on the two sides. After all these years of fighting the end of this punitive war is no nearer than when it first commenced.

NAVIGATING HIGH IN AIR.

Steerable Balloon Has Already Made Several Aerial Trips in Paris.

Aeronauts all over the world have been watching with deepest possible interest a contest conducted in Paris, where M. Deutsch offered a prize of $20,000 to the airship which shall make the first successful voyage of four miles and return. The "course" is from Suresnes to the Eiffel tower and back, and the entire journey must be made in half hour. Suresnes is a suburb of Paris fully four miles from the colossal turning point. This makes the entire distance at least eight miles, and to travel so far in the prescribed time limit will necessitate a speed of sixteen miles an hour or better. This is a greater velocity than has ever yet been attained, which is in itself of much importance. But the chief thing to be demonstrated by the contest is the possibility of steering an airship.

The attention of persons directly interested in this sort of enterprise is more particularly centered upon the ship devised by M. Santos-Dumont, who has been in Paris for several months with the intention of competing for the $20,000 prize offered by M. Deutsch. It is said that in one of his experimental voyages M. Santos-Dumont sailed from Suresnes to and around the Eiffel tower and returned to the starting point. But when he was about to make the attempt one day last month in the presence of the Deutsch prize judges something went wrong with his apparatus and the full trial was postponed. He ascended for a short distance, however, and executed a few maneuvers to show that the ship could be steered. Only a light breeze prevailed at the time, and hence the test was not very significant. In fact, it was meant chiefly for exhibition purposes and to avoid a complete disappointment to the crowd of spectators. He will make a fresh attempt in the near future, he says. M. Santos-Dumont is a Brazilian by birth, an engineer by profession and only 25 years old.

NAVIGATING THE AIR.

When his airship is in operation M. Santos-Dumont sits on a saddle almost exactly like that generally used by bicycle riders. The machine is provided with pedals and sprocket for starting the great propeller. But he relies mainly upon a gasoline engine to drive the latter. The propeller is two-bladed and has a diameter of twelve feet. The blades are of steel and aluminium, with a cover of silk. The screw makes 180 revolutions a minute and is expected to develop a speed of twenty miles an hour.

In modern experiments in navigation with a self-propelled airship two general plans have been adopted in order to sustain the craft in the atmosphere. Langley, Maxim, Chanute, Lilienthal and others relied solely on the aeroplane, or widely outstretched wings, but for the last two or three years little or nothing has been done in this direction. The other method was to have a bag filled with hydrogen or illuminating gas and shaped like an immense sweet potato. The longer axis of this receptacle was kept in a horizontal position, and from it was suspended a boat or other support for the propelling engine.

With a device of this latter kind Renard and Krebs, of the French army, were able to develop a speed of fourteen miles an hour as long as 1885. Numerous attempts have been made since that time to improve on the record, but thus far without success. Great things were expected of Von Zeppelin's airship on Lake Constance, which, a full year after was begun on it, had its first real trial early last July. The projector's expectations were not realized, however, and radical improvements were undertaken.

SUBSTITUTE FOR EAR TRUMPET.

Arrangement Intended for Use in Public Places.

Here is a simple and convenient arrangement which the inventor claims is a good substitute for the ear trumpet, the device being intended for use in theaters, at the opera or at other public amusements by those whose hearing is defective. Two devices are provided, which are the shape of a hollow truncated cone, aluminium, other material being used in their manufacture, and each collector is formed at the upper edge with a slotted keeper, through which a tape or cord is passed to attach it to the head. A flat elastic tape is preferable, as this may be adjusted without the necessity of tying. As only one ear trumpet of the usual pattern is generally provided, and this is not always of a convenient shape for use in theaters, etc., it may be that this arrangement will be a practicable one for its purpose, even if the trumpet is preferred for individual conversations. The new collectors can be adjusted on the head and never given a thought during an entire evening, leaving both hands free and generally relieving the mind of the care of the trumpet. William G. Ehrhardt, of New York City, is the inventor.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY....NOVEMBER 8, 1900.

New U. S. Senators.

Thirty-five new senators will enter the new congress which begins next March. Of this number thirty will be chosen to fill vacancies due to the expiration of senatorial terms on March 3. In addition there are five vacancies to be filled. Pennsylvania, Utah and Delaware have but one senator each by reason of the failure of their legislatures to elect. Montana must elect a senator to fill the seat of Senator Clark, who resigned, and Nebraska must elect a senator to supersede Senator Allen, who was appointed temporarily to fill a vacancy pending the next session of the legislature. Senator Dolliver presumably will be confirmed in the seat left vacant by the death of Senator Gear of Iowa, whose term would have expired March 3 next. As Delaware, Montana and Nebraska also have to elect senators to fill vacancies due to the expiration of terms of office these three states will elect two senators each. Thus, in all, thirty-two states are to hold senatorial elections.

As constituted prior to adjournment at its last session the senate included fifty-one republicans, twenty six democrats and and ten senators elected by populist, silver or fusion votes, there being at that time but three vacancies. Counting out Clark of Montana, who resigned, and Allen of Nebraska, whose appointment keeps him in office only until the Nebraska legislature meets, the entire body of eighty-five senators was composed as follows:

Republicans	51
Democrats	25
All others	9
Total	85

Of this number the thirty senators whose terms expire March 3 next are divided as follows:

Republicans	17
Democrats	11
Populist	1
Silver	1
Total	30

Of the remaining fifty-five holdover senators the terms of thirty expire March 3, 1903, and the terms of twenty-five expire March 3, 1905. Taking cognizance of Senator Wellington's defection from the republican party to democracy, the party representation among these holdover senators is as follows:

Republicans	33
Democrats	15
Populists	2
Silver	2
Silver republican	1
Independent	1
Total	55

Two of the thirty-five new senators to be seated next March—Frye of Maine and Wetmore of Rhode Island—already have been elected. They are republicans. Senator Dolliver of Iowa, appointed by the governor of that state to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Gear, presumably will be elected to fill both the long and short terms. Thus with thirty-five senatorships assured and with still other sentators to be chosen in such states as Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Minnesota and Pennsylvania, it is plain that the republicans are already morally certain of at least forty senators, while they have excellent prospects of getting more than the forty-six votes necessary for a majority. If republican legislatures are in power in only six of the states which have not yet made a choice the republicans will still be the dominant party in the United States senate.

The composition of the house, which prior to the close of the last session included 185 republicans, 159 democrats and 8 members of other parties, with five vacancies, is, of course, much more difficult to forecast.

It may be noted in passing that one interesting possibility regarding the make-up of the next senate is suggested in the probability that Mr. Bryan, if defeated for president, will be elected to that body, the double vacancy in Nebraska's representation giving him the opportunity.—Chicago Record.

Indiana Census.

The latest census report for Indiana gives the population as 2,516,462, showing an increase of 324,058 or over 14 per cent since 1890 The population of this congressional district is as follows:

	1900	1890	Inc
Allen county	77,270	66,689	10,581
DeKalb	25,711	25,307	404
Lagrange	15,284	15,615	331
Noble	23,533	23,359	174
Whitley	17,328	17,768	440

DeKalb county is second in size in the district and shows an increase of 404, while Whitley county is next to the last and shows a decrease of 350 in the last ten years. The growth of population in Indiana has been large and steady.

S. S. Convention.

There will be a Sunday school convention held at Morris chapel, Saturday, Nov. 10, beginning at 9 a. m. standard time. All Sunday school workers are urged to be present. Come with your baskets and enjoy a day of pleasure as well as profit.

THE ELECTION.

A Republican Victory that Exceeds that of 1896.

The republican national ticket is elected by a majority on electoral vote, greater than four years ago. But the majority on popular vote will probably be less.

The republican ticket would have a larger electoral vote than four years ago, but in the larger states of the east and middle west the pluralities had been greatly reduced.

Massachusetts has fallen from 174,000 to 50,000; New York from 268,000 to 35,000 and Illinois from 142,000 or less.

Midnight—The roll call of states at this hour is apparently as follows:

McKinley—Connecticut, 6; Delaware 3; Illinois, 24; Indiana, 15; Iowa, 13; Maine, 6; Maryland, 8; Massachusetts, 15; Michigan, 14; Minnesota, 9; New Hampshire, 4; New Jersey, 10; New York, 36; North Dakota, 3; Ohio, 23; Pennsylvania, 32; Rhode Island, 4; Vermont, 4; West Virginia, 6; Wisconsin, 12; California, 9; Oregon, 4; Washington, 4; Wyoming, 3. Total, 267.

Bryan—Alabama, 11: Arkansas, 8; Colorado, 4; Georgia, 13; Louisiana, 8; Mississippi, 9; Missouri, 17; Montana, 3; Nevada, 3; North Carolina, 11; South Carolina, 9; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 15; Utah, 3; Virginia, 12. Total 142.

Unreported—Idaho, 3; Kansas, 10; Kentucky, 13; Nebraska, 8; South Dakota, 4. Total 47.

If all the unreported states should turn out as democratic, highly improbable contingency, it would not change the result.

The latest returns from Nebraska indicate a republican plurality. The 57th congress seems to be republican by a substantial working majority.

The gubernatorial tickets have apparently followed the national and, Odell is elected in New York and Yates in Illinois.

President McKinley heard the news at his home in Canton, making his headquarters in his library. He was in his usual good humor, showing no signs of anxiety over the result, and accepting with unruffled composure the favorable reports which began to come in at an early hour. Secretary Cortelyou read most of the dispatches, some of the more cheering announcements being heartily applauded by the guests. Most of the early advices were fragmentary and inconclusive, but the strong indications that New York and probably Illinois had gone for McKinley were received with great satisfaction.

Mr. Bryan received returns at his residence in Lincoln. His house was fairly overrun by newspaper men and telegraph operators. Not only was the first floor of the house largely given up to them, but two of the rooms in the second story, where four telegraph wires were run into the house. Mr. Bryan had with him his brother, Chas. Bryan, and former law partner; ex-State Senator Talbot, Committeeman Talbot and Attorney Schmidt. Mrs. Bryan had as companion a cousin, Mrs. Dalhman.

At 8:30 o'clock, when the newspaper men at Bryan's house, sought to secure a statement from Mr. Bryan they were told that he had just gone to sleep and could not be disturbed. When in his room he glanced over the returns with apparent interest and then expressing a desire to make up some of the rest he had lost in the past few weeks, lay down and was asleep in less than five minutes. He had slept an hour in the afternoon, after which he went for a horseback ride to his farm. He did not, however, feel recuperated, and therefore sought additional rest, thus manifesting less concern than hundreds of thousands of his followers.

Mr. Bryan remained in his private apartments during the entire evening and slept a greater part of the time. He did not make his appearance in the parlor of his house, where the newspaper correspondents were congregated, until 11 o'clock, and his coming at that time was for the purpose of notifying the press that he would have nothing to say for publication during the night. He added that he might give out a statement tomorrow.

ALLEN COUNTY.

Allen gave a democratic majority in 1896 of 1,500, and as far as we can learn gives a larger majority this year. If so Robinson will be re elected to congress by a good, safe majority, probably 800.

DEKALB COUNTY.

The probability is that the entire democratic county ticket is elected by small majorities and that Bryan carried the county by about 300.

UNION COUNTY.

The entire democratic ticket is elected in Union, the smallest majority being on trustee, Miles Baxter, getting six votes more than his opponent, Springer.

Wilmington township showed slight democratic gains.

Stafford township made a democratic gain that gave the democrats a majority of 18.

One precinct in Jackson had not finished counting at 7, a. m. One in Keyser was still counting at 9 a. m. If people would vote straight, the result would be about the same, and the labor and delay would be greatly diminished.

Owing to the slow counting, returns from the distant townships cannot be obtained in time for the Weekly. The precincts of each township get together today to combine their returns, and all meet in Auburn tomorrow to combine the county. The full returns we will give next week.

The south precinct is reported giving the democrats the following majorities;

From Angola.

Special to the Courier:

ANGOLA, IND., Nov. 7, 1900

Fire in Angola this morning partially destroyed O. W. Parish's residence near the college. A lamp exploded in Mr. Parish's hands while in a room up stairs. He was seriously burned about face and hands, his beard and hair being all burned off. He is about 80 years old.

Frank Ramsay, jr., died in Angola last night of typhoid fever, aged about 32 years. A wife and one child is left. The little one broke its arm recently.

FAIRFIELD CENTER.

WHEN YOUNG MEN GO CALLING

What to Wear, How to Act, When to Arrive and Depart.

In making an afternoon call a man usually leaves his overcoat, umbrella or stick, hat and gloves in the hall before entering the drawing-room. He may, if he choose, carry his hat and stick into the room at a first or formal call, if it is to be very brief, except at a reception. He removes his right glove before offering to shake hands. He never offers his hand first, but waits the invitation of his hostess. If she is behind her tea-table, she may not rise to greet him, but gracefully includes him in the conversation and perhaps bows her adieus. It is an evidence of good breeding to enter and leave a room unobtrusively. It is not usual to introduce a guest upon his entrance to more than one other. He never shakes hands when presented to a woman, but always when introduced to a man. He may leave upon the arrival of other guests after fifteen minutes, turning his back as little as possible upon the company and bowing comprehensively at the door. A woman never accompanies a man to the vestibule, but takes leave of him in the drawing-room. It is no longer customary to press one's guest to call again. The lady always gives the invitation to call. A man must not go beyond an evident pleasure in her society by way of suggestion. Sometimes a woman friend will exert herself for him. The sooner the call follows the invitation the greater the compliment. A fortnight is the usual interval.—Mrs. Burton Kingsland, in the October Ladies' Home Journal.

Breaks of Telegraph Editors.

J. M. Barrie's story of how a telegraph editor, receiving a dispatch that the Zulus had "taken umbrage," headed the news "Capture of Umbrage by the Zulus," is eclipsed by that of an editor in the west. Shortly after the anti-Semitic riots in Austria, a slight shock of earthquake was felt in the vicinity of Vienna, and a cable dispatch put it tersely that there had been "seismic disturbances" near the capital. He headed the item, "Down with the Jews!"—The Argonaut.

BUTLER.

Henry Smith a prominent citizen of Franklin township, who recently lived in Butler and later in Troy township on the Freeby farm, was buried last week. He had reached the age of about eighty years. He was a good citizen and an excellent man. His aged wife, one daughter and five sons survive him.

Wesley Walters also a citizen of Franklin township, well known in the vicinity of Butler, died last week. His wife, one daughter and several sons survive him.

Dr. Fanning suffered a slight attack of paralysis last Saturday. He was alone in his office save his daughter-in-law who hastily secured aid. He was taken to his home and seems in a fair way toward recovery. This will necessarily prevent his son Frank from joining the large hunting party that starts for Maine next Wednesday;

Harry Haskins shows little if any signs of improvement. He is losing ground physically and hopes for his restoration seem to grow less.

The Yesbera-Richey Co.

It has been known for some time in business circles that the Richey Carriage Co. has been made a stock company, the additional interest being taken by G. H. Yesbera. The company is known as the Yesbera-Richey Carriage Company, and its business will be increased. It will now go into the general carriage making business, as the other companies are doing, and will also continue its original specialty, the building of piano and organ wagons The buildings are now being remodeled and improved in all parts and an extensive new building 40x100 feet will be erected soon. This will be another step in making Auburn a manufacturing center, especially in the carriage line. G. H. Yesbera is president and treasurer, and H. E. Richey is secretary and general manager. We hope to see the company a succes. □

The Walsworth Sale.

A. B. Walsworth will have a sale of stock at his residence four miles east of Auburn, on Wednesday, Nov. 28, beginning at 10 a. m. It is all good stock and includes five head of full blood short horns; one high-grade short horn heifer and two steers; twelve high grade Hereford heifers; one cow; Shropshire sheep, including ten registered ewes, two to six years old; ten one year old ewes and ten ewe lambs. Merino sheep: 10 full blood ewes, one and two years old; two yearling rams; one team heavy draft mares; one draft colt six months old, one set heavy harness.

Parties from a distance will be met at the train if notified. Free lunch at noon. In case of bad weather, the sale will be under cover. Terms: Six months without interest on approved security! Phil Carr of Ligonier will auctioneer.

Notice.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 8, 9 and 10, Mr. Stubbs representing J. T. Shayne & Co., one of the leading importers and manufacturers of high class furs will exhibit his line at our store. Any lady wishing or expecting to purchase a fur piece should not fail to take advantage of this splendid opportunity when they can see so close to home such a fine and exclusive line of capes, jackets, automobile coats, collaretts, storm collars, boas and muffs. Do not forget the dates. It will be worth your railroad fare whether you purchase or not to see the line.—WOLF & DESSAUER, 70 and 72 Calhoun street Fort Wayne, Ind. n8

Mrs. Charles R. Patterson.

Mrs. Grace Shirly Patterson wife of Charles Patterson, died at her home at 112 Pacific street, Elkhart, Ind., on Saturday Nov. 3, after a brief illness. Her age was about 24, and she had been married but about 22 months. Her husband was Charles R. Patterson, son of Robert Patterson of Waterloo. She leaves a loving husband, parents, brothers and sisters to mourn her loss. Her amiable disposition had endeared her to a large circle of friends. The funeral was at 2:30 p. m. Sunday, November 4.

Is Now in Psssession.

Recorder Herrick and his daughter Etta, are now at work in the office, he having taken his office Nov. 2, last Friday. He is starting in as if he meant business, and his daughter is doing the same, They expect to have Miss Pearl Sprott to assist them as soon as the latter is able to resume work. She had been helping Recorder Jones for a time, but has been sick for a short time. We have no fears but the work will go on all right.

Blown Up.

The saloon which was run by Commodary Hickman at Maysville, was blown up at about 2 o'clock Saturday morning by placing a heavy charge of of dynamite under his business room. The building and stock are a complete wreck.

For two years the inhabitants, or a majority of them, had battled against the opening of a saloon in their midst, but at the September term of the commissioners' court Hickman was granted a license, and opened immediately, moving a building which had been described in the published notice, upon a vacant lot, for the purpose. Various threats of violence had been heard ever since, but no one ever dreamed of their being carried into effect, as an appeal was pending in the circuit court, and was to have been decided yesterday, by Judge O'Rourke. The parties in the case, Mr. Hickman and the remonstrants, were in the city to attend the hearing, but it was postponed. Mr. Hickman says he will rebuild at once and continue the business until the courts have decided that he is doing so illegally.

The force of the explosion shattered windows in a number of the adjacent buildings, and shook up the town in general. While with but few exceptions the lawless nature of the riddance is deplored there are some who express themselves pleased with the act, because it rids the town of an evil that is not wanted, in view of the miscellaneous threats which were against the place and the proprietor. It is believed that many persons will be involved in the solution of the mystery.

Sheriff Melching was communicated with at 4 o'clock in the morning, and now has the matter in charge. The general impression is that it will be a very difficult matter to uncover.

Mr. Hickman claims to have evidence that a man, who was known to have been opposed to the industry and who has made threats against it, was seen running into his home a few minutes after the explosion occurred.—St. Joe News.

Eliza A. Feagler.

Eliza A. Feagler, (nee Whetsel), was born in Keyser township, DeKalb county, Indiana, August 20, 1846, departed this life at her home in Butler township near DeKalb, November, 1, 1900, aged 54 years, 2 months and 11 days. She was married to Wm. A. Feagler June 27, 1867, and to this union were born two daughters and four sons, all of whom survive her, except one daughter, who preceded her to the spirit land, Jan. 31, 1899. She leaves to mourn her death, a husband, one daughter, four sons, three grandchildren, an aged mother and father, three sisters and a host of neighbors and friends. She united with the Cedar Chapel church in the summer of 1896 and since then has lived an earnest Christian life. She was a devoted wife and mother, always anxious to make the home surroundings pleasant for her family. She was prepared to go to meet her Savior and be at rest, her only anxiety being the thought of leaving her only daughter who she thought needed her care. Funeral services were held at Cedar Chapel; interment in Cedar Chapel cemetery. Rev. W. E. Murray officiatang, assisted by Rev. W. L. Meese.

Don't Die Yet.

It is difficult to get local news for a daily on the eve of a great election. Thieves will not steal for fear they will be jailed and lose their vote. Men will not go visiting nor run away with another man's wife till after election. No foolish fellow will commit suicide, nor elope, nor rock the boat and be drowned. Nobody will get sick, but will stand the microbes off as the Boers stood off the British, till after the election. And those already sick will refuse to die for fear they may lose their vote. The doctor gives his patient "heroic treatment" to help him to bridge over a couple of days more. The minister drops the study of the bible and gives a day or two to saving the country. And all who have hobbies or debts, or have debts due them, any other mental or physical burdens, drop them till after the votes are counted. But the newspaper man has to go right on raising Cain as usual.

VanAuken in Troy.

ARTIC, IND., Nov. 1, 1900.

The democratic speech which occurred at the Center school house last evening was quite largely attended, Hon. Frank VanAuken being the speaker of the evening. Nearly all were filled with patriotism except some republicans, who tried to break up the meeting by running in and out the doors, acting very ungentlemanly and rudely attacking the speaker with insulting remarks and foolish, ludicrous questions. Mr. VanAuken, however, answered all in such manner that they were glad to meet in another place and argue with themselves.

His Term Ends.

Mrs. Milton Jones is finishing up their work in the recorder's office, since their term closed. There is always some odds and ends to be cleaned up, when an officer goes out and a new one comes in. Mr. Jones and his wife have been faithful and diligent, doing their work quietly, but as far as we have learned, well. They are not yet decided as to whether they will return to the farm, or stay in town. They will likely stay here till spring any way. They have been good citizens and we would be pleased to have them stay.

SUN'S DESTINATION.

The Point Toward Which It and the Planets Are Moving.

More than a century ago Sir William Herschel was able to fix roughly what we call the apex of the sun's way in space, or the point among the stars toward which that way is directed. Herschel found that a comparison of old stellar observations seemed to indicate that the stars in a certain part of the sky were opening out, as it were, and that the constellations in the opposite part of the heavens seemed to be drawing in, or becoming smaller. There can be but one reasonable explanation of this. We must be moving toward that part of the sky where the stars are separating. Just as a man watching a regiment of soldiers approaching will see at first only a confused body of men. But as they come nearer the individual soldiers will seem to separate, until at length each one is seen distinct from all the others. Herschel fixed the position of the apex at a point in the constellation Hercules. The most recent investigations of Newcomb, published only a few months ago, have, on the whole, verified Herschel's conclusions. Later investigators have increased the precision of our knowledge, until we can now say that the present direction of the solar motion is known within very narrow limits. A tiny circle might be drawn on the sky, to which an astronomer might point his hand and say: Yonder little circle contains the goal toward which the sun and planets are hastening today. Even the speed of this motion has been subjected to measurement and found to be about ten miles per second. The objective point and the rate of motion thus stated, exact science holds her peace. Here genuine knowledge stops; and we can proceed further only by the aid of that imagination which men of science need to curb at every moment. But let no one think that the sun will ever reach the so-called apex. To do so would mean cosmic motion on a straight line, while every consideration of celestial mechanics points to motion on a curve. When shall we turn sufficiently upon that curve to detect its bending? It is a problem that we must leave as a rich heritage to generations that are to follow us. The visionary theorist's notion of a great central sun, controlling our own sun's way in space, must be dismissed as far too daring. But for such a central sun we may substitute a central center of gravity, belonging to a great system of which our sun is but an insignificant member. Then we reach a conception that has lost nothing in the grandeur of its simplicity, and is yet in accord with the probabilities of sober mechanical science. We cease to be a lonely world, and stretch out the bonds of a common relationship to yonder stars within the firmament.—Popular Science Monthly.

City Which Is Not a City.

Bonne Terre, Mo., although containing a population of 5,000, is not, properly speaking, a city or town. It is merely an aggregation of houses, streets and folks. There is no mayor, no assembly, no commissioners of this or that. The township authorities look to the peace of the community and transact all other necessary public business. Bonne Terre is a business enterprise managed on purely business principles. All the land is owned by a mining company, which leases building lots for long terms. The company thus keeps control of all the public interests of the place, the result being that the town is thriving, contented and up to date.

It's Easy To Take

Thin, pale, anæmic girls need a fatty food to enrich their blood, give color to their cheeks and restore their health and strength. It is safe to say that they nearly all reject fat with their food.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

is exactly what they require; it not only gives them the important element (cod-liver oil) in a palatable and easily digested form, but also the hypophosphites which are so valuable in nervous disorders that usually accompany anæmia.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is a fatty food that is more easily digested than any other form of fat. A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health. You can get it in this way.

We have known persons to gain a pound a day while taking it.

PIG ATE PYTHON.

Capt. McMullen's Mistake in Selecting Snake Food.

The trading steamship St. Regulus started from Hongkong last May with three big snakes and one pig, says the New York World. The St. Regulus docked at the foot of Pike street, East River, at 8 o'clock last night with only two serpents and one pig. It was this way. The snakes, which were star passengers especially commended to the consideration of Capt. McMullen, were so lavishly fed on shore that it was not anticipated they would again become hungry for several moons. The Oriental dealer who sold the sleepy snakes suggested that they might recover their appetite before the trip was ended, and advised that a little pig be placed in the cage with the largest of the reptiles. The serpents were of the python breed, and more than 20 feet long. If the biggest python of all showed an appetite for fresh pig, then the other pythons should be tempted with like delicacies, said the snake dealer. Capt. McMullen bought a proper pig. It had a snout for business and an artistic curl in its tail. The pig was dropped into the cage with the big python. Maybe the Hongkong pig's mental poise was upset for a few days after entering the python's cage, but he soon regained his composure, took charge of the cage and paid little attention to the stupid python. The pig, whose spirits revived and whose system thrived on the food that the sailors threw into the cage, developed an abnormal appetite. The days sped on and the St. Regulus crossed the Indian ocean, entered the Gulf of Aden, traversed the Red sea and passed through the Suez canal. In the Mediterranean the Eurasian pig, which had now developed into a shoat with a vicious temper, decided to force matters to an issue. "If there's any vivisection to be done in this cage I guess I'll be the operator," soliloquized the pig, according to Captain McMullen's belief. "I think I would like a piece of this python. If I don't eat him he may wake up some fine day and eat me," appears to have been the line of the intelligent pig's reasoning. So piggie helped himself to the fattest part of the python's sleek, long body. The snake couldn't help himself, and the first thing Captain McMullen knew the inquisitive pig had eaten his own weight out of the writhing python and then the reptile died.

SOME STUMP RETORTS

REPARTEE A WEAPON OF CAMPAIGN TALKERS.

Often Has Greater Effect than Heavy-Weight Arguments—Truth Not Always Necessary in Warm Replies to Questions—Crop of Stories.

Of the thousands of political talkers who have been scattered over the country making the welkin ring with praise of candidates and party principles the "spouters" who were sharpest at repartee were the ones likely to make the largest tracks in getting votes. The speaker who can give a quick, warm answer to the man in the audience who interrupts him with embarrassing questions is the kind of a campaigner that tickles the fancy of the average voter. At most any meeting in the entire country the political orator is apt to be bombarded with shrewd questions fired at him by a member of the opposition party in the audience.

Instead of being flustered by these questions the campaign speaker, if he is a first-class one, must be ready to meet and parry such thrusts and fire back a hot retort at the questioner which will unhorse him and produce the reverse of the effect intended by the latter. It seldom matters much whether or not the reply of the speaker is the exact truth, the principal point being it shall turn the laugh on the questioner.

STUMP SPEAKER READY WITH REPARTEE.

Over a quarter of a century ago a General James Madison Leach, a North Carolina congressman, made a retort to an inquisitive member of one of his audiences that made the man sorry because of his curiosity. The retort was one of the kind which did not need to be backed up by truth to make it effective. General Leach was a representative from one of the eastern districts of his state and was a candidate for re-election. While in congress Leach had voted for that famous measure which came to be known in history as the "salary grab." By passing the law the congressmen voted themselves several thousand dollars "back pay," by which phrase the extra money secured was generally known in the Carolinas. The opponents of the general were using the fact that he voted for the "grab" with more or less campaign effect. Until the latter part of the campaign no one had mustered up sufficient courage to say anything personally to the congressman about the matter, for he was known to have a pretty caustic tongue. One night a few days before the election the candidate was making a speech in a schoolhouse in one of the way back sections of the district. He was getting along pretty well toward the close of his talk when a man in the rear of the crowd yelled: "How about that back pay of yours?"

"Well, just wait a minute until I finish the point I am discussing and I'll tell you about my back pay." The general had been taken a little unawares and he needed a second to think up just what to say. When he had exhausted the topic which he had been discussing he stopped and, looking back toward the rear of the crowd, said: "Now, where is the man who wanted to know about my back pay?"

"Here we are," responded the man, with a slightly decreasing amount of assurance.

"Oh, you are the fellow, are you?" said the general as if he recognized the man, although he had never seen him before in his life and had no idea who he was. "Well, stand up straight there, so everybody can see you. Somebody give him a chair. Now, get up there in plain sight of the whole crowd, for I am going to make you famous in about twenty seconds."

The man was beginning to get nervous and feel as if he would like to go through a crack in the floor, but as there was no crack large enough he sheepishly climbed on the chair.

"So you are the highly scented human specimen who wants to know about my back pay, are you?" continued the congressman. The man tried to nod and swallow a lump in his throat at the same time. "Well, I'll tell you about that back pay. I got exactly $5,000 back pay and of that amount I paid $4,977.42 on a note that I had indorsed for your infernal —— old scalawag of a bankrupt father."

The crowd went into spasms of delight and the poor inquirer shriveled up and slunk out of the house. Of course what Leach had said was pure unadulterated fabrication, but an explanation or a refutation would not have been worth the breath necessary to make it.

Stood Sentry Over Himself.

The Dutch commandant who had charge of all the British prisoners taken after the battles of Glencoe, Dundee and Nicholson's Nek has told Mr. Davitt the following interesting little story:

Going his rounds at midnight on one occasion, he was astounded to see an English soldier acting as Boer sentinel over the prisoners, and on the commandant demanding an explanation "Tommy" offered the following extraordinary account of his transformation from a prisoner to sentinel over himself and fellow-prisoners: "Well, sir, this 'ere poor little chap," pointing to the sleeping form of a Boer lad 15 years old, "was dead broke for sleep after two nights of dooty. I takes pity on the little chap, and I says, 'Look 'ere, you're regular done up, you are, that's sartin. You give me your rifle and take a bit o' sleep, and I'll do sentry go for you, I will. Honor bright! I won't do nothink wrong, blow me if I do! So the little chap went off. It's all right, sir; don't you blime him, please; he is only a kid!"

"I was assured," adds Mr. Davitt, "that neither 'the kid' nor the kind-hearted English prisoner suffered over the unique incident."—London Star.

Where the Coin Goes To.

The amount of gold turned into coin each year by the mints of the world is a mere nothing to the huge quantity used in gilding picture frames, painting signs, binding books, designing on furniture and on pottery. The world's entire stock of gold is about 1,100 tons, but of this only 190 exists in the form of coin.

This stock is increasing by about three and a half tons a year. Four tons and a half are minted, but a ton is lost by waste. This is a small item compared with the 120 tons which jewelers and gilders use up every year, and none of this vast amount is recoverable. France is the largest consumer of gold for the arts. She uses 35,000 pounds a year. Great Britain is a good second, with 34,100 pounds. The United States follow next, with 31,000 pounds. Some things marked "Made in Germany" must be genuine, for her craftsmen use 29,040 pounds. Switzerland, with her big watch industry, absorbs 18,900 pounds; Italy, 9,100 pounds; Russia, 9,000 pounds, and the smaller nations the rest. It is estimated, too, that in India gold to the value of nearly $5,000,000 each year is withdrawn from circulation by native hoarders, and in other countries, bunching them all together, a similar amount.

The Barber Shaved the Floor.

A man entered "Bobby" Uricho's tonsorial paradise the other day and asked for a bottle of hair restorer. Robert affably sold him one, remarking as he accepted the 50 cents it cost that it would be well to dilute it, as it made hair grow so fast that it kept its users awake at nights cutting the capillary excrescence back. Just as the customer was going out of the door the bottle slipped and fell to the ground, scattering the valuable fluid in all directions. Robert refused to give back the 50 cents.

"Tell you what I'll do," said he, with a magnanimous air. "I'll sell you another bottle at cost price, 13 cents."

"Dinged if you will," said the bald man, and in the presence of a curious crowd he got down on the floor and proceeded to rub his head in the pool of restorer. After it was well soaked he got up and went out. Uricho now puts in all his spare time shaving the floor where the restorer was spilled.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Carrot Works Wonders.

Perhaps the new claim made for the carrot will add to the popularity of that somewhat prosaic vegetable. It is said that not only is this a wholesome and sustaining article of food, but that when partaken of in the morning, regularly and plentifully, it has a beautifying effect, surpassing that of any compound sold at the beauty factories. Carrots make the skin smooth and clear, the eyes bright and the hair soft and luxuriant. "Carroty hair" has been a term of derision, but under the new interpretation it is a thing of joy. Eat carrots and grow young is the motto of those who have discovered the hygienic merits of this lowly vegetable.—New York Press.

TEACHING REDSKINS.

METHOD OF EDUCATING INDIAN CHILDREN.

Progress Made by the Introduction of Manual Training Into Schools—Gratifying Results of an Experiment Tried by Miss Estelle Reel.

Since her appointment as superintendent of Indian schools Miss Estelle Reel has accomplished wonders by the introduction of manual methods in agency schools scattered throughout the Western States and territories. Early in her career as superintendent she became convinced, as she herself expresses it, that "among all children, Indians and whites alike, the shortest road to the brain is through the hand." In a perfunctory way manual training had been in operation before Miss Reel received her appointment, but since then it has received close attention and the results have been gratifying in the extreme. In the early days of the republic most Indian teachers sought to lift the aboriginal mind to the plane of Christian enlightenment by means of texts and sermons, catechisms and injunctions, and too commonly their efforts ended in the sad realization that the seed was sown on stony ground. Half a century ago some teachers began to realize that the chief need of the Indian is for practical education involving manual training and actual introduction into the arts and industries of their Caucasian neighbors, and the efforts of those teachers who adopted this plan were always more or less fruitful. It was not until the advent of Miss Reel that the system was given a really fair trial. The result has been so satisfactory that doubtless the work will be still further developed in future. Observers of educational progress are impressed with the increasingly practical character of instruction in our own schools; the kindergarten has passed the experimental stage and become an important educational factor; manual training has been substituted for the dreary grind of word drill, to the immeasurable benefit of pupils, and nature teaching is rapidly replacing the husks of dead knowledge in every university and in all the better normal schools and high schools, as well as in many of the primary schools throughout the country.

In speaking of the benefits accruing from this system of education Miss Reel said recently: "The benefits of this educational revolution to the children and youth of America have been very great, yet the advantages of the modern method are incomparably greater to Indian children than to their Caucasian contemporaries. Allowing for exceptional cases, the Indian child is of lower physical organization than the white child of corresponding age. His forearms are smaller and his fingers and hands less flexible; the very structure of his bones and muscles will not permit so wide a variety of manual movements as are customary among Caucasian children, and his very instincts and modes of thought are adjusted to this imperfect manual development. In like manner his face is without that complete development of nerve and muscle which gives character to expressive features; his face seems stolid because it is without the mechanism of free expression, and at the same time his mind remains measurably stolid because of the very absence of mechanism for its own expression. In short, the Indian instincts and nerves and muscles and bones are adjusted one to another, and all to the habits of the race for uncounted generations, and his offspring cannot be taught to be like the children of the white man until they are taught to do like them. The children of our aboriginal land holders are now wards of the nation, and in the minds of most right-thinking people they are entitled to kindly consideration."

EDUCATING YOUNG LATTER DAY SAVAGES.

WHERE IMMIGRANTS LAND.

Extensive Quarters Being Built on Ellis Island, New York.

Early next year the immigrant who arrives in New York Bay will make his first landing on free soil in one of a set of spacious buildings which are now in course of erection on Ellis Island, New York Bay. The new immigrant station, when completed, will consist of the large examination and office building, a restaurant, laundry and bathhouse, a power-house and a hospital and a physician's house. All of these are to be fireproof. The government does not intend that the catastrophe which destroyed the old station on the night of June 15, 1897, and threatened the lives of between 200 and 300 immigrants, shall be repeated. No wood has been used in the construction of the main building except in the floors of the offices on the second story and in the trimmings.

The architects have adopted a color scheme in red brick, Indiana limestone and Maine granite. The design is picked out in the light stones and accentuated by the contrasting tints. The big building is further accentuated to the distant passer-by on the water by four towers. The exterior in some respects suggests an exhibition hall. Owing to the absence of any buildings not in harmony with it in dimensions and design, the eye does not convey to the mind an idea of its size. It covers one and one-half acres of ground and is 165x400 feet.

IMMIGRANT HOSPITAL, ELLIS ISLAND.

In order to provide greater isolation for the hospital and furnish a basin for the anchorage of the steamers used in transporting the immigrants, a new island, about three acres in extent, has been made southwest of the main island and parallel to it. The two are connected on the Jersey City side by a crib. The hospital is being built on the Jersey City end of this new rectangle of land. The physician's house is to stand on the southwestern extremity. The other buildings are on the main island, the restaurant, laundry and bathhouse adjoining the main building on the northwest end and the power-house occupying the north side of the island.

All of the buildings and the landing piers and ferry slip are to be connected with covered passageways, so that from the moment he lands on the island and until he leaves it the immigrant is not once in the open air unless he is permitted to walk upon the broad promenade on the roof. There are no loopholes by which he may leave without the consent of the officials.

Ellis Island has been used as an immigration station since 1891. Shortly after Congress relieved New York State of the supervision of the European immigrants entering through this port a wooden building 750x250 feet was erected on Ellis Island as a station at an expense of between $500,000 and $600,000. It was opened on New Year's Day, 1891. On the night of June 15, 1897, the big nondescript building, described at the time as a veritable tinderbox, was burned to the ground, fortunately without the loss of a life. The immigration office was moved back to its original home in the barge office and preparations were made for the construction of a series of fireproof buildings to replace the old buildings. The cost of these is over $1,000,000.

HYPNOTISM AND PUGILISM.

Easy Subject Becomes a Tough Customer When Under the Influence.

One of the most remarkable cases of hypnotism yet reported is attracting the attention of medical men here, says the Baltimore Sun. The victim, too, for a time made things lively for about twenty persons who were attending a tea in the West End last evening. The scene of the singular actions of the victim of hypnotism was at the residence of W. J. Gilman, No. 922 West Marshall street. The subject of the hypnotists was John Sweeney, the son of a well-known livery man.

During the evening it was suggested as an additional means of entertaining the guests that some one be hypnotized. Young Sweeney, who is quite a powerful young man, offered his services, and was soon under the influence of a young operator named Cook. In a few moments it was seen that the young man was completely under Cook's influence. The company became annoyed and suggested that the spell be broken and the victim released. This was attempted, but in vain. The young man cut up all sorts of antics. In his efforts to release his patient the operator was terribly slugged and several of his front teeth knocked out. Sweeney manifested wonderful feats of strength. At times half a dozen or more men attempted to seize and bind him, but could not do so. The services of a stalwart policeman were called upon. When he got within reach of the latter's fist he received a terrific blow, which sent him spinning away more than twenty feet. Sweeney, under the peculiar influences, appeared to imagine himself a prize-fighter, and for a time it was well that few disputed this point with him.

A physician was finally summoned, and after a long struggle the young man was handcuffed. He was removed to a hospital for treatment. Sweeney remained in a stupor until the next morning about 8 o'clock.

Too Many Fried Messes.

Dr. Jacobi, writing in the Medical Record, says that in the United States there is one physician to every 600 people—proportionately twice as many as in Great Britain, four times as many as France has, five times as many as Germany has and six times as many as Italy has. And Dr. Jacobi might have gone on to show that we take an interest in patent or proprietary medicines and in various other forms of extra-professional treatment which is almost non-existent in Europe.

There must be some explanation of this American craze for doctoring. Certainly it is not that we are a sickly and an ailing race. On the contrary we are exceptionally hardy and enduring.

It may be that our backwardness in the art of cooking has a great deal to do with it. Outside of a few highly-favored centers the efforts of cooks are directed chiefly to the concocting of sundry fried messes that are interesting to the palate but productive of that lumpy feeling in the pit of the stomach and afterward of all manner of disorders, from a general sense of gloom and dissatisfaction and need of some sort of medicine to complete collapse and a fierce struggle with death.

A good cook can come pretty near to keeping the doctor out of the house.—New York World.

French Tobacco.

Many French medical men are abandoning the use of tobacco, owing largely to the government monopoly of that commodity. According to the physicians the cigars of the "Regie" (those made at the government factories) are so uniformly bad and the tax on all other brands is so prohibitive that the only sensible thing to do is not to smoke at all.

A girl may keep quiet on the subject of her intended's income until after their engagement is announced, but that is the turning point for boasts or wails.

"This a great story," said the new reporter, "but I can't think of a good head for it. It's about a trusted employe, whose accounts were found to be crooked, and when he was accused of it dropped dead." "That's easy," said the Snake Editor, helpfully; "head it 'Died from Exposure.'"—Philadelphia Press.

Noble Little Georgie: Proud Mamma—Wasn't Georgie a noble little gentleman to insist upon Nellie's helping herself to a peach before he took one himself? Uncle Henry—Oh, yes, very noble. George, what made you let Nellie help herself first? Georgie—Because there wasn't but two peaches, a great big one and a little bit of one. I knew Nellie would be too polite to take the big one.—Boston Transcript.

Electric-Lighting Machinery.

Some idea of the magnitude of the electric-lighting machinery in this country may be obtained from the statement that the public lighting stations of New York City alone supply incandescent lamps each year to the number of 2,125,000. This is independent of those furnished by private plants.

What a noiseless world this would be if women were as quiet all the time as they are when it comes to telling their age.

Why a Minister Gave Up Preaching.

A minister had his salary cut down one hundred dollars a year or so ago (and this was in a Western church), because his wife wore a handsomer gown than some of the prominent women in the congregation. The reason was given openly, and the matter found its way into public print. The fact that the wife's wealthy aunt was the donor seemed to be of no consequence, and the poor woman herself, irritated and mortified at the publicity given to her private affairs, succeeded in persuading her husband to withdraw from the ministry.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Delicacies Past and Present.

The identity between seventeenth century and nineteenth century delicacies is curious. Both periods agree, for instance, as to the merits of caviare and anchovies, asparagus points, clarified butter, parmesan grated, soft icing, almond paste, and fonds d'artichauts, while, like ourselves—when fortunate—and the Caveman, the seventeenth "centurion" began dinner with oysters. Robert May, having studied in Paris, offers without prejudice ways of dressing tortoise, frogs, and snails.—Gentleman's Magazine.

A Dining Calculation.

If twelve persons were to agree to dine together every day, but never sit exactly in the same order around the table, it would take 18,000,000 years at the rate of one dinner a day, and they would have to eat more than 470,000,000 dinners before they could get through all the possible arrangements in which they could place themselves.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

The Most Important Period in a Woman's Existence.—Mrs. Johnson Tells How She Was Helped Over the Trying Time.

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying, and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are only a few of the symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life.

The three following letters are guaranteed to be genuine and true, and still further prove what a great medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is for women.

Mar. 12, 1897.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:— I have been sick for a long time. I was taken sick with flooding. All my trouble seemed to be in the womb. I ache all the time at the lower part of the womb. The doctor says the womb is covered with ulcers. I suffer with a pain on the left side of my back over the kidney. I am fifty years old and passing through the change of life. Please advise me what to do to get relief. Would like to hear from you as soon as possible."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

Jan. 23, 1898.

"I have been taking your remedies, and think they have helped me a great deal. I had been in bed for ten weeks when I began taking your Vegetable Compound, but after using it for a short time I was able to be up around the house. The aching in the lower part of womb has left me. The most that troubles me now is the flowing. That is not so bad, but still there is a little every day. I am not discouraged yet, and shall continue with your medicine, for I believe it will cure me."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

April 13, 1900.

"I send you this letter to publish for the benefit of others. I was sick for about nine years so that I could not do my work. For three months I could not sit up long enough to have my bed made. I had five different doctors, and all said there was no help for me. My trouble was change of life. I suffered with ulceration of the womb, pain in sides, kidney and stomach trouble, backache, headache, and dizziness. I am well and strong, and feel like a new person. My recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knew me. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not do without your medicine for anything. There is no need of women suffering so much if they would take your remedies, for they are a sure cure."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

When one stops to think about the good Mrs. Johnson derived from Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine, it seems almost beyond belief; yet it is all true as stated in her three letters published above at her own request.

As a matter of positive fact Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of letters from women who have been safely carried through that danger period "Change of Life." Mrs. Johnson's cure is not an unusual one for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to accomplish.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Oil Field Is Expanding—Jazrelites Sell Goods and Prepare for Heaven—Brazil Young Man Shot Dead—Aged Man Assaulted and Robbed.

State Geologist Blatchley, who has just returned from a trip over the oil and gas field of Indiana, says that the oil field of Indiana is rapidly spreading. He says the output of oil will succeed that of gas and that the oil field will become coextensive with the gas field. Geologist Blatchley affirms that after gas is exhausted deeper drilling will bring fine yields of oil. The field is extending westward through Wabash and Miami counties and southward toward Indianapolis. In the last ten years, Mr. Blatchley says, Indiana has produced 28,000,000 barrels of crude oil, which brought $18,000,000 into the State, to say nothing of the vast sums of outside capital attracted to Indiana in drilling operations. He thinks this production will be largely exceeded in the next ten years.

Fix Date for End of Time.

The members of the unique religious sect known as the Jazrelites are arranging to take passage for Scotland. The prophets of the sect have fixed a near date for the end of time and the revolution of all terrestrial things. The sect originates in Scotland and the flight of the faithful will be taken from some mountain there. Small communities of these zealots have been established in northern Indiana and southern Michigan counties. The men and women are disposing of their earthly possessions and the money accumulated will be expended in reaching Scotland, from whence they believe they are to be transported heavenward.

Shoots His Former Guest.

Charles Reynolds, 19 years old, was shot by Samuel Harmon, aged 68. Reynolds and four other young men had been at the Harmon house and had started for home. A stone thrown from the darkness struck the door and the young men stopped to await the result. Harmon came to the door with a shotgun and fired at them as they stood in the street. Reynolds fell dead. Harmon is in jail. He says he thought the young men threw the stone at his door.

Assault and Rob Aged Man.

John W. Houck, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Centerville, was mysteriously assaulted and robbed by unknown persons. Houck, who is 70 years old, was called from his store and told that his horse had broken out of the pasture lot, located some distance away. He left the place to attend to the animal and was waylaid.

State News in Brief.

Several deaths from diphtheria have occurred at Farmersburg.

Bessie Saylor, 14, Logansport, died of lockjaw, following vaccination.

Edgar E. Latham, Elkhart, died of nicotine poisoning. Cigarettes.

Mary Rupp, aged 17, and Gustav Prandtke were killed by a Lake Shore train at South Bend.

Ed Harrison, a young dentist, despondent because he had no employment, committed suicide at Terre Haute.

The town of Summerville has three distinct cases of smallpox. At present a strict quarantine is maintained.

Unknown persons dynamited the saloon of Comedery Hickman at Maysville. The building was completely demolished and its contents destroyed.

The North Manchester College, which has been in financial straits almost from the time of its foundation nearly ten years ago, is to become the property of the Dunkard Church of Indiana.

The homes of Fenton King and Mrs. Burns in Elwood were wrecked by dynamite, some one having placed a stick of the explosive near the houses. The members of the families narrowly escaped death.

Mrs. Alta M. Edwards, who was granted a divorce in the Circuit Court in La Porte, was married the same afternoon to Charles W. Kline, a wealthy farmer of Lake County, Illinois, who is said to have courted her before her marriage with Edwards.

Mrs. Mary Piotrowsky of Michigan City has found Frank Prall, a brother whom she had mourned as dead for twenty-one years. The two have lived within a few miles of each other for many years. Prall left Poland twenty-one years ago, and Mrs. Piotrowsky followed to this country a few years later.

A tragic death, as a result of the shooting at Waynesburg, in which Dr. Conda Beck killed William Barton, occurred at the same place. Mrs. Emma Swift, who was one of the two witnesses to the Beck-Barton affair, driven insane by that scene from which she ran at the time, cut her own throat from ear to ear with a razor and died instantly.

Rollin Brammer, aged 75 years, residing at Elton, committed suicide by hanging, his dead body being found dangling from a rafter on the porch at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ida Taylor. The old gentleman two years ago traded a fine farm of 250 acres for land in Kansas. The deal proved a big swindle, and the old man some time ago returned almost penniless and distracted.

The latest developments in the toll-road war now going on in Carroll County was the burning of the toll house at Deer Creek by a mob. About midnight several masked horsemen rode into the village and stopped near the tollhouse. A few minutes later they rode rapidly away, and it was discovered that the tollhouse had been fired and it burned to the ground before the citizens could be aroused.

Mrs. Caroline Hass, near Albion, celebrated her ninety-ninth birthday.

The differences between the engineers and the American Tin Plate Company in the mills at Anderson and Elwood have been settled.

Mrs. Ratze, a former Indianapolis woman and lately a resident of Chicago, killed herself by swallowing four ounces of carbolic acid. She was 76 years old.

A new factory which will cost not less than $1,000,000 to build and equip will be established in South Bend by the Singer Manufacturing Company, makers of the celebrated sewing machines.

John H. Barker of Michigan City has made a handsome gift to the Episcopal diocese of Michigan City in the form of a residence to cost from $20,000 to $25,000. It will be known as the bishop's house and will be occupied by the bishop and his family.

The biggest oil well yet drilled in the new oil pool on the borders of Hartford City is completed. It is producing 150 barrels a day natural and when shot is expected to double its capacity. Four wells now are completed in the new pool and all are making more than 100 barrels each. More wells are going down, operators are greatly excited and a town lot boom is on.

Badly Squeezed by a Black Snake.

W. B. Gearhart of Millinville, this county, had a narrow escape from being killed by a huge black snake to-day, and was rescued only after he had been caught within its coils and when he had about given up all hope.

In company with a friend, Gearhart was driving to Hetlerville, when he espied an immense black snake gliding across the road. He hurriedly jumped from the wagon, with the intention of killing it. The snake at once showed fight, and Mr. Gearhart, having failed to provide himself with a weapon before leaving the wagon was greatly handicapped. He put up a brave fight, but the snake quickly had him powerless within its coils.

Michael Hartzell, who lives nearby, noticed Gearhart's predicament, and getting a revolver, hastened to his rescue. It was only after he had shot it several times that the snake was killed and its victim released from the coils.

The snake measured ten feet, and was the longest seen in this vicinity in recent years—Bloomington (Pa.) Correspondence Philadelphia Inquirer.

DANGERS THAT FLY PAST.

Locomotive Engineers Are Unnerved by Accidents They Escape.

The old engineer had finished grooming his engine for the night's run and was whiling away the half hour before train time in swapping yarns with his fireman. It was turn at a story. After puffing reflectively on his pipe for a moment or two, he said, half questioningly: "I don't believe we've ever run over anybody, Bill, since you been in the cab.

"But it isn't running over that scares you," he continued, "though that is bad enough. It's the coming so all-fired close to it and missing that takes the tuck out of a man. After you once hit anything the worst you can do is to plow right along, but when you see a man on the track and blow your whistle and shut off steam and put on the brakes, and then the man turns out to be deaf or drunk or something of the kind, and you know you can't help striking him, then's the time you wish you were running a steamboat or a fire engine.

"The closest shave I ever had was when I was pulling the President's special up to Albany. We were trying to make a record run. We had passed the Poughkeepsie bridge and were doing better than a mile a minute when I saw a man walking down the track toward us. The fireman blew the whistle, but the man never budged from between the rails. As we got closer I saw he was walking with his head down and paying no attention to what was going on. I shut off the steam, jammed on the brakes and reversed her, but we slid along at a pretty fair gait. He never stirred until just as the engine was going to hit him. Then he jumped out of the way, grinned up at me and put his fingers to his nose.

"'Get after him,' I yelled, but before the fireman could climb down from the cab the man was running down the track for all he was worth—and that wasn't more than 30 cents. We didn't have any time to spare, so we hustled on again, and I've been trying ever since to decide whether our friend was drunk or crazy, or had a darned peculiar idea of humor. Anyway, I wish I'd had a little more time. I'd like to have taken a chance at him with a coal shovel."—New York Mail and Express.

New Fast-Firing Rifle.

An Australian inventor has produced a rifle which fires forty shots a minute, but this speed has often been surpassed. More than twenty-five years ago the Soper rifle, a single-shot breech-loader, was fired sixty times in one minute. The first magazine rifle, that used in the American Civil War, fired only ten shots a minute. Then came the "Spencer," which emptied its magazine of seven shots in ten seconds. Probably forty shots a minute is the average maximum of modern service rifles, but there are automatic rifles, in principle similar to the Maxim, which can fire ten shots a second, the difficulty being to supply the ammunition quickly enough for a minute's continuous firing.

An Island of Sulphur.

In the Bay of Plenty, New Zealand, is situated White Island, which consists mainly of sulphur mixed with gypsum and a few other minerals. Over the island, which is about three miles in circumference, and which rises between eight hundred and nine hundred feet above the sea, floats continually an immense cloud of vapor attaining an elevation of ten thousand feet. In the center is a boiling lake of acid charged water, covering fifty acres, and surrounded with blow-holes from which steam and sulphurous fumes are emitted with great force and noise. With care a boat can be navigated on the lake. The sulphur from White Island is very pure, but little effort has yet been made to procure it systematically.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

PURE BLOOD AND STRONG NERVES

With glowing health all things are possible, small annoyances fade into nothingness and real troubles are battled with successfully. Women who are blessed with perfect health are a constant joy to themselves and all around them. The beauty which health alone can make permanent is a crown which raises a woman above other women. Such beauty is always accompanied by a sweet disposition, for snappishness is a sure sign of ill-health and leaves its mark quickly on the features.

It seems to be the fashion for women to ignore health and sacrifice it to the little every-day trials, or offer it up on the altar of devotion to daily tasks. Then again the nervous organization of women is constantly attacked by woman's natural experiences, so that it is practically impossible for her to retain the beauty which nature gave her, unless she has discriminating advice and right support.

Dr. Greene's Nervura

for the Blood and Nerves.

Trials and troubles are easily overcome by the women whose strength is the genuine strength of perfect health. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, bridges the chasm that separates the sickly woman from happiness. It fills her veins with blood that is pure and clean.

MRS. WM. E. ROSSE, of 85 Farrington St., Flushing, L. I., says:

"In regard to myself, I have suffered for years with disease, having been troubled with great nervousness, female complaints, indigestion, and great weakness and prostration. I did not have strength to do much of anything. Knowing the great value of health and strength I consulted doctors and took many medicines, but they all failed to cure me, and I grew worse rather than better. I happened to see in the papers how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, was doing in restoring to health everybody who took it, and I thought I would try a bottle. I used it and to my surprise I began to gain strength every day. I am so thankful that I tried it! It is certainly the most excellent tonic and strength giver. I recommend it very highly and wish that other people who are troubled in any way would take warning and use it."

TO PRESERVE WOMANLY BEAUTY

At all the stages of a woman's life Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is shown to be efficient to ward off the results of nervousness, or overwork, or impure blood. From early girlhood to advanced years, this world-renowned medicine builds up the forces destroyed by disease, grief, or over-exertion, and the effects of this great medicine are quickly felt and permanently retained. Let women guard well their health, and consult Dr. Greene freely. Nothing they can possibly do will so surely keep them strong and well, or repair the exhaustion from acute illness, nothing will work so continually to the preservation of beauty as the great health-giving Nervura. Dr. Greene's office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, where he may be consulted either by personal call or by letter. Women may write in perfect confidence, and get Dr. Greene's advice free.

—$3 A DAY GUARANTEED AGENTS (men or women) selling our high grade laundry and toilet soaps. For exclusive territory write MILLEN SOAP CO., 612 P. Adams St., Chicago, Ill.

—Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets cure billiousness, constipation and headache. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—Only the quite ignorant person feels that life is easily understood.

—Many of your friends or people whom you know to have contracted consumption, pneumonia or other fatal diseases by neglect of a simple cold or cough. Foley's Honey and Tar, a safe, sure and pleasant cough medicine, would have saved them. It is guaranteed. H. B. McCord.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Two good second hand grain drills for sale cheap at Culbertson & Boland's. 36tf

—Mr. Engelbert Ashley is giving his house on West Seventh street a new coat of paint.

—Mrs. Sallie Weamer and Mrs. Frank Zimmerman drove to Hudson to spend the day with R. H. Weamer and family.

—Solomon Deetz of Fairfield was in the city today calling on his nephew, W. C. Kettering, and also attending to business.

—Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan came up from Fairfield today and report the little child of Charles Bateman some better and out of danger.

—The trustees of the several townships are now getting their accounts in shape to turn their books over to their successors, who will be elected next Tuesday.

—Joseph Krehl of Fairfield was here today. He says that free delivery route is a bad thing, as it accommodates but a few people and makes it worse for all the others.

—It is worth remarking that so far, that not more than a third of the township trustees have published their annual statement as required by law. What is the matter?

—DO YOU WANT TO SELL YOUR PROPERTY?—We have several parties who want to buy property in Auburn. If you want to sell, call on us quick.—MOODY & RICKEL.

—Geo. Bishop jr., and his father-in-law, Cal Grube, will occupy the Harter residence on North Jackson street in a short time. It is a large house and will be ample for both families.

—Harpster Walter's little son who has been strapped to his bed for twenty-five days, has had the straps removed. He is not yet able to move his leg but it is thought he is doing nicely.

—WOOD WANTED.—We want 35 cords of 20-inch wood delivered at the north or ward school house in Auburn. Must be sound hard wood.
H. C. SHULL, Sec. school board.

—We have it on good authority that I. M. Zent has fallen heir to legacy of $18,000 by the death of an aunt. We never rejoice at the death of anyone, but if this is true, we can rejoice as far as Isaac M. is concerned.

—Frank Campbell and wife are down from Cromwell. He came to pay his taxes, and they return today. They like it well there. He works some at his trade and she teaches piano and organ. But he pays the most attention to his band. He has organized and is leader of a fine band of seventeen pieces and gets a good salary for his service. We are glad to see the DeKalb boys and girls do well.

Thursday's Daily.

—Our friend, J. M. Tomlinson of Wilmington, went on our 1901 list today.

—Dr. Baxter reports a girl baby born last evening to Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Rohm up the Waterloo road. Stormy nights often bring good luck.

WHAT HAVE YOU TO TRADE.—If you have a farm you want to trade for town property and part cash we can make a deal for you. MOODY & RICKEL.

—Mrs. Dr. Showalter was over from Waterloo yesterday and reports that steps are being taken to place Frank Kennedy at Longcliff on account of the condition of his health and mind.

—Stroh Times:—Last Monday the town of Stroh was one year old. The first building of the town of Stroh was commenced on Oct. 15, 1899. The growth of the town since that date has been very rapid, and its growth still continues.

—Mr. Forkner received word today from the department that a money order for eighty-five cents, issued in 1888, has never been called for, and he was asked to trace it. This shows thoughtfulness on the part of the department.

Tuesday night, Charles Myers at the Wabash stole $200 from a trunk in the home of Conrad Peters. The fellow was accompanied to Huntington by his sister and another girl, to whom he gave $30. They returned here, while Myers has skipped out.

—The A. O. U. W. had a grand meeting last evening, it being their thirty-second anniversary. So, after a lot of regular work, including the initiation of four candidates, they had a fine supper in honor of the occasion. The order seems to be a sound and popular one.

—Mrs. S. B. Johnston has now settled fully with James H. Rose, who had been chosen commissioner to dispose of the real estate of her late husband. Mrs. Johnston had two years in which to make the concluding payments on the property, but has it all paid up now. It has been reported that she sold her property up the Waterloo road in order to meet these payments. But such is not the case. She has that yet.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the need and suffering. The proprietors of Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs are surely cured by it. Call on H. B. McCord druggist, and get a free trial bottle. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed or price refunded.

Friday's Daily.

—Frank Gaff of Butler was here tax-paying and in the rally today, and the COURIER is several dollars better for his visit.

—Mrs. Barns called on Mrs. Boyer at Hope hospital yesterday, and found her doing nicely, as she has been from the start.

—Henry Pickhart is removing from under Mr. Hebel's sidewalk, the roots of the maple trees which have caused the walk to raise in places and become uneven.

—The COURIER is under obligations to Charles Voss of Waterloo, our old time neighbor, remembered the COURIER handsomely this week. Phil is one of the best workmen we ever knew in the shoe line, as we have had dealings with him for thirty years to prove. We might add that his account is paid up into 1902.

Saturday's Daily.

—James McDowell went to Butler today.

—Jack Dorland is here at present a guest of his Cousin Mort Sheets.

—Dr. Baxter reports a girl baby born today to Mr. and Mrs. George Till.

Opportunity For Business.

During the past year the Chicago & North-Western Railway Company built 474 miles of line through the most fertile portions of Iowa and Minnesota. These new lines of railway are now in full operation and are dotted with promising towns, which are trade centers for well located communities. A descriptive pamphlet with a list of business opportunities in each town may be obtained upon application to agents of the Chicago & North-Western Railway or to W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger & Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

Red Hot From The Gun

Was the ball that hit G. B. Steadman of Newark, Mich., in the Civil War. It caused horrible Ulcers that no treatment helped for 20 years. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him. Cures Cuts, Bruises, Burns, Boils, Felons, Corns, Skin Eruptions. Best Pile cure on earth. 25 cents a box. Cure guaranteed. Sold by H. B. McCord, druggist.

Legs Crushed.

As the special train was starting away from Garrett last evening, three lads jumped on to ride a short way. Soon they noticed one of their number was missing. A search was made and it was found he had fallen under the wheels and both legs were crushed. We have not learned whether he lived. His name is Singler

What Would You Do?

If you were in our place and had Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for sale and knew it to be a certain cure for all stomach derangements, constipation or sick headache? Why, you would keep talking about it, swear by it and sell lots of it just as we do. At H. B. McCord's.

—For months past a man has been coining money by exhibiting in various parts of Kansas a "feathered dog." A reporter went to view the alleged freak He pulled half a dozen feathers out of the dog but the animal never winced. Then it was discovered that the dog had been covered from head to tail with a tight-fitting coat of canton flannel on which pigeon feathers had been so skillfully sewn as to seem natural, and there are other shows of a like kind.

—"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Poteru, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases make it a favorite everywhere. H. B. McCord.

—Electric line may be built from Fort Wayne to Layfayette, through Logansport. The Eel River road may be converted into an electric line.

—To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood, and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequalled. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Working Night and Day

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Every pill is a sugar-coated globule of health, that changes weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by H. B. McCord's drugstore.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have been the attacks that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—Mark Twain announces that he contemplates breaking both legs, so that he may never leave America again He will winter and then go to his home in Hartford, Conn., for permanent residence. He has two books under way and a number of magazine articles, but says he will not lecture again.

Called Him a Liar.

Barney Plumb says he called every doctor a liar until he tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. He says it saved him hundreds of dollars doctor bill, for one 50c bottle cured him of stomach trouble. Sold by H. B. McCord.

—The British have decided that the American Jockeys who have won nearly all the big races over there during the past few years, really do not know how to ride at all. That is like John Bull! Pretty soon he'll be saying that we never did know how to build cup defenders, either.

Don't Hesitate.

or fool away your money. If you are sick you can't afford it. Get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation, sick headache or any other kind of stomach trouble and you will be cured, for it is guaranteed by H. B. McCord, the leading druggist of the town.

—Landlady (threatingly)—"I'll give you a piece of my mind one of these days if you're not careful." Boarder—"I guess I can stand it if it isn't any bigger than that piece of pie you gave me."—Buffalo Express.

Mrs. M. P. O'Brien.

Ivesdale, Ill., writes: "I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as a family medicine with the best of results. For derangements of the stomach and as a general laxative I like it better than anything I have ever used. It is so pleasant to taste, my children are always anxious to take it. H. B. McCord.

—Abdul Hamid is about to order two fast cruisers in the United States. Probably he intends to use them in shipping over the amount of the little bill that he owes us.

—J. W. Bryan of Lowder, Ill. writes: my little boy was very low with pneumonia. Unknown to the doctor we gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. The result was magical and puzzled the doctor, and it immediately stopped the racking cough and he immediately recovered." H. B. McCord.

—What wise, firm and patriotic statesmen McKinley and Bryan would be considered now, if they had been turned down by their respective conventions.

—Geo. A. Points, Upper Sandusky, O., writes: "I have been using Foley's Honey and Tar for hoarseness, and find it the best remedy I ever tried. It stopped the cough immediately and relieved all soreness. H. B. McCord.

Election Notes.

At the polls in Fairfield township, in Trustee Huet's precinct where he was inspector; several votes were in the box before it was discovered that Mr. Huet's name was on the ballot for member of the advisory board. He did not know how his name came there. He at once telephoned to Auburn for instructions and was advised to appoint a man in his place, which he did. Then after a patient wait of about half an hour, the voting was resumed.

In Concord south two ballots were thrown out, as they had peculiar marking exactly alike.

Don't Want the Senate.

Bryan declares he wil not seek a seat in the United States senate if the Nebraska legislature is controlled by the democrats. He has given the following instructions to State-committeemen, J. C. Dahlgren, who is a close personal friend:

"If you hear any of my friends talking about putting me into the United States senate, in case we carry the legislature, you may say that under no circumstances would I accept the office, even were it tendered me. I made my fight for the presidency and I lost. I am not going to take other men's positions from them."

Won His Wife.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 8.—Emmet R. Windle, of North Forks, N. D., won a wife by McKinley's election. His bride was Miss Dora E. Phillips, of Oakfield, who promised to marry Mr. Windle at one if McKinley was elected. Both parties were at Neenah Tuesday. Windle haunted the local republican headquarters until he learned McKinley was surely elected. Then he gave a shout and bolted out the door. A little later he appeared with Miss Phillips before a justice of the peace, by whom they were married.

Died.

Agnes Wilma, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Brand, was born March 23, 1898, and died November 6, 1900, aged 2 years, 7 months and 13 days. Funeral services conducted by Rev. S. J. Mellinger at the home of the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Oiler, Nov. 8, 1900. Interment in Cedar Lake cemetery.

THIRTY-FOUR STATES SOLID.

A Slump Both Ways in Politics, That Puzzles Old-Timers.

The strangest thing about recent elections is that so many of them send a solid delegation to congress either democrat or republican. Time was when such a thing caused people to wonder. When Indiana did this for the first time giving all democrats, several years ago, it was a nine days wonder. But it was not long till the republicans turned the tables. It was a new thing out this way, though it had often happened in the east, as in Vermont, for example, and in Rhode Island.

This election, however, beats all records. It is found that thirty-four states have given solid delegations

Thirteen gave democratic and twenty-one republican sets of congressmen. These states are:

DEMOCRATIC DELEGATIONS.

The democrats have elected solid congressional delegations in the following states, viz: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Montana, Nevada, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia, aggregating seventy five members.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATION.

The republicans have elected solid congressional delegations in the following states, viz: California, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota New Hampshire, North Dakota, Oregon Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming, aggregating ninety members.

Since writing the above we see that democrats claim Idaho. The state has one congressman.

Danish West Indies.

The people of the Danish West India Islands held a meeting of the colonial council at St. Croix, Danish West Indies. Monday the vice chairman denounced the statements made by A. J. Blackwood, the United States consul at St. Croix and chairman of the colonial council, in an interview printed in New York Oct. 26, in which Mr. Blackwood was quoted as saying the sentiment of the people of the Danish West Indies is strongly in favor of annexation. The vice chairman said the allegations made were opposed to the facts in the case and that Mr. Blackwood spoke without the council's authority.

A resolution was adopted to cable King Christian of Denmark "submissively expressing" the wish of the inhabitants to continue under the Danish crown and expressing the belief that annexation to the United States would be against the wishes of the majority of the inhabitants. Some of the members protested against the passage of the resolution, but the vice chairman overruled them.

There was a torchlight procession Monday night styled "the People's Protest." A large and orderly crowd, headed by a band of music, marched through the town. The houses were decorated with Danish flags and the processionists dispersed cheering for Denmark.

Russia Landgrabbing.

Tien Tsin, via Shanghai, Nov. 8.—General Linevitch, the commander of the Russian troops, has officially notified the foreign consuls through the Russian consul, that the land on the river side opposite the British and German settlements has been annexed to Russia by right of conquest. Unless all foreign owners of property immediately deposit documents proving their ownership no claims will be entertained. Under this claim, much railroad property, as well as the east arsenal, is included in the territory annexed by Russia. The consuls will protest against the annexation.

Census Bulletin.

The latest census bulletin of Auburn and some of the best known surrounding cities having between 2,000 and 5,000 inhabitants is as follows:

Cities	Pop.
Angola	2,141
Auburn	3,396
Butler	2,063
Columbia City	2,975
Kendallville	2,354
Ligonier	2,231
Warsaw	3,987
Garrett	3,910

It will be seen by the above that Auburn is gaining over the other towns which were supposed to be ahead.

Died.

Larua Ilene, infant daughter of James and Nellie Wolf, was born in Auburn, Ind., July 13, 1900, and departed this life after a stay with her parents of only 3 months and 26 days. The funeral service was conducted from the home on South Main street this forenoon at 10 o'clock. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

LVI.

A. J. Ralston, Will Baird, Frank Benedict and Herman Green all vote in the Third precinct. And thereby hangs a tale. The inspector of elections has the job of poking the ballots into the boxes. In case of small ballots this is easy. But in case of a large ballot, like that on which were the national and state tickets, it was a hard job. The ballot is of heavy paper and about the size of a table cloth for a small family. To make matters worse, the slot into which the blanket sheet must be thrust is altogether too small for the duty it was made to perform. So the inspectors and judges sweat, and sometimes swear, as they jam the big, soft wad into the unyielding aperture. The officers in precinct Three, sought a way to relieve their pent up feelings They concluded the most effective relief would be to have that slot cut bigger, and waited for some voter to come in who had a good strong jack-knife. The aforementioned gentlemen came in at different times to vote, and seeing the difficulty, each was induced, in the goodness of his heart, to take out his knife and cut and slash and gouge at that slot to make it bigger. Each failed. And each went off with a tired feeling and a knife blade from which the sharpness thereof had fully departed. The ballot box was made of steel.

Rev. Hirsch tells of a sort of good Samaritan down in Adams county He is one of a settlement of Holland Dutch and is quite wealthy He has a reputation for being stingy, a sort of miser. But this is all wrong. No man is more charitable in that section. He often has a load of supplies taken to some poor family, but keeps it secret. As winter comes on, he is in the habit of sending a wagon load of potatoes, cabbage and similar supplies to the orphan asylum at Fort Wayne, now in charge of Rev. B. Ruf, formerly pastor of the Reformed church in Auburn. But he exacts a promise not to tell who sent the supplies. Once he gave $500 to another Fort Wayne institution after having been solicited, and apparently refusing. He took time to investigate, and finding the matter was in good hands and for a good cause, he made the donation.

He is not stingy, but is saving in even small things, in a quiet way. Mr. Hirsch tells a case in point. They were walking along a lane on the friend's farm one day, when Mr. Hirsch saw lying in the path, a large shake shingle in which was a nail sticking up. He stooped and picked up the shake and threw it into the fence corner where no one would be likely to step on it. His Dutch friend went him a point better. He picked up the shake struck it against the fence and forced the nail out, put the nail into his pocket and threw the shake onto the wood pile for kindling. Not a word was said. But there was a little lesson in it, which Mr. Hirch likes to recall, it was so quiet and unobtrusive.

Like the Auburn Case.

We find that in sevesal counties cases were found where the inspector supposing he must return the township vote to the county clerk, sealed them up in the sack and gave them over to that official. In Indianapolis this matter was submitted to the attorney-general, and his decision should be carefully remembered. The Sentinel says:

When the township canvassing board met yesterday morning it was confronted with a difficulty that could not be straightened out until the attorney general had passed judgment upon it.

It was found that in many precincts of the county and city the inspectors had the township tally sheets and poll books in the bags containing the county election returns; so that, as the law requires the township board to meet the day after the election and as the county board does not meet until the second day, the township board did not know what to do.

Mr. Taylor instructed the clerk and election commissioners to take the bag containing both county and township returns to the office of the township canvassing board, take out the entire township returns. Also to submit them to the canvassing board and to place the other returns in the bags and seal them in the full presence of the board. This plan was followed.

Another question which arose from the election was to the counting of the ballots on the constitutional amendments when they had been deposited in any box other than the one intended for them. Mr. Taylor unofficially said he believed the mere matter of which box the ballots were placed in would not affect their legality.

Attention Farmers.

The Auburn Handle Factory will pay the highest cash price for ash handle block delivered at their factory on the Lake Shore tracks, cut 58 inches long. Also want ash logs cut 9½, 14½ and 19½ feet long. All timber to be smooth and sound. Will also take basswood cut 4 feet long and 8 inches in diameter and up, left round with bark on. Will pay $3 per cord.—J. M. CHERRY & CO.

The Early Called.

Recently, Oct. 28, occurred the death of little Opal Sheets, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sheets; the little spirit taking its heavenward flight in the early dawn. Her young life had spanned but a period of 2 years, 7 months and 18 drys. But those brief months meant so much sunshine and gladness to the hearts now bereft, and her early death, therefore, makes their grief all the poignant, for her disposition was one of more than common sweetness. All the people of Auburn united in deepest sympathy for the parents thus suddenly bereft. But they have the consolation that the little flower just unfolding in loveliness has been transplanted to bloom in a fairer clime where flowers never fade.

The funeral services were at the home at 2 p.m, Monday, Oct. 29, and she was laid to rest in beautiful Woodlawn. The services were conducted by Rev. T. E. Burrowes, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The relatives in attendance were: from Butler, the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Tomlinson, and Miss Bird, and two of her brothers, David and James; also Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Fetter of Edgerton, Ohio.

Candle-Burning Auctions.

A curious method of letting church and town lands which prevails at Corby, near Kettering, was put in force recently. The parishioners having assembled in the vestry, with the rector in the chair, a candle was lit with a pin stuck in the wax. Bidding then proceeded until the pin dropped, when the last bidder was declared the purchaser.

A New Club.

A few friends met last night with Mrs. E L. Robbins for the purpose of forming a musical club. Business committees were appointed to enroll members and draw up the constitution and bylaws which are to be adopted next meeting. After spending a very pleasant evening they adjourned to meet next Friday evening with Miss Mayme Buckley.

He Fooled The Surgeons.

All doctors told Renic Hamilton, of West Jefferson, O., after suffering 18 months from Rectal Fistula, he would die unless a costly operation was performed; but he cured himself with five boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the surest Pile cure on Earth, and the best Salve in the World. 25 cents a box. Sold by H. B. McCord, druggist.

General Gomez.

General Gomez writes a letter to the Cuban Constitutional Convention now in session at Havana, proposing a new constitution for the new nation. A dispatch from Havana, dated Nov. 7, says:

The Cuban constitutional convention, which met Monday in the Merti theater, reassembled yesterday at 2 o'clock. The first business was the adoption of a resolution to send to President McKinley the following telegram:

"The Cuban constitutional convention has the honor and satisfaction respectfully to salute the president and congress of the United States and to express sentiments of gratitude to the American people."

Two committees were appointed, one on credentials and the other on rules. Probably several days will elapse before the permanent organization is effected.

Gen. Maximo Gomez, in a letter to the Havana papers, says he will not accept office under the Cuban republic. "As a revolutionist," he declares, "I have always understood that from the moment the revolution was ended my mission will be terminated. What remains to be done to attain the felicity of the land is not a matter to be decided by cavalry charges. The problems pressing for solution must be solved with prudence and calmness, and without the ardent patriotism that might have been necessary at other times.

"Cuba now presents a great field for improvement, which must be carried out judiciously. It is a field where all her children can work. My retired life and my persistent refusal of the positions that have been offered me should be sufficient proof that my determination is irrevocable. I firmly believe that the highest distinction which a man who has fought so much can take with him to the grave is the esteem of all, and this can only be attained by not governing anybody or anything."

Died.

The sad news comes here this morning of the death of the bright little son of John and Ina Coder Leighty, who died yesterday morning at about 4 o'clock. It will be remembered that they had been making an extended visit to friends in this part of the country, and we believe at the time he took sick they were at Hicksville. The disease, we understand, was meningitis. The little boy was a very bright child and gave unusual promises. He was their only child, and his loss will be a sad one. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of all who know them. The funeral is at St. Joe at 2 p. m. and burial there.

The Returning Board.

Yesterday the official vote of the county was counted at the court house. Trustee Chapman of Newville was chairman and all the precincts of the county were represented.

NEWS IN BRIEF GUSTS

BLOWN IN FROM ALL PARTS OF THE EARTH.

An Important Record of the Week As Told by the Telegraph—Latest from Foreign Shores—Crimes, Casualties, Fires, Etc.

To Inspect British Cattle.

Dr. T. A. Geddes, chief of the miscellaneous division of the bureau of animal industry of the United States' department of agriculture has been detailed as a special inspector and ordered to Great Britain to inspect cattle intended for importation into the United States. Dr. Geddes will make his headquarters in London and will go to such parts of the United Kingdom as may be required for examination of animals before shipment. The increasing prevalance of contagious diseases and particularly of tuberculosis has made this action necessary for the protection of the animal industry of this country.

Big Guns Bring Low Price.

The United States government has started a "bargain counter" at the Charlestown navy yard and is disposing of the old cannon that were discarded from the old Boston harbor defenses. The guns, which originally cost $10,000 each, have been "marked down" to seemingly ruinous figures. Sixty guns and fifty-one gun carriages were sold Monday to O'Connor Brothers of Boston, for $7,000, and a second lot of ninety-one guns and sixty-six carriages to Malcolm Peters of New York, for $5,000. These guns cost upward of $1,500,000.

Dewey's Gifts Removed Home.

Admiral Dewey has removed his collection of gifts, which have occupied themost prominent place in the hall of American History in the National Museum, to his home in Rhode Island avenue, Washington. It was placed in the museum for the double purpose of sharing its beauty with the public and as a compliment to the donors, many of whom were children, or represented the hospitality of our great cities, as well as from the admiral's private friends.

Cassini Doubts It.

Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador to the United States, says, in regard to the reported annexation of territory in Tien Tsin by the Russian government, that he felt very sure no such step had been taken. He touched the possibility of a Russian concession similar to the British and anti-French allotments having been made, but dismissed the report that Russia had summarily taken possession of the territory referred to as entirely improbable.

We Buy Another Island.

Madrid special: At a cabinet council held recently under the presidency of the queen regent, General Azcarraga, the premier, said there was no Carlist under arms in Spain and that the rising had failed completely. General Azcarraga also announced that a Spanish-American convention had been signed in Washington by which the island of Cayagaen and Cibutu in the Philippine archipelago had been ceded for $100,000.

The Grand Army.

The Chicago Record says: Present conditions indicate that the members of the Grand Army of the Republic will not hold their next annual reunion in Denver, the place selected at the Chicago encampment for the 1901 meeting. Unsatisfactory rate arrangements with the western railroads are expected to turn the veterans from the Colorado capital to some city, probably Cleveland, in the eastern lines territory.

Ore Train Wrecked.

An ore train on the Chicago and Northwestern road, running forty-five miles an hour, was wrecked near Iron Mountain, Mich., by the spreading of the rails. The engine was overturned and Fireman George Hall of Wilson, Mich., was killed. Conductor Swaby of Escanaba, and Engineer Tim Hogan of Green Bay, were seriously injured, but will recover.

Embezzlement Charged.

John C. Robinson, secretary of the Cash, Globe-Mutual and Industrial Building and Loan associations of Pittsburg, has been arrested on eight charges of embezzlement and falsifying the accounts. In default of $11,000 bail he was lodged in jail. The associations are now in the hands of receivers.

American Girl Married a Lord.

Miss Grace Carr of Louisville, Ky., was married to Lord Newbrough in Savoy chapel, London. United States Ambassador Choate gave the bride away. Lord and Lady Newbrough will go to Ceylon, via Paris, for their honeymoon.

Fort Wayne Masonic Temple Attractions.

Nov. 14.—"The Night Before Xmas."
Nov. 17.—Frohman's Commedians.

Senator Davis Better.

St. Paul special: Senator Davis, chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs, is reported much better.

Chili Not Buying Warships.

A dispatch from Santiago de Chili via Galveston, Tex., says: The rumors that the Chilian government is buying warships are unfounded. The future president will be proclaimed at a great liberal convention. The probable candidates are Don Pedro Montt, Fernando Lacono and Ramon Barros Luco.

Boer General DeWit Wounded.

A dispatch from Pretoria says: General DeWet has been wounded in the leg in a fight with the troops of General Knox at Rensburg drift.

Rich Find in Kootenay.

A dispatch from Cambourne, a new town in Kootenay, says a very rich find of free gold in decomposed ore has just been made. Quartz from a fissure vein assays several thousand dollars to the ton, and is freely sprinkled with coarse gold.

Abel P. Upham Takes Acid.

While despondent because of continued ill health Abel P. Upham, a director of the firm and in charge of the tea department of Sprague, Warner & Co., Chicago, for a quarter of a century, committed suicide at his home by taking carbolic acid.

RESULTS OF THE ELECTIONS

WILLIAM McKINLEY,
Re-Elected President.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT,
Vice-President Elect.

M'KINLEY AND ROOSEVELT.

Republican National Ticket Wins by a Good Majority.

William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt have been elected President and Vice-President, respectively, by a majority of electoral votes larger than that given in 1896 to McKinley and Hobart. The Republican tendency throughout the nation was strong enough, apparently, to secure the election of a Congress which will be Republican in both houses. The State of New York, in spite of the strenuous efforts made to secure an overwhelming Bryan vote in New York City, has given the Republican candidates a large plurality. Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Indiana and Ohio have given a similar result, and although the Republican plurality in Massachusetts has been strikingly reduced, owing doubtless to the strength of the anti-imperialist sentiment there, it is still decisive. Maryland has had a Republican landslide similar to that of four years ago.

MARCUS A. HANNA.
Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

In the great West beyond the Missouri the Republicans make gains. They have held California, Oregon and North Dakota, which they carried four years ago They have carried Kansas, South Dakota, Washington, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and possibly Nebraska, all of which were for Bryan in 1896. So far as incomplete returns indicate at this writing Mr. Bryan failed to win the electoral vote of any of the States that were classed as doubtful. Practically all the States that declared for McKinley in 1896 did the same at this election.

Mr. Bryan made heavy inroads into the Republican majorities of four years ago in nearly all the Eastern States, especially those of New England. In Massachusetts the McKinley majority was reduced practically 100,000 as compared with four years ago. The city of Boston gives Mr. Bryan a small plurality. The New York Democratic leaders fulfilled their pledge to carry greater New York for Mr. Bryan, but the State vote was overwhelmingly Republican.

There was a phenomenally heavy vote throughout the entire country. Out of the forty-five States and three territories Mr. Bryan failed to make substantial gains anywhere except in the East. Even there the cutting of Republican majorities was insufficient to give him the electoral vote of a single State that declared for Mr. McKinley four years ago. In the West most of the States that rolled up big free silver majorities in 1896 were apparently less enthsuiastic for Mr. Bryan this year.

President McKinley has broken all records and upset all traditions in American politics. He is the first man to defeat twice in succession the same opponent in the presidential race. He is the first President since Grant to secure a second term immediately following his first.

ELECTION OF 1900.

Campaign Was Waged as Desperately as Any in the Country's History.

More than 15,000,000 freemen went to the polls Tuesday to elect the twenty-sixth President of the United States. The presidency this year was fought for as desperately as ever in the country's history. President McKinley took no active part, the dignity which he owed his office forbidding him to make a canvass. But the ticket and the cause were defended in the field by Republican orators and statesmen, particularly the President's running mate. Gov. Roosevelt's campaign in the last few months has paralleled those which in other years have caused the country to look with amazement on Blaine, Bryan, McKinley and other apparently tireless speakers.

Mr. Bryan repeated his performance of 1896. He pleaded his cause before more than a thousand audiences and spoke to several million voters. Whatever criticisms his opponents have made of his governmental theories and policies, all unite in admiration of his indomitable will, confident spirit and marvelous physique. A campaign that would exhaust the average man seemed to tire him but slightly. Few men could endure the exertion, physical and mental, which was required of Mr. Bryan during the campaign.

Important Election Features.

Bryan has 50,000 majority in Missouri.

McKinley carried Ohio by fully 80,000.

Iowa gives a Republican plurality of 60,000.

Entire Republican ticket wins in North Dakota.

Wyoming has gone Republican by 2,000 majority.

The Republican majority in Indiana is about 30,000.

Bryan slept while the returns came in, but not till he had been assured of defeat

WILL CONTROL THE HOUSE.

Republicans Elect a Safe Working Majority in Congress.

The Republican landslide has included the House of Representatives, and that body will be in control of the party which has held it since the Fifty-fourth Congress. Returns received up to 1 o'clock Wednesday morning show that the Republicans will have 197, the Democrats 152, fusion 8—thereby making a clear Republican majority of 37. These figures, however, are not conclusive.

JAMES K. JONES.
Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Mr. Bryan Seeks Rest.

Mr. Bryan received the news of the general result at his home in Lincoln. At 8 o'clock, when newspaper men sought to secure a statement from him, they were told that he had just gone to sleep. When he retired to his own room he glanced over the returns with apparent interest, and then, expressing a desire to make up some of the rest he had lost in the past few weeks, lay down and was asleep in less than five minutes, thus manifesting probably less concern than hundreds of thousands of others.

THREW HER MONEY AWAY.

Count Castellane Dived Deep Into the Fortune of His Wife.

The news that the Gould family has at last been compelled to step in and save what is left of the millions willed to Anna Gould, who five years ago married Count Castellane, has created little surprise in this country, but has occasioned a lot of talk. Tales of extravagance have been coming over the water ever since the marriage. The count expended the fortune of his wife with a recklessness that astonished even Paris.

COUNT CASTELLANE.

Thae cable, in telling of the appointment of George J. Gould as trustee of his sister's money and property, says the order was given upon the request of the Gould family and with the consent of the countess. When it became apparent that something must be done quickly, the Gould family held a council and unanimously decided that, in the interest of the countess and her children, a judicial trustee must be appointed, and George was selected to take the matter in charge.

Accordingly application was made, and M. Bonnet appeared in court for the countess. He stated that "the countess herself admits the fact that she has indulged in extravagant expenditure, and is in need of having an authoritative adviser to supply the experience in which she is lacking. She consents to the appointment of a judicial trustee." Maitre Badouin, who presided over the court, immediately upon hearing this statement, appointed George J. Gould trustee.

COUNTESS CASTELLANE

Maitre Bonnet, acting for the Goulds, stated that the Gould family had prayed the elder brother, George, to save their sister, Anna, and her children, from ruin. He stated that Castellane himself was absolutely penniless. Under his guidance the countess had spent $3,000,000 in the first four years, $600,000 more than her income for that period, besides having contracted debts to the amount of nearly $4,500,000.

Count Castellane does not take kindly to the restraint on his expenditures. The count will have to go to his American brother-in-law for his pocket money, and he will have to render account to Gould for the money he spends. It is rumored that the Goulds favor a separation.

The most notable event in European politics during the week has been the reorganization of the English ministry. There have been numerous changes, and Lord Salisbury has succeeded in pleasing neither his own party nor the opposition. Political considerations seem to have given way to social preferment and personal favoritism. There was popular demand for the retirement of Lord Lansdowne, whose marked incapacity in the conduct of the war office nearly resulted in the break-down of the British army system in the recent war. Lord Salisbury answers this demand by promoting Lansdowne to a higher post and by placing one of his own subordinates—almost, it might be said, one of his own clerks—at the head of the war department. There has been an equally determined campaign against Mr. Goschen as first lord of the admiralty. Lord Salisbury lets Mr. Goschen go and installs his own son-in-law in the place. Joseph Chamberlain is retained at the head of the colonial office, and the opposition is mollified only by the consolation that his pathway to the premiership has been blocked, if only temporarily. The cabinet, as reconstructed, cannot be called a strong one.

The Spanish government during the week has been called upon to deal with what at first seemed to be a formidable revolt of the numerous Carlist bands in the mountain districts north of Barcelona. Troops have been sent into the field, garrisons re-enforced and the frontier guarded to prevent the importation of arms. The rising, however, seems to be local in its character, and there is nothing yet to indicate that Don Carlos himself has given any countenance to it. There will always be discontent in Spain under the present system of government. The Spanish revenues, large as they are, are eaten up by place holders. The people are poverty stricken and unruly under heavy burdens of taxation. The discontent of the people is only kept in check by a large army, and the army is on a most expensive footing.

-:—:-

The Chinese affair seems to be drifting. Few dispatches come from Pekin, and these give little indication of any progress toward a settlement between China and the powers. The alignment of the powers is now complete. Great Britain, Germany, Austria, Italy and Japan universally accept the entire Anglo-German agreement. The United States, France and Russia accept only part of the agreement. Yet the seeming lack of accord is more apparent than real, and there seems to be nothing to prevent active negotiations for a settlement. As to the demands to be made upon China by the powers, there is a singular lack of information. Either the powers have not yet reached an agreement among themselves or their demands are so great that they hesitate to unite them all in one proposition.

The German Reichstag, it was announced during the week, will be called into session during the opening days of November. There is prospect of a lively session, for a large political following in the empire disapproves the Kaiser's Chinese policy and threatens to keep the ministry busy in explaining matters. The Kaiser up to the present time has kept the German people in ignorance of his ultimate policy in the far East. At the same time he has been busy in forwarding troops and munitions of war, evidently in preparation for a military campaign on a large scale. Field Marshal von Waldersee's appointment, too, has resulted in dissatisfaction, and his presence in China may call for explanations in behalf of the government.

-:—:-

The successful test of Count Zeppelin's airship at Friedrichshafen during the week has attracted the interest of the scientific world and has hardly received the notice in the press that its importance deserves. The airship ascended from the balloon-house at Manzel at 4:15 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon and attained a height of 1,300 feet. It proved to be entirely tractable to the will of the engineer in charge, and traveled eastward against an east-northeast wind for nearly seven miles. It then made a wide detour and returned to the balloon-house, alighting in the lake at 6:05 o'clock.

COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL

New York—Trade reports as a rule continue to tell of hesitation in most of the principal lines of business. Bank clearings are usually regarded as a pretty correct index to the general business situation, particularly in times like the present, when speculation in stocks cuts very little figure in the totals. The exchanges made through the Chicago banks in October were not only the largest shown for any month so far this year, but with a single exception were the best on record. The total was $607,631,067, which was only about $7,000,000 below the record mark, made in December, 1899. Considering the fact that December is usually the best business month in the year and that the month just closed was one in which politics all over the country was at fever heat, this showing is considered a good one.

Chicago—Speculative business in grain and hog products has been fairly active with prices variable, but generally upward. The advance in wheat was due partly to diminishing domestic receipts, but in larger degree to the news from Argentina of an unfavorable outlook for the growing crop. Had the alleged cause of the damage been other than excessive rain it would doubtless have had more influence with the trade. As none of the reports specified in what way the plant was being injured by rain at a period of its growth when on light soil rain might be considered more of a benefit than a detriment, the entire claim of damage that subsequent favorable weather might not repair was received with skepticism, hence the comparatively minor effect on prices. People in the trade here doubtless will apply their home experience to what is good or bad for the wheat plant of Argentina until they see cause to believe that the conditions of its growth differ from those that govern it in all the other countries where it is produced. The October pork deal was carried to a successful conclusion, the price of that commodity the last day of the month being $20 a barrel, or $5 higher than its nominal value at the end of last week.

THAT $700,000 THIEF.

The New York Note Teller, Alvord, Now Under Arrest.

The defalcation of Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., who appropriated $700,000 of the funds of the First National Bank of New York, once more illustrates the facility with which the trusted employe of a financial institution can hoodwink his employers and the national bank examiners.

CORNELIUS ALVORD.

Alvord was a trusted official. He entered the employ of the First National in 1879, serving until the expose of his defalcations as note teller. During this period he held the absolute confidence of the bank president and of the other officials of the institution. In Mount Vernon, where he had a permanent home, he was looked up to as a model citizen. He and his wife moved in the most exclusive circles and entertained with lavishness. No word was ever uttered against the honor and the honesty of the man. And yet this trusted official stole $700,000 of the funds of the bank. His peculations extended over a long period, and, though the affairs of the bank were at stated periods examined by national experts no discovery of crookedness was made by them. It remained for an humble employe of the bank to have his suspicions aroused and then came the investigation that resulted in the startling disclosure.

"I have played and lost. I'll take the consequences." Thus coolly did Alvord take his arrest when he was run down in a lodging house in Boston. Betrayed by two friends for the sake of the $5,000 reward offered by the bank for his capture, Alvord was located.

BELONGED TO THE DEAD.

Thousands Worth of Unclaimed Valuables in Galveston.

Only 5 per cent of the money and valuables taken from bodies removed from the wreckage at Galveston has been claimed. The money aggregates several thousand dollars, and there are other valuables to the amount of over $100,000 in jewelry and silverware. Capt. J. B. Alvey, who was appointed by Adjt. Gen. Scurry at the time the city was under martial law to take charge of money and valuables, has kept a complete list of everything turned over to him. The money and other articles have been deposited in a vault awaiting claimants. Capt. Alvey has on hand more than a carload of all sorts of valuables and his stock is increasing with each day's work. In this lot he has more than a heaping bushel measure of watches, the works, of course, being ruined, though in many instances the cases are valuable. He has over two pecks of all sorts of rings, from the big diamond fellow to a birthday stone and plain silver band. There are big float loads of all sorts of silverware and about three float loads of odds and ends, all of more or less value. He has about two bushels of trinkets, such as breast pins, brooches, bracelets, etc. The money taken from the pockets has been a tough proposition, as have also many of the rings on account of the stench they give out.

Capt. Alvey thinks that after the valuables have been turned over to some State official they should be advertised for a certain period, and then if there is no claimant they should be sold and the amount realized from the sale turned over to the relief fund.

Modeled After the United States.

The six States that compose the new Australian federation are now engaged in dividing their respective territories into federal electorates. From some one of these electoral districts in New South Wales the federal area upon which the capital of the commonwealth is to be built will have to be cut off, after the federal Parliament has decided upon the site. As a consequence and following the example of the United States the residents of the capital city of Australia will be permanently disfranchised. The plan proposed for the government of the federal district is identical with that now in vogue in the District of Columbia. The inhabitants will have no representative in the federal Parliament, but will be governed by a Board of Commissioners appointed by the Parliament.

American Cotton Crop.

The cotton crop of this country amounted to only 5,000,000 pounds in 1793. Last year it was about 5,500,000,000 pounds, representing three-fourths of the entire crop of the world and valued at $350,000,000. It filled 9,500,000 bales, and the loss by waste incidental to the process of taking samples was not less than $7,000,000.

Mrs. Short—Well?

Mrs. Gabbie—Well, I was thinking the neighborhood would be rather ghostly and creepy.

Mrs. Short—No doubt, but it has one good point. The neighborhood won't be prying into our affairs.—Philadelphia Press.

A Thoughtless Answer.

"Do you think of me as often as you did before we were married?" asked Mr. Meekton's wife.

"Much oftener," he answered, cheerily, but absent-mindedly. "You see, Henrietta, you weren't in a position to then remind me of yourself as much as you can at present."—Washington Star.

A Touch of Nature.

"The sentence of this court," said the judge, "is that you be condemned to solitary confinement for the term of two years."

The Present Would Have Been His.

The American tourist is so firmly convinced that he is being cheated on all sides during his European travels that he occasionally oversteps the bounds of prudence.

"What is the price of this pin?" asked a young man in a Paris shop, handling a small silver brooch of exquisite workmanship.

"Twenty francs, monsieur," said the clerk.

"That's altogether too much," said the young American. "It's for a present to my sister; I'll give you 5 francs for it."

"Zen it would be zat I gave ze present to your sister," said the Frenchman, with a deprecatory shrug, "and I do not know ze young mademoiselle."

A Question.

"Mother," asked little Johnny, peering in between the uncut leaves of a magazine, "how ever did they get the printing in there?"

Only Pieces Left.

"You sent a collector to see me this morning," said the burly visitor.

"As, yes. That little bill you owe," replied the installment man. "Well?"

Novel Trap for a Snake.

A lady in Durban, India, on getting up one morning heard a most peculiar noise in the pantry. She was astonished to find that a snake had its head and part of its body through the handle of a China jug. Both sides of the snake—that is, the portion on each side of the handle—were bulging out. Then she discerned what had happened. Some eggs had been lying on the shelf and the snake, after having swallowed one, had crawled partly through the handle of the jug—that is, as far as the swallowed egg would allow—in order to get at another, which it had also swallowed. Naturally enough, it could not then go either forward or backward through the handle. The lady was just going to call her husband, when the reptile gave a desperate wriggle and in doing so fell on the floor with a bang, handle and all. But the fall broke both the eggs in its inside and, taking advantage of its release from the handle, it was out in the garden before you could say "Ware!"

Don't wait until it begins to sprinkle before starting to lay up money for a rainy day.

JUST BEFORE WINTER COMES.

Chickens roostin' in the barn,
Too cold in the trees;
Folks is keepin' close to hum,
Jes' like honey bees.
Frost gits at yer rheumatiz,
Ain't no use to holler,
Col' is gittin' in yer bones,
Pains is boun' to foller.

Mornin' jes' the time to sleep,
Col' outside the kiver,
Dad shouts up it's time to bounce,
Boys begin to shiver;
Huskin' corn out in the fiel'
Ain't so mighty 'musin'

'Fore the sun gits really up—
Rather be a snoozin'.

Quail is hollerin' in the woods,
Seems jes' like they know
Folks so busy huskin' corn
Hunting's got to go;
Jes' you wait thar, Mr. Quail,
Jes' keep up yer tootin';
Spen' yer time a'crowin' now,
Soon there'll be some shootin'.

Soon's we git the woodshed full,
En corn all in the crib,
Then we'll git our huntin' togs.

En you won' be so glib;
Dogs'll fin' you in the bresh,
Spite o' all yer boastin',
Gun'll then begin to bark,
Soon you'll be a roastin'.

Autumn's jes' the time o' year
Makes yer heart git glad;
Summer's work mos' finished up—
En winter ain't so bad;
Settin' roun' a-poppin' corn,
Er dozin' in a chair;
In summer can't be lazy,
Ain't no time to spare.

WHEN I PLAYED GOLF.

When I played golf I learned to eat
Some things I dared not eat before.
I learned another tongue complete,
I learned to lie about my score.

When I played golf I learned to flirt—
An opportunity most rare—
And as I cameoed the dirt
I picturesquely learned to swear.

When I played golf I learned to steal
The balls the other players lost.
I learned to spend my all and feel
'Twas wrong to stop and count the cost.

When I played golf my great concern
Was this:—I say it to my shame—
The only thing I did not learn
Was how to play the cussed game.
—Life.

TOM'S BLUNDER.

TOM BENTLEY was a fool. That is to say, he was generally accredited with having less sense than his fellow men. Certainly he had abilities of a fair order, but they were not of the kind adapted to carry him through the ordinary affairs of life without some blunder here and there.

Tom fell in love. Not that this might be considered as the natural result of his affliction, but it led him to the blunder here recorded.

When Tom first met Miss Amanda Smith he was acting as private secretary to a wealthy retired senator. Just about the time Tom's heart bade him unburden himself at the feet of Miss Amanda, his employer went abroad, taking his secretary with him. Why he did not propose to her by letter, I do not know; nor was it any of my business; I record simply facts.

A year passed by before Tom's employer was disposed to return, and then his return was unexpected, else Tom would hardly have had the chance to make this blunder.

It was a beautiful May morning. After a good night's rest, Tom had strolled down town to attend to some business, in order that his mind might be freed from all cares, preliminary to a call upon Miss Smith. Toward noon, his business completed, he entered a fashionable cafe, which was, to him, replete with memories of happy visits, in company with her for whom he had been languishing a whole year. The seat he took gave him a position whence he might admire his own attractions in a full length of French plate, and also observe the other guests plate, and also observe the other guests.

Before he was half through lunch the mirror made known to him the presence of a very striking couple. She was young, beautiful and—Miss Amanda Smith! He—well, Tom did not know him, but observed, with paling cheek, that the two were very much devoted to each other. Finally he noticed a startling fact. Miss Smith, with feminine care, was just in the act of passing a beautiful white hand over her tresses. Tom watched it, in all the fascination of a lover: until suddenly his heart began to sink. On the third finger of Miss Smith's left hand was a wedding ring!

"Great Scott, she's married," poor Tom moaned. The next minute he was off like a shot.

I knew nothing of all this until some time after; in fact, not until I received a letter from Tom, in which he upbraided me for a lack of friendly interest, in not having acquainted him with the news of Miss Smith's marriage. He detailed the scene in the cafe, and told me that his life was ruined; that he never cared to return again to his native town. He was now holding a good position in New York, and would stay there.

I was a little perplexed by this turn of events, yet I correctly guessed the affair to be complicated by his stupidity. I resolved to see Miss Smith, and, if possible, ferret out the mystery. Accordingly, one fine afternoon, I called upon her, in the hope that circumstances would bring about some solution of Tom's troubles.

The first thing I observed, when we were seated for a chat, was her left hand. Neither there nor on the other hand could I see anything in appearance approaching a wedding ring. I resolved upon a bold expedient.

"I miss the plain gold ring you sometimes wear," I said.

"Oh, yes," was her reply. "Excuse me for a moment, and I will get it. There is a very sad story connected with it."

She returned shortly, and handed to me what was unmistakably a wedding ring. While I was examining it she related to me the story of a dear cousin, who, after wearing it one short year, had died in far-off India.

"But, Miss Smith," I asked, with the freedom of a friend, "are you not afraid to wear this in such a way that it might mislead people?"

"I never do," she replied. "Indeed, I make it a point of wearing it always on my right hand."

This was all the more perplexing. I knew her to be precise and careful; I knew Tom was not such a fool that he could not tell the right hand from the left. It was certainly strange, and for a few minutes we dropped the matter. At last, an idea having struck me, I asked Miss Smith to put the ring where she usually wore it—on the third finger of the right hand. Then I gently turned her to a mirror, held up her arm, and asked what the mirror said. Astonishment spread over her face as she looked.

"Why, it seems to be on my left hand! I never thought of that."

I did not explain to her the reason of my interest, but that night I sat down and wrote a long letter to Tom, calling him some choice names, and warning him that his folly would ultimately bring untold trouble upon himself if he did not reform.

My harshness, however, did not prevent me from being, three months later, the best man at Tom's wedding.—Waverley Magazine.

Have Gone Out of Style.

Porterhouse steaks have gone out of fashion, according to one of the uptown butchers who supplies meat to a lot of the families in the fashionable districts on Riverdale drive and West End avenue. For years and years the porterhouse steak has been considered the best cut of beef and has fetched the highest price. Now the demand is for the Delmonico steak, which is the porterhouse with the bit of the tenderloin cut out of it. A dislike for the tasteless bit of tenderloin seems to have developed, unless the tenderloin is served separately, either as a roast or fixed up as one of the fancy steaks that the accomplished chef knows how to prepare. There is more flavor to the sirloin, and so the demand is for either the bone sirloin, as it is called, or the Delmonico steak, which follows it in the carving of a "critter." This fancy has generally put out the butchers, who have now to find a new way to carve their meats to an advantage. Even when the tenderloin is cut away from the bone, it is said by the dealers to be the hardest piece of the beef to now dispose of to advantage.—New York Times.

COSTLIEST SAUSAGES MADE.

Some Made in France that Only Capitalists Can Afford to Eat.

"The costliest of all sausages," said a man familiar with the trade, "is Lyons sausages, imported from France. Lyons sausage sells in Paris at 2 francs and more a pound. Here it is sold at 80 cents to $1 a pound. Lyons sausage is also produced in this country. That made here is even finer than the imported, but sells here, however, for somewhat less.

"Lyons is rather a large sausage. It is put up in the largest size hog casings and it is made of beef and pork. The meats used in making it are of the very best, and they are prepared with the greatest care. From the beef all the sinews and veins are removed, and there is left only the selected parts of the meat. The beef is chopped very fine, so fine as to make of it practically a paste. The pork used is from the back fat of hogs. This is not chopped fine, as the beef is, but is cut into irregular shaped pieces which show in the sausage when it is cut. The spices used in the seasoning are, of course, of the choicest. The Lyons sausage is hard smoked.

"The art of sausage-making has so improved in this country that now, as you can say without reservation, the finest sausages produced in the world are made in the United States. This is true without exception. The American Lyons sausage, for example, is better than the imported. Some American Lyons is exported to France and sold there, and some of that thus exported is reimported and sold here as imported Lyons.

"Lyons sausage is served in the very finest of hotels and restaurants, and it may be found on bills of fare, before the soup, served as an appetizer. For that purpose it is very excellent. I fancy that its increasing use in this manner in New York in recent years is due in great measure to calls for it from Russian visitors. The Russians have always been fond of Lyons sausage, as they are also of caviare.—New York Sun.

SAY HE MADE MOONSHINE.

Old Bill Pritts Ran a Mountain Distillery in Pennsylvania.

One of the most remarkable characters of the mountain region of western Pennsylvania is Bill Pritts, who was convicted of moonshining in the United States District Court at Pittsburg recently. He has long been a resident of Fayette County and was notorious far and wide as one of the most daring men in his line of business.

His two sons, John S. and Henry Pritts, were also included in the information, but they did not appear. The case excited great attention on account of the numerous efforts to capture Pritts in his mountain home and his numerous escapes from the revenue officers. He was finally captured at his home last May. John and Henry Pritts were arrested in October, 1899, but the old man made his escape, being wounded in the heel during his flight by a bullet from the revolver of United States Deputy Marshal Frank Campbell. The two boys stood trial at the May term of court and the jury disagreed.

"Bill" Pritts first came into prominence with the killing of Tony Hochstettler several years ago. Robert Miller, one of the party implicated, gave himself up and served four years in the penitentiary. The others were never apprehended. The history of his numerous encounters and escapes has several times been printed, and romance has placed famous old "Bill" near the top of the list of the queer characters developed in the mountains of western Pennsylvania.

Like all men of his class, Pritts had many stanch friends among his neighbors and these assisted him frequently in eluding the officers of the government. Among the people of the mountain region it is not regarded as a crime to cheat Uncle Sam out of the tax on whisky. Men otherwise honest would not scruple to traffic in whisky that had paid no tribute to the government, and those who endeavor to collect it have a rocky time of it. The moonshiner is seldom without notice of the presence of revenue officers in the vicinity of his still, and he has ample time to conceal all evidences of his illicit occupation. His patrons can never be induced to testify against him, and the officers, even though they may be morally certain of the guilt of a suspect, have a hard task to procure the evidence necessary to convict.

Bill Pritts was fortunate in having the good will of his neighbors. He admitted that he drank all the whisky he could get and made the admission as though it were a good joke and it tickled him. He admitted, however, that he had done so twenty years ago. He was as delighted as a youngster when United States marshals told of the trouble they had experienced in capturing him. Like many another man Bill Pritts is a mixture of simplicity and guile, but the proportions are hard to determine.

Ascent of Mount Ararat.

The Ararat mountains in Armenia comprise two peaks situated seven miles apart. They are known as Great and Little Ararat and are respectively 17,260 and 14,320 feet above the plain. They partially belong to three countries—Russia, Turkey and Persia. The mountains are covered on the tops with perpetual snow, ice and glaciers. The summit of Great Ararat was reached in 1820 by Professor Parrot, and on Sept. 2, 1900, a member of the Russian Geographical Society named Peoggenpohl ascended the peak with a considerable party. The difficulties of the ascent are very great and his successful expedition will be welcome news in geographical circles. Ascents are rare, having been made in 1834, 1843, 1845, 1850 and 1856. Little Ararat is even more difficult to climb, as its declivities are greater and steeper, its form being almost conical. It is believed to be the spot where the ark rested, but there is a tradition that Mount Judi, in southern Armenia, was the spot. The mountain is of volcanic origin and was in eruption in 1785, and in 1840 there was a vast discharge of sulphurous vapors from its sides and a tremendous earthquake shook the surrounding country. There is considerable literature devoted to the mountain.—Scientific American.

Their End Most Pitiful.

The attention of the United States government has just been called to a barbarous custom that is still being practiced among the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache Indians in Oklahoma territory.

The Indians of these three tribes, while living under the management of an Indian agent, are comparatively civilized and do not go on the warpath, but work for their living as farmers. But they have no love in their hearts for one of their own people after that person has passed his or her age of usefulness. An aged squaw, after she reaches the age of 80 years, is sent into the fields and left there to die, unless some sympathetic white person comes along and sends the poor old woman to the Indian agency, where she may be taken care of at the expense of the government.

Travelers in the reservation may hear the distressing cries of some deserted woman at most any time they care to listen. The women are given a few days' rations, clothed in their best garments and taken into the fields amid the horses and cattle. There they are left alone. Not being strong enough to get away, they have to remain there and die. The plains of this Indian reservation are strewn with the bones of those who have been left to die because they were getting too old to work any more.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

Advertising gives character and standing to a firm. Go into any community as an entire stranger, pick up the paper published there, look for the largest advertisers and you can invariably depend upon the fact that you have found the most reliable and desirable firms in that community.—Grayville, Ill., Independent.

A country merchant can reach the people within the radius of his price influence by an intelligent, persistent use of the newspapers in his section. Few merchants who use newspaper space so as to obtain the maximum advantage from it have either the means or the necessity to go into the numerous schemes which come up from time to time.—Pacific Coast Advertising.

Looking at it in the right light, there is no line of business that does not present many points of interest which can be developed into so many good advertising features by a capable advertisement writer.—Rhode Island Advertiser.

Advertising undoubtedly takes away the business from those who do not advertise and gives it to those who do, and those who have succeeded best, growing day by day, have been those who have been the most persistent advertisers in season and out of season.—Anaconda (Mont.) Standard.

It is unreasonable to expect your advertising to work alone and unassisted. It is merely the mouthpiece of your business. It speaks for you to people you cannot reach in any other way. You can make it say the same things you would say were you talking to them in person. You can make your appeal so attractive, interesting and effective that you can draw the people to your store. But if you don't hold up your end there your advertising will be an expense—not the investment it ought to be.—Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal.

Advertisements are read at all times. The business man who advertises when his business is quiet is bound to be remembered when commercial activity becomes greater. Whosoever can keep himself in the public mind will enjoy the greatest amount of custom is the sentiment of the Bridgeton (N. J.) Pioneer, and it is a volume of common sense boiled down to a few words. The man who thinks that he can do business in these days of grace without advertising is the man who sits around the front of his store, occupying his time brushing out dead flies and polishing up old stock. Quick sales, small profits, new goods, enterprising merchants and plenty of newspaper advertising are what build houses and swell bank accounts.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S GRANDSON.

Prince Christian Victor, Who Died of Disease in South Africa.

Prince Christian Victor of Schleswig-Holstein, who died from enteric fever in Pretoria, was the eldest son of Princess Helena of England, and a grandson of Queen Victoria. He was born at Windsor Castle in 1867, and completed his education at Oxford. He was prominent in athletics, being a leading cricketer. He joined the British army in 1888 and was attached to several expeditions. He saw service in the Ashantee campaign in 1895 and was with the Soudan forces in 1898. He had taken an active part in the campaign against the Boers, holding the rank of major in his corps. The prince was a popular young fellow who was held in deep respect by his comrades-in-arms and by the public generally.

"Salaam Kuro."

A correspondent of the London Times tells of an elephant's good manners, and of the tenacity with which an idea once received adheres in its memory.

While visiting the "Zoo" some time ago, I took my children to see the elephant and to give them a ride. After the ride I wanted to give the elephant a bun, and to make him say "Please," said "Salaam kuro"—that is, "Make a salaam."

The animal looked at me hard for some time, and at the bun in my hand. At last memory came to his help, and up went his trunk and he made a most correct salaam.

The keeper seemed very much surprised, and asked me what it meant. I told him it was a point of good manners for an elephant to raise his trunk up to his forehead if any one was going to feed him, and that frequently elephants will ask in this polite manner for something when they see any one pass by who is likely to feed them.

The keeper assured me he had never seen the elephant do this before, and if I remember rightly, he had been in charge of the animal since it arrived from India.

For seventeen years this animal had never heard these words, and had always taken his food without this mark of good manners.

Working Together.

AUBURN WEEKLY COURIER.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY...NOVEMBER 15, 1900.

Political Notes.

When the British government heard of McKinley's election, its chief officer, the Marquis of Salisbury made a public speech, telling how rejoiced he and Great Britain were at the outcome. The papers went wild. The same rejoicing was in France and European countries generally. They evidently consider it a victory for monarchical principles. And they don't like democracy because we don't ask them what kind of money we shall use.

It is told that Judge Lowrey, Judge Colerick, J. M. Barrett and many other Fort Wayne democrats went back on Robinson and worked against him. Lowry is reported to have canvassed several towns including Auburn and Garrett. Someone apparently got several soldier votes away from Mr. Robinson. The democrats have been unfortunate in electing men to office, who would go back on the party that honored them. Robinson ran ahead in every county except Allen, where these fellows were knifing him. And they knew too, that morally, socially and in point of ability he was superior to Hanna. The democracy should remember them.

The republican plurality in Indiana will be about 25,000 when the official reports are all in.

The democrats of Fort Wayne cannot expect to get ahead very much until they have a newspaper to help make a fight for them. Anyone reading the Sentinel or Journal during the recent campaign, would not be able to tell whether they supported Robinson or Free Rural Route Hanna. The Journal certainly favored Hanna, while the Sentinel sawed wood.

Rural D. Hanna will now sink out of sight and Senators Beveridge and Fairbanks will stop sending out those ridiculous statements about the free routes that Hanna was establishing. No sillier farce than this ever entered the field of politics

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met with Mrs. Willis Saturday and the lesson was ably conducted by Mrs. Wildred Olds in which nearly all those present took an active part. The poem, "The Witch's Daughter" by Whittier, was read by Mrs. Lodewick who gave the poem much interest by her correct and impressive manner of reading. A fine paper was given by Mrs. Emanuel entitled, "Child Learning." The resignation of Mrs. Hortense Robbins was read and accepted with many expressions of regret. The name of Mrs. Mary E. Boyer being the first on the waiting list to fill the vacancy called up and resulted in her election to membership.

By vote of the club it was decided to give an invitation to the State Federation of Clubs to meet at Auburn next year. Club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Willis again next Saturday.

The Correct Votes.

We publish today the official, tabulated vote of the county by precincts, as we always do. It will be seen that on president, Bryan gets 270 plurality. It is apparent, however, that this is below the real plurality, which on secretary of state is 294. This is no doubt the correct figure, as there is never any splitting of tickets on that office. On lieutenant-governor, it is 291, showing that Gilbert ran five ahead of his ticket in this county.

It will be seen that Charles Eckhart runs ahead of his ticket. It will pay to keep this paper, daily or weekly, for reference. We shall also keep a limited number of copies for the use of those who need.

The New Township Officers.

Up to last evening the following new township officers had qualified and given bonds.

TRUSTEES.

Daniel Lockamire of Franklin, Brent Maxwell of Stafford; I. E. Barker of Smithfield, Harry Reed of Grant, Frank Nimmons of Wilmington, John H. Reinoehl of Fairfield, Emory Shook of Richland, S. M. High of Jackson. The trustees take their offices next Monday, Nov. 19.

ASSESSORS.

Henry Gunsenhouser of Wilmington, John Treesh of Union, W. H. McGriffin of Fairfield, Geo. May of Smithfield.

The Twelfth District.

Latest reports obtained this morning concerning the vote on Congressman in this district, indicate pluralities as follows:

	Robinson	Hanna
Allen, official	2347
DeKalb, official	412
Whitley, official	101
Lagrange, official		854
Noble, official		272
Steuben, official		1114
Totals	2860	2240

Robinson's Plurality, 620.

Court.

The case of S. O. Church against the Greenler Co. on contract, came up last week. Mr. Church has died since the action began and Mrs Church had to be substituted as plaintiff, she being the administrator. She gets a judgment of $4,000.

Considerable time was spent settling the estate of the late Joseph Bell of Artic, where he was postmaster and had a general store. Wm. Mutzfelt, W. A. Mason, and Jesse Mountz were made commissioners to partition the real estate. Claims against the estate were allowed as follows::

Louis Cohn & Co.	$ 5 00
Hall, Swartz & Skall	640 39
I. O. Bachtel	22 90
Owen L. Davis	267 55
C. Elliot & Co.	356 61
Wiley Woolen Mills	60 00
McNeil & Higgins Co.	30 57
W. F. McLaughlin & Co	10 00
John C. Jennings	4 16
Joseph Everts	5 25
George Jennings	6 00
Smith & Higley	6 00

The case of Carpenter vs Houlton to have a road in Franklin township changed, was up again last week. It had been begun before the commissioners, and then taken to the circuit court. Now the court sends it back to the commissioners to have them act on it, they being the proper board. It will be called up at the December term.

The case of Eliza Grill for partition, she objected to the report of the commissioners and asked for new ones.

The case of DeLucaney vs. Sawvel to correct a deed, was settled by the parties at cost of plaintiff.

Geo. Lanning vs. the Accident Ins. Co. of N. Y., on policy, settled at his cost.

Logan Woods was divorced from Mary, she getting $150 alimony and custody of the two children

Stella West asked for a divorce from Henry West He was given the divorce.

Cora Draggoo was given a divorce from Elsworth and the custody of the child.

Edith Salisbury was divorced from Herbert Salisbury, at her costs.

Two more jury cases are left for this term and will probably be tried. They are the case Mason vs. Gordon from Garrett in which the charge against Gordon is shooting a horse. We believe the animal was not killed. The other case is also from Garrett, having been appealed from the justice court. It is a replevin case, Barker vs. Luthel Court will close Friday. There will be no court Saturday probably. The term at Angola begins on Monday.

Monday began the case of McKee, administrator of the estate of the late Jacob Kliuk vs. Charles Linkenhelt to recover the value of a team of horses, harness and wagon. Hoffman, Link and Mountz were for McKee, and Sharpless and Moody for Linkenhelt. The substance of the case seems to be that before Klink's death, he was hard pressed financially and sold his team to Linkenhelt. It is claimed he did this to keep it from his creditors. The plaintiff aimed to show that Klink got no pay for the team, and the defendant, that he did pay for it. After working until Tuesday afternoon the jury went out about 3:30 and in about twenty minutes came back with a verdict for plaintiff, $160. It appears the jury believed the sale to be a sham. Klink also sold his farm of thirty acres to Linkenhelt and there will likely be a case over that, though it may not be tried this term, as this is the last week.

The jury in this case were: Fred C. Reinig, Frank Bolender, A. W. Husselman, W. A. Mason, Theron Clark, Milas Brown, Len Shipe, D. S. Ober, Geo. Able, Thos. Hallam, Milford Clark and Wm. Mutzfelt.

The Only Lucky One.

Joseph Wingard called on the COURIER Saturday to find whether it was true that he had been elected county councilman. He had seen his name in the paper, but thought it all a mistake, and that it was Ira Wingard, who was on the township ticket for the advisory board. So he had never given the subject a thought. He was the only republican elected to a county office, his majority in his district being 129. His is the First district, composed of Troy, Stafford, Newville and Wilmington.

Big Railway Case

Veedersburg is after the Big Four railway for failing for three years to provide a blackboard at its staion, announing the time of train arrivals. The company is liable to a fine of $25 for each omission. The total damages asked is $200,000. Suit was brought in Fountain circuit court, where judgment was in favor of the company, and the state appealed. The prosecutor is entitled to half the fines imposed.

RECORD OF MURDERS.

One Committed Every Fifteen Minutes in the United States.

A remarkable record of the murders committed in the United States annually was given in the Chicago American recently. One murder was committed each twenty minutes all night long, or a total of ten thousand such crimes annually. When compared with the death rate which is nearly four persons every minute, it shows one murder every fifty minutes. And this record includes only the actual reports of murder—not the many crimes that are never reported. It does not include supposed suicides, the killing of those who have mysteriously disappeared or the death of hundreds of tramps and others in regard to whom no one cares to inquire, and are scarcely ever known. The average number of murders committed annually in the various states during the past ten years is as follows:

South Carolina	221
Georgia	381
Florida	157
Ohio	332

BUTLER.

—The Sunday school of Wilmington township will hold a union meeting in the U. B. church next Friday. An interesting occasion is promised.

A number ot Butler Odd Fellows attended the funeral of Sidney Reed, a member of Butler lodge, at Auburn, last Friday.

J. A. Campbell visited Detroit last Saturday to attend to some real estate business.

Al Barns living on the Mitchel farm two miles north, is seriously ill.

The large dry goods store owned by A. Levy of Archibald, O, in the Strruss building on corner of Broadway and Oak streets, was badly damaged by fire last Saturday evening, caused by some defect in the gasoline lighting plant. The damage to the building was several hundred dollars and to the stock perhaps $5,000 to $8,000. Insured in a number of companies; some represented by Butler agents and others by agents in Bryan, Auburn, etc. The loss is perhaps the largest on any one stock in the history of our place.

John Crouse, jr., is about to move to Newville to take charge of the U. B. work there. Prof. Kimmel will move into his residence.

Levi Love has again ensnared himself in a matrimonial noose. We hope he will not have to be caught twice in the same noose again.

Dr. Kester of Columbia City Sundayed with his brother. R. S. Kester,

The cold and snow of last Sunday caused a light attendance at the churches.

Many removals took place immediately after election.

Latest News.

Dispatches from Frankfort, Ky., say: The state election board will meet December 3, to canvass the returns and officially declare the result of the election in this state. While the republicans have formally conceded the election of Beckham as governor and announced that there will be no contest, both republicans and democrats will be represented by counsel at the canvass of the vote. Every phase of the election will be closely watched by both sides as matters may arise, which will have a bearing on the contests for congressmen in two districts—the third and ninth.

Governor Beckham will be inaugurated December 11. It is said one of the first official papers Governor-elect Durbin of Indiana, will have to consider when he takes office will be a requisition from Governor Beckham for the return of former Governor Taylor and Ex-secretary of State Finley to this state for trial. Leading republicans claim to have assurances from Indiana republican leaders that Mr. Durbin will follow the precedent set down by Governor Mount in these cases and will refuse to honor the requisition.

Judge Parker granted a mandamus in the contested election cases, and officers of eleven precincts will be required to appear in the county clerk's office tomorrow to open the boxes and deliver the returns to the clerk. The election commissioners meet Thursday for further canvassing the vote. The returns were locked up in boxes through a mistake of the officers.

Prominent republicans at Indianapolis and elsewhere in the state have been suggesting Hugh H. Hanna for a cabinet position. It is generally believed that Indiana will be given a place and Mr. Hanna is being urged. So are Harry S. New, national committeeman, and Governor Mount, who is being mentioned for secretary of agriculture.

Cuban Convention.

An event, of a degree of interest and importance for Cuba which it is difficult to overestimate, took place in Havana on Monday last. This was the opening of the Constitutional Convention, delegates to which were elected a short time ago. The convention was called to order by General Wood, as military governor of the island, who told the delegates that it would be their first to frame and adopt a constitution for the government of the island and then to formulate what in their opinion ought to be the relations between Cuba and the United States. He also explained to them that the constitution must be adequate to secure stable, orderly and free government for the island. The delegates, after organizing, took an oath solemnly renouncing any allegiance to, or compact made with, any state or nation, whether directly or indirectly, affirming the sovereignty of the free and independent people of Cuba. The outcome of the deliberations of the convention will be watched with interest.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

—Do not get scared if your heart troubles you. Most likely you have indigestion. Kodo Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and gives the worn out stomach perfect rest. It is the only preparation known that completely digests all classes of foods; that is why it cures the worst cases of indigestion and stomach trouble after everything else has failed. It may be taken in all conditions and cannot help but do you good. H. B. McCord.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

—Shilling & Curie spipped three car loads of hogs Saturday.

August Kinsey has gone to the Battle Creek sanitarium and Harry Kimes went there last Wednesday.

George Howey is visiting with his daughter, Mrs. M. D. Engle.

Talk about dry towns. Well, if St. Joe wasn't wet about election time, then we are blind. Come in and have a drink and then vote for our man, seems to have been a few words, many times spoken last Tuesday.

Some big changes in St. Joe's mercantile business is contemplated in the near future.

Wm. Leighty will again become mine host of the Leighty hotel, the first of March, Landlord Bartlett retiring.

The good people of St. Joe seem to have forgotten that there was an election a week ago.

The mother of A. B. Filley died last Thursday. Interment at Newville on Saturday.

The one-year old son of John Leighty died at Hicksville last Thursday and was brought to St. Joe for interment.

J. C. F. Abel and Charles Abel of Michigan, accompanied by Hollie Akins, have gone to the state of Maine for a sixty. day hunt. Akins, on his trip there a year ago, killed a very large moose and of course was very happy.

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia , writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles indused serious lung trouble, which ended in Consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. Kings New Discovery for Consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost $5 00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung trouble." Regular size 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at McCORD'S Drug Store.

Royal Lady Is an M. D.

The only royal lady in Europe to hold the degree of M. D. is the consort of the king of Portugal. She was the Princess Amelie of Orleans and was born at Orleans house, Twickenham, near London. Her education was begun in the beautiful Middlesex village, but in later years scientific pursuits occupied her mind and before her marriage she had obtained the medical degree.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile, of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give her no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidney and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion builds up strength. Only 50c. Sold by H. B. McCord, druggist. Guaranteed.

Tried to Steal Returns.

The office of the Secretary of State was burglarized Sunday noon. In view of the fact that two or three congressional districts at last week's election was very close, it is the theory of some that the object of the burglary was to tamper with official abstracts of those elections. If this was the purpose, the burglars were disappointed, as the election abstracts were in another room.

KEEPS LONELY VIGIL.

LIGHTHOUSE MAN HAS WORRY AND RESPONSIBILITY.

Works Amid Deep Solitude and Must Endure All Sorts of Weather—Place an Appointive One and Free from Wiles of Politicians.

The keeper of a marine lighthouse has not a job, but an office. He is a Presidential appointee and holds a commission which when read out sounds as important as that of the collector of customs or the postmaster. He holds an office of large trust and high responsibility. He is to keep his lamp trimmed and burning from the dusk of evening till the next daylight. His post is advanced to the edge of the deep and often raging waters—it is a lonely situation and through nights of all weathers he must stay and be vigilant at his post. Should he fail once in the performance of duty what disaster to vessels and crews might not come! The navigator knows and testifies to his worth in the position where he has been placed by the government, but it is certain that he is not much regarded by the general public.

LONELY WATCH OF THE LIGHTKEEPER.

The first lighthouse in the Chicago harbor, says the Chronicle, if it could be so denominated, when the smallest vessels made their way with peril into the shallow mouth of the unimproved river, was erected in 1831. Reckoning from that date, which, in fact, was six years earlier than the city's birth as a corporation, the vast commece now carried on here had its beginning only sixty-nine years ago. There is nothing like this commercial wonder in the world now, nor ever was. All this since an immense number of men still living and not yet accounted old were born!

When it first was in agitation to erect a lighthouse here of the old pattern, with a stationary light of no great power, there was a man in France deep in studies and busy with experiments to produce a marine light on a new principle that should take the place of every other the world round. Fresnel was that man. Indeed, he began with his experiments ten years earlier. Over in France was Fresnel at work on a marine light that was destined to send its apprising flashes from six several towers in the Chicago harbor over the waters to the horizon. The Frenchman lived to perfect his light; he was appointed secretary to the lighthouse board of France in 1825 and while he was in that position he replaced reflectors with lenses and invented the revolving light. Then he added prismatic rings. The result was the system that still goes by his name and has long since changed the mode of lighthouse illumination throughout the world. It is now used exclusively by the United States.

Chicago people are accustomed to seeing the Fresnel light in the several lighthouses in the harbor, but probably few have ever inquired into the mechanism of the apparatus by which the flashes are produced. Take the one on the north pier as typical. Within it is an arrangement of lenses, supplemented by prisms, which revolve around a sperm oil-burning lamp. When one of the lenses comes opposite the observer the eye receives a bright flash preceded and followed by a brief eclipse. There are six orders of lenses, arranged according to size. The first three and largest are used in seacoast lights, and the last three in harbor and river lights. The lamp differs from other lamps in the provision of wicks. Carcel invented a lamp which is named for him, in which oil is fed to the wick by means of a pump, operated by clockwork, sometimes used in lighthouses and as a domestic lamp. Fresnel adopted the Carcel lamp, but improved it so that it pumps up to the burner four times as much oil as is consumed, which, by keeping the burners cool, prevents them from melting and also the wicks from burning up. Sometimes a wick will burn a whole night without requiring snuffing. This, notwithstanding the fact that the intensity of the Fresnel light is about equal to that of about twenty-five ordinary Carcel burners. The above description applies to the first order of lenses, which are used in the great lights on the seacoast. For the second order of lenses, such as used in the lights in the Chicago harbor, a lamp with three concentric wicks was adopted. The annual consumption of oil by the lenses of the first order is 694 gallons and of the second order 461 gallons. The lenses cost but little more than the old reflectors and the saving of oil is great. The ratio of effect of the lens light is to that of the reflector light as 4 to 1—that is, one gallon of oil burned in a lens throws as much light to the horizon as four gallons burned in a reflector light.

During the last twenty-five years there has been a great increase in marine lighting in the ninth lighthouse district, which includes Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin and Illinois. The number of lighthouses in this district is 127, and every light is a Fresnel. A new lighthouse built at Manitou Island is fine, costing the government a good sum of money. Beside it is the fog signal contrivance and a little distance off is the oil tank inclosed neatly. The house in which the lighthouse keeper dwells is supplied with the modern conveniences and is handsome enough to be called a villa. A large quantity of stores is required to be kept constantly in the district, and these are substantially housed in a government building in St. Joseph, Mich.

The official headquarters of the ninth district is in Chicago. It is in charge of Commander F. M. Symonds, United States navy. Commander Symonds says that the Chicago lighthouses are reckoned among the best on the lakes.

HOT RACE WITH A GRIZZLY.

Lively Experience of a Colorado Postmaster with a Bear.

W. H. Person, local manager of a typewriter company, received a letter this morning from Tom Hamilton, postmaster at Hamilton, Routt County, describing a thrilling race with a bear which he enjoyed this week.

The bear was a big grizzly. The grizzly when he sees a human form is bound to do one of two things. He will either run at or away from the stranger, and if he does the former it is generally a case of doughnuts to pretzels that it is all off with the stranger. In this case the bear that runs at a man yearned for a closer acquaintance with the postmaster and would probably have interfered seriously with the future delivery of the United States mail but for the fact that Hamilton is something of a rough rider and had a horse under him.

Postmaster Hamilton had for the time being left the affairs of state in the hands of a subordinate while he went out to round up some straying cattle. He went about three miles from home and was standing beside his horse wondering which way to turn next when there was a stir in some brush ahead of him. It looked too small a disturbance for a cow, but he thought it might be a calf and went forward to investigate. He was within a few feet of the brush when a big grizzly stood on its hind legs and threw him a kiss.

Hamilton didn't stop to catch the kiss, but made a bolt for his horse. The steed had seen Mr. Bear and started away almost as eagerly as did his master, and it was nip and tuck for the saddle between bruin and the postmaster. After a run of 100 yards Hamilton caught the pommel of the saddle and threw himself aboard just as the bear made a bound for him. A pair of spurs went into the horse's hide and the animal leaped forward with a bound which made the bear feel that his meal of man was apt to escape. But he doubled himself up into a ball of fury and started red-hot after his intended victim. The chase kept up until the door of the postmaster's cabin was reached, when bruin turned about and made for the woods. He was allowed to escape.—Denver Times.

MUSSELS ARE GOOD FOOD.

Their Use in the United States Has Been Very Much Neglected.

"There is one shellfish, the mussel, the use of which as an article of food seems to be totally neglected in the United States," observed an Englishman of several years' residence in this country to a Star reporter recently. "In fact it is so seldom employed that it may be said to be practically unknown on this side of the Atlantic. It is rarely seen in your markets, and near the salt water bays and estuaries in which it is taken it is used, I am told, as a manure for certain crops. This lack of recognition of mussels as an epicurian delicacy probably arises from the popular superstition among Americans that this shellfish possesses poisonous qualities. Such an impression is, however, rather absurd, for in England they are largely consumed by the poor and middle class people, and if they contained any injurious properties their use would be promptly prohibited.

"It is well known that some persons are unable to eat of particular sorts of shell fish—to some oysters, clams or lobsters are more or less poisonous, but mussels are only 'noxious' to the greater number for the reason that they deteriorate more rapidly when removed from the water than any other species. There are mussel beds within a radius of ten miles of New York and other eastern cities of sufficient capacity to supply millions of people with a clean and nutritious article of food; one that would lessen to a large degree the exhaustive demands made upon the clam, oyster and lobster fisheries.

"To prepare mussels for the table they should be selected of medium size and care should be observed to wash them carefully and place them in a vessel of salted water for several hours, so that they may clean themselves; that is, discharge the dirt and grit found within their shells. When this process is completed the bivalves should be placed in water and boiled—or steaming is better in the vapor generated by their own juice. When they are done they may be easily taken out of their shells and are ready to be used in one of the many forms of which they are susceptible."—Washington Star.

The Resources of Siberia.

Under government encouragement it is said that Siberia is gaining 200,000 farmers per year. Among its exports are cereals, butter, wool, leather and dried and preserved meats. Already this remote country, which the popular imagination is apt to picture as a vast waste, the abode of frost and snow, and misery, is becoming talked of as a possible competitor with the well-known cereal-producing countries of the world. A member of the French bureau of foreign commerce estimates that, on the basis of the present population of Russia in Europe, Siberia can sustain 80,000,000 inhabitants, although it now has not one-tenth of that number. It produces one-tenth of the world's yield of gold, but owing to climatic obstacles many of its mines are not worked, and its immense coal deposits have hardly been touched.

Feathers Blown Off Chickens.

A device for plucking feathers from chickens has been patented in Great Britain. Cross currents of air set in motion by revolving electrical fans completely strip a bird of every feather and particle of down.

Whenever a girl takes it into her head to wave a broom at the head of a mob, she is called a Joan of Arc.

ALL ONE CONTINENT.

This map shows the formation of the land which scientists now affirm connected Australia, Africa and America, making of the three one great antarctic continent. For proof of this the fact is pointed out that the ancient sea beaches of Patagonia, which are now far inland, have imbedded in them fossil shells which are exactly like those found in parts of Australia. It is probably more than 1,000,000 years ago that the continuous coastline of both continents became divided.

The fauna of the three countries are beyond doubt descendants from the same ancestors, for it is absurd to assume that there could at one time have been a land bridge across the great expanses of ocean; or that there can ever have been migration by means of drifting wood.

The ostrich is cited as another proof. It is found both in Australia and Africa, but is, nevertheless, a non-flying bird. But it is more particularly among extinct animals, whose remains are from time to time unearthed, that investigators have been able to establish their theory beyond doubt.

Now, the discovery of an antarctic continent is looked forward to with more importance by scientists than the discovery of the north pole.

LAW SETS WASH DAY.

CHICAGO JUDGE RENDERS DECISION IN QUARREL.

Decides on What Day Flat Occupants Shall Cleanse the Family Linen—Housekeepers Must Wash on the Days Allotted to Them.

Strange as it may seem, the Chicago Woman's Club has never discussed the problem of wash day in an apartment building; neither has the West End Woman's Club, nor the Arche Club, nor, so far as anyone can find out, has any woman's club of the city. It is a rare occurrence that a matter comes before the public mind which has not previously been considered by the woman's club. It is seldom that women are forced to go outside the authority of their organizations for a solution of any really weighty problem. There can be no doubt that concerning the regulation of wash day the clubs have been negligent. They have had mothers' meetings, they have given their best thought to the solution of social problems, they have dabbled in domestic affairs to the extent of the servant question. Why they should have so neglected the problem of wash-day rights no one can say—it is enough that they have, and that but for the timely intervention of the judiciary serious things might have happened.

COMMON LAW PROTECTS WASH DAY.

It was Judge Tuthill who was brave enough to attempt a settlement of the matter. The wash-day litigation has reached a successful termination, and the public is agreed that no greater service has been rendered by the courts of Illinois. All America will look to Judge Tuthill's decision for authority in arranging wash days, and the world cannot but be influenced by its message of domestic peace. It marks the passing of the Monday wash-day, opening a new epoch, which, influenced by the strenuous life of the times, will have seven wash days instead of one.

There can be no argument as to which wash-day belongs to whom. Judge Tuthill has read the law on that question, and occupants of apartments must consider the wash-day regulations before renting their flat. According to the decree, the mater stands: First flat wash day, Monday; second flat wash day, Tuesday; third flat wash day, Wednesday; fourth flat wash day, Thursday, and so on until the seventh flat is reached, when, so the decree reads, a new laundry shall be established. It is so planned that every six flats shall share a laundry, taking it day by day in turn, so that no two families will expect to have the room on the same day, and so that no discussion can arise as to which day the laundry belongs to which family.

The case that brought the matter to a focus in the courts was that of a family living in the third flat of a building on Woodlawn avenue. The family in question was more forehanded than its neighbors, and thought to get soapsuds and ill-tempers out of the way before the middle of the week. Wednesday was its allotted day for the laundry, but, nothing daunted, the family housekeeper set her clothes a-soak Monday night, with the intention of washing on Tuesday. Early Tuesday morning she was busy over the tubs, when the family from the second flat—a mother and two sturdy daughters—invaded the basement. The discussion which followed was a trying one, and but for the timely intervention of the janitor might have resulted no one knows how seriously.

Now, as luck would have it, the janitor, man fashion, was unconscious of wash-day trials and tempers. The matron of the third flat had taken to the tubs first, and by right of possession they belonged to her. So, at least, the janitor decided, never thinking that in breaking one of the rules of the establishment he was laying himself open to litigation.

The family of the second flat were great "sticklers" for rules. They knew the right of the laundry was theirs for the day, and, whether or not, they had no intention of being trampled on by the people from the flat overhead.

Besides that, they were persevering people and fond of argument, and would not let so good an opportunity pass.

Judge Tuthill has presided over the recreant masses these many years with never an opportunity for so distinguishing himself as he has done in the wash-day decision. He has never hesitated to mete out justice even of the sternest sort; he has never faltered in the doing of his duty, but it must be remembered that duty never came to him with so many perplexing complications as this of the wash-tubs brought. If he quailed before the stern facts as they were presented by the two chief witnesses, if he hesitated in choosing between the rights of the two sides of the case, no one will ever know. Wisely he kept his peace and, advising with no one, with his duty ever before him, he chose to emphasize the rule which has been held in many apartment houses, and which the better judgment of every thinking person will commend. It is now no longer a rule, but a law, unwritten, yet forceful nevertheless to hold every top flat occupant to her week's end wash day.

As for the women's clubs, it is too bad they did not "get in" on this discussion before the question was settled. As it is, one of the North Side clubs has decided to talk about it next week, and if possible to find some excuse for the action of the woman from the third flat, who has, in their estimation, been unjustly set upon throughout the trial. If such a decision is not possible, the club may decide to send her a testimonial of sympathetic sisterhood, expressing the trust that she will be resigned to retarded housework and midweek washings. Perhaps later in the year the Chicago club may undertake to throw further light upon the distressing domestic situation of the woman who occupies the third flat.—Chicago Chronicle.

Risked His Life in a Canoe.

A young Frenchman named Felix Chauchois, a Parisian student, about 25 years of age, was given an enthusiastic reception on the sands at Calais upon his reaching shore after an adventurous voyage across the channel from Dover in a small canoe.

M. Chauchois, who had been staying at Dover, left the English shore on Sunday morning at 8 o'clock in a canoe belonging to the Dover Rowing Club, of which he was a temporary member. It is an exceedingly frail craft, measuring about 14 feet in length and 2 feet wide, covered at both ends. The well in which the canoeist sat is 3 feet long by about 20 inches wide. She was in the same condition when he started as when used for ordinary pleasure purposes, the only protection he had to keep the water out being the ordinary weather boards.

There was a light northwesterly wind as he started from Dover, but later in the day the wind veered to southwest and freshened, and there was quite an unpleasant ripple on the water. Chauchois was at first carried away on the flood tide a good deal to the eastward, but he had the advantage of having his course for Calais given him by Captain Delahaye of the cross-channel mail packet Le Nord. It appears, however, that he drifted many miles out of his course, as the tide turned westward, and it was not until 10:30 on Monday that he reached Calais. He was unaccompanied throughout the passage.—London Chronicle.

Does Cooking Spoil Food?

Prof. B. Tyler, of Indianapolis, says that human life would average three or four times longer than it does if people would reject the senseless practice of cooking their food. Animals and fowl live much longer in proportion to the period of full development than man. Says Prof. Tyler: "Man, for some unknown reason, eats dead cells (cooked cells) to replace the dead cells that have been separated from the body. In cooking food all the acids and gases so necessary for the conservation and preservation of ideal health escape with the steam, and the food retains a greater supply of ash, lime and other such substances than nature requires for the amount of food taken into the system."

Remarkable Natural Curiosity.

Giles County, Virginia, contains a remarkable natural curiosity known as Salt Pond, which is described as a lake of fresh water sunk in Salt Pond Mountain at an elevation of 4,500 feet above sea level. It is fed by no visible stream, yet it is claimed to have been gradually enlarging since 1804, the date of its discovery. Fish that have been placed in Salt Pond have mysteriously disappeared. Its depth is unknown, experiments with a line 300 feet long failing to reach the bottom. The origin of the lake is unknown.

A New Will.

"Hello, Jasper," exclaimed Spenders, stopping his rich uncle's valet, "how's uncle this morning?"

"Well, sir, he says he thinks he needs a change of heir."

"So, he's sent you for the doctor, eh?"

"No—for his lawyer."—Philadelphia Press.

Apparel of Chinamen.

Logical.—Willie—Mamma, I dreamed last night that papa gave me a bicycle for my birthday and you gave me a watch. Mamma—But, Willie, you know dreams go by contraries. Willie—Then you will give me the bicycle and papa the watch?—Brooklyn Life.

"We are just holding a love feast," said young Mr. Linger, audaciously, to Mr. Frisbie, when that father of an engaged daughter put his head in the parlor doorway at 11:25 p. m. "I thought it must be a protracted meeting," said the old gentleman, as he withdrew.—Harper's Bazar.

Mrs. Newrich—That Mrs. Hyart is a stuck-up thing. I know just as much about music as she does; she needn't get funny. Mrs. Browne—Why, what has she done? Mrs. Newrich—O! she tried to trip me up to-day. Asked if I'd ever heard somebody's "Songs Without Words."—Philadelphia Press.

"Did they have fresh vegetables every day where you boarded this summer?" "No," said the sad-looking citizen, "the farmer we visited bought everything at the cross-roads grocery store. There's only one thing worse than a green goods man and that's a canned goods man.—Washington Star.

Not Available.

When, at 3 o'clock one morning, Mrs. Newman was convinced that she heard a burglar in the parlor, she cautiously awakened her husband.

"Very well," said Mr. Newman, with a drowsy patience born of frequent similar alarms. "I'll get my revolver from the drawer and go down and investigate."

"But, William," said his wife, with a sudden gasping remembrance, "your pistol isn't here, dear. I—I tied it up with ribbons for an ornament under your father's sword to-day."—Youth's Companion.

How to Bandage.

There is not a more important art connected with household surgery than that of bandaging. To do it well requires much practice and no little judgment. The material employed in bandaging is usually stout unbleached cotton, from two or three to nine or ten inches wide, and from six to twelve yards long; the former length and breadth will do best for the leg. If commenced at the ball of the foot, and evenly applied so that each fold overlaps the other about one-third, it will reach to the knee. Fig. 1 will best show the mode of application. The bandage having been first tightly rolled up, is taken in the right hand of the operator; the end is passed under the foot, and held there by the left hand until it is secured by one turn of the bandage over it; an upward direction is then taken, so that a couple of folds bring the bandage up to the front of the leg, over the instep; the next turn will naturally pass above the heel behind; and then, if proper care be observed, it will go on, fold above fold, each overlapping the other slightly, all up the leg. The bandage is passed from the right to the left hand each time it goes round the leg, and great care should be taken to hold it firmly, and equalize the pressure, as well as to smooth out any wrinkles that may occur in the process of binding. A firm and even support is thus afforded to the limb, which is not likely to crease, or get displaced by the motion which may afterward be necessary; it may be made fast above the calf by a couple of pins, or a needle and thread. Great care should be taken in this, as in all similar operations, to get the bandage rolled up tightly and smoothly, before commencing; it may thus be grasped in the hand, and kept well under the command of the operator, who should on no account let go his hold of the bandage, so as to relax the pressure.

The arm does not require so long or broad a bandage as the leg; about two inches, by three or four yards, being the average size. This limb is rather more difficult to manage, half turns being necessary to effect a proper envelopment. How this is effected may be seen in Fig. 2. The bandage is fold ed back upon itself, so as to take a different direction, and cover the space which would be exposed by the ordinary method of folding; these half turns, unless they are done tightly and evenly, will be apt to slip and derange the whole binding. Some operators avoid half turns, by letting the roller take its natural course, and then coming back to cover the exposed parts; but this method, besides requiring a larger bandage, does not effect the required purpose so neatly and efficiently. One mode of fastening a bandage is to split it up a short distance, so as to leave two ends, which can be passed round the limb, and tied. It should always be borne in mind that the chief art in applying the bandages is to give firm and uniform support, without undue pressure upon any part; and to effect this properly, the strain in winding should be upon the whole roll held in the hand, and not upon the unrolled portion of it. This strain should not be relaxed during the progress of the operation.

Uncle Sam's Chinese Title.

The United States are known in China as Nei-Kwo, or "the beautiful country," though the Chinese masses to-day always call an American a Kwa Kee Kwoh Yui, which may be translated as a "countryman of the flower flag." The reason of this is that when first the Stars and Stripes were seen in Canton harbor the natives flocked to the shore, hailing it as the Kwa Kee Cheun, or the "flower flagship."

Mrs. Estes G. Rathbone, wife of the director general of Cuban posts, who is accused of having systematically robbed the government, thereby profiting to the extent of many thousands of dollars, has arrived at New York from Havana. It is stated that she visits the United States at this time to intercede for her husband. Much of the success that Maj. Rathbone achieved in Ohio politics was due to his wife, who is a very brilliant woman. She was his adviser and fanned his ambition until he made himself so useful to his party that he could demand substantial recognition, which the Cuban postal field allowed. Mrs. Rathbone is popular in official society in Washington.

Gen. David Sloan Stanley has taken the place of the late Gen. Rosecrans as president of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland. The general has reached the ripe age of 70, and looks back with pardonable satisfaction upon a life spent for his country's good. Before the great war he served on the plains and had been promoted to the rank of captain when the storm broke in 1861. He took part in numerous battles of the war and when peace was established he was breveted major general and re-entered the regular army as colonel. He served on the frontier chiefly until 1884, when he was given command of the department of Texas.

She is a charming type of the Southern woman and is intensely devoted to the memory of her dead hero. Although her sorrows have been many, Mrs. Jackson's disposition has always been sunny in very truth. The distinguished sufferer is a patient at the Church Home and Infirmary in Baltimore.

Minor State Items.

Mrs. Mack Wright of Pennville, fell dead while drinking a cup of coffee at the breakfast table.

Two more cases of smallpox have broken out in Summitville and the town is under a strict quarantine.

Arthur, the 8-year-old son of Nicholas Helwig of Kokomo, was run over by a log wagon and one of his legs was badly crushed.

Mathew Maxwell, a prominent farmer living northwest of Knightstown, was seriously hurt internally by being knocked down by a spirited horse.

Isaac Johnson, aged 65, near Columbus, while unbalanced, drove his family out of the house and committed suicide by cutting his throat with a case knife.

A large land terrapin was found recently by R. L. Pate on his farm near Rising Sun, bearing the inscription "W. F. Willey, 1840." Willey has been dead over 10 years.

The Board of Foreign Missions of the Indiana Yearly Meeting of Friends met at Richmond and reorganized by electing Benjamin Johnson of Richmond, President and Mrs Phariba Stevens, Secretary. Much time will be devoted to work in Mexico.

L. B. McCormack, State Labor Commissioner, has been notified that the exhibit of the State Board of Arbitration at the Paris Exhibition has been awarded the silver medal. This is one of the highest prizes awarded for this line of work and Mr. McCormack is proud of the fine showing.

A party of citizens of Bowling Green have constructed a river craft, with double cabin, for an Arkansas hunting expedition. They will launch it as soon as there is sufficient rise in Eel River to let them out, going down by way of Eel, White, Wabash, Ohio and Mississippi Rivers.

The Trades Council of Marion has withdrawn its boycott against the Union Traction Company, begun because of a report that the company was waging war on union employes. President Mahon of the International Association of Street Railway Employes has been informed that the company has no objection to the employes joining the union.

Joseph, the 3-year-old son of Michael McLaughlin, a plate glass worker of Elwood, met a terrible death as a result of a Hallowe'en prank. An outhouse was turned over and had not been righted. The child walked into the open vault, and was suffocated.

Bertha Wills, aged 17, of Linden, shot herself through the heart with a twenty-two-caliber rifle. She sat on the end of the bed and discharged the weapon with her toe, having first bared one foot. She had been living with a family, but was discharged because she was in the habit of taking loaf sugar to bed to eat.

BAD FOR THE STENOGRAPHER.

Trouble Ensued Because He Did Not Grasp the Englishman's Accent.

"An Englishman who drops his h's and aspirates his a's and a stenographer and typewriter who spells phonetically from dictation make a fine combination from which trouble is sure to result unless the 'copy' is carefully revised," said a merchant the other day to a Washington Star reporter. "For instance, a friend of mine, and the manager of one of the most important banking houses, is an Englishman. Not long ago he employed a young man to act as his stenographer, and one of the first things that the latter was called upon to do was the 'taking down' of a letter to the manager's wife, who was away at a summer resort. Being a busy man, the Englishman didn't take the trouble to look at the letter after it had been typewritten, but when his wife, in the course of a few days, answered it there was a hot time for the stenographer.

"'My dear Henry,' she wrote, 'what on earth do you mean by calling me "Hannah" and our little Horace "Orris?" I will admit that this sounds like you, but why do you make a joke of it before your employes?'

"Of course, the fond husband and father didn't know what it all meant, and so he wrote for an explanation, and his first letter was sent back to him. One glance at it and he rushed over to his stenographer, excitedly threw the sheet of paper down before him, and demanded: 'There, what do you mean, sir, by writing my wife's name down?' 'Annah?'

"'Anna?' replied the young man; 'let me see. No; I've got it Hannah, all right.'

"'But,' said the Englishman, who was furious, 'it's not 'Annah; it's Hannah!'

"'Well, there it is, Hannah—H-a-n-n-a-h.'

"''Annah be dashed!' exclaimed the Englishman. 'A-n-n-a, Hannah! Can't you read English, you blanked fool?'

"By this time the stenographer began to see through the trouble, so he begged off upon the plea that, having had a swelling in one of his ears, he had not been able to hear very well. But it cost him nearly a week's salary to square things with the boys in the office, and he always deems it best to hide when he hears the manager's wife is expected down town."

HELPED THE CHIEF.

How a Loyal Engineer Did His Brother Great Service.

Meadville, Pa., Nov. 12, 1900.—(Special.)—The Loyalty of the Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is proverbial. A circumstance occurred in this city some days ago, which emphasizes tais feeling.

Frank J. Zeller is chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers No. 143. He is extremely popular among his fellow railway men, and one of the best known engineers running out of Meadville. When the announcement was made a short time ago that Frank was pretty sick, it caused a great deal of regret among the boys. Soon he was missed from his engine, having had to "lay off" on account of his back. A brother of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who had been ill with similar symptoms some time before, and who had been pulled through, called to see Mr. Zeller, and in a brotherly way, took with him a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the remedy which had cured him. He advised Mr. Zeller to try them, with the result that after seven boxes had been used, he was entirely well, and able to work.

In an interview Mr. Zeller states:

"I had suffered for four years with this affliction, being often kept awake at night with pains, and at times unable to work. I tried several of the advertised remedies, and found that they did me no earthly good. Finally, a member of our order, who had been cured of Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills brought me a box, and asked me to try them. I had little faith in them, but as a drowning man grasps at a straw to help him, so I took the pills. I used seven boxes, and am today as well and strong a man as there is in Pennsylvania."

Naturally, Mr. Zeller feels very grateful, and his complete recovery has delighted his many friends, and none more than the good brother, who feels that he was instrumental in saving the life of the chief.

Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure Kidney Trouble.

Sold for 50 cents a box, all dealers.

London's Revenues Increase Yearly.

The city of London covers an area of one square mile, but it is doubtful whether any other mile on the face of the globe represents so much wealth. Although the city has not increased its boundaries by a single foot of ground during the past fifty years, and although its resident population within that time has dwindled almost to the vanishing point, its revenues and resources have gone on increasing. According to the statement of the city chamberlain, the rents and quit rents of the corporation in 1849 were £73,754; last year they were £186,457. Half a century ago the market tolls brought in a revenue of £26,918, while to-day they produce £185,000.—Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

Education of Chinese Mutes.

To the average celestial the education of the deaf and dumb is an impossibility, and the fact that it has been done under his very eyes is to him only another proof that the "outside barbarians" are in league with evil spirits. Probably the difficulty to his imagination is accentuated by the fact that Chinese written characters are based solely upon sounds or combinations of sounds which he considers it impossible to convey to the minds of deaf-mute children. Yet there are certain elementary principles upon which missionaries found it possible to proceed and to educate a number of native deaf-mute children.

Give Your Glasses a Bath.

"Half of the people who wear glasses and complain that their sight is gradually diminishing owe the idea to dirty glasses," remarks an optician. "Spectacles and eye-glasses are as much benefited by a bath now and then as people are. It is strange how many people there are who think that by wiping their glasses now and then they keep them clean. The fact is they want a bath just as frequently as does a human being. You see, it is this way: The face, and especially the eyes, all the time give off a fine vapor. This clings to the glasses and the dust collects on them. As soon as they become clean—that is, apparently clean—the wearer is satisfied.

"So the process goes on. But, while wiping the glasses cleanses them and is necessary, a bath is also required. Every time the glasses are wiped a fine film of dirt is left on them and this gradually accumulates, and no wiping will clean it off. In time this coating gets quite thick enough to blur the vision, even though at a glance the glasses may appear clean. When this occurs the sight is diminished and they come to me or some other optician. What they ought to have done was to give the glasses a bath in warm water, well scrubbing them with a small toothbrush and soap and afterward wipe them. This should first be done with chamois leather and then with tissue paper to polish them."

A New Fire Extinguisher.

A scientist suggests that milk be used to extinguish the flames of kerosene, because "milk forms an emulsion with the oil, which makes it accomplish its object more quickly." The best medicine to quickly cure constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness or flatulency, is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it also for malaria, fever and ague.

A Good Old Story Revamped.

This is the latest, and possibly the best, story which Sir Thomas Lipton is telling upon himself. "Recently," he says, "I stepped into a smoking compartment of a Caledonian train, and was followed shortly by an elderly lady who carried a small and obtrusive dog.

"'This is a smoking compartment, madam,' I said.

"'It is not,' the old lady answered, with asperity.

"'I beg your pardon,' I persisted, pointing to the legend on the window, 'it is.'

"'I don't care,' she retorted." 'At any rate, I never allow any one to smoke in my presence.'

"By and by I produced a favorite pipe and began to smoke. A moment later the woman snatched the pipe from me and flung it far out of the carriage. Thereupon I lifted the pet dog and hurled him after the pipe. The lady raved until the next station was reached, when she had me arrested. The argument bade fair to last for several hours, when the difficulty was solved by the arrival of the little dog carrying the pipe in his mouth."—Philadelphia Record.

Chronic Nasal Catarrh poisons every breath that is drawn into the lungs. There is procurable from any druggist the remedy for its cure. A small quantity of Ely's Cream Balm placed into the nostrils spreads over an inflamed and angry surface, relieves immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses, heals and cures. Drying inhalants, fumes, smokes and snuffs simply develop dry catarrh; they dry up the secretions which adhere to the membrane and decompose, causing a far more serious trouble than the ordinary form of catarrh. Avoid all drying inhalants, use Ely's Cream Balm. It is reliable and will cure catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever easily and pleasantly. All druggists sell it at 50 cents or it will be mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

Beware of Them

There are two afflictions which perhaps give the most pain and trouble, viz:

Sciatica and Lumbago

Both disable and cripple, but

St. Jacobs Oil

is their best cure.

ST. VITUS' DANCE

Three great and complete cures effected by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Mrs. J. A. Ferre, who resides near 905 Main Street, Hartford, Conn., says:

"My daughter Lulu became very ill with St. Vitus dance over a year ago. She became so bad that she lost the use of her right arm and side, and we thought at one time she would lose her speech. Her tongue was almost paralyzed. She was so bad she could not feed herself, and at night she would get so nervous I had to sit and hold her. I tried several doctors, but they did not do her any good. I did not find anything that would help her until I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. She is now, by the use of this medicine, entirely cured."

C. H. Bailey, Esq., of Waterbury, Vt., writes:

"I am more than glad to write about my little daughter. Until a short time ago she had always been a very delicate child and subject to sick spells lasting weeks at a time. She was very nervous, and our family doctor said we would never raise her, she was so delicate and feeble. We tried many remedies without the least good. We felt much anxiety about her, especially as no doctors could benefit her, and had great fear for her future. Learning of the wonders being done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to give it to her. She soon commenced to improve under its use, and rapidly gained in every respect. She eats and sleeps well, and her nerves are strong. The medicine has done wonders for her and it is the best we ever knew. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, to everybody."

Mrs. J. Learmonth, of 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass., says:

"At ten years of age my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack. The mouth would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak; her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk. She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maniac and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure, I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old, and has been well ever since, and to-day is a picture of health."

DeKalb Co. Teachers' Ass'n.

Eleventh annual session, will be held in Auburn, Nov. 30, and Dec. 1, 1900. The program will consist of papers and discussions by some of the best educators and teachers of the county.

On. Friday p. m. Dean Vincent of Chicago University will give a lecture on "Social Science and the Schools;" and on Friday evening he will give his popular lecture entitled "The Psychology of Crowds and Mobs." Dean Vincent is a very popular worker and lecturer at Chautauquas and teachers' state associations, and the teachers of the county and the public in general are to be congratulated on their good fortune to secure the services of so able a man.

The public is invited to attend all sessions of the Association. No admission fee except Friday evening, when a charge of 25 cents will be made. It is hoped that the citizens of Auburn, interested in good, wholesome lectures will show their appreciation of this effort to procure good talent, by liberally patronizing the one to be given by Dean Vincent.

Each session will be interspersed with good music.

—The most important election date is the candidate.

Recommends it to Trainmen.

G. H. Hausan, Lima, O., engineer on L. E. & Western R. R., writes: "I have been troubled a great deal with backache. I was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure, and one bottle entirely relieved me. I gladly recommend it to anyone, especially my friends among the train men, who are usually afflicted the same way.

Opportunity For Business.

During the past year the Chicago & North-Western Railway Company built 474 miles of line through the most fertile portions of Iowa and Minnesota. These new lines of railway are now in full operation and are dotted with promising towns, which are trade centers for well located communities. A descriptive pamphlet with a list of business opportunities in each town may be obtained upon application to agents of the Chicago & North-Western Railway or to W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger & Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

What Would You Do?

If you were in our place and had Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for sale and knew it to be a certain cure for all stomach derangements, constipation or sick headache? Why, you would keep talking about it, swear by it and sell lots of it just as we do. At H. B. McCord's.

—Hamilton Gray, Greencastle, went out on a "toot." He was found firmly fixed the next morning in a mortar bed in which he had fallen.

—To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood, and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequalled. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—The Niles Sun, through a typographical error, stated that a local politician would "disgust" the issues of the day.

—Mrs. T. Bridleman of Parshallville, Mich., was troubled with salt rheum for thirteen years and had tried a number of doctors without relief. After two or three applications of Banner salve, her hands became better and in a short time she was entirely cured. H. B. McCord.

—We learn that Blaine Harrison is captain of the foot ball team of the Freshman Class of Oberlin college. There are 77 men in the class. Of the nine inter-class games which each team plays for the championship and a banquet to the victors. Blaine's team has played six, defeating the Sophmores and Juniors, and has not been scored against except by the Seniors in one game. We doubt if a younger captain of a college foot ball team can be found.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have been the attacks that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by H. B McCord.

Russian Atrocities.

It begins to look as if Russia, rather than China needs civilizing. The London Globe publishes a letter from a Belgian who has been traveling to Pekin via the Trans-Siberian railroad He describes under date of Sept. 6, what he saw in the Amur river:

"The scenes I have witnessed during the three days since the steamer left Blagoveshchensk," he says, "are horrible beyond the powers of description. It is the closing tableau of a fearful human tragedy. Two thousand Chinese were deliberately drowned at Morzo, 2,000 at Rabe and 8,000 around Blagoveshchensk, a total of 12,000 corpses incumbering the river, among which were thousands of women and children Navigation was all but impossible.

"Last week a boat had to plow its way through a tangled and mangled mass of corpses lashed together by their long hair. The banks were literally covered with corpses. In the curves of the stream were dark, putrid, smelling masses of human flesh and bone, surging and swaying in the steamer's wake and wash. The captain vainly ordered full speed ahead The sight and smell will be ever with us.

"From Blagoveshchensk to Aigun, forty-five kilometers, numerous villages studded the bank, with a thriving, industrious population of over 100,000. That of Aigun was 20,000. No one will ever know the number of these who perished by shot, sword and stream. Not a village is left. The silence of death was around us, the smoking ruins of Aigun on the right, with broken down, crumbling walls and shattered, roofless houses."

Amendments May Fail.

The returns on the vote for the two constitutional amendments at the recent election have all come into the office of the secretary of State with the exception of those from two or three counties. From the figures received it is possible to tell within a very narrow margin what the total vote on both amendments will be. The first amendment provides for the increase of the number of judges of the supreme court to not more than eleven, and the second amendment gives the legislature power to fix the qualifications for admission to the bar. In most of the counties there is a decided majority for the amendments, but in a few the majority is against them.

The supreme court held, in a decision rendered in 1880, that amendments shall receive a majority of all the votes cast at the election at which the amendments are voted on There were about 650,000 votes cast at the election last week. It appears from this construction of the law that the amendments have failed of ratification.

The total vote for the first amendment so far as received is 265,207, against 167,276. The vote on the second amendment is 202,327, against 136,221.—Indianapolis Press.

Vote on Amendment.

In our rush to find who was elected we forgot to look up the vote on amendments to the constitution. The vote in this county on the first amendment is, for, 3,276; against it, 2,066. On the second amendment it is, for, 2,504; against it, 1,431. As seen in another article we publish, it would seem both amendments fail. Some of our exchanges are claiming that both carried. They are wrong. An amendment must have for it, a majority of all the votes cast at that election, not a majority over the vote "against." In DeKalb county, the total vote cast on state ticket is 6,887. A majority of this would be 3,444. So it will be seen the total vote "for" either amendment is less than the number needed, although, the "for" vote beat the "against" vote.

Brown County at Last

The Indiana Southern, a new railroad from Indianapolis to the Ohio river, will at once sell a million stock to start work on this line. It will likely be a success, and if so, the only county in the state without a railroad which is hilly old Brown county, will hear the whistle of the iron horse. The road is to run through its county seat, Nashville. Other county seats reached will be Salem, Brownstown. Paoli and Bockford. It will reach also West Baden, French Lick, Ferdinand and Greenview. The road will furnish direct connection with Evansville and Owensboro and Louisville, Ky. Ultimately the company will build a baanch to Bloomington and into Greene and Sullivan counties.

Stole Overcoats.

Two men here, who do not seem anxious to tell their names, got tight and wandered off down to the Junction, and while there managed to steal overcoats belonging to Charlie Mitchell and Phil. Morr. When the theft was discovered, Deputy Prosecutor Harper was informed, and the fellows were arrested and brought this morning before 'Squire Walter. E. C. Baxter defended them. One of them plead guilty but the other did not, and both are now in jail.

The South Bend Meeting.

So many of our readers are interested in the South Bend meeting of the Federated Woman's Clubs of Indiana, either as members or as brother-in-law that we make the following statement by way of information.

There was a meeting ihst March at Indianapolis, our people will remember at which several delegates from Auburn were present, At this meeting the State Federation was organized, five clubs being represented. These were:

CHARTER CLUBS.

The Woman's Club of Muncie.
The Progress Club of South Bend.
The Ladies' Literary Club, Auburn.
The Economic Club, South Bend.
The Tourists' Club, Muncie.

TWO ADDED.

The Ephemeron Club, New Albany.
The Monday Club, Kokomo.

These being added before June, are, we understand, also considered charter members.

OTHERS JOIN.

Coming into the Federation soon after the Biennial at Milwaukee or about that time were the following:

The Century Club, Greencastle.
The Beacon Light Club, Goshen.
The Culture Club, Auburn.
The Review Club, Lawrenceburg.
The Harriet Beecher Stowe Club, Valparaiso.
The Woman's Club, Lagrange.
The Ladies' Literary Club, St. Joe.
The Current Club, Elkhart.
The Monday Afternoon Club, Muncie.
The Thursday Club, South Bend.
The 20th Century Club, Elkhart.

The meeting that begins today at South Bend is their first regular state meeting. The South Bend people have prepared to give them a royal welcome.

Among those who went were Mrs. Ehlers, Mrs. Shaffer, Mrs. Ryan, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Barns, Mrs. Ed. Robbins of Auburn, and Mrs. H. K. Scott of Angola. And others may have gone whose names we failed to get.

No More Hanging.

The following queer note now going the rounds of the press, will be news to most of our people, but it may be the correct legal view;

It is not generally understood by the people of Indiana, perhaps, that there is now no law providing for a place in which to execute criminals in this state. It was undoubtedly not the intention of the legislature of 1897 to abolish with the law fixing punishment by death in this state. but, according to a well known lawyer, that is just what the legislature of 1897, did in a roundabout way when it passed the law creating the Indiana Reformatory.

Before the law was passed the statutes provided that criminals under the sentence of death should be executed either in the State Prison South, at Jeffersonville, or the State Prison North, at Michigan City, depending on the location of the county where the prisoner was sentenced.

When the Indiana Reformatory law was passed the State prison South was changed to the Indiana Reformatory, and the State Prison North was changed to the Indiana State prison, so that we have no penitentary in which to execute criminals, as provided by the statute, consequently, having no place in which to execute them, as provided by the statute, the law providing for capital punishment becomes inoperative.

The Old Monitor Company.

As noted elsewhere, the affairs of the Old Monitor Windmill Co, have been settled and closed up. The present owners of the plant are C. K. Bristol, who lives here, and Frank Dunham of Cecil, Ohio. Mr. Dunham has had a good deal of experience in the Olds Wheel Works at Fort Wayne, and it is likely something of that sort will be started up in the big plant at the Junction, Mr. Dunham has just been elected treasurer of his county, Paulding, and we suppose, will not move here, at least for the present. Whatever is done, will likely be in the charge of Mr. Bristol.

Court.

D. D. Moody representing W. Ellis in the case of Ellis vs. Lautzenheiser, got a judgment yesterday for $2,200.

The case of Mason vs. Gordon that we spoke of in our last report, was finished yesterday. It appears that Mason had reason, or believed he had reason, to think that young Gordon had shot his horse. And if so, the shot was rather a dangerous one, for there was a scar mark on the horse, about what would have shown from a grazing bullet. It was to prove that it was a bullet that Mason brought suit. He first had Mason up before a justice, and failing to make his point he brought the case into court. But it was not shown inclusively that young Gordon shot the horse. He claims he fired a shot or two in the other direction, and had no idea of causing trouble. The jury acquitted him, as they did not feel that Mason had prove his case beyond a doubt. And besides, there seems to have been a good deal of spite work about it.

The case of Hess vs. Hess came up yesterday before Judge Hartman The jury had been finally discharged the evening before ot the time the case of Mason vs. Gordon had been concluded.

Wm. Hess and his wife live at Butler and both might have reputations that might be far better. They have been quarreling off and on for years, leading as she says, a very unhappy life. She claims he has not been supporting her, and has not clothed her. On cross-examination by Mr. Dunten, the attorney for Mr. Hess, she admitted that Hess had bought her a pair of stockings and brought them home and offered them to her "just for meanness." She said she would not take them, but that he carried them around in his coat pocket for some time. She denied that she ever licked him, and he denied that he ever licked her. Each claimed that the other was immoral to a fearful extent and probably each told a good deal of truth. After hearing both sides. the judge hardly knew what to do with them, but finally concluded the best thing would be to separate them, as it was plain that they were not likely to live in peace. So he gave her a divorce. Their son, a lad of about ten, was called up and the judge quietly asked him which one he wanted to live with, and he chose his father. So the father is given custody of the child. There were some queer things about this case, but it is hoped both will do better and become better citizens.

Mr. Dunten was attorney for Hess, while Gen. Blair and P. V. Hoffman were for Mrs. Hess.

The receivership of the old Monitor Windmill Co., at the Junction came up Friday for settlement, Judge Powers of Angola being called in to preside. The receiver, M. E. Griswold had charged a certain price for his services and claimed that much in his settlement. The company thought his charges were too high for the services rendered. After argument and evidence, the price of his services was cut down making his allowance for services $195 less. This plant has been a long time in trouble, and we hope this settles all and that the new owners may go on and make it what it should be, one of our most prosperous industries.

The slander case of Walter Eberly vs. R. J. Fisk at Waterloo was called up, and dismissed at Eberly's cost, as he had failed to give bonds for costs.

In the divorce case of Henry A. Swander vs. Sarah Swander. The divorce was given and she got $350 alimony, $45 of which had been paid during the pendency of trial. She takes her maiden name of Rhodes.

The damage suit of Mrs. Ida Morris vs. Whirledge, the Garrett saloon keeper, the latter asks a change of venue from the county.

Fred Funk brought suit on mechanic's lien against Griffice and others and was given a judgment of $84.60.

W. H. Barker vs Otto Luthel, replevin, it was decided that Barker should have possession of the goods and pay all costs except $2, which is to be paid by Luthel.

E. P. Dickinson who had been appointed guardian of the late Frank Kennedy, is relieved by Mr. Kennedy's death.

Mrs. Margaret Boyer legally adopted Maude Mickey, under the name of Maude Mickey Boyer

The case of W. H. McIntosh vs Borst and his bondsmen goes to Steuben county on change of venue.

Amelia Krause vs Rose Vanderly for partition, the real estate is ordered sold at two-thirds its appraised valu)

BANNER SALVE, the most healing salve in the world.

Our Saturday Evenings.

LVII.

We aim to give something new and original in these Saturday sketches. This time we have called on Dr. Swarts. He furnishes us some ideas that are fresh and smack somewhat of the salt breezes and waves of old ocean. There is much to be learned of such travels.

On his recent trip to the old world, Dr. Swarts went by way of Canada and took passage with 250 others gathered from all the northern states and all the provinces of Canada, on the steamer "Vancouver," of the Dominion Line. They left Montreal July 7, and went down the big river past famous scenes and through grand scenery and passed out into the great ocean. Among the first things done in such cases is to become acquainted with some of the passengers, especially with a few congenial spirits. This the Doctor did and mentions especially two gentlemen Mr. Simon Ratz of Elmira, Ontario, and Mr. Paul Pequgant of Berlin in the same province. Mr. Pequgant is a Frenchman but a very companionable person. Mr. Ratz is of German extraction, but both are fully identified with the new world and its institutions. They became fast friends and went much of the trip together, Mr. Ratz in particular, went the whole round trip with him.

The other day the Doctor received a large photo, and undoing it, found it to show the familiar face and form of his friend Ratz standing surrounded by his family in his commodious home or rather in front of it. The residence is a fine, substantial one of brick, and with its shady trees makes a lovely background for a family group. The wife and several children form the grouping around Mr. Ratz, the central figure.

The picture is of great interest to Dr. Swarts, and drew him into a reminiscent mood. He has not talked much of the long trip since his return, so we took this chance to lead him out.

The trip over from Montreal, was long and rough, consuming ten days. That is a good while to be cooped up in even a big ship. It never stops to take water, or let a train pass, or to let off and take on passengers. Someone has said that "on the ocean there are no postoffices." So this company could not even get a letter from home. For a week and a half, they were dead to the world, utterly lost, and all the stirring things going on in the old world and new never reached these 250 people till they got the whole budget at once on landing.

The ten days grew wearisome, and the passengers set about devising means of entertainment.

This finally took the form of a musical and literary entertainment for the benefit of the Liverpool Home for Aged Mariners. Imagine an elaborate entertainment of this kind on a ship that has been a week out of sight of land and still in rough weather.

To give our readers this new sensation, we here copy the entire program. We can think of nothing that will be nearer the reality. The program is plainly written, beginning with the name of the steamer, "Vancouver," the captain, "McDonald." the chairman, "W. F. W. Lent."

The South Bend Meeting.

We clip from the dailies an item on the meeting of the clubs at South Bend. The first session was Thursday evening, and the report says:

Fully 250 women and a number of men were present this evening when the first meeting of the recently organize Indiana Federation of Women's Clubs was called to order at the Commercial Athletic club. Mrs. Rose Budd Stewart of Muncie, president of the federation, presiding.

On the stage with Mrs Stewart were Mrs. Jane McM. Smith of South Bend, president of the Progress Club; Mrs. Alice M. Lewis of Auburn, Ind.; and Mrs. Belle M. Perry of Charlotte Mich., the newly elected president of the Michigan Federation of Women's Clubs.

Henry Webb Johnson, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterin church, opened the service with prayer, followed by singing the federation song. written by Mrs. E. L. S Thompson of Muncie and dedicated to the club women of South Bend.

Mayor Schuyler Colfax welcomed the federation on behalf of the city and Mrs. Jane McM. Smith for the South Bend clubs. Mrs. Stewart responded in a feeling address. The feature of the evening was a lecture on "Nature and the Use of Government," by Miss Minnetta T. Taylor of Green Castle, Ind.

Mrs. Perry also spoke. The representation includes women from South Bend, Indianapolis, Ridgeville, Green Castle, Michigan City, Logansport, Elkhart, Auburn, Valparaiso, Goshen, Muncie, St. oe, Kokomo, and other Indiana points, and visitors are present from the states of Michigan, Illinois and Washington.

Same as Angola.

Yesterday morning began the sale of seats for the Anna Held company that was to open the Illinois opera house at Chicago last evening. In order to secure first seats, well-to-do people who did not care to stay up all night, as was recently done at Angola, hired messenger boys to stay up for them and by keeping a place in the line, be able to get early choice of seats. The little fellows staid in line all night, faithful to their trust, although it was a hard job and there was a good deal of suffering. Pushing and quarreling to keep places in the line were common till the police made them keep quiet. When the sale began in the morning at 8, the lads moved forward in proper line, bought the coveted seats and then they rushed home and ate a warm breakfast. Then they delivered the tickets to their employers.

W. C. T. U. Column.

We must not be mistled at any time by the cheap assertion that people only get what they want; that the editor of a degraded newspaper is to be excused because the public want the degradition; that the city officials who inaugurate a "wide open" policy are to be excused because a portion of the public likes vice; that the men who jeer at philanthropy are to be excused because among philanthropists there are hypocrites, and among unfortunates there are vicious and unworthy people. To pander to depravity inevitably means to increase depravity. It is a dreadful thing that public sentiment should condone misconduct in a public man; but this is no excuse for the public man, if by his conduct he still further degrades public sentiment. There can be no meddling with the laws of righteousness, of decency, of morality. We are in honor bound to put into practice what we preach; to remember that we are not to be excused if we do not; and that in the last resort no material prosperity, no business acumen, no intellectual development of any kind, can atone in the life of a nation for the lack of the fundamental qualities of courage, honesty, and common sense.—Theodore Roosevelt.

FROM THE ROCK RIVERS M. E. CONFERENCE.

The time has come for an Abraham Lincoln to raise the battle cry 'No Saloons Under the Flag."

'Old Glory should not float over a saloon.

"Brethren, is not here an issue upon which we can all unite and make the fourth Sunday in November the beginning of the emancipation of our country from the thraldom of the liquor power?"

* * *

The entire country has been aroused to a state of boiling indignation over a horrible crime. The brutal assault and murder of Jennie Boeschleter, by four respectable business men in Patterson, New Jersey, the revolting details of which no newspaper can publish is another of the sickening outrages for which the liquor traffic must be held responsible. The saloon into which the girl was enticed and where she was drugged into unconsciousness, is one of the "respectable" kind—a "social necessity," so some good people would have us believe. It is said that this is only one of a series of similar crimes committed by these men in that city, but as in previous cases the victims have not happened to die and the outrages brought to light. How long will such things be possible?—The Union Signal.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

Anti-Gambling Crusade.

It is announced that the Society for the Suppression of Vice, of which Anthony Comstock is the head, will soon begin the most extensive raid of pool rooms and gambling dens ever undertaken in New York. The work of obtaining evidence has been under way for some time, and the Comstock society has received the aid of many citizens who have formed themselves into an organization known as the Anti-Vice Society of New York. The evidence collected has been turned over to District Attorney Gardiner, and it is said Mr. Comstock will get out a large number of warrants.

Not Carlotta's Jewels.

A dispatch from Mexico City says: The widow of the late Peter Gay, the proprietor of several establishments here, is the real owner of the diamonds seized by the United States customs officials in New York. She gave them into the hands of Senor Preza for sale in the United States and claims he never meditated fraud against the American customs regulations. The total value of the jewels is said to be not more than $6,000 (gold) and they never belonged to Emperior Maximilian or Empress Carlotta. The case has excited much interest here.

Another Gift From Carnegie.

Pittsburg special: At a dinner given by W. N. Frew, president of the board of directors of the Carnegie institute, to Andrew Carnegie, Mayor W. J. Diehl and other prominent citizens, Mr. Carnegie made an offer to the city of Pittsburg to build a technical school in connection with the Carnegie institute and endow it with $1,000,000. The tone of Mr. Carnegie's address would indicate that as in the case of the institute his contribution would be increased later to meet the needs of the proposed school.

Immigration to Cuba.

According to a statement from the division of customs and insular affairs of the war department the total number of immigrants arriving at Havana during the past fiscal year was 21,107, of whom 1,286 came from the United States, 17,968 from Spain, 881 from Mexico and 972 from other countries. The total number of Chinese immigrants was 578, of whom 506 came from China (via United States), 8 from China (via Spain), and 64 from Mexico.

Kruger at Suez.

A dispatch from Suez says: The Dutch cruiser Gelderland, with ex-President Kruger on board, has arrived here. Mr. Kruger remains secluded in his cabin. His health is good. A delegate of the Marseilles reception committee boarded the Gelderland here, but the eventual destination of the warship will be unknown until she arrives at Port Said, where she will coal. Mr. Kruger received an ovation at the German port of Dar-Es-Salaam.

Fire Makes 500 Men Idle.

Fire which started in the engine room of the Detroit Bridge and Iron works, Detroit, did between $65,000 and $75,000 damage. Five hundred men are thrown out of employment. The loss is covered by insurance. Repairs will be begun immediately and the works started again as soon as possible.

Find Skeleton of Bandit.

Phoenix (Ariz.) special: Hunters have found a skeleton supposed to be the remains of Burt Alvord, leader of one of the most desperate bands of train robbers that ever operated in Arizona. It is believed he was killed by one of his own gang.

Smuggler Jailed and Fined.

Max J. Laser, the diamond smuggler, pleaded guilty in the United States court at Buffalo, N. Y. He was fined $500 and sent to the Erie county jail for 6 months. The smuggled diamonds were sold a few days ago for $31,000.

Population of Michigan.

The population of the state of Michigan, as announced officially by the census bureau, is 2,420,982, as against 2,093,889 in 1890. This is an increase of 327,093, or 15.6 per cent.

Per Cent. of Corn in Hand.

It is estimated that 4.4 per cent. of the corn crop of 1899, in the United States was still in farmers hands November 4, as compared with 5.9 per cent. of the crop of 1898.

Manufactory Burns.

Fire destroyed the farm machinery manufacturing plant of the Appleton Manufacturing company at Geneva, Ill. Loss, $100,000; partly covered by insurance.

Fort Wayne Masonic Temple Attractions.

Nov. 22.—"Davy Crockett.,'
Nov. 23.—"Man from Mexico."

Earthquake in Colombia.

Mr. Russell, United States Charge at Caracas, reports that the earthquake in Colombia last month was very much severer than at first described. The people deserted their houses and slept in the streets, and between 12,000 and 15,000 buildings were destroyed or damaged.

Botha Will Surrender.

Commandant General Botha, according to a dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Pretoria, has sent to Lord Roberts a statement of the terms on which he will surrender.

To Chart Philippines.

Joseph S. Hill, Henry O. Pixley and Alexander Colt, three students of the University of California, have been selected to help George Putnam and F. W. Edmonds, engineers of the coast and geodetic survey, to chart the Philippine archipelago.

Jealous Wife Kills Husband.

Mrs. May Teresa Josephine Schmidt, of Chicago, laid aside a yellow-back novel long enough to kill her husband and then resumed the narrative. The title of the novel was "I'm in Love with Another." This title, Mrs. Schmidt said, gave her reason in brief for killing.

LITTLE CHANGE IN BUSINESS.

Commercial Agency Notes Strength in Some, Weakness in Other Lines.

Bradstreet's weekly review of trade says: "There is a stronger tone in cotton and wool, the former largely because of reports or fears of crop damage, while the latter is firm at former quotations on a volume of business equal to lately enlarged totals. Cereals are, as a whole, dull and lack speculative interest. Wheat is practically unchanged, early reports of Argentine crop damage failing to bring out much buying. Corn is only fractionally higher, while hog products are rather slow and weak. It is from that long-time barometer of trade, the iron business, that relatively the best reports as to the demand and prices come. While a considerable volume of business was undoubtedly placed just previous to election, the quantity of sales reported since has been very satisfactory. Chicago reports the last week's sales of pig at 75,000 tons, the largest of any week this year. Hopefulness as to improvement in fall demand, now that the election is over and cold weather has arrived, is reported in all sections, but nowhere is the feeling of confidence so marked as in the South. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 3,555,507 bushels, against 3,612,421 last week and 4,650,842 in the corresponding week of 1899. Corn exports aggregate 3,287,627, against 3,920,110 last week and 4,581,447 bushels in this week a year ago."

STEALS HOUSE AND LOT.

Pretty Indiana Girl Forges Deed and Mortgages Property.

Miss Catherine Loonie, a pretty Indiana girl who moves in the best society and a graduate of Notre Dame convent at South Bend, Ind., created a sensation in court at Binghamton, N. Y., by pleading guilty to stealing a house and lot valued at $4,000. The theft was most peculiar and involved the daring forgery of a deed conveying the property from Miss Margaret Kennedy of that city to Miss Loonie. The conveyance was duly registered and the crime was not discovered until Miss Kennedy called at an insurance office to insure the property and found it already insured by Miss Loonie, who had realized a large sum by mortgaging it. She had secured a first and second mortgage on the property, and further investigation revealed the fact that several chattel mortgages on which she obtained money were forged. She was promptly arrested and, despite her high standing, committed to jail. The penalty of the crime is seven years' imprisonment and a fine of $1,000. Her only reason for the act was that she needed some spending money and this occurred to her as a clever and easy way to obtain it.

LIVES LOST IN HOTEL FIRE.

Gifford House at Poplar Bluff, Mo., Destroyed—Many Guests Badly Burned.

A fire, accompanied with a great loss of life, occurred at Popular Bluff, Mo., resulting in the total destruction of the Gifford house, a large three-story frame building, the death of four persons and the fatal injury of two more. The fire originated in the rear of the hotel and in a few minutes the mammoth building was a mass of flames. There were in the neighborhood of 45 guests in the building and the porter, the only person awake in the hotel, was unable to give an alarm, the smoke and flames driving him back. The guests on the second and third floors were caught like rats in a trap, the fire preventing their escape by the stairs and they leaped from the second and third story windows.

Boundary Not Yet Surveyed.

Deane, the Canadian government surveyor who was commissioned by the government to locate the stakes defining the boundary line in the Mount Baker district for 100 miles from Sumas, Washington, toward the coast, makes the remarkable statement to the government that he could find no stakes anywhere to denote that a survey of the boundary was ever made.

Shoots and Kills a Burglar.

While attempting to rob the railway station at Gales Ferry, Conn., the thief was discovered by the operator, William Brooks, and the meeting of the two men resulted in the death of the burglar, who received a charge of bird shot near the heart.

Sinks in English Channel.

The steam collier City of Vienna, from Swansea for Rotterdam, sunk in the English channel after collision with an unknown vessel. The sole survivor of the collier, a German fireman, spent twenty-seven hours on the keel of the capsized vessel.

Riches for J. M. Guffey.

J. M. Guffey, the Democratic national committeeman of Pennsylvania, received a telegram stating that his well in Lewis County, W. Va., had started to flow and was spouting oil at the rate of 250 barrels per hour. This is worth $6,600 every twenty-four hours.

Sentenced to Be Electrocuted.

At Marysville, Ohio, Judge Melhorn overruled the motion for a new trial and sentenced Rosslyn Ferrell to be electrocuted on Friday, March 1, for the murder of Express Messenfer Lane, Aug. 10 last.

Seven Burned to Death.

Two express trains came into collision between Offenbach, Hesse, and Frankfort-on-the-Main. A gas reservoir exploded, setting fire to the wreckage, and seven persons were burned to death and four injured.

Morocco Declines to Pay Indemnity Asked.

The government of Morocco has again declined to meet the demands of the United States for the payment of an indemnity on account of the killing by a mob, of Marcus Essagin, a naturalized American citizen.

Plan Ideal Newspaper.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst says a syndicate of wealthy men is preparing to launch an ideal newspaper in New York—one that will tell the truth; that can not be swayed for advertising or political purposes; that people will believe.

Many Perish in a Wreck.

The steamer City of Monticello, belonging to the Yarmouth Steamship Company, foundered in the Bay of Fundy with appalling loss of life. Of the crew and passengers sixty-three persons are reported to have perished.

Fire Wipes Out a Town.

Fire broke out in a business block at Wren, Ohio, and over $100,000 damage was done before the flames spent their force. The town is without fire protection and it was practically wiped out.

Poor Health Causes Suicide.

Orders 2,400 Freight Cars.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has let contracts for 2,400 freight cars, which makes 5,400 cars contracted for within a week.

Cruiser Has a Mishap.

As a result of an accident the auxiliary cruiser Buffalo will have to go in dry dock for repairs. While the Buffalo was being towed from the channel to the ordnance dock at the Brooklyn navy yard the cruiser was jammed up against the battleship Massachusetts, which was lying at a dock. A hole was made in the cruiser and several of her plates were bent by the impact.

BOLIVIA MAY REGAIN COAST.

Brazil and Argentina Likely to Intercede with Chile.

It is the understanding among prominent South American members of the diplomatic corps in Washington that the visit of President Campos-Salles of Brazil to the President of Argentina has been productive of an agreeable understanding by which these two powerful republics of the South are likely to exert their united influences toward the pacific adjustment of some of the perplexing questions which have disturbed their neighboring republics. One of these concerns the coast line of Bolivia. At one time Bolivia was possessed of a considerable ocean front, with some good harbors. But as a result of warfare Chili took possession of all Bolivia's coast line, leaving that country in much the same condition as Switzerland, without access to the sea and hemmed in on all sides by opposing forces. It is believed that Bolivia's plight has been taken into consideration in conversations between the presidents of Brazil and Argentina, and that without any recourse to arbitrary means they will try to induce Chili to grant Bolivia a restoration of at least some part of her coast line.

SECURES $56,000 BY COLLUSION.

J. B. Brady of Nashville, Tenn., Makes Confession Involving W. W. Lea.

In Nashville, Tenn., J. B. Brady of the wholesale grocery and liquor firm of Connor & Brady was arrested on a warrant sworn out by F. O. Watts, cashier of the First National Bank, charging him with collusion with W. W. Lea, individual bookkeeper in the bank, in defrauding the institution of $56,000. Brady confessed his guilt and gave bail in $10,000. Lea went on his vacation on July 15. His failure to return at the end of two weeks caused little comment, as he had been for twenty years a trusted employe. Under an assignment made by the firm of Connor & Brady they acknowledge an overdraft of $28,000, covering the amount of money fraudulently obtained from the bank by Brady.

GUILTY OF SENDING A BOMB.

Jury at Waterloo, Iowa Gives a Verdict Against J. W. Hoot.

The case of the State vs. Jerome W. Hoot, who has been on trial at Waterloo, Iowa, on a charge of trying to kill his wife by sending her a dynamite bomb, was given to the jury at 6 o'clock the other evening, and at 11 o'clock a verdict was reached finding the prisoner guilty of assault, with intent to commit murder. The case was stubbornly fought, but the evidence was largely against the prisoner. The question of the jurisdiction of the Iowa court was paramount in the motion to direct a verdict for the defendant, but the motion was overruled after an all-day argument.

Police Chief Saves Suspected Negro.

John Porter, the negro, believed by Sheriff Freeman of Lincoln County, Colo., to be the murderer of Louise Fust, 11 years old, at Limon, has temporarily escaped an awful fate. After learning that a mob had assembled at Limon ready to boil the alleged murderer alive, Chief of Police Farley of Denver refused to turn Porter over to the sheriff.

Live-Stock Men Bankrupt.

The Elmore-Cooper Live Stock Company has filed a petition in bankruptcy at Kansas City. The liabilities, placed at $600,000, are mostly the result of the Gillette failure a year ago. The assets are placed at $200,000.

TO RAISE COTTON IN AFRICA.

Negroes from America Will Instruct Natives in the Art.

To teach the natives of Africa the art of raising cotton, four young colored men from Booker T. Washington's school at Tuskegee, Ala., sailed from New York a few days since for the west coast of the Dark Continent. With them they carried ten bushels of cotton seed, a cotton gin and a full outfit of agricultural tools. Their work will be carried on under the auspices of the German government.

Togo, a colony on the west coast of Africa, about 30,000 square miles in area, north of the Gulf of Guinea and lying between Dahomey and Ashantee, is the destination of these pioneers. From this part of Africa the greatest number of slaves were brought. The ultimate destination of the party is a settlement sixty miles inland called Misahohe. Togo has a native population estimated at 1,000,000.

By its projectors the expedition is considered one of the most important steps in the development of the cotton industry since Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin. Cotton has long been raised in this part of Africa in a primitive way. All the work was done by hand. The output of cotton has been small in quantity and poor in quality. Thirty acres of cotton were planted last year in the colony of Togo, under government supervision, and was better cultivated. The Tuskegee Institute men will continue this work on a still broader and more scientific scale and expect that great success will attend their venture.

INDIANS GO ON WARPATH.

Snake Creek Braves Threaten Slaughter of Whites and Half-Breeds.

The Snake Creek band of Indians living near Okmulgee, Ind. T., and numbering about 300, are on the verge of riot, and some of them have already gone on the warpath, so dispatches from there to-day indicate. The Snake Creek Indians have been drinking firewater and holding war dances for the past two weeks, and have been threatening to rise against the whites and half-breed Indians for fancied wrongs done them.

QUIBBLE OVER CHINA

PETTY JEALOUSY KEEPS THE ALLIES APART.

European Powers Are Seriously Delaying the Negotiations at Pekin by "Splitting Haire" in Efforts to Secure Slight Advantages.

A Washington correspondent says: The delay in China is due to the jealousy of the European powers and their anxiety to get some little advantage of each other. This may prolong the negotiations indefinitely. There is no difference of opinion on the general propositions, but the ministers are quibbling over unimportant details. The fact that each minister is acting under direct instructions from his home government, with which he communicates daily, makes haste impossible. The representatives of eight or ten nations meet for a conference, at which suggestions and propositions are offered by one or all. These are discussed until something like an agreement is reached. Then an adjournment is taken until each can report to his government and receive instructions. The cable service is so imperfect and slow that it usually requires several days to send a message and receive a reply. In the meantime the government at St. Petersburg telegraphs to Paris or the German chancellor telegraphs Lord Salisbury, or they all telegraph the United States to find out what is thought about it and what other nations propose to do. Then one after another the ministers at Pekin are advised as to the proper course for them to pursue, and they take another step forward.

The government of the United States is the only one of the nations involved in this controversy which has a distinct and definite policy. We demand:

1. That the leaders of the Boxer movement and the mandarins who encouraged the attacks upon the legations shall receive adequate punishment at the hands of their government.

2. That the Chinese empire pay a proper indemnity for the losses sustained by American citizens and the cost of the expedition to China.

3. That a stable and liberal government be established at Pekin, with an enlightened policy, in accordance with modern civilization.

4. That the entire empire of China be opened to foreigners like other nations, with freedom of speech, trade, religion and the full protection of foreign lives and property.

All the other nations agree to these propositions, but they are disputing over the different methods of carrying them into effect.

Instructions of a comprehensive nature have been telegraphed to Minister Conger. They deal with every point of difference between the powers in the negotiations looking to an amicable settlement of the Chinese troubles. Within the last week the Ministers at Pekin have made considerable progress toward an agreement, but there has not been absolute unanimity. Minister Conger has sent several telegrams to the State Department, reporting the nature of the differences and expressing his own views.

While the instructions sent have not been disclosed, and will not be, it is admitted that Mr. Conger has been directed generally to insist only on the adoption of the material propositions to which the United States Government is committed, and to waive objection to matters of comparatively little importance which are not wholly acceptable to this country. By pursuing this policy the government hopes to bring about an arrangement within a short time that will serve as a basis of negotiations with the Chinese Plenipotentiaries.

The Cologne Gazette, which usually voices the opinion of its government, states that the powers have reached a definite understanding in regard to China, which, in effect, is as follows:

"The allies will supervise the punishment of the Chinese officials implicated in the Boxer outrages, and each government will be repaid for the expenses of its expedition. Missionaries and private individuals will receive adequate compensation for any injuries suffered, and troops will be kept at Pekin permanently, for the protection of the legations. The Taku forts will be dismantled and Pekin will be permanently connected with the sea."

BOXER AIDS ARE SHOT.

Allies Execute Over a Score of Chinese High Officials.

The treasurer of the province of Pechili, one Chinese general and a Chinese colonel, who had been found by a court-martial to be responsible for the slaughter of seventeen American and English missionaries at Paoting-Fu and the torture of four others who were rescued alive, were shot Sunday, together with twenty prominent Boxers, with the approval of Field Marshal Count von Waldersee.

Tien Yung is the name of the provincial treasurer executed. His high official comrades who suffered a like fate were Gen. Fei Shung Kong and Col. Kiu. After death the condemned men's heads were cut off and exposed on poles as a warning to the populace.

All the allied soldiers who participated in the punitive expedition to Paoting-Fu have returned to Pekin, excepting the Germans and French, who remain as a permanent garrison. Punishment was inflicted by the returning troops on other notorious Boxer strongholds on the route. In this punishment for the frightful atrocities on American missionaries and native Christians the United States took no part.

Few-Line Interviews.

Rev. T. A. T. Hanna of Shelton, Conn., who harshly criticised the University of Chicago once before, is out with another statement, and it isn't as mild as it might be: "Preachers of the gospel are hired according to age, education, personal appearance, family, manners, voice, dress, etc., and little attention is given to soundness of faith. Colleges most abundantly endowed are the most expensive for students. As the endowment increases the expenses of the student increase, and endowments, therefore, are a misfortune. The seminary's purpose ought to be to prepare men to be proficient pastors. God is no respecter of persons and hell is no respecter of persons. The 'cultivated moderns' will have to take the gospel as Paul left it or perish eternally for want of it."

About Christian science E. A. Kimball, chairman of the international board of lectureships, says: "You do not need to be afraid of thousands of things that you have been afraid of—of any so-called material laws or that symptoms of disease can dominate you. You need not be afraid of what you eat, of overwork, of a draught of air, or of loss of sleep. You say this seems strange, but 2,000,000 of cures have been effected by Christian science. Go to your homes and try to realize that God never made sickness and that it is simply a monstrosity of human invention."

THAT BOY OF MINE.

He's rosy as the summer sky
  At dawning of the day;
His little "goo-goo's" signify
  The things that he would say.
He's innocent of all desire
  In babyland to shine,
And yet the neighbors all admire
  That little boy of mine.

Like many other baby boys
  He dearly loves a row,
And oft I wish he'd stop his noise,
  And smooth his troubled brow.
But when his little eyes are dry—
  Where tiny sparkles shine—
The wealth of Klondike would not buy
  That little boy of mine.

His faults are few—if faults they be—
  I tell them in a joke
To visitors, but generally
  Feel sorry that I spoke.
For ere they have a chance to laugh
  His grandma cries, "Why, Joe,
You used to make more noise by half
  Some thirty years ago."

Then as we lay him down to rest,
  In childhood's snowy bands,
And fold upon his little breast
  His chubby little hands;
In pure and perfect innocence
  He looks almost divine—
The sweetest gift of Providence
  Is that wee boy of mine.

Frank's Football Fatality

"IT might be worse, Frank, dear!" consoled the rosy little aunt.

"It might!" admitted Frank, gloomily.

"It's a pleasant street to look out on, if it is quiet," she added.

It was a pleasant street they were looking out on then from the window of the little old-fashioned house with its fluttering dimity curtains and bright brass doorbell. It is tucked away on the West Side. It is not more than two blocks in length. The houses are detached and have quite an air of exclusiveness. Two long green grass plats run down the center of the street, and between them a jolly little fountain goes forever—

Leaping toward the sun-heart to be warmer,
Then recoiling in a tremble from the too much light above.

But despite the pleasant aspect of the place and his aunt's adoring ministrations, Frank Harland found the days dragged. To have been hurt in football—in a practice game at that! To be obliged to leave the team and cuddle down and keep still like a naughty child who is doing penance in the corner! Worst of all, to be even temporarily debarred from the youthful companionship in which he so delighted—it was deuced hard—it was disgusting!

IT WAS ISOLA RAY HERSELF.

"Now that you're sitting up you'll be out in no time," his aunt assured him cheerily. "Now, it's time for your nourishment. Eh, my dear?"

"Who is she?" cried the young fellow. He had caught her arm suddenly. "Yes—there! Coming out of the opposite house. She passes here every day. See—out of that house with all the beautiful flowers in the windows!"

"She? O, her name is Isola Ray!"

"Isola Ray!" he repeated. His dark poetic young face lit up. "What a delicious name!"

"She has been away at boarding-school. She graduated this summer. She is giving music lessons. They say she is bright. She's a relative of the old people over there. Why—she is coming in here!"

A trim little figure in a fall suit of moss-green with a bewitching little toque of cerise silk on her fair hair had come in at the gate—was ascending the steps.

Miss Denslow fluttered to the hall door.

"Come in!" she cried hospitably.

"Thank you, no. I just brought a few flowers for the poor young gentleman. Will you give them to him with my sympathy?"

She smiled—disappeared. And Frank Harland found himself holding a mass of scarlet geraniums and delicate ferns. The next morning it was a little bunch of late violets—the day after a bouquet of fragrant heliotrope. But despite her dainty floral gifts the young music teacher never came in.

"Ask her," Frank would entreat. "Tell her I wish to thank her."

"I have, my dear," his aunt would cry in despair. "Here, you're getting feverish again. You'll have a relapse. I can't think what's coming over you."

The days did not drag now—at least not until after Isola had passed. Then there was the afternoon to watch for when she came home. A delightful animation thrilled the convalescent athlete. Once she had met his eyes—and blushed. The next time she smiled. Finally—ecstatic day! she bowed.

But there came a day—one glorious, copper-colored October day—when Frank's aunt got a shock which left her breathless—and Isola Ray got another. This is the way it came about: Twittering old Miss Denslow, swooping in on her beloved patient with a tray of delicacies, almost dropped the tray at sight of her tall nephew, erect, smiling, clothed in his ordinary habiliments.

"It's all right," he assured her. "I couldn't play ill one day longer—not an hour! To stay indoors with that sky, that sun, that breeze! It would be criminal. Here, I'll drink your broth, auntie. I'm only going for a short walk."

It was a short walk. It was only as far as the house with the flower-filled windows across the street.

It was Isola Ray herself—Isola, in a Quakerish little gray house gown, that matched her eyes, and a fetching little apron of ruffled lawn, who opened the door to him.

"You!" she stammered. She grew quite white. "Why—you—"

"I'm not a ghost," he assured her, smiling. "My name is Frank Harland. I've come to thank you for all those exquisite flowers. Won't you ask me in?"

"But I—but my—my friend said that you—you were crippled for life! And I thought—I thought—"

"Now, Isola Ray!" protested a plaintive voice. The mistress of the house came up to the hall. "I thought when you asked me about the sick gentleman at the window that you meant old Mr. Benham, who lives at 33. He's been all but bedridden for years. I did not know you meant Miss Denslow's nephew. Come in, Mr. Harland."

Never was invitation accepted with more alacrity. That wasn't the only time Frank entered the flower-filled parlor—ah, not by many!

"A year ago," he says to-day, and sighs. "Now I know the dire effects of a foot-ball fatality."

And when his friends question him, he just glances at a glittering stone on a white finger—and attempts explanation.

But his fiancee stops him. And they both laugh. Which, after all, is the only thing to do when one is happy.—Chicago Tribune.

MUST BE A HEALTHY PLACE,

Washington Man's Wife Spoiled His Chances of Shirking Duty.

A young Westerner who nailed a job in one of the departments about a year ago got into the habit from the jump of putting in a time slip pretty frequently, explaining each time to the chief of his division that his wife was very delicate and that she had sent for him. Then the young man would repair to his favorite maison de lush and put in a couple of extra hours of enjoyment or cross the river on the electric cars to that large shed where even money, and even money only, is given against race horses that are 3 to 1 at the track, or otherwise toy with the blithesome hours.

During the past summer the young Westerner tore one hour off the daily stunt every day, leaving the office at 3 o'clock, and put in a slip, informing the chief of his division that his invalid wife was staying out in the country, near a small Virginia town, and that if he didn't catch the 3:15 train he'd have to remain in Washington over night.

About 12:45 on last pay day a splendid buxom woman, who would probably have tipped the beam easily at 175 pounds and whose cheeks were like wild roses, walked into the office of this chief of division and sweetly asked if she could see her husband. She was the young Westerner's wife. The chief told her that her husband was out at lunch. She said she wouldn't wait, and swept out, regal, handsome, the very model and picture of robust physical health.

"Say," said the chief of division—who is malarious, dyspeptic and emaciated—to the young Westerner when the latter returned from his lunch, "where did you say your wife spent last summer?"

The young Westerner named the place, not without wondering if anything had happened to put his chief "next."

"Well," said the chief, "that must be a rattling healthy place, and blamed if I don't believe I'll move down there with my family. Your wife was in here a while ago."

"Talking about feeling like a nickel's worth o' strawberries in the middle o' winter!" remarked the young Westerner afterward, in telling the story upon himself.—Washington Post.

HOW THE ANIMALS SLEEP.

Each Species Has a Different Mode of Taking Needed Rest.

Dr. Louis Robinson tells us how various animals sleep. "The chimpanzee, as far as I have been able to ascertain," says the writer, "never sleeps upon its back, its favorite position being upon its side; with one arm under its head. In this respect it resembles children of from 4 to 10 years of age. The only gorilla which I have had an opportunity of observing also apparently preferred this attitude, but occasionally seemed to sleep comfortably in a crouching position, with its head bowed down between its knees. This latter attitude appears to be the one adopted by nearly all the lower monkeys.

"When turned out at pasture all horses except those which are crippled by disease or injury lie down at night with their legs folded beneath their bodies. Some of the short-limbed and thick-jointed animals, such as the elephant, hippopotamus and rhinoceros, find a difficulty in bending their legs under them after the manner of their more slender kindred. Hence they sleep upon their sides, in a piglike attitude.

"Bears, as far as I have been able to observe, have no characteristic sleeping attitude, for you see them lying in all sorts of grotesque positions, as if they found one quite as comfortable as another. Indeed, a well-favored bear, covered with a good layer of fat and a thick coat of fur, may be said to carry his bed about with him, and any part of his skin will serve either for mattress or coverlet, as occasion arises. Nevertheless, the bear, when sound asleep, tends to curl himself up, with his nose and paws inward, and this is probably the attitude which in cold climates he adopts when hibernating in his den during the winter season.

"Kangaroos also appear to be quite indifferent as to the position of their bodies during sleep. Any sunny afternoon at the zoological gardens you may see them sprawling on the straw in all imaginable attitudes. The only things they seem to demand in order to be perfectly comfortable are reasonable warmth and plenty of elbow room."—Pearson's Magazine.

A Grease-Spot Suit.

A man whose wife found much fault with him—probably wth justice—on account of his untidiness, went to a tailor to order a suit of clothes.

"What kind of goods do you want?" asked the tailor.

"All-wool and exactly of this color," replied the customer, presenting a sample.

"It is hard to tell just what color this is," rejoined the other, inspecting it. "Where did you get it?"

"I cut it from my last suit."

"It doesn't seem to have any figure."

"No, this is where some grease got on it. I cut out the entire spot. I want something a grease-spot won't show on. See?"

After a lengthy explanation the tailor succeeded in convincing him that there was no cloth of that kind in the market.

ANOTHER AID TO MATRIMONY.

The Ring-Bearer a Feature of Up-to-Date Weddings.

At many of the up-to-date weddings the ring-bearer is an important feature of the bridal procession as it slowly marches up the aisle. Usually this functionary is a small boy—not so small, however, that he will lose the precious circlet with which he is entrusted—dressed as a page and carrying with much importance the satin pillow that holds the ring.

This is not an absolutely new feature of weddings, but it is one that should be encouraged by fond parents who would have the ceremony go off without a hitch. As things are now, the wedding ring is a fruitful source of trouble. When the groom take charge of it himself he invariably forgets in which pocket he put it, and it is only produced after a nerve-racking pause and much fumbling.

When it is intrusted to the care of the best man, it is as like as not to be dropped by his nervous fingers as he awkwardly essays to hand it to his friend. Therefore, the little ring-bearer in doublet and hose is not only a picturesque addition to the wedding procession as he walks along beside the flower girl—he is also important for the preservation of peace and tranquillity.

It is prophesied, by the by, that the fashionable wedding with its bridesmaids, its maid of honor, its flower girl, its music and flowers and chatting, criticising host of spectators will soon be a thing of the past.

A goodly number of young folks in smart circles have recently slipped quietly away after their engagements have beene announced and been married at a clergyman's house simply to avoid this ostentatious display.

Men have always been restive under a custom which is to them theatrical and trying in the extreme, but they have yielded as the American man usually does to the wishes of the women.

Now, however, even femininity seems to begin to look upon the fashionable wedding as a great bore and as unnecessary expense, and in consequence slips away quietly with the man of its choice, foregoing the pleasure of court trains and tulle veils, and is married with the gardener and cook of the rector as the sole witnesses.—Baltimore News.

The Officer Was Satisfied.

Sir William Turner, a Scotch savant of note, is an authority on electric fish, having given much study to their peculiarities. At a "smoker" recently given by the British association he told, with much gusto, how he once got the best of an unduly inquisitive customs officer. "When first I went to Edinburgh," he said, "the professor to whom I was assistant possessed a very rare specimen of an electric fish. Though, in a general way, like any other fish to all appearance, anyone who touched this specimen received an electric shock of such severity as to put an end to any further desire for close acquaintance with it. A professor on the continent who was greatly interested in electric fishes expressed a strong desire to see this Edinburgh specimen, and at the beginning of the autumn vacation I was intrusted with the duty of conveying it, in a specially constructed box, across the channel for his inspection. On arriving on the other side I assured the customs officer that I had nothing to declare, but, unfortunately for him, the appearance of this box excited his suspicion. I repeated my assurances of bona fides and informed him that the box contained a fish. As he still appeared unsatisfied," continued Sir William, speaking in characteristically measured tones, "I advised him, in—the—most—courteous manner, that an investigation of the contents of the box was inadvisable. He, however, was a somewhat determined man and observed that he had better see about it for himself. Accordingly he opened the lid of the box, inserted his hand, and—— Well, I had no more trouble with the custom house."

The Shoe.

Hereupon I ventured to reason with woman.

"Your conventional immunities," I urged, "are not compatable with the new possibilities which you seek to assume! There is where the shoe pinches!"

The woman gave me a withering look.

On Wheels.

Not only is the bicycle in Cathay a fact, but the Coreans have taken to wheeling. Consul General Allen reports that two ex-cabinet ministers may be seen on the streets of Seoul on wheels, getting more pleasure out of their machines than they ever got out of their offices. The consul general there thinks there is a good field in Corea for American bicycles, which already constitute a majority of those owned in that country.

"DR." DOWIE, OF ZION.

CHICAGO'S FAITH-HEALER AND PREACHER.

In Ten Years He Has Accumulated $5,000,000 and Built Up a Church with 50,000 Members—His Personality.

This is the story of a man who went to Chicago ten years ago with a wife, two children and no money, and who is now worth $5,000,000, is at the head of a church he founded, which has 50,000 members, is the proprietor of several hospitals, the president of a college and of a bank, owns a faith-healing hotel, and the greatest city of religion planned since the Mormons set one on the shores of Salt Lake.

Some time ago he left Chicago in a private car with his retainers for a trip through Europe and the Holy Land. He traveled in state like an Eastern potentate, and weeping subjects followed him to the train and to the steamer. He controls millions of dollars and thousands of minds. He has a larger personal following than any other man in Chicago. He has no machine. He is the machine. The mystery of it all is:

"How?"

Hundreds of explanations have been offered. He has been called an impostor and a charlatan, and he has been called a divine messenger. He is of the latter opinion himself. Every man in Chicago knows who this man is. He is John Alexander Dowie, and his institution is Zion. But here the knowledge of a great many persons stops. They have read about Zion in connection with faith-healing and as an experiment in socialism, and have heard of the workings of the church through the troubles into which the disciples have got themselves. They have been mobbed in Hammond, Ind., and Mansfield, Ohio, and in Chicago. Sensational stories have been told about them. Their methods have been harshly criticised. They have been subjected to many forms of persecution.

Their leader has been held up to scorn, has been dragged into the courts in civil and criminal proceedings, and has been characterized as Chicago's worst enemy. His life and the lives of his closest advisers have been searched for evidences of wrong-doing. When these have been found they have been scattered broadcast.

It has lasted ten years, and in that time, in the face of many crusades against him by ministers of the gospel, by the press, the medical profession, State and city officials and a large section of the people, Zion has grown from 200 persons to 50,000; its wealth from $20 to mony millions.

Those who know Zion know, too, that Dowie is Zion. He thought out the plan years ago, and has given his life to the perfection of it. No man in Chicago to-day has a stauncher personal following than he. He is alone responsible for the thing that has made men say that a feudal system as strict as that of the Middle Ages is alive in Chicago now.

Pen Picture of Dowie.

This is Dowie: He is 55 years old. His beard and hair are white. He is strongly put together, and always looks as if in perfect health. His step is light, his eyes clear, and his voice is as the voice of a dozen men. He is well educated. He has had the training of a Congregational minister, and has been a minister in that church. He has a style of his own, both in the pulpit and in his literary work. He wastes no words. He is unconventional in his choice of words, and just as unconventional in his delivery. He calls names from his pulpit—sometimes ugly names—and he rides roughshod over the feelings of his congregations. He abuses them when he thinks they need it, and he wheedles when he believes that is the best course. His people love him better than they love their homes and their families, and many of them have left both to follow him.

He has magnetism. He calls himself "the fighter of the devil." He also fights secret societies, the use of tobacco and alcohol, the medical profession, the press and the habit of eating pork. He fights them all in his own way. When he is not busy with them he is working with his faith-healing or planning and carrying out his business enterprises.

He went to a theological seminary in Edinburgh, and then to Sydney, New South Wales. It was in the seminary where he was studying the principles of Congregationalism that he first found the faith-healing theory. While reading his Bible he made up his mind that Christ meant to cure the body as well as the soul, and that prayer, accompanied by the laying on of hands, would do what was required. He kept his belief to himself. He had stomach trouble and was going to die. The doctors could do nothing for him. He read the Bible all one night, prayed for a cure and was cured. That is, he says so.

GREAT DAM ON THE NILE.

Masonry Will Reach High Water Level by Next Month.

Thousands of men will be at work unremittingly from November until next July on the great dam at Assouan, on the Nile, and by that time the great wall of masonry, a mile and a quarter from shore to shore, will be up to the high-water level of the river. At this point of the Nile the river runs between an archipelago of rocky islets, submerging many of them at high tide and always rushing fiercely through the channels between them. The masonry is built from island to island, and when it is finished will present a broad carriage road reaching from bank to bank and more than 300 feet above the lowest water level below it. At present nearly all the foundations have been laid. There are a number of channels, of which the one on the left bank is called the Great West channel, and the next in importance are the three channels nearer the middle, called the Bab-el-Sogair, the Bab-el-Haron and the PRESENT CONDITION OF THE NILE DAM.

Bab-el-Kebir. The foundations for the western channel are the only foundations not yet laid; those of the three Babs have been for some time finished, and during their last season their sluices were completed.

The type of dam selected is that of "an unsubmergible masonry dam," pierced with numerous under-sluices, through which will pass the silt-laden waters of the floods, while the clear supply at the close of the inundation may be impounded with no risk of inconvenient silting-up of the reservoir. These sluices, about six feet each in width, number 180, divided into eighteen groups of ten each. The piers between the sluices are some nine feet wide, but in order to enable failures, should they occur, to be localized the groups of ten are separated by massive abutment piers.

The traffic of the river is to be provided for by a chain of locks, in number six or seven. This is at the western extremity of the dam, and is called the navigation channel. It runs at right angles to the dam.

BIRTHPLACE OF COAL GAS.

Discovery that Revolutionized Existing Means of Illumination.

The house depicted in the picture produced below is situated in Redruth, Cornwall. It was in this house that William Murdoch, in 1792, brought to light a discovery that was destined to completely revolutionize the then existing means of illumination—to wit, coal gas. Fixed to one of the walls is an iron plate bearing the following inscription: "William Murdoch lived in this house 1782 to 1798. Made his first locomotive here and tested it in 1784. Invented gas-lighting and used it in this house 1792."

BIRTHPLACE OF COAL GAS.

A Hen's Hearing.

The Rural New-Yorker says that hens have a wonderfully keen ear, and gives this story in proof of it:

At a certain town in Indiana, dining-cars are run on to a side track and swept out. The hens ranging in the vicinity gather around these cars for their dinner with clock-like regularity.

These Wabash hens, so acute is their sense of hearing, can distinguish the whistles of the dining-car trains from those of the local passenger and freight trains, or even from that of a locomotive running wild, and they sit placidly on their nests or scratch gravel in a nonchalant way upon the approach of all locomotives save those pulling the dining-cars.

And this is not all. These hens can distinguish the whistles of the locomotives on the dining-car trains at almost incredible distances; so that if one of these trains is late twenty minutes, for instance, intending passengers do not look at the blackboard bulletin, but merely note the distance of the hens picking their way toward the crossing.

It is asserted, moreover, that neighbors of a mathematical turn of mind have an easy system of setting their clocks and watches to railroad time by the movements of these sharp-hearing hens.

Different Sorts of Baldness.

He—You don't mean to tell me you are going to marry that old bald-headed professor?

She—He is rather bald, but think how many young men of to-day are bald on the inside of their heads!—Stray Stories.

Many people impress you as having the life worked out of them, while others impress you as being in need of something to do.

True politeness consists in treating others as you would like for others to treat you.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY...NOVEMBER 22, 1900

The South Bend Meeting.

In addition to the report we made Saturday, we note more fully, that Auburn, next after South Bend, was everywhere in the lead, and when our delegates asked to have the second annual meeting come to Auburn, there was but one other place that felt like contesting with them. That was Valparaiso, but Auburn easily won.

Mrs. M. E. Griswold read a paper, and Mrs. Ehlers made an extemporaneous speech, both receiving high praise from those present and from the newspapers. Mrs. Maude Robbins sang several solos and South Bend and the meeting generally are enthusiastic over her singing.

There were a number of fine lecaures and among these was one by the Countess Friedland of Moscow, Russia. And the ladies say she is a real countess and a lady of most lovely character.

There was a grand banquet Friday evening at the Oliver House, a million building, and following this, a reception at the residence of Ex congressman Ford, one of the finest in the city.

Mrs. Jane McM. Smith of South Bend was elected president and Mrs. Alice Lewis of Auburn, first vice president, Miss Minetta Taylor, Greencastle second; Mrs. Bryan of Logansport, third. Mrs. E. G. Kettering, South Bend, is corresponding secretary; Mrs. Wood of Valparaiso is recording secretary. Mrs. A. H. Barns, Auburn, treasurer. The board of directors named, includes Mrs. V. S. Patterson, Kokomo; Miss Mary E. Cardwell, New Albany; Miss Emma Goodin, Muncie; Mrs. Mary E. Studebaker, South Bend; Mrs C. C. Shaffer, Auburn and Mrs. Alice Mummert, Goshen.

The Auburn ladies are not at all nervous about assuming charge of the big meeting next year. Although we have no million dollar hotels, we have first-class ones, And they entertain only regular delegates free. The visiting members entertain themselves. All will go greatly to Auburn's benefit in its advancement into a prominent place in the public eye. We admire the coolness and audacity of our ladies, who have so easily snatched a high honor from so many large cities. We will entertain the visitors properly; no one doubts that.

Trustees Retire.

Trustee A. W. Madden retires today and Miles Baxter takes his place as trustee of Union township. It is the general verdict that Mr. Madden has made an excellent record and all we have heard speak of him, praise his careful but progressive management. During his term, especially the latter part of it, he has been active in putting the roads in good shape. He has gone over with one coat of gravel on every road in the township except the Butler and the Newville roads. On some of the lines that need most attention he has given the second coat of gravel. This is valuable work and in the interest of both the town and the country, and it is not doubtful but his succesor will continue the work. Mr. Madden goes out with a record for careful business management that is greatly to his credit.

W. S Dancer, the outgoing trustee of Jackson, turned the office over to his successor, S. M. High today. Years ago when he had the office before, he was reputed one of the best in the county. He goes out of office now, with the same reputation. He has always been very careful and conservative, but never lost a good turn for his township even if it cost something.

Sheriff's Sale.

By virtue of a certified copy of a Decree to me directed from the Clerk of the Circuit Court of DeKalb county, Indiana, in a cause wherein H. W. Ellis is plaintiff and Edward Mottinger, Delia Mottinger, Daniel Mottinger, Ezra E. Loutzenheiser, Isaac Loutzenheiser, Elizabeth Louzenheiser, Corinna Loutzenheiser, Jacob Stotz, Publius V. Hoffman, Daniel M. Link, John A. Campbell, Timothy J. Knisely, David H. Knisely, George E. Boots, Lyston C. Harding, Emma E. Sharitt and Alexander Hurraw are defendants and in a cause wherein Henry W. Ellis is plaintiff and Ezra E. Loutzenheiser, Elizabeth Loutzenheiser Isaac Loutzenheiser, Corinna Loutzenheiser, Jacob Stotz, Pubilus V. Hoffman, Daniel M. Link, John A. Campbell, Timothy J, Knisely, David H. Knisely, George E. Boots, Lyston C. Harding, Emma E. Sharritt and Alexander Hurraw are defendants, requiring me to make the sums of seven hundred seventy-five dollars and fifty-eight cents and fourteen hundred eighty dollars and eighteen cents respectively, with interest on said decree, and costs, I will expose at public sale to the highest bidder on SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1900.

between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m., and 4 o'clock p. m. of said day, at the door of the Court House of DeKalb County, Indiana, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years of the following real estate, to-wit:

The east half (½) of the northwest quarter (¼) of section eight (8) in township thirty-five (35) north of range fourteen (14) east in DeKalb County, Indiana.

If such rents and profits will not sell for a sufficient sum to satisfy said decree, interest and costs, I will at the same time and place, expose at public sale the fee simple of said real estate, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to discharge said decree, interest and costs.

Sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

Prof. Ransom Dunn.

The COURIER last week received several Hillsdale papers bringing the sad intelligence of the death of Prof. Ransom Dunn, for several years connected with Hillsdale college. He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Gates at Scranton, Pa., Nov. 2, but was brought back to Hillsdale for burial. He was a native of Vermont, but early came west, and was all his life identified with the ministry and with educational work. He was one of the most prominent members of the faculty of Hillsdale college from the start and filled one of the professorships several years The writer remembers him gratefully as a teacher and friend, having been in his classes several years. He was one of the most eloquent and fervent preachers we ever heard, and either in the pulpit or on the lecture platform, far surpassed, in our judgment, most of the famous lecturers who have gained high reputations. He was a man who left his impression on all who came into contact with him. Many memories are called up as we look on the familiar face shown in the obituary.

Lamp Explodes.

Hardin Fuller came near having a serious time last evening by a the explosion of a lamp. It had become heated and was evidently foaming and sputtering on the point of an explosion. The door was open and he caught it and threw it clear out into the street, and it went to pieces. It is supposed the trouble arose from a hole broken in the lamp chimney, that let in the air too freely. Had the lamp struck a closed screen door as when Mrs. Rush was burned, it might have been a serious matter.

ST. JOE.

Mrs. J. D. Leighty has gone to Indianapolis to spend the winter.

Mrs. J. C F. Abel is spending a few days near Edgerton, O., visiting with Mrs. John Allen.

Sol Barney' Harry Meek, J. C. Hull and some others of the I. O. O. F. lodge attended lodge at Waterloo last Tuesday.

J. C. Widney and wife of Sandusky, O, are spending a few days in St. Joe visiting their two sons, S. L. and O. H., and other friends.

After a good scolding in the News the school board have concluded that the best thing they could do was to fix the sidewalk leading to the school house. and have ordered the repairing done.

J. R. Skilling of Garrett was in town Saturday. He informs us that his son, who was so badly injured a few weeks ago, is improving very fast and in a few weeks will have regained his former health, minus both his legs.

Mrs. Lulu Hamm, grand-daughter of M T. Body, has gone to Chicago Junction and will make that her home for the present. Her husband and self will board for the present, but expect to move to themselves early in the spring.

If some tax payer would now punch up the town council a wee bit we might have some repairs on the main street. It begins to look around town as if the council and marshal had gone off on an extended trip and did not expect to return until after May. Oh! the beauties of incorporation—if we only had a few more widow women in town wouldn't we have the sidewalks and streets fixed up? See!

Prosperity seems to have struck Hamburg (as the north part of town is called, (as we notice our old democratic friend Henry Hull, is building a nice, big barn, and then right across the street Royal Hendricks (but he is not a democrat by any means) is building quite an addition to his home. By the way, Hendricks' better half is one of the staunchest of democrats and we are glad prosperity comes to them.

The gang of men who are here doing the grading for the double track will finish up their contract within the next ten days if they have good weather. Quite a gang of men are at work at the stone work at the river bridge, but at this time of the year stone or bridge work on the river is a good deal of an uncertainty, owing to the rise in water, but the men go right along as though the weather was the best, paying no attention to Sunday or anything else.

BE YOUR BEST

A Sound Mind in a Sound Body Depends on Sound Digestion.

The accomplishment of nearly everything we strive for depends on bodily and mental energy. This energy is a product of the food we eat. Indigestion robs us of the vigor that makes life worth living. Stomach troubles always go hand in hand with a host of bodily and mental troubles, and none can be banished until sound digestion is restored. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure often does seemingly impossible things, but that is because it makes the stomach right, and a sound stomach does so much. If you have any form of stomach or liver trouble, be just to your own interests. Try this famous remedy. It cannot possibly harm you; it is guaranteed to cure. If it should fail to benefit you, your druggist will return your money. You have never tried anything like it. It helps at once and you stay helped. No other remedy benefits so quickly or cures so thoroughly. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

—How is it that Ohio has increased so little in population that it will gain no new member under the new apportionment, while Illinois, New York and Texas gain three, and New Jersey and Pennsylvania two each? Can it be true that the depletion in the Buckeye state is due to the fact that her citizens have all moved away on government jobs?

—The article on the steamship experiences of Dr. Swarts and his fellow-travelers, that was given in our "Saturday" article, spoke of 250 passengers. This refers only to the great body of well to-do people who are second class cabin passengers. There were about 750 passengers in all, including all grades, and these with the crew made a total of about 900. This would make quite a town on land.

Bank Robbery in Ohio.

Yesterday morning before daylight a dozen professional bank robbers made a desperate attempt to secure the contents of the money vault of Sperry & Warnstaff's deposit bank at Ashley, ten miles north of Delaware, Ohio. While nine stood on guard holding the citizens at bay with their guns three operated the dynamite under the deposit vault of the brick building.

The bank's property is worth $30,000 and there was $15,000 in cash deposits on hand. Four attempts were made to get at the cash but the side door held to its combination, while the guards outside were shooting at the citizens who pressed closely in upon them. Dr. Buckley and Guy Shoemaker, merchants, first upon the scene, were met by the robbers at the point of guns and bade not to move. The robbers stole a horse and spring wagon from Alvin Sterrill and a black team and new surrey from Edward Osborne, farmers near by. The rigs lay in wait in front of the bank for flight. Sterrill's horse ran away, demolishing the vehicle, when the men took across the country on foot. Buggy robes from Osborne's carriage were found near Norton

The damage to the bank building, vault and other property, is about half its value. The gang left a Big Four freight at Marengo at 1 o'clock, stole the horses and rigs and reached Ashley shortly after 2 o'clock. They pried open the bank doors without being discovered, but the first explosion of dynamite aroused the town. The gang fired as they fled but no one was hurt. The men were masked.

Officers in every direction were notified to be on the lookout for the robbers.

Considerable sickness is reported in different parts of town.

The heavy rain and snow storms of the last week will make very unpleasant work of husking corn, a large amount of which is still in the shock in the fields.

The Levy stock has been adjusted at about $9,000. They have opened up a sales room for the damaged goods in the Tyson building. and plenty of good bargains can be obtained.

One of the sadest events in the history of our place occurred last week. Egdar Mitchell, son of John Mitchell, was taken sick about two weeks ago, but no serious results were entertained. His mother took sick on the tenth but her illness did not create any particular alarm until Thursday of last week, when heart failure manifested itself and something akin to diphtheria developed. Friday morning word came from the home that Mrs. Mitchell was dying. It was a severe shock to her many friends, to think that one so young and of usual good health, was passing away. Her death took place about 4 p. m. Edgar is still sick, but at last accounts was still improving. Owing to the fear of contagion, her remains were borne to their last resting place on Sunday. only a few persons accompanying them. Mrs. Mitchell was one of the brightest and and most cheerful women the writer has ever had the pleasure of knowing. A devoted member of the M. E. church, a faithful attendant at Sabbath school, an energetic worker in church society, and last, but not least, an ornament in the home a loving wife and mother. Her son and husband survive her.

TO SEEK THE NORTH POLE.

Evelyn B. Baldwin, the Latest Aspirant to Arctic Honors.

Next year will see the beginning of an international race in search of the north pole. In Europe Dr. Nansen, the famous Norwegian explorer, and the adventurous Italian Prince Louis, of Savoy, more familiarly known as the Duke of Abruzzi, who recently returned from the Arctic after having reached the furthest point north yet reached by man, have united to form a joint expedition. In the United States Evelyn B. Baldwin, an explorer, who has gained considerable reputation, and William H. Ziegler, a New York millionaire, are fitting up an expedition, which in point of equipment and number of men and resources surpasses all of its predecessors and which it is claimed will reach the pole if it is within the range of human possibility. All of the expenses of this American expedition are to be borne by Mr. Ziegler and it matters not how great they may be. It has been the hope of Mr. Ziegler, ever since he was a young man of 17, to solve the secret of the frozen north and now he claims he has found the person capable of doing it. Mr. Ziegler is himself too old to accompany the expedition further than Greenland.

Mr. Baldwin, who will conduct the perilous quest, is a rugged, hardy and courageous traveler, inured to the privations and alive to the dangers which attend all attempts at reaching the pole. Mr. Baldwin accompanied Lieut. Peary in his efforts to gain the pole in 1893 and in 1894, and was a conspicuous member of the expedition which was commanded by Wellman two years ago.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

He Has Been Returned to Power by the Liberals' Victory in Canada.

Sir Wilfred Laurier, who has been returned to power by the victory of the liberals in Canada, has been the leader of his party since 1887. Four years ago he led the liberals to triumph at the polls, and was sworn into office as President of the Privy Council on July 9, 1896. His record since that time has been evidently pleasing to the people. He settled the vexed school question in Manitoba so as to take it out of politics altogether, and his administration in other respects has been satisfactory to the electorate. On his visit to England in 1897 he received almost regal honor. In the same year he was the recipient of unusual honors from the Pope and the President of France. Sir Wilfrid on his return was met with acclaim in numerous cities of Canada, which vied with one another in the warmth and enthusiasm of their receptions. In 1898 he acted as one of the joint commissioners for the settlement of matters in dispute between Canada and the United States.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

On His Dignity.

I get queer answers sometimes, said an old advertiser, when I ask my customers, as I frequently do, what publication they saw my advertisement in.

As a rule they reply courteously, but once in a while a man takes the question as an affront. One pompous old fellow told me it was none of my business. Another advised me to "hire a checking clerk." A languid young man referred me to his valet. But I was worst taken aback by a roughly dressed customer once to whom I put the usual question:

"What magazine, may I ask, did you see my 'ad' in?"

"In all of them, sir," he replied, indignantly. "Did you think, sir, from my appearance, that I read only one?"

Original Greening Apple Tree.

The American Cultivator says that the original Greening apple tree is still standing on the farm of Solomon Drowne at Mount Hygela, in North Foster, R. I. The tree was a very old one when the farm was sold in 1801. The seller informed the purchaser that it was a pity the old tree was going into decay as it produced the best fruit of any tree in the orchard. The purchaser determined to see how long he could keep it alive, and it still survives after almost another century has been added to its venerable years. But it shows signs of final decay, and the parent of all the famous Rhode Island greenings, which has set its grafts on the orchards of almost all the world, will be but a neighborhood memory.

Effect of a Lovely "Ad."

Fair Visitor—So you have really decided not to sell your house?

Fair Hostess—Yes. You see we placed the matter in the hands of a real estate agent. After reading his lovely advertisement neither John nor myself could think of parting with such a wonderful and perfect home.—London Tit-Bits.

Penitent.

Mrs. Good—It is drink that has brought you so low.

The Tramp—Yes'm. It has brought me so low that I can't get a drink.—Puck.

"Ring off," said the telephone girl when she canceled her engagement.

PROMINENT MEN WHO HAVE BEEN DISAPPOINTED IN PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS

IT is the very essence of a presidential election that some candidate must get left. Some one must be disappointed. And in the history of the republic many great men have sought and lost this coveted prize. Three great names stand out prominently in the list—Clay, Webster and Blaine—each the idol of his party, each the victim of political scheming.

Aaron Burr, just a hundred years ago, missed the presidency by the narrowest margin. He was an adept in political intrigue, with a magnetic personality and a brilliant mind that won him equal favor in the eyes of the voters with Jefferson. Each received seventy-three votes and this threw the election into the House of Representatives. Thirty-five ballots were taken without result.

The Federalists were anxious to defeat Jefferson and they gave their support to Burr until the thirty-sixth ballot. Then, Burr refused to give pledges required of him, their support was withdrawn and Jefferson was chosen. In accordance with the law of those days Burr became Vice-President. But he was a disappointed man. Following his defeat for the presidency came the fatal duel with Hamilton, the Blennerhasset scandal, his traitorous attempt to divide the country, his temporary exile and social obscurity.

De Witt Clinton was Mayor of New York City for several terms, as well as United States Senator and Governor of New York State. He was popular with the people, but his strong character made him many political enemies. When President Madison was renominated for a second term Clinton took the field against him and made a hard fight, but lost for lack of the vote of one State, of which he had felt sure. His fame is secure, however, as the "Father of the Erie Canal."

Henry Clay, like Blaine, made repeated attempts to secure the presidency, only to fail each time. It is a coincidence that each would have succeeded were it not for the blunders of too zealous supporters. "Harry of the West" tried for the prize in 1824, when John Quincy Adams was elected, also in 1832, when he was overwhelmingly defeated by Andrew Jackson. In 1840 the adoption of the unit rule prevented Clay's nomination instead of William Henry Harrison. In 1844 the Whigs nominated him by acclamation and Clay's election seemed certain. But his Southern adherents blundered by inducing him to favor the annexation of Texas, and that lost him the votes of thousands of anti-slavery men. The Whigs won in 1848 and Clay would have been their choice if Gen. Taylor's newly made military reputation had not given the nomination to that hero.

Daniel Webster is another great personality among the unsuccessful aspirants for the presidency. Had he consented in 1848 to accept the nomination as Vice-President on the ticket with Zachary Taylor he would, upon the latter's death in 1850, have become President. In 1852 Webster's friends made a determined effort to secure him the nomination, but party jealousy made their efforts useless. This great man felt keenly the disappointment of his hopes, and his death occurred on Oct. 24 that same year.

Lewis Cass, who was very prominent in national politics sixty years ago, had two narrow escapes from presidential lightning. In 1844 an unexpected adjournment of the Democratic convention just as Cass was about to be nominated gave time for a successful combination against him in favor of James K. Polk.

In 1848 Cass was United States Senator, but resigned when the Democrats nominated him for the presidency. Owing to the opposition of the Free Soilers, he did not receive the electoral vote of New York State, and the Whig candidate, Taylor, won the prize.

Horace Greeley's defeat in the presidential contest of 1872, with its direful aftermath, was a political tragedy. High in the councils of the Republican party, respected by the whole people, Greeley put aside the political principles of a lifetime to become the candidate of Democracy. Overwhelming defeat broke his generous heart and was quickly followed by death.

Samuel J. Tilden's failure to be inaugurated as President of the United States is the one weak link in the presidential chain that connects the present with the dawn of the republic.

The result of the contest in 1876 was in doubt from the close of the polls on election day until March 2, 1877, when the electoral commission appointed to settle the matter decided that Rutherford B. Hayes had received 185 votes as against 184 for Samuel J. Tilden.

It was a perilous period, and the nation owes much to the man who refrained from speaking the word that might have plunged the country into civil war.

James G. Blaine, the "Plumed Knight," is perhaps the saddest figure in the galaxy of American star statesmen who have sought the presidency, but sought in vain. For a score of years his name was always uppermost in the public mind whenever the Republican party met in convention. In 1876 the nomination was almost within his grasp. In 1880 he received a first ballot vote of 284, but he and General Grant, his strongest rival, had both to step aside for the compromise candidate, Garfield. In 1884 he was certain of victory, but failed through the loss of New York State by the narrow margin of 1,047 votes.

Among other well-known men who tried to be President and failed were Gen. McClellan, Gen. Hancock, Benjamin F. Butler, William J. Bryan and Admiral Dewey.

BAVARIA'S HALL OF FAME.

Idea Crystallized in America Is Not an Original One.

America is not entitled to claim originality in her purpose to erect a hall of fame at the University of New York. Bavaria originated the idea long ago and a hall of fame exists in Munich today. It is known as "Die Ruhmeshalle," and overlooks the newer part of the city and the Theresienwiese. The hall was begun in 1843 under the supervision of the architect Klenz and was completed ten years later. It is in the form of a colonnade, seventy meters long and thirty-two meters wide, and has two projecting wings which partly inclose the statue of Bavaria. This is a gigantic iron figure, 110 feet high, weighing 64,177 kilograms, designed by Schwanthaler.

MUNICH'S HALL OF FAME.

Along the front colonnade of the Ruhmeshalle there are eighty busts of famous Bavarians. These are exposed to the air, but the Doric columns are so arranged that they protect the busts in a measure.

TRIFLES NOT LIGHT AS AIR.

Slight Causes that Have Resulted in Momentous Events.

Only a short time ago the ancient Swan Hotel at Ipswich, England, was destroyed by a fire, which originated through rats gnawing matches.

The sudden appearance of a hilarious mouse among the occupants of the gallery of the Victoria Theater, Westminster, on boxing night, 1858, started a panic, which resulted in the death of fifteen people.

A mongrel cur strayed on the St. Leger course some years ago, just as the field swept by. Seven horses came down in a heap, and of the jockeys who were riding them five were hurt—three seriously.

To win a bet of 2 pence a little pit lad, employed at the Ferndale colliery, in the Rhondda Valley, picked the lock of his safety lamp with an ordinary hairpin. He himself, together with nearly 200 of his mates, perished in the explosion which followed.

At Shoeburyness some fifteen years ago Col. Francis Lyon invented a new kind of sensitive fuse for big caliber shells, and invited a number of gunnery experts to be present at the trials. On the night prior to the day on which the experiments were to be made he locked up a number of the fuses in a shed in which there were some fowls. The chickens started scratching, and the dust flew up and settled on the threads of the screws of the fuses. When, next morning, an unfortunate gunner started to fix one to a live shell, the missile went off, killing the operator, the inventor and five other persons.

Burrowing rabbits so weakened the foundations of a tall chimney at Cleckheaton, Yorkshire, that it fell, crushing to death fifteen people.

The gambols of a big retriever—some say the playful antics of two children—sufficed to wreck the west coach Scotch express last year. A luggage trolley was started, ran down the sloping platform and toppled over onto the line in front of the train.

The Esperanza was cast away on the coast of Chili through a toddler of 5 meddling with the compasses. She had on board ninety-seven souls, and all but eleven perished. Among the saved was the innocent cause of the terrible catastrophe.

A fire which was directly responsible for the loss of more lives than any other single conflagration, originated through the vagaries of a tarantula. The scene was Santiago and a grand religious festival was taking place in the principal cathedral. The building was a sea of drapery, flooded with every variety of illumination.

Twenty thousand silver lamps were in full blaze and the acolytes were busy lighting the 2,000 tapers on the grand altar when the errant spider skipped into the central aisle and alarmed a lady, who screamed. The acolytes, or some of them, looked around to ascertain the cause of the commotion and one of the naked lights they carried came in contact with the drapery of a colossal figure of the virgin. A few minutes later the vast cathedral was a raging furnace, in which were being consumed more than 2,000 bodies.—Stray Stories.

PASSION PLAY REALISTIC.

Lilian Bell Describes the Acting of the Peasants of Oberammergau.

In the Woman's Home Companion Lilian Bell writes of her experiences at Oberammergau and of the impressions made upon her by the great Christ drama. She concludes with these vivid words:

"As to the play itself, I wish I need say nothing about it. My mind, my heart, my soul, have all been wrenched and twisted with such emotion as is not pleasant to feel nor expedient to speak about. It was too real, too heart-rending, too awful. I hate, I abhor myself for feeling things so acutely, I wish I were a skeptic, a scoffer, an atheist. I wish I could put my mind on the mechanism of the play. I wish I could believe that it all took place two thousand years ago. I wish I didn't know that this suffering on the stage was all actual. I wish I thought these people were really Tyrolese peasants, wood-carvers and potters, and that all this agony was only a play. I hate the women who are weeping around me. I hate the men who are letting the tears run down their cheeks and whose shoulders are heaving with their sobs. It is so awful to see a man cry!

"But no, it is all true. It is taking place now. I am one of the women at the foot of the cross. The anguish, the cries, the sobs, are all real. They pierce my heart. The cross, with its piteous burden, is outlined against the real sky. The green hill beyond is Calvary. Doves flutter in and out, and butterflies dart across the shafts of sunlight. The expression on Christ's face is one of anguish, forgiveness and pity unspeakable. Then his head drops forward on his breast, it grows dark, the weeping becomes lamentation, and as they approach to thrust the spear into his side, from which, I have been told, the blood and water really may be seen to pour forth, I turn faint and sick and close my eyes. It has gone too far. I am no longer myself, but a disorganized heap of racked nerves and hysterical weeping, and not even the descent from the cross, the rising from the dead nor the triumphant ascension can console me nor restore my balance. The Passion Play but once in a lifetime."

HIS MIND STILL CLEAR.

Though a Physical Wreck, Herbert Spencer Is Strong Mentally.

The impress of the labors of Herbert Spencer upon the philosophy of the world will be felt long after the great author has crumbled into dust. Mr. Spencer will be 81 next April. It is said that he has shrunk to the proportions of a mummy and that he spends most of his time gazing dreamily at the sea from his house in Percival terrace, Brighton. Last year Mr. Spencer finished his work upon his great system of synthetic philosophy with the publication of a revised edition of his Biology.

HERBERT SPENCER.

Although his body is in a state of desiccation, his mind is yet amazingly clear and he is interested as of old in the political and industrial development of the time. His eyes retain their intellectual keenness and his health is good except for the insomnia from which he has never been free since he was a young man.

He sees no one save his most intimate friends, and the visits of even these hurt him. The only person whom he loves to have call upon him is Mrs. Beatrice Webb, his former ward. Mrs. Webb was trained by the philosopher himself. This remarkable lady, whose intellect Mr. Spencer pronounces to be the finest possessed by any living woman, inherited a great fortune which she is spending among the poor in London. In spite of her distinguished master's repugnance to the doctrines of socialism, his brilliant and beautiful ward became the wife of Sydney Webb and threw herself with intense devotion into the cause of the "collectivists."

Thus to the other burdens of Mr. Spencer's old age is added the disappointment of seeing the woman whom he carefully trained and whom he loved as a child embracing the theories of a school which, among all the phenomena of social life, was alone capable of rousing him into feelings of bitterness.

Japan in Search of Ideas.

Japan's efforts towards Western civilization and methods take a new departure every day. The latest venture of the enterprising authorities of the Flowery Land is in the direction of architecture, a matter in which up to the present Japan has been particularly conservative.

It will be remembered that the Crown Prince Yoshihito was married a short time ago and amid universal rejoicing. It has been found that there is no place sufficiently magnificent to accommodate the royal couple, and it has, therefore, been decided to build near Tokio a dwelling which shall rival in splendor anything existing in the East and possibly even surpass the royal palaces of Europe and the magnificent structures of America.

To achieve this object it was necessary that Japan's architects should see some of the buildings of the West, and accordingly Prof. Toro Iwamura and Mr. Sano, the former a member of the Tokio Academy of Fine Arts, and the later an architect in the employ of the Japanese Government, have started on a tour with this purpose in view. After visiting various cities in the United States and Canada they will extend their tour to Europe.—London Daily Mail.

Called Teddy a Lobster.

As Governor Roosevelt and two other men were crossing 33d street, New York, from the Republican headquarters, they met Lieutenant Governor Woodruff and the party stood talking on the car tracks until they were almost run down by a street car.

"Get off the track, you big lobster," shouted the motorman to Governor Roosevelt and Lieutenant Governor Woodruff, as they were shaking hands. "Are you trying to hold up this car?"

"That's the Governor," remarked a man on the car.

"Take it all back, Governor; I'm the lobster," said the motorman, taking off his hat to the Governor, who waved his hand and laughed.

No Place Like Home.

An Atchison man took sick Saturday and decided to stay home till he got rested. He was back at work Monday. His wife had asked him within a few hours to take care of the baby, to chop onions for pickles, to grind the coffee, to dress the chicken, and to milk the cow "while he was resting."—Atchison Globe.

ONE WONDER OF THE WORLD.

Strange Phenomenon of Small Isle in the Gulf of Mexico.

"A day's sail from New Orleans lies Snail Isle, a strange and lonely island with a broad, low, sandy beach that changes color with every flow of the tide," says Y. Burne Zelleks of the Crescent City, who was at the Oxford Hotel recently.

Mr. Zelleks is a man of wealth and leisure, whose chief delight is yachting, and the outlines of his stanch and handsome yacht, the Sea Gull, are familiar to the seafaring men in southern waters. He is fond of the Gulf of Mexico and spends his winters cruising along its shores.

"Snail Isle, as the sailors call it," said Mr. Zelleks, "is scarcely more than two miles long. Half covered by the warm waters of the gulf at high tide, it seems to bear a charmed existence. Other islands larger and higher than it have been swept away by the heavy storms. Yet the little, low-lying island is as large to-day as it was fifty years ago, the old sailors tell me.

"Its sands are of golden yellow color, and when the rising tide spreads over the wide, shell strewn beach the gilded bits of earth glisten in the sunlight. But when the tide ebbs seaward in obedience to that strange power which moves the world a marvelous change takes place.

"The golden sands become purple as if by magic. Men who see it for the first time rub their eyes lest they be dreaming. As the tide recedes the purple deepens, and the once bright glittering beach becomes dark as the royal robes of an empress. Old sailors who have sailed round the world gaze at the beach in bewilderment. They have never seen its like before. It is a sight never to be forgotten; an astounding spectacle which fills the hearts of the timid with a superstitious dread of the unknown. Scientific men are startled at the phenomena and begin to ponder over the cases of chemical changes of which they have heard and seen.

"From the white deck of the Sea Gull I watched the beach change color one winter afternoon. The splendor of the southern sun shone over sea and land. The sands of the isle seemed more truly golden than any I had ever seen before. The tide, which had been at a standstill for a few moments, began to turn back to the ocean. Fascinated by the beauty of the beach with its waving fringe of green leaved palms, I stood by the bowsprit gazing shoreward. Suddenly the color seemed to darken. Astonished, I glanced more keenly at the scene. Over the broad expanse of glimmering sand a purple wave was spreading. 'What can it be?' I wondered. Richer and richer grew the purple hue, and I realized that my eyes were not deceiving. Beside me, smiling with satisfaction at my astonishment, stood our pilot, Bob Allen. In answer to my hasty question he ordered the gig lowered and silently stepped into the boat. I followed and away we were swiftly rowed toward the shore. As we drew near I beheld upon the beach myriads of little crawling purple objects. Springing ashore as the boat touched sand I picked up one of the tiny spots of color. It was a snail. Wonderfully purple in hue and as large as peanuts, the strange crustaceons had colored the beach. When the tide falls they issue forth from the wet sand in search of food with remarkable rapidity. The old adages about the slowness of snails would not apply to the purple ones on Snail Isle. They have elongated bodies and can crawl almost as rapidly as small crabs. They are delicious tidbits when daintily cooked, and after the suggestion of Capt. Allen we ate many of them. Their shells are singularly beautiful when first secured, but soon fade into a dull gray color. There are many beautiful islands along the gulf coast, but none has for me the attraction of Snail Isle."—Denver Times.

The Sorrows of Miss Corelli.

A story is being told in London of an amusing passage at arms between Miss Marie Corelli and the schoolmistress of a school just across from the house where the authoress had taken up residence. Part of the school exercises consisted in the study of music, and, agreeable though this proved to the school children, it proved particularly disagreeable to Miss Corelli. She therefore sent the following note to the schoolmistress:

"Miss Corelli presents her compliments to Miss —— and begs that she will be good enough to arrange so that there may be no singing class between the hours of 10 and 1, these being Miss Corelli's working hours, when distractions are peculiarly distasteful."

The following came in reply:

"Miss —— presents her compliments to Miss Corelli and begs to state that if such a course were likely to prevent the writing of such books as 'The Sorrows of Satan' she would rejoice in arranging a singing program for every day from 9 to 2."

Small for ItsAge.

Pat called as usual one morning at the Cow and Pail for his threepennyworth of whisky, when the following conversation ensued between the landlady and himself:

Pat—This be good whisky, mum.

Lady—Yes, Pat. Can you guess the age of it?

Pat—No, mum.

Landlady—Well, it's thirty years old."

Pat (eyeing the threepennyworth)—Olm a-thinkin' it be moighty small for its age, mum.—London Sparé Moments.

Dreary.

In the paresis ward a venerable old man accosted us.

"What a dreary world this would be," he fervently exclaimed, "if miss did not rhyme with kiss, and kisses with Mrs.!"

Then he wrung our hand and turned away.

Upon inquiry we learned that the man had been a humorous poet, whom the luxurious living incidental to his calling had driven mad.—Detroit Journal.

Food of Japanese.

The Japanese are not heavy meat consumers, and yet they are wonderfully muscular. Japan consumes more rice than any other nation in the world, the average being 300 pounds a person per year.

A man should choose a wife as he does a piece of cloth—for qualities that will wear well.

Russians Race Horses Against Time.

The Russian Trotting Club is a wealthy institution, largely patronized by the public. On Sundays crowds flock to the trotting ground of the Semenovsky Plats, in St. Petersburg. American professionals are greatly in evidence, but work under immense difficulties, owing to the bitter jealousy of Russian trotting men. All the races are run against time and are, therefore, very tame from a spectacular point of view, while so little excitement do they cause that not a single evening paper publishes the winners' names.

The Oldest Banknote.

Is in the possession of the Bank of England. It is dated December 19, 1699, and is for 555 pounds, but on account of its age same is made very valuable. One of the oldest and most valuable stomach medicines is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. For fifty years it has cured dyspepsia, indigestion, nervousness or insomnia. It will cure when faithfully taken.

Hearing Animal's Sounds.

The roar of a lion can be heard farther than the sound of any other living creature. Next comes the cry of the hyena and then the hoot of the owl. After these the panther and the jackal. The donkey can be heard fifty times farther than the horse, and the cat ten times as far as the dog. Strange as it may seem, the cry of a hare can be heard farther than that of either the cat or dog.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury.

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

A PROMINENT LADY

Speaks in Highest Terms of Peruna as a Catarrh Cure.

Mrs. M. A. Theatro, member Rebecca Lodge, Iola Lodge; also member of Woman's Relief Corps, writes the following letter from 1838 Jackson street, Minneapolis, Minn.:

Mrs. M. A. Theatro, Minneapolis, Minn.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen:—"As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I have been troubled with chronic catarrh for over six years. I had tried several remedies without relief. A lodge friend advised me to try Peruna, and I began to use it faithfully before each meal. Since then I have always kept it in the house. I am now in better health than I have been in over twenty years, and I feel sure my catarrh is permanently cured."

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. As soon as Peruna removes systemic catarrh the digestion becomes good, nerves strong, and trouble vanishes. Peruna strengthens weak nerves, not by temporarily stimulating them, but by removing the cause of weak nerves—systemic catarrh. This is the only cure that lasts. Remove the cause; nature will do the rest. Peruna removes the cause. Address The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a book treating of catarrh in its different phases and stages, also a book entitled "Health and Beauty," written especially for women.

FADED IN HER YOUTH

Pretty faces and graceful forms of young women! Why is it they are so soon replaced by plainness and lankness? It is because the young girl just entering into womanhood does not know how to take care of herself and has no one competent to instruct her. It is not necessary that there should be anything weakening or wearying about the obligations of a female organism. Parents of young girls should inform themselves and prevent their dear ones from making costly errors.

That young woman has a just cause of complaint, who is permitted to believe that great periodic suffering is to be expected, that severe mysterious pains and aches are part of her natural experience as a woman. These things are making constant war on her health, her disposition and her beauty. It is a wanton sacrifice, absolutely unnecessary and cruel. It is more—it is criminal.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA

for the Blood and Nerves

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the right medicine for every young girl who is just entering the first stage of womanhood. It prepares the system in every way to act normally. It enriches the blood supply, and keeps the nerves calm and steady. Fortified with this great medicine, all the womanly duties may be undertaken and experienced without the slightest jeopardy to health. It preserves the gifts of nature and assists their development into glowing, healthful beauty.

MRS. MARY FRANCES LYTLE, of 2 Hunter Alley, Rochester, N. Y., says:

"I was very pale and delicate—had no color. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong, my face is plump, and cheeks red, and my complexion pure."

MRS. WILLIAM BARTELS, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained flesh and am like a different person."

The nervousness in women which invariably comes with pain is of itself certain to stop the development of beauty in face and figure. Excited nerves make sharp lines and hasty speech. The beautiful curves which make women so attractive are not possible when the female organism is out of order, as it surely is when discomfort and pain are always or even periodically present. It is only necessary to look in the faces of young women everywhere to see that this must be so. Else why are they so pale and thin?

GET FREE ADVICE FROM DR. GREENE

Real beauty is rare. It belongs to perfect health. It is possible to every woman who takes the matter in hand intelligently. Get advice from Dr. Greene, the great specialist in these matters. He will tell you why all this is so, and show you how to avoid the stumbling blocks that bar woman's way to happiness. You may consult Dr. Greene without cost by calling or writing to him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. Don't throw away your beauty. Write to Dr. Greene to-day.

PEOPLING A CONTINENT.

Russia Loans Siberian Emigrants Money to Be Paid in Thirty Years.

"There are no 'bad lands' in the whole of Southern Siberia, and the rich, arable land extends hundreds of versts farther north. We passed through on the river steamers and the railroad in June and July, and found the climate at that time altogether delightful. The vegetation, the trees and shrubs, were like those of New England. The crops were well along, the people looked prosperous and contented. It is now several years since the Russian government has adopted a system of colonization for Siberia. She makes a careful examination of all candidates for emigration, and those who have the requisite qualifications receive, with their families, free transportation to the new country. Lands are allotted to them which are exempt from taxes for twenty years, at the end of that time they may be rented or purchased at a moderate sum. They are almost entirely free from the obligation of military service for ten years. Money is lent to emigrants who already have a certain amount—otherwise they are not allowed to emigrate—which need not be repaid for thirty years. Agricultural implements are given them outright. No wonder that some of the cream of Russian peasantry has been induced to emigrate. Whole communities have found in their new home a lot which is better than anything they have ever known in the mother country. I was constantly impressed by the air of prosperity about every Siberian settlement—the neat houses, the well-kept barnyards, the abundantly yielding soil, the absence of squalor. Later when we passed through the heart of European Russia, I was able to compare the appearance of the two sections, and I came to the conclusion that the Russian peasant betters himself in many ways by emigration to Siberia.

"Hardly a day passed as we steamed up the great rivers that we did not meet one or more steamers, sometimes towing barges in addition, filled with emigrants. They seemed to me to be the sturdiest people in the world, capable of enduring the strain and the hardships which attend the carving out of a living in a strange land. Among the third-class passengers on our own steamer were several peasant families that had made moderate fortunes in the new country and were going back to their own homes to set up a business with their capital."—Anna N. Benjamin in Ainslee's.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

State Sues Big Four Road—Report on Births in the State—Mother and Son Found Dead—Funeral Adjourned by a Fire.

The State of Indiana has entered suit in the Supreme Court against the Big Four Railroad Company for $227,700 for alleged violations of the State law requiring railway companies to post bulletins announcing the arrival and departure of trains. The case comes from Fountain County, and the company is asked to pay the sum named for not maintaining a bulletin board in the station at Veedersburg. The law provides that a railway that violates the requirements of the act shall pay the sum of $25 for every offense. The Big Four runs several passenger trains through Veedersburg every day, and the time named in the complaint covers three years.

Tells of Births in the State.

The State board of vital statistics reports that for the year ended Oct. 1, 40,900 children were born in the State, of whom 20,845 were white male children, 19,016 were white female children, 379 were black male children and 350 black female children. Of the total 52.2 per cent were male and 47.8 per cent were female children. In 914 cases more than one child was born; there were four triplets, in Steuben, Noble and Vanderburg counties. The deaths for the year numbered 34,999.

Escapina Gas Kills Two.

Elizabeth and John Gunn, mother and son, aged 86 and 52 respectively, were found dead at their home in Indianapolis by William Gunn, a son and brother, who resides in another part of the city. The house was broken open and found to be filled with natural gas, which was escaping from the kitchen stove. They had been asphyxiated after retiring by the gas diminishing till the flame went out and then coming on strong in the night.

Fire Breaks Up a Funeral.

While the funeral services of Mrs. Sarah Graves were being conducted at the Methodist Church at Decker the sanctuary caught fire and a panic ensued. The fire started in the basement and burned through the floor before discovered. Many persons escaped through the windows and the coffin was carried out of the church. Several women fainted. The church was badly damaged by the fire.

Wife Murderer Is Caught.

Perry Barnard, who shot and instantly killed his former wife, Mrs. Jennie Barnard, at Flora, on June 17 last and afterward escaped after being pursued for several days by a posse of citizens and a pack of bloodhounds, was captured in South Dakota and brought back by Sheriff Joseph A. Bridge Friday. The prisoner was placed in the White County jail for safe keeping.

Chicago and Toledo Railroad.

Michigan and Indiana capitalists have incorporated a company to be known as the Chicago and Toledo Railway Company for the building of a road from the western border of Indiana, through the counties of Newton, Jasper, Pulaski, Fulton, Kosciusko, Whitley and Noble, with Chicago as the western and Toledo the eastern terminal points of the road.

SUES A SENATOR.

Miss Mai L. Leeton of Lafayette, Miss., is the plaintiff in a sensational breach of promise suit recently begun in Washington against Senator Sullivan of her own State. The plaintiff wants $50,000 damages. Miss Leeton, who is a comely young woman of 26 years, declares that the Senator refused to marry her, after promising to do so. Senator Sullivan denies the charges made by the young woman. He says she has absolutely no claim on him, and that an attempt was made to extort money from him. Miss Leeton at the time she first met Senator Sullivan was married, but did not live with her husband. Afterward she secured a divorce.

PARIS FAIR ENDS.

Great Crowds Throng the Grounds on the Closing Day.

The Paris exposition of 1900 ended Monday night in a blaze of illumination. The booming of cannon from the first story of the Eiffel Tower at midnight announced the close of the great fair. This signal marked the height of a fete that was brilliant, though not largely attended. This celebration, the last of the summer and autumn of gayety, in which over 50,000,000 people from all parts of the world have taken part, was marred by a cold, drizzling rainfall. Tickets that had brought a sou in the afternoon were sold at the rate of five for a sou. The work of removing exhibits began shortly after midnight, and within a few weeks nothing will be left of the great exposition except the immense hothouses on the northern bank of the Seine and the art palaces.

The total of paid admissions was 40,000,000. Including free tickets, the total is more than 50,000,000. The average attendance was about 250,000 daily, the largest number being that of the first Sunday in September, 600,000.

M. Hanotaux, former minister of foreign affairs, in an article entitled "The Balance Sheet of the Exposition," says: "France expended 200,000,000 or 300,000,000 francs to erect the exposition. She has recovered them easily in the increase of the treasury receipts, which for this year alone is nearly 100,000,000 francs; in the surplus of Parisian octroi duties, in the monuments remaining to the state or the city, and in the quays, bridges and improved transportation facilities bequeathed by the exposition. Moreover, there has been a general toilette of the city, which has contributed to its brilliance and beauty."

While Canada is not, correctly speaking, a foreign land, it is, at least, practically under a foreign government. Like the United States, Canada has just passed through an election, and that election has brought its surprises. The most notable event of the Dominion Parliamentary election is the passing of Sir Charles E. Tupper, who for forty years has been a striking figure in Canadian politics and whose name can never be effaced from the early history of the Dominion. His defeat, involving the continuation of the Liberal party in power, is an event of peculiar interest to the people of the United States. There are two political parties in Canada—Liberal and Conservative. Sir Charles Tupper has been the leader of the Conservative party since 1896, while Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the present premier, is chief of the Liberal party. Broadly speaking, the Conservative and Liberal parties in Canada are sharply divided on the issue of the tariff. There are numerous other issues, it is true, but the tariff is the one prominent question uppermost in Canadian politics. From 1867 until 1896 the Conservative was the dominant party in Canada, with the exception of a five-year interval. In the 1896 election the Liberals triumphed, Sir Wilfrid Laurier becoming premier. The Conservatives have declined to accept the verdict of 1896 as final, and for four years have carried on a vigorous campaign for their principles. In brief, they have demanded that Great Britain should favor Canadian produce by placing a tariff embargo upon the produce imported into England from the United States and other countries. The Liberals have combated this principle.

There has been renewed fighting in South Africa. Lord Roberts has postponed his departure for England and the censor has renewed the inhibition on private messages to and from the Transvaal or the Orange Free State. All these things have proven a decided disappointment to the people of England, who had hoped that Lord Roberts' speedy return would mark the early close of the war. The official reports show that the October deaths in the British army in the field, including those killed in action or who died of wounds or of disease, number fully up to the monthly average for the entire war. And the Boers show no purpose to end the conflict, their activity constantly showing in new fields. There was heavy fighting near Bothaville on Tuesday, in which the Boers seem to have suffered a heavy defeat, losing twenty-three killed, thirty wounded and 100 prisoners.

One of the notable events in Europe is the assembling of the Spanish-American congress at Madrid. The first session was held Friday. Every South American republic, with the exception of Bolivia, will be represented. The congress is the outgrowth of a sentiment that began to develop in Spain soon after the close of the Spanish-American war. Spain, filled with resentment against the United States, conceived the idea of cultivating a close commercial alliance with her former colonies. Her proposals to this end were accepted with an eagerness upon the part of the South American republics that occasioned no little surprise in the United States. The proceedings of the congress will be watched with interest.

A New Monte Carlo.

As a gambling resort, the supremacy of Monte Carlo is soon to be threatened by a formidable rival. The death of the Empress of Austria has thrown her palace at Corfu on the market, and it has lately been purchased from the imperial family by an Austrian syndicate, who intend to make it the greatest gambling house in the world. The palace, which stands on what is perhaps the most beautiful and romantic coast in Europe, and overlooks the sea which is certainly the loveliest, is built entirely of the purest white marble. This marble is a very different article from what we who have not been in Greece and Italy are accustomed to. In the south of Europe, marble never loses its blinding whiteness, and the Achilleon can be plainly seen miles away at sea, when a building of similar size, say, of red sandstone, would be no more visible than a peasant's hut. The grounds surrounding the palace are worthy of the building, and are now being extended and elaborately done up, so as to rival the beautiful grounds surrounding the Casino at Monte Carlo.

NEARLY A BREAKDOWN.

Mrs. Olberg, a Prominent Minnesota Lady, Tells a Remarkable Story.

Albert Lea, Minn., Nov. 19, 1900.—(Special.)—There are few men and women in this State, or indeed in the whole Northwest, who have not heard, or do not know personally, Mrs. Henriette C. Olberg of this city.

Mrs. Olberg was Judge of Linen and Linen Fabrics at the World's Fair, at Chicago, and Superintendent of Flax Exhibit at the International Exposition at Omaha, Neb., in 1898. Mrs. Olberg is Secretary of the National Flax, Hemp and Ramie Association, and Assistant Editor of the "Distaff."

Her official duties are naturally very onerous, and involve a great deal of traveling and living away from home. She says:

"During the World's Fair in Chicago, my official duties so taxed my strength that I thought I would have to give them up. Through the continual change of food and irregular meal hours, and a poor quality of water, I lost my appetite, and became wakeful and nervous in the extreme. My kidneys refused to perform their usual duties. One of my assistants advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and sent for a box. I am pleased to say that I derived immediate and permanent benefit. I used three boxes, and feel ten years younger.

"I have great confidence in the efficacy of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and am always glad to speak a good word in their favor.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are weak women's best friend."

$5,000 REWARD

Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000 which will be paid to any person who will show that the following testimonials are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writers' special permission. — LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

How shall a mother who is weak and sick with some female trouble bear healthy children?

How anxious women ought to be to give their children the blessing of a good constitution!

Many women long for a child to bless their home, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs, they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the parts, curing all displacements and inflammation.

Actual sterility in women is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all expectant or would-be mothers.

Mrs. A. D. Jarret, Belmont, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. Before taking your medicine I was unable to carry babe to maturity, having lost two—one at six months and one at seven. The doctor said next time I would die, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I did not die, but am the proud mother of a six months old girl baby. She weighs nineteen pounds and has never seen a sick day in her life. She is the delight of our home."

Mrs. Whitney's Gratitude.

From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try your Vegetable Compound, and was soon relieved. The doctor said I never would be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and half. The next time I continued to take your Compound; and I said then, if I went my full time and my baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old, and is as healthy and hearty as any one could wish. I cannot express my gratitude to you. I was so bad that I did not dare to go away from home to stay any length of time. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 4 Flint St., Somerville, Mass."

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have been the attacks that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by H. B. McCord.

—There are two sides to every question—the wrong side and our side.

Mrs. M. P. O'Brien.

Ivesdale, Ill., writes: "I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as a family medicine with the best of results. For derangements of the stomach and as a general laxative I like it better than anything I have ever used. It is so pleasant to taste, my children are always anxious to take it. H. B. McCord.

Getting Thin

is all right, if you are too fat; and all wrong, if too thin already.

Fat, enough for your habit, is healthy; a little more, or less, is no great harm. Too fat, consult a doctor; too thin, persistently thin, no matter what cause, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil.

There are many causes of getting too thin; they all come under these two heads: overwork and under-digestion.

Stop over-work, if you can; but, whether you can or not, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, to balance yourself with your work. You can't live on it—true—but, by it, you can. There's a limit, however; you'll pay for it.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the readiest cure for "can't eat," unless it comes of your doing no work--you can't long be well and strong, without some sort of activity.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Parties from a distance will be met at the train if notified. Free lunch at noon. In case of bad weather, the sale will be under cover. Terms: Six months without interest on approved security. Phil Carr of Ligonier will auctioneer.

A Thousand Tongues

Could not express the rapture of Annie E. Springer, of 1125 Howard-st., Philadelphia, Pa., when she found that Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption had completely cured her of a hacking cough that for many years had made life a burden. All other remedies and doctors could give her no help, but she says of this Royal Cure—"it soon removed the pain in my chest and I can sleep soundly, something I can scarcely remember doing before. I feel like sounding its praises throughout the Universe." So will every one who tries Dr. King's New Discovery for any trouble of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Price 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's drugstore, every bottle guaranteed.

Saturday's Daily.

—Jacob Christoffel of Stafford was here today.

—Mike Wetzel was a caller at this office today.

—J. K. Stafford of St. Joe was in the city yesterday.

—N. A. Lung, the new trustee of Butler township, came in and qualified yesterday.

—All the ladies came home from South Bend this afternoon. Auburn gets the convention next year.

—Dr. and Mrs. Stamets went to Waterloo today to attend the funeral of the former's uncle, Leander Stamets.

—A. C Wilson who has been a guest of J. H. Rowland and family left today for his home in Little Rock, Arkansas.

—Mr, Estella Clark went to Waterloo this noon to visit over Sunday with her cousin, Miss Blanche Kelley, and other friends.

—John H. Farver was here yesterday. He is closing out his work as one of the road supervisors of Jackson. They have been hauling a big lot of gravel that has delayed him a good deal with corn husking. He has about 800 shocks yet to husk.

—Unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice, week ending Nov. 17, 1900. Mrs. Ida Long, B. Prell, Faut Shannon C. B. McClelland, Thos. Farner, Mr. Huber and Wm. Canar. Claimants will please call for letters in advertised list. C. H. Forkner, Postmaster.

—Mrs. T. Bridleman of Parshallville, Mich., was troubled with salt rheum for thirteen years and had tried a number of doctors without relief. After two or three applications of Banner salve, her hands became better and in a short time she was entirely cured. H. B. McCord.

—All the talk about contesting the election of trustee in Butler township is all nonsense. Mr. Lung had a majority of eight, and there were seven mutilated ballots thrown out. Had all these been for his opponent, he would still have a majority of one. But as a matter of fact, they were from both parties.

Snipe Hunting.

Lots of "Sniping" going on here last week. And it is not just the same kind that is much practiced in the military operations in the Philippines and South Africa. There, when the enemy steals up singly, near enough to pick off a lone sentinel, or a scout, they call it "sniping." Here it is not so dangerous for as far as we know, all of Auburn's snipe hunters got home alive. Some of them staid out till after midnight. The game is to have several chaps in the secret and only one victim. All go out a few miles into the country to "hunt snipe.." The victim is given a large sack to hold in some lonely path. He is to hold it with the mouth open in such a way that the fleeing snipe will run into it. Then the others leave him and spread out over the surrounding fields, scare the snipe up and drive them toward the open sack. That is what they say they will do. As a matter of fact, however, as soon as they are out of sight of the sack holder, in the darkness, they go home. One young fellow held the sack till 2 a. m. and then went home afoot, several miles. He is far from happy.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters;' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50cts., guaranteed, at H B. McCord's Drugstore.

Wedding Chimes.

A happy, merry party assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Weamer at Hudson Wednesday evening to witness the marriage of their daughter Sadie to Mr. Geo A. Brugh of Hudson.

The home was beautifully decorated with festoons of myrtle and large pots of pink and white chrysanthemums. The dining room table had ropes of myrtle festooned from the ceiling to the four corners of the table, with chrysanthemums for a centerpiece, and lighted by green and pink candles.

Just as the clock was striking eight, the bride and groom entered the room to the strains of the wedding march played by the bride's cousin, Miss Lela Morse, of Angola. They took their places in front of a bower of beautiful foliage plants and ropes of myrtle and smilax. Rev. T. M. Guild of the M. E. church of Auburn performed the ceremony, a part of the ring ceremony being used. An excellent supper was served in three courses by four young cousins of the bride—Miss Lela Morse, Miss Georgia Zimmerman, Miss Marie Weamer and Frank Gregg. The bride looked very sweet and lovely in her white silk mull wedding dress. She carried in place of flowers a beautiful lace handkerchief which her uncle, Frank Zimmerman, brought her from Venice. Italy.

A large number of beautiful and useful presents testified to the love and kindly feelings of their numerous friends.

The happy couple went the same evening to their own home, which was furnished and ready for occupancy; being escorted there by an uncle and aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gregg of Auburn.

The guests present from Auburn were: Mrs. Frank Zimmerman and daughter, Georgia, Mrs. Sallie Weamer and daughter, Marie, Mrs. Chas. Brown, Mrs A. McIntyre, Mrs. J. A Barns, Miss Mary Baxter, Miss Etta Heist, Mr. and Mrs. Geo Kuhlman, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Gregg and daughter Ella and son Frank, Mrs. Geo. Gregg, Rev. T M. Guild and wife, Miss Jennie Sisterhen of Ligonier, Mrs. Mosier and Mrs Maude Greenan sister of the bride, from Bristol, Ind., Mrs. Tillie Morse and daughter, Lela, from Angola, and a number of other guests from Hudson and Ashley, making in all, a company of about sixty guests.

The happy couple have the best wishes of hosts of friends, among whom the COURIER wishes to be counted.

A Bad Accident.

Last night when L. E. Gregg, wife and daughter Ella and son Frank, together with Mrs. Geo. Gregg, were returning from Hudson where they had attended the wedding of Miss Weamer, quite a serious accident occurred on the road between Ashley and Hudson. The night was so dark that they could not see ahead of them, so they allowed the horses to take their own way, and instead of crossing the bridge over the little run between Ashley and Hudson, they walked off the side into a large deep ditch full of water. Fortunately the carriage and its occupants were not precipitated into the ditch with the horses. Some men who were coming down the railroad track, got a lantern from the station to see what was the trouble. They succeeded in getting one horse out, but the ditch being as wide as the horse was long, it was half an hour before the other horse could be taken out, as it seemed to be wedged tightly in and was up to its neck in the water. The team was then hitched up and the party who had been waiting at the hotel started again, but when they reached the outskirts of Ashley the horse that had been in the ditch so long, refused to go any further and they were obliged to return to Ashley where Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hines, who had followed them to see if there was any more danger, very kindly took them to their home where they spent the night, and returned to Auburn this morning without further mishaps.

The timely assistance of all who helped and the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Hines will always be remembered, as well as their trip to the wedding of Miss Sadie Weamer.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by A. B. McCord the Druggist.

Ben Streifling in Trouble.

Defiance, O., Nov. 21.—The grand jury of Defiance county, now sitting in this city, today returned two indictments against B. F. Streifling, of Fort Wayne, for perjury in the preliminary hearing of persons charged by him with the murder of Enos Rath. Mr. Streifling was a special detective engaged by friends of others who were convicted of the crime. He filed charges against Frank Wynn, Joe Fish, Ora Gilbert, "Chipmunk" Wright and Miss Lavina Moore, (now Mrs. Joe Fish,) but the grand jury before whom the case was taken failed to indict. A charge of perjury against Streifling followed, and the grand jury today returned the indictments.

MR. STREIFLING NOT SURPRISED.

Mr. Streifling received notice of the indictments yesterday afternoon from his attorney, ex-Judge H. G. Baker, of Defiance. He expressed no surprise at the action of the grand jury, but pronounced it merely a case of bluff. He had been told by prominent Defiance county officials that no indictments would be returned, but Mr. Streifling was not of that opinion.

He says the reason for the failure of the grand jury to indict the persons charged by him with the murder, was that the jury was packed by the prosecuting attorney, and it takes twelve out of fifteen jurors to indict.

The prosecution of Mr. Streifling is brought by a Dr. Wynn of Hicksville, a brother of Frank Wynn, the accused. Another of the men charged is a relative of the prosecuting attorney.

Two Old Pioneers Gone.

ST. JOE, Ind. Nov. 23, 1900,

Died at her home one and one-half miles from St. Joe, Mrs. Jacob Dermott aged over 70 years. The facts as near as we can learn are as follows: Mrs. Dermott was living at the old home and had a small boy living with her and going to school. Wednesday evening on his return from school he found Mrs. Dermott lying in the dove yard with some eggs clutched in her hand and unconscious. An alarm was raised and neighbors gathered quickly. She was carried into the house and Dr. Bowman was called, but he could do nothing. She lingered until Thursday morning when she expired without regaining consciousness. Mrs. Dermott was the widow of Jacob Dermott, who died about a year ago. She leaves four children, three sons and one daughter and hosts of friends to mourn her loss. Mrs. Dermott has spent at least sixty years of her life in DeKalb county.

Died, at her home two and one-half miles south of St. Joe, Mrs. James Hart. Mrs. Hart has been in failing health for some time, and although sudden, her death was not unexpected. She has been a resident of DeKalb county for about fifty years. She leaves a big family of grown up sons and daughters to mourn her loss.

Rheumatism.

Nobody knows all about it; and nothing, now known, will always cure it.

Doctors try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, when they think it is caused by imperfect digestion of food You can do the same.

It may or may not be caused by the failure of stomach and bowels to do their work. If it is, you will cure it; if not, you will do no harm.

The way, to cure a disease is to stop its cause, and help the body get back to its habit of health.

When Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil does that, it cures; when it don't, it don't cure. It never does harm.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

Governor's Proclamation.

The closing year, with its abundant harvests, reminds us of the venerated custom transmitted by our fathers of giving thanks to "the Lord who hath daily loaded us with benefits," and to "praise the Lord according to all that He hath bestowed upon us."

We can not recount all the evidences of divine favor; they are more than can be numbered. Abounding plenty cheers the homes and gladdens the hearts of our people. Employment invites to activity all who seek work. The rewards of industry make it possible for all to enjoy God's bounteous blessings. Inventive genius has added to the store of human comfort. Immunity from pestilence and disease, with freedom from discord and strife, are conditions calling for the expression of gratitude from our hearts. The spirit of conciliation and interdependence has led to laws for the adjustment of differences through peaceful arbitration, hence the peace and prosperity of our State has not been menaced by danger to life or property.

The Christ like spirit inspires our citizens to acts of love and beneficence, resulting in activities to help the weak, redeem the erring, mitigate suffering and for the general uplifting and betterment of mankind.

In the use of the bounties God has given us, let us contribute to the poor and make the day set apart one of joy and gladness to them. From hearts overflowing with thankfulness, may a spirit or beneficence spring forth that shall realize the full fruition of the Master's words, "It is more blessed to give thon to receive."

Let the day be appropriately observed in grateful acknowledgement to the Father of all our mercies for His loving kindness to us.

THEREFORE, I, James A. Mount, Governor of Indiana, do hereby designate Thursday, November 29th, 1900, as a day of thanksgiving and praise, to be observed in our homes and places of public worship in such manner as will show forth the gratitude of our hearts to the bountiful giver of all good.

In witness whereof, I hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the seal of the State, at the city of Indianapolis, this 12th day of November, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred, the eighty-fifth year of the state, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred twenty-fifth.

JAMES A. MOUNT, Governor.

W. C. T. U. Column.

While Sam Jones and I were preaching in Houston, Texas, a few months ago I made this statement in reference to rents. The pastor of a Methodist church said: "O George, your speech about rents called to the hearts and minds of these people that we have just had it sadly illustrated. The daughter of one of our preachers married a good man, who after his marriage began to drink. He lost his business and walked the streets of this city a drunkard. His wife was a member of my church I often visited her. I saw the blue veins on her face and the tearful eyes as she said: "O brother, the rent paying haunts me like a night mare. I have to sew till nearly midnight to make the rent, and pay for the little my half starved children have to eat. My husband came home and found me sewing at nearly midnight the other night, and he said if he caught me sewing that late again he would kill me. But, oh, brother, I am compelled to sew. The preacher told me that he had seen the little woman at one of the preliminary meetings at the tabernacle And the last song they sung at the tabernacle was, "We'll never say good bye in heaven." That very night, possibly making up the hour she had lost at the service, she was found by husband stitching away at midnight, thinking of rent, rent, rent!!! Staggering in the room, wild with drink, he said: 'I told you I would kill you." Bang! Bang! Bang! Three balls went quivering through her flesh. As her little children came screaming around her, she sent her little boy for the preacher. "And," said the preacher to me, "as I stooped over her dying body she whispered as her life blood ebbed away. 'We'll never say gook bye in heaven, and thank God, there will be no rent to pay up there.'" This is but one of almost daily occurences throughout the land. Shall we, who hold the destinies of these poor women in our hands, suffer such cruelties year after year? God Almighty help us come to the rescue of our suffering women.

New Meat Market.

Alvin H. Baker opens his new meat market tomorrow. It is in the building recently occupied by John Kruger, jr., with his grocery store, Mr. Kruger having moved into the Benedict building a little west of it. Mr. Baker will keep all kinds of fresh and cured meats and all in the best condition. His well known business ability and integrity will insure a neat business room and fair dealing. We look to see him have his share of the patronage.

Our Saturday Evenings.

LVIII.

We have seen all sorts of tombstones and monuments from the ancient slate slabs that mark the resting place of many worthy dead in ancient church yards like that at Christ church, Arlington, Va., where Washington once worshiped, to some of the magnificent mausoleums that ambitious, wealthy men of modern date have erected to mark their own final, earthly resting place.

But the most unique mortuary monument ever seen in DeKalb county, is that ordered by John S. Boots of Jackson township and now being made at the marble works of Madden Brothers in this city.

The monument is a large and expensive one and is of gray Indiana oolitic limestone from the Bedford quarries. It represents the trunk of a tree and has several limbs and knots that show up quite naturally. The imitation of bark and the sloping down toward the roots, are also in proper form.

All these things so far are now common. But the unusual ones are the ornamental parts. At various places along the body of tree are reminders of the early days, when people hunted, trapped, found bees and split rails.

Near the foot of the tree is an old fashioned maul, such as pioneers or those of later days date used for splitting rails and for similar work. Near by is an imitation of the iron wedge used for the first opening of the "out" that was to be made into rails.

At another point is a piece of the "comb" of a supposed store of honey. A raccoon, so natural you can fancy you hear him "whicker" is peeping around the tree at you. An ax of stone with its handle of the same is stuck into the tree all ready for use.

There is a woodpecker working at a hole from which he is extracting a nice, juicy grub. A branch of the tree is broken over and hangs down, and from the tangled limbs the 'coon peeps out at you.

Altogether it is a fine piece of sculpture and the oddest monument we ever saw. The people about the old Spencerville cemetery where it is to stand will open their eyes when they see it.

John Boots is one of the best men in the county and also one of the oddest. But he is not a crank. He had evidently made up his mind that his monument should be so made as to perpetuate some of the things common in pioneer life. May he live many years before he has actual use for it. Auburn people should go to Madden's marble shop and see it before it leaves town.

RARE COINS.

Mrs. S. B. Stout, formerly Mrs. Hayden, has quite a collection of odd coins and some of them very rare. The collection includes about all of the United States silver and copper coins, the old 3 cent pieces, etc. One of the rarest is a "liberty half penny" of 1800. She has a 5-cent piece of 1829, and a 10 cent piece of 1831. The strangest American coin of the lot is a cent of 1845, which is the usual thickness at the middle, and slopes each way to the rim or edge, where it is quite thin. We have never heard of any coin of any nation made in that shape, and do not understand why this was made so. If anyone has any information about this, we would like to hear it.

The queerest and rarest of the foreign coins, one of the Great Napoleon's silver coins of 1809. It is not a franc piece, but a "5-lire" piece of Italy, on it being the inscription, "Napoleon, Emperor and King of Italy." He had the Italians down just then, and it will be remembered he gave his young son the title of "King of Rome."

There is a silver 2-real piece—25 cents—of "Charles the Fourth, King of Spain and the Indies," dated 1790. Just now in 1900, the King of Spain has no "Indies."

There is a Swedish "2-ore" piece of 1873; one of a 16th of a reichs-thaler of 1675; one of a Saxe-Coburg-Gotha of 1851, for 2 pfennigs, and a German one of 1875 of same denomination.

An extremely unusual coin to be seen in this country is a half penny of the island of Jamaica, one of the British colonies, dated 1808.

There is a ten-centime piece of Napoleon the Third, dated 1855, and quite a number of others equally rare.

Many of these pieces are worn so that a powerful magnifying glass must be used to bring out the letters and figures, and some are so worn that only a part of the letters can be made out. We presume some of them would bring a good sum of money.

BAKING POWDER

-Absolutely Pure-

For the third of a century the standard for strength and purity. It makes the hot bread, hot biscuit, cake and other pastry light, sweet and excellent in every quality.

No other baking powder is "just as good as Royal," either in strength, purity or wholesomeness.

Many low priced, imitation baking powders are upon the market. These are made with alum, and care should be taken to avoid them, as alum is a poison, never to be taken in the food.

The Amendments.

The final count for Indiana is complete. The vote on the first constitutional amendment, the one in regard to increasing the number of supreme judges from five to eleven, gets 214,710 votes, with 178,960 against it, being 135,750 more votes for it than against

The second amendment, that in regard to qualification of attorneys, has 240,081 for it and 144,072 against it. being 85,959 more for it than against it.

Gov. Mount believes that a majority of the votes cast on the matter of the amendments alone, is sufficient to carry and will probably issue his proclamation that they have carried. But others think they must have a majority of the number cast for governor. If the latter view prevails, they are not adopted. It may take a lawsuit to settle the matter.

Attention Farmers.

The Auburn Handle Factory will pay the highest cash price for ash handle block delivered at their factory on the Lake Shore tracks, cut 58 inches long. Also want ash logs cut 9½, 14½ and 19½ feet long. All timber to be smooth and sound. Will also take basswood cut 4 feet long and 8 inches in diameter and up, left round with bark on. Will pay $3 percord.—J. M. CHERRY & Co.

Auctioneer.

I am prepared to act as auctioneer at all sales of all kinds. Best of reference given, and have had long and successful experience. Call on me at my home southeast of Auburn, or write

JACOB MAGGINIS.

Moving Over.

Charlie Bugman brought over the first load of machinery from Garrett today for the Gas Engine Co. The rest of it will be brought over right along now, as time and space permit. They have a good deal of machinery and material, the most of which will be brought here and added to such of the former machinery as will be good for use. However, much of the more important machinery will be new. Several fine new machines have already come and another is expected this evening. Foundations for the machines are being made as fast as possible.

Too Easy.

The election officers of Maumee township in Allen county, were too accommodating. They did not begin voting till nine o'clock, and then held the polls open till eight in the evening. In this way about sixty votes were cast after the legal hour for closing. There is likely to be a contest and the entire vote of the township may be thrown out.

Only a Year Late.

Over a year hour ago Gen. Buller left England to take chief command in South Africa. On starting, he had his baggage marked "Pretoria, Transvaal" Now, he is just getting into the Boer capital a year later. And besides, the city had to be taken by another general, Lord Roberts. Buller is only one year off the original date.

NEWS IN BRIEF GUSTS

BLOWN IN FROM ALL PARTS OF THE EARTH.

An Important Record of the Week As Told by the Telegraph—Latest from Foreign Shores—Crimes, Casualties, Fires, Etc.

Will Startle Europe.

Brussels special: "The Soir says Mr. Kruger on his arrival at the Hague will ask for mediation, and if unsuccessful he will make public all the documents of state in his possession, showing the secrets of the war. The paper adds that Mr. Kruger believes that when Europe knows the truth it will produce such an outburst of public opinion that Great Britain will be compelled to be less harsh." The Soir adds that, failing in this, Mr. Kruger will return to the Transvaal.

Expects Philippine Legislation.

Congressman Hemenway of Indiana, says: "I believe there will be legislation for the Philippines at the coming session of congress. I am of the opinion the islands will be given a form of government similar to Puerto Rico. The tariff may be a trifle higher. The islands will never be given up and we cannot rule them as a territory. As soon as the rebellion has been supressed we will give the islands a stable government."

Councilman Higgins Guilty.

John M. Higgins, councilman from the Fifteenth ward, Indianapolis, Ind., was found guilty of attempted bribery and soliciting a bribe. The jury found him not guilty on three counts and guilty on the fourth. He was taken at once to jail. He has refused to talk to any one. The penalty for the crime of which he stands convicted is a fine of $500 and imprisonment in the state prison from two to fourteen years.

Colored Murderer Hanged.

William Simms, colored, who shot and killed his wife, Lillie Belle Simms, at Dunbar, Pa., on August 16, 1899, was hanged in the Fayette county jail at Uniontown, Pa., in the presence of 600 people. Simms met his death unflinchingly. He gave out a letter claiming that his crime was committed in anger, because of infidelity. He warned all to be careful whom they married and not to marry to young.

Aguinaldo Severely Wounded.

Hong Kong special: United States Consul Wildman has information that the Filipino junta has decided to brave the chances of deportation rather than quit Hong Kong. Aguinaldo is said to be suffering from a gunshot wound in the stomach. The Hong Kong junta has decided to make another attempt to send arms to the Filipinos in a launch, which will probably fly the German flag.

Hawaiian Postal Service.

The Third Assistant Postmaster General has issued an order directing that as Hawaii is now a territory of the United States, with the domestic registration system in full operation there, all postmasters making up registered mails must address them not only with the postoffice name, but with that of the island on which the office is located, and add the name of Hawaii.

Jeffries Wants a Real Fight.

The attempt to get Corbett and Jeffries to fight twenty rounds for the benefit of Saengerfest hall at Cincinnati, is not a success. Jeffries says he will fight in Cincinnati if Corbett will go to a finish. Jeffries wants a $25,000 purse and a side bet of $10,000. No agreement has been reached yet.

Will Go After Mobists.

District Attorney McAllister of Colorado Springs, Col., has ordered Sheriff Freeman of Lincoln, to proceed against the members of the mob who burned Preston Porter, Jr., at the stake last week. The order was issued after correspondence between Govenor Thomas and Mr. McAllister.

Rebels Seize Seaports.

The Venezuelan consul in San Juan, Porto Rico, has received a cable dispatch from Caracas saying that the rebels have seized the principal seaports of Colombia. The news was conveyed by a steamer, which arrived at LaGuayra from the west.

Five Thousand Derricks Destroyed.

Toledo (O.) special: It was announced by couriers to the Western Oil Men's Association here that the recent storm had destroyed nearly 5,000 derricks in the oil fields south and east of here.

Fort Wayne Masonic Temple Attractions.

Nov. 30.—Viola Allen in "The Palace of the King."

Dec. 1.—Sherlock Holms.

Dec. 6.—Ward and Vokes.

Two New Torpedo Boats.

The United States torpedo boats Blakeley, No 27, and the Delong, No. 28, were successfully launched at the Boston Navy Yard.

Rebel Leaders Arrested.

Manila special: Dorotion Karragdag, an insurgent lieutenant colonel, and Manuelo Lazares, who, it is said, was General Torres' quartermaster, have been arrested in Bulacan province. Karragdag had previously been arrested and paroled.

Indians are Starving.

Sandiego (Cal.) special: Hundreds of Indians on the Mesa Grande reservation are reported to be on the verge of starvation because of the failure of their supplies of manzanita berries and acorns, due to drought last June.

Emperor William was the object of an attempted outrage at Breslau, which, however, failed. As he was driving in an open carriage to the Cuirassier barracks, accompanied by the hereditary prince of Saxe-Meiningen, a woman in the crowd hurled an ax at the carriage. The rapidity with which the vehicle was passing saved its occupants. The ax struck the carriage. The woman was immediately arrested. She is believed to be insane. The woman's name is Selma Schnapke. She occupied a place in the front rank of the spectators, on the side furthest from the Emperor. A crowd of people who witnessed the outrage threw themselves on his majesty's assailant, but the prompt intervention of the police saved the woman from injury.

IN GENERAL.

Gov. Dole of Hawaii reports that the native population of the islands is holding its own, and that the total valuation of real and personal property is $97,491,584.

R. O. Lazier has arrived from Nome with surveys for a railroad, which he says an English syndicate will build from the head of navigation on Grantley harbor, near Port Clarence, to Council City, on Golivan bay, a distance of eighty-five miles.

Dufferein Patuelle, chief clerk of the gold commissioner's office at Dawson, estimates the last season's Klondike output of gold at $20,000,000, as against $17,000,000 for 1899. Next year's gold output of the Klondike, he thinks, will reach $25,000,000.

The census bureau has announced the populations of four more States, as follows: Illinois, 4,821,550, an increase of 26 per cent; Rhode Island, 428,556, increase 24 per cent; Minnesota, 1,751,394, increase 34.5 per cent; Pennsylvania, 6,302,115, increase 19.8 per cent.

Diplomacy having failed to accomplish the settlement of the American missionary claims pending against Turkey, the administration has decided to support peaceful representations by a naval demonstration. Two American men-of-war have received orders to proceed to Smyrna, and a third is available for duty in Turkish waters if found desirable.

Bradstreet's says: "The tonic effect of seasonably cold weather is again testified to by reports from practically all markets of a brisk demand for winter clothing and footwear. This in turn is reflected in increased re-orders from Western, Northwestern and Southern jobbers and a perceptible improvement in tone of wholesale trade at the East, which hopes to participate later in the results flowing from the existing good consumptive demand. The market for cereals is a dragging one, with price changes few and of little importance; but stock speculation, though quieter than of late, is strong and confident in tone. Reflection of the late enormous business in this line is found in unprecedented bank clearings totals, eclipsing even the large totals of the year 1899. The awarding of the government contract for armor plate at $425 a ton will swell the output of the steel industry by $15,000,000. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 4,062,000 bushels, against 3,555,507 bushels last week, and 4,540,007 bushels in the corresponding week of 1899. Corn exports for the week aggregate 3,976,914 bushels, against 3,287,627 bushels last week, and 4,603,718 bushels in this week a year ago."

STORY OF HORRORS.

AWFUL OUTRAGES COMMITTED BY BOXERS IN CHINA.

Deeds Cruel Beyond Belief—Women Cast Into Raging Fires—Priests Covered with Oil and Then Roasted to Death—Others Cut to Pieces.

Washington correspondence:

Authentic and detailed stories of the murder of missionaries and native Christians by the Boxers and imperial soldiers in China are beginning to arrive. They show that the cruelty of the latter has been even more savage, heartless and extensive than heretofore believed. According to a correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury, Bishop Fontosati, in South Hona, was tortured for four hours by Chinese. The members of his body were removed singly. The priests were covered with coal oil and placed in a pattern of sticks, which were then set on fire. Three thousand converts, led by French priests, in defending their church, were massacred.

The first reliable and graphic account of the massacres in Shansi has been brought to Chefoo by a native Christian teacher who escaped from the bloodthirsty foreign haters. He tells the following story: On June 28 the first murders were committed at Hsiano-Yi-Hsien, where two ladies of the China Inland mission were living alone, Miss Whitechurch and Miss Searell. About 300 Boxers broke into their compound.

The ladies sent a messenger to the District Magistrate for help. The official reproved the messenger and struck him. This gave notice to the crowd that they could attack with impunity. A crowd entered the premises, and the ladies kneeled before the crowd and begged for mercy, but they were beaten on the heads with clubs. Some also took glass bottles and broke them on their heads. The ladies lived about one hour. Their clothes were taken off and their watches carried away.

Mr. and Mrs. Piggott and son, Mr. Robinson, Miss Duval and two daughters of the Rev. Mr. Atwater were driven from their homes into the mountains. They soon returned and were arrested by the District Magistrate and compelled to go in chains to Taiyuen. On the way they were not permitted to buy food.

Threw Her Into Flames.

On June 29 the foreign houses at Taiquen were burned, and the missionaries, with the exception of Miss Coombs, escaped to the English Baptist mission. Hundreds of Boxers had crowded into the houses, and when the missionaries fought their way through the crowd she was left behind. She pleaded for her life, but, after looting the house, they set fire to it and threw her into the flames.

The missionaries stayed several days at the Baptist mission, but on July 9 the governor ordered them all to come to his yamen under the pretense that he intended to escort them safely to the coast. On entering the yamen the missionaries were surrounded by soldiers. These formed a large circle, and into this circle about thirty Boxers were invited to come. One by one the missionaries were dragged to the center and cut to pieces. Their heads were placed in baskets, which were hung upon the gates. About forty native Christians were killed at the same time. The following day ten Roman Catholic priests, chiefly French, were killed in the same way.

The bodies of the thirty-three foreigners killed were placed in wooden cases and all buried in the Baptistry. The list of the killed, beside those already given, as far as known, is: Mr. Stokes and wife, Mr. Beynon, wife and three children, Mr. Farthing, wife and three children, Dr. Lovitt and wife and one child, Mr. and BEGGED IN VAIN FOR MERCY.

Mrs. Whitehouse, Mr. Simpson and wife, and Dr. Miller Wilson and wife. It is also reported that in and around Taiyuen over 300 native Christians have been murdered.

The mission of the American board, at Tai-Ku, escaped the first intensity of the general attack upon foreigners, but on July 31, 300 Boxers attacked the mission premises. The members of the mission present were: F. W. Davis, G. D. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Clapp, Miss Rowena Bird and Miss Susan Partridge. The three men resisted by going on the roofs and firing upon the crowd. A few Boxers were killed, but the ammunition ran out and the missionaries were all soon beheaded and their bodies thrown into the flames of the burning houses.

Cut to Pieces with Swords.

The heads were all taken to Taiyuen and exposed as the others had been. One hundred native Christians were killed at the same time. The American mission at Fenchowfu, fifty miles southwest of Taiyuen, was one of the last victims. There both the prefect and District Magistrate had been kindly disposed to foreigners. The members of the mission present were: Mr. and Mrs. Atwater and two children and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Price and son. There were also present members of the Swedish mission, Mr. and Mrs. Langren, naturalized American citizens, and Miss Eldred, an English lady. Up to Aug. 13 none of these were molested, but the prefect died and the governor sent a new man, fully in sympathy with his worst designs.

This man demanded that the mission people leave the city, and although Mrs. Atwater was seriously ill, they left under a guard of twenty Chinese soldiers. When just outside the city a shot was fired. At this signal the soldiers rushed upon the helpless victims and cut them down with their swords. Their bodies were stripped and buried in a ditch. The escaped messenger returned the second day to learn the fate of his foreign friends.

INDIANS IN DIRE DISTRESS.

Many Thousands of Pimas and Papagos Suffer from Lack of Food.

Some time ago news reached the Indian department that the Pima and Papago tribes in Arizona were rapidly reaching a condition of starvation. In order to learn authoritatively whether these rumors were true or false the department directed S. M. McCowan, superintendent of the Indian school at Phoenix, Ariz., to make an examination in the condition of affairs. Mr. McCowan has done as directed and reports a most deplorable situation. He found the Pima reservation a parched desert and was amazed at the sufferings of the uncomplaining red man. The Indians live in mud and brush wickiups scattered all over the reservation. Numbers of them huddle together at night in the huts without respect to ventilation. Disease is threatening to augment the misery of the distressed people.

Altogether Mr. McCowan finds that 16,000 human lives in Arizona are imperiled by famine. While waiting for the government to distribute rations, 8,000 Pimas on the Gila river reservation and a like number of Papagos who roam over a vast dry section of southern Arizona are suffering from hunger. The destitution is the more deplorable because these Indians, who befriended the white man when he invaded their country many years ago, and for generations have been self-supporting nations, are reduced to pauperism and misery through the acts of the white settler. Never before in the history of the Pima tribe have the Indians been so destitute.

STARVING PIMA INDIAN.

THEY BEAT COLUMBUS,

Five Chinese Missionaries Discovered America in 499 A. D.

Facts have been discovered through the finding of Chinese records, which show that the Mongolians discovered America in the year 499 A. D. From reliable sources it is learned that the substance of the news from Pekin is as follows:

Mah Twan Lin, a Chinese scholar, in a recent search among the musty official records of China, brought forth an account of the voyage of Hwui Shan to "Fusang" (Mexico), where he left five missionaries in the year 499. Hwui Shan sailed from a port of China along the coast to Kamschatka; thence his little bark skirted the Aleutian (Fox) islands, finally reaching Alaska, where he landed.

Leaving Alaska, the Chinese sailed down the Pacific. Mexico was finally reached, where the little expedition of five missionaries landed. These missionaries made themselves felt in the crude civilization of the natives. As told in the dispatches from Pekin, temples were built and the inhabitants of what is now Mexico and Lower California were initiated into the ancient faith of the Mongolian. China at that time was far ahead of the rest of the world in the arts and sciences. The five missionaries undoubtedly instructed the natives in architecture, the fashioning of instruments of war and peace, and the art of painting and decorating.

All these signs remain in the ruins in Mexico and neighboring sections, described in M. de Charnay's "Ancient Cities of the New World."

The greatest possible interest is attached to this report, because tradition among the natives of Alaska tells of the appearance centuries ago of a strange people coming from a far-off land. The relics of some progressive race are spread throughout the region described by De Charnay. That he landed in Alaska the records found by Mah Twan Lin show, for the evidence is that Hwui Shan returned from his voyage in safety and was able to write of it for the benefit of his countrymen.

INCREASE IN DEAD LETTERS.

Amount Nearly 10 Per Cent More Than for Previous Year.

The annual report of the superintendent of the dead-letter office shows the large increase of total receipts of undelivered mail matter over the previous year of nearly 10 per cent. The number of pieces of matter received from all sources was 7,536,158, against 6,855,983 for the preceding year. Letters and parcels held for postage numbered 144,619, and those misdirected 422,793. The number of letters and parcels opened was 6,676,003, an increase over the preceding year of 9½ per cent.

There were 50,553 letters containing an aggregate of $44,140, and letters containing drafts, notes, money orders, etc., of the face value of $1,136,645. Foreign letters and parcels found undeliverable and returned to countries of origin numbered 606,412.

POSTAL-SERVICE ESTIMATES.

Congress Will Be Asked for an Appropriation of $121,000,000.

Postmaster General Charles Emory Smith has framed estimates to be submitted to Congress and will ask an aggregate of about $121,000,000 as the appropriation for the entire service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902. This includes an estimate of $3,500,000 for the rural free delivery service. By the close of this fiscal year 4,300 rural free delivery routes throughout the United States will have been established and the general extension contemplated for next year will involve about 4,500 additional routes. The Postmaster General, together with other officials, is investigating the feasibility of putting the service in operation at every point throughout the country not reached by the regular free delivery services in operation in the cities.

The Oregon to Be Brought Home.

The battleship Oregon is to be brought home for extensive repairs as soon as the battleship Kentucky reaches the Asiatic station. The assignment of the Kentucky to the far East was due to knowledge that the Oregon's injuries would necessitate bringing her back to the United States for permanent repairs. The Kentucky will reach the Asiatic station about Jan. 20 and the Oregon will then start by the Pacific ocean route for the Bremerton naval station on Puget Sound.

MARK HANNA'S DAUGHTER.

Senator Mark Hanna has a tenderer interest in prospect just now than any that can come out of his political maneuvering.

His youngest daughter, Miss Ruth, now a school girl at Farmington, Conn., is preparing for her first flight among the butterflies of society. There are great plans forming for the coming-out party, which will take place in Cleveland about holiday time. Miss Ruth is to spend much of the winter, after her debut, at the Hanna home, in Lafayette square, Washington, where gayer doings are expected than have marked any previous season.

GALE SWEEPS OVER OHIO.

Houses Blown Down, Roofs Torn Off, and Small Boats Driven Ashore.

A terrific windstorm swept over northern Ohio on Wednesday, doing great damage. At Liepsic many buildings were blown down and roofs torn off others. The streets were filled with debris, while telegraph and telephone wires were laid upon the ground and poles blown over.

At Sandusky four large icehouses were destroyed, several buildings were unroofed and small boats blown ashore. The damage is $20,000. Shipping interests were badly crippled. Around Port Clinton, Marblehead and Oak Harbor many buildings were unroofed and other damage done. In the oil fields the loss is very heavy. Hundreds of derricks and boiler houses have been scattered over the fields. An oil man said the damage would reach fully $250,000. At Tippecanoe City S. Shearer's tobacco sheds were wrecked and the Masonic Hall and other buildings damaged. At Bucyrus the German Lutheran Church was badly damaged and the Ohio Central roundhouse partly unroofed.

The Storm in New York.

In New York City there was a sudden darkening of the sky. A few minutes later rain suddenly appeared, and in less than a minute was coming down in sheets. Following it came a blast of wind which for a time blew at a velocity of seventy-two miles an hour. The wind tore a skylight weighing two tons from its fastenings and blew it into Fifth avenue. With a crash the skylight struck a carriage, driven by Charles Uggla, who was passing. The edge of the skylight struck Uggla on the head. He was probably fatally injured.

At Buffalo the wind blew at the rate of sixty-five miles an hour. At the Pan-American grounds the building for the cyclorama of Missionary Ridge was blown down, and another Midway building was seriously injured. Scaffoldings were torn from some of the buildings, and sections of several roofs were torn off. Several workmen are reported injured.

SIX MEN ROB A TRAIN.

Robbers Stop Passenger at Gifford, Ark., by Building Fire on Track.

The north-bound Iron Mountain cannon ball passenger train was held up at Gifford, Ark., at 7:15 o'clock Wednesday evening by six masked men. The train was delayed by the robbers forty-five minutes. The robbers covered the track with railroad ties and built a big fire in the center of the pile. The engineer, suspicious of an attempted robbery, tried to pull through, but the ties caught in the pilot and stopped the engine.

Instantly three masked men appeared and ordered the engineer and fireman to come down from the cab at once, and another of the robbers went to the side of the car and commanded the conductor to remain inside. Each order was obeyed. While the four robbers were standing guard and occasionally firing a shot to frighten the passengers, two remaining bandits entered the express car and ordered Messenger Samuel W. Avery to step aside.

The large safe was charged five times with dynamite, each explosion making a terrific noise and tearing some portion from the car. A large hole was bored into the door of the safe, but entrance could not be effected. The robbers finally announced that they had no more dynamite and gave up the task of forcing open the door. Then they picked up a box of money and several packages and ran to their horses hitched nearby and rode rapidly away. No attempt was made to disturb or molest the passengers.

ARMY SUICIDES AND HOMICIDES.

Found to Be Less During Active Military Operations.

The tabulation of the cases of suicides and homicides which occurred in the army during the years 1898 and 1899 are compared in the annual report of Surgeon General Sternberg with the cases which occurred during the ten years, 1888-97. Contrary to the general anticipation it is found that there were among the troops during the last two years relatively fewer homicides than during the years of the previous decade, and that the mean annual ratio of suicides per thousand men was about two and one-half times greater during the decade of peaceful garrison life than during the recent period of active military service.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

New Center of Population Marked—Cigarette Fiend Kills Himself—New Game Law Proposed—Ohio Company Leases Oil Lands—Talked to Death.

Ten years ago the census bureau located the center of population of the United States eighteen miles east of Columbus, near Westport, 39 degrees 11 minutes and 56 seconds west latitude and 85 degrees 32 minutes and 53 seconds north longitude. Upon information now given out by Government Census Director Merriam a Columbus party by mathematical calculations located the center of population in a wheat field on the farm of Frank Wright, nine miles north of Taylorsville, in the southwest corner of the northeast quarter, section 15, town 10, range 5 east. An inscribed board marks the spot.

Suicide of a Young Student.

Eugene Stansfield, aged 18, freshman in the Columbus high school, committed suicide. He had fallen behind in school and was requested to return in the evenings. He rebelled at this and refused to go to school. His mother told him he would either attend school or go to his father at Mount Carmel, Ill. He said he would leave and went to pack his trunk. Instead of doing this, however, he tied the trigger of a rifle to his toe, placed it to his left breast and fired, killing himself instantly. Young Stansfield had been a confirmed and inveterate cigarette smoker for six or seven years, his growth being greatly retarded thereby.

Plan to License Hunters.

A new game law, having for its purpose the protection of the hunting preserves of the State from encroachment by Chicago sportsmen, will be introduced at the forthcoming session of the State Legislature. The Kankakee marshes are the favorite hunting grounds of thousands of Chicago huntsmen. The proposed law provides that all persons living outside of the State shall procure a license to hunt in Indiana. The law has the backing of all the organizations of hunters in the State.

Leases Oil Lands.

One of the biggest deals in oil lands made in the Indiana field in the last year was concluded when the Ohio Oil Company filed for record leases on lands in Adams and Wells counties. The total number of acres is 2,260 and the farmers who executed the documents obtained very favorable terms. Thirty-four landowners joined in the lease.

Fatal Mania in a Novel Form.

Mrs. Avery of Newcastle died at a hospital in La Porte, her death being due to strange causes. About seven days before, a mania for constantly walking and talking developed and grew upon her to such an extent that she was practically uncontrollable. The ceaseless walking and talking continued until she became so exhausted that death resulted.

JUST COMMON FOLKS.

If only sweetest bells were rung
How we should miss the minor chimes
If only grandest poets sung,
There'd be no simple little rhymes;
The modest clinging vine adds grace
To all the forest's giant oaks,
And 'mid earth's mighty is a place
To people with just common folks.

Not they the warriors who shall win
Upon the battlefield a name
To sound the awful din;
Not theirs the painter's deathless fame;
Not theirs the poet's muse that rings
The rhythmic gift his soul invokes;
Theirs but to do the simple things
That duty gives just common folks.

Fate has not lifted them above
The level of the human plane;
They share with men a fellow love
In touch with pleasure and with pain.
One great, far-reaching brotherhood,
With common burdens, common yokes,
And common wrongs and common good—
God's army of just common folks.

An Unconscious Matchmaker.

"DO tell me, old fellow, how on earth it is possible for such a metamorphosis to have taken place. Not a month ago we sat here, two hardened bachelors, determined to remain so to the end of our days, and now I find you transformed into a most devoted husband."

A hearty laugh was the immediate answer to this outburst, and Dr. Trenton, to whom it was addressed, took a puff at his pipe before replying.

"Well, you see, Jim," he said, "I thought it would be fun to surprise you thoroughly for once. But Delia shall tell you the story, and you may be surprised to learn that you yourself, unconsciously, I admit, made up the match."

"I suppose it is for penance, Will, that I am to narrate my own mistakes and misdeeds to Mr. Allison. Two months ago I was a stupid little country girl. My eldest brother had sent for me to keep his house. Our parents have been dead many years and I had lived with an aunt. Henry, my brother, had written me that it would be impossible for him to meet me at the depot, and that I should drive to the Tudor Flats, where he was living on the fourth floor. My poor brain was certainly in a whirl after my long drive through the noisy streets. When I arrived at the Tudor Flats I walked bravely up the stairs.

"I know you will laugh at me dreadfully, Mr. Allison, but you must remember that I had never before seen so many stairs. In my ignorance I was unaware that the entresol does not count; therefore, when I arrived at a landing where a door was ajar and an old man servant replying to an inquirer the the doctor would not be home until 2 o'clock, I naturally concluded that I had reached my journey's end, for my brother also bears the title doctor. To old James' astonishment I walked calmly in, saying:

"'The doctor expects me. Please have my luggage seen to.'

"'But, miss, I don't know,' he ventured, 'I have the strictest orders never to allow any one to enter my master's study during his absence.'

"'I am the doctor's sister, and he himself arranged my coming,' I answered, condescendingly.

"With that he admitted me, muttering: 'Never heard about a sister,' into the smoky, dusty apartments, which I assumed to be my brother's.

"Much to James' consternation, I set to work and dusted furniture and books, spread a clean cloth on the table, and prepared a lunch (though James informed me 'Master never eats at home') of fresh butter, home-made bread, cheese, ham and apples; then decorated the room with roses and honeysuckle brought from home.

"To pass away the time, I took up a book and began to read. A note fell out of this book. My eyes fell on the first words and my attention was instantly attracted. It was signed Charlie Allison, and read:

"'Dear Old Man: So you have decided to install that awful creature in your house, though you acknowledge that all hopes of peace and comfort of your life will be gone. My dear fellow, do be advised and give up this preposterous idea. At any rate, don't be surprised if I cut your acquaintance for the present, and leave you to enjoy the company of Miss Delia. Your friend,

"CHARLIE ALLISON."

"My dear lady," interrupted Charlie, "you don't mean to say—it isn't possible that any misunderstanding arose out of that? My dislike and——"

"I do mean to say so," she replied, laughing; "it was quite possible—indeed, natural—I should assume that those words referred to me. I was at first highly indignant and then began to cry. My resolution was soon formed; I would go away at once and not ever see the heartless brother who had discussed me in such a manner before my rival.

"While repacking my bag I came upon a photograph of myself. A sudden impulse made me write a few words on the back of it and leave it on the table. Then I heard steps outside. It was Henry, I thought. He should not find me there. Seeing the door of a small room open, I slipped in and closed it behind me."

"Let me tell the rest," interrupted the doctor; "I fancied I was dreaming as I became aware of the invitingly spread table; then I noted two covers laid as if for a delightful tete-a-tete, and upon my napkin a photograph of the sweetest face I had ever seen. Listen to what was written under it:

"'As I am so ugly; as I destroy your peace and drive away your friends, I leave you to lunch alone and shall find a home elsewhere.'

"While puzzling about what this might mean, I heard a terrific yell from Delia, my parrot; I opened the storeroom door and Delia, my wife, fell into my arms.

"After explanations had been made I restored her to brother Henry as housekeeper, but claimed her in five weeks for my own. Now do you believe that you are a matchmaker?"—Boston Post.

The American Is Vulgar.

"We must all agree that the American has beyond other men an innate respect for women and for helpless things," writes "An American Mother" in the Ladies' Home Journal. "He has usually, too, a wide acquaintance with the world which hinders him from intolerance and vanity. He has also a tact too fine to blurt out unpleasant facts to his companions, as does the Englishman, who, quite unprovoked, hurls disagreeable truths at you with a ferocity and a gusto that is indecent. A week with your dearest English friends is enough to make you in love with lying. The dearer you are to them the more likely are they to talk incessantly of the mole on your nose, or your vulgar kinsfolk. The American has a vivacity almost French: he gives himself easily to the occasion: he is ready to weep and laugh with you, and is sincerely interested in your new bicycle or baby. At the same time he has something of the phlegm of the Asiatic, and seldom frets or grumbles. He sniffs the odors of foul drains, quaffs typhoid germs in his water, sits in overheated steam cars and stands in overcrowded street cars year after year with imperturbable good humor.

"Why, with all these qualities—why is he not a more agreeable fellow? Why, with all the traits that go to make up a courtly gentleman—why is he vulgar? Simply because he is not certain of his own position. He asserts himself every moment lest you may mistake him for an inferior. This uneasy self-assertion is the explanation of all our bad manners. 'I'm as good as you!' is the secret thought with which too many of us meet every fellow-creature."

RUSHING INTO THE CITIES.

Young Men Invite Failure by Essaying Untried Fields.

Some published fragments of the new census statistics are very depressing to the old-fashioned, yet very sensible, people who have been hoping that the movement of villagers and country people to the large cities had been checked.

What is the meaning of the continuous rush to the cities? The old explanation was that farmers' sons and daughters wearied of work that was never finished; they had heard of city demands for labor and of city wages, payable always in cash and at stated dates. They had also heard of city pleasures, some of which were said to cost nothing, while others were very cheap. But young people do not constitute the whole body of people who are crowding into the cities, for mechanics and artisans of all kinds are in the throng, for in the villages and country districts employment is irregular and pay uncertain. The more aspiring of them hope for the larger opportunities and recognition that the country dares not promise; they know, too, that such of their children as incline to study may become fairly, even highly, educated in the city without special cost to their parents. Of the "seamy" side of city life they know nothing, for their acquaintances who "went to town" have not returned to tell of it; few of them could return if they would. The few who go back to the old homesteads are the men who have succeeded, and in any village such a man in effect resembles a gold-laden miner from Cape Nome or the Klondike—his example threatens to depopulate the town.

Nevertheless the rural districts are not going to be depopulated, except when their soil is very poor and their malaria overrich. A countryward movement started in some cities a few years ago and it has been increasing in volume, it may be almost invisible in some localities, for 3,000,000 square miles is an area so great that any city's overflow might be lost in it. The men who are trying scientific farming are all from the cities and they have carried their city ideas with them. As a rule, city brain and city money are suggesting and backing the rural attempts to have good roads, pure water, perfect drainage, high farming, high-grade schools, free libraries and many other ameliorations of old-time conditions. Yet in one respect the city man in the country is a disappointment to all classes of the dissatisfied, for when they talk of going to the city he persistently says, "Don't," and he supports his advice with a dismal array of facts and figures.—Saturday Evening Post.

White House Is Rickety.

"In the plan for building a new house for the President elsewhere than on the present site it has been proposed to utilize the present mansion for offices," writes Col. Theodore A. Bingham, U. S. A., in urging the adoption of Mrs. Harrison's plans for enlarging the house, in the Ladies' Home Journal. "One plea therefor has been that the historic building should be left as it is. This is certainly to be insisted on. But it is said the mansion is too pure a piece of architecture to be marred by additions. This, however, is a specious argument, since the original design contemplated side additions, and if the building in its present state were used as offices it would be wrecked in five or six years. Those who have no experience with public buildings or with this building in particular, have no conception of the wear and tear on a President's office. It surpasses that on any other office in the country. The present Executive Mansion was lightly built, and is already expensive to keep in proper repair. Its floor beams are not strong enough to endure office use. Great difficulty has arisen in the past with the few rooms now used as the President's executive offices, and great watchfulness has to be constantly exercised. Several times the floors have threatened to break through. The stairs have already broken down, one flight being now supported by a chain. Still, to remodel for office use only, the whole interior of our historic Executive Mansion, would be not only a very expensive matter, but would fail to meet the requirements of the case, and also, it is believed, the approval of the country at large."

An Epitaph for Ruskin.

The London Academy has awarded a prize of one guinea to J. R. Anderson, Lairbeck, Keswick, for the best inscription suitable for the proposed medallion of John Ruskin in Westminster Abbey. Mr. Anderson's epitaph is as follows:

He Taught Us
To Hold
In Loving Reverence
Poor Men and Their Work
Great Men and Their Work
God and His Work.

In connection with this competition it is interesting to quote what Ruskin himself said on epitaphs: "Take care that some memorial is kept of men who deserve memory in a distinct statement on the stone or brass of their tombs, either that they were true men or rascals—wise men or fools. How beautiful the variety of sepulchral architecture might be, in any extensive place of burial, if the public would meet the small expense of thus expressing its opinions in a verily instructive manner, and if some of the tombstones accordingly terminated in fools' caps, and others, instead of crosses and cherubs, bore engravings of cats-o'-nine-tails as typical of the probable methods of entertainment in the next world of the persons not, it is to be hoped, reposing below.

Key to the Working-Girl's Success.

"Whatever vocation the girl wage-worker settles upon she may as well accept the fact, first as last, that slipshod performance and inadequate equipment will win no favor, will not even secure a foothold," writes Margaret E. Sangster in the Ladies' Home Journal. "The ranks are everywhere crowded, and the second-rate work must go to the wall. In most fields the supply is well in excess of the demand, and only the capable, the efficient, the competent and the trustworthy may hope to find their niche. As a grain of satisfaction let it be added that those possessed of these desirable qualities, those who are ready for service and are responsible in their work, are sure to be appreciated and will never cease to be wanted."

NEW CENTER OF POPULATION.

Census Officials Place Inscribed Board on a Farm Near Columbus, Ind.

Ten years ago the census bureau located the center of population of the United States eighteen miles east of Columbus, Ind., just over the line in Decatur County, near Westport, 39 degrees 11 minutes and 50 seconds west latitude and 85 degrees 32 minutes and 53 seconds north longitude. Since 1890 the center of population has shifted a little to the north and a little to the west. It is still in the State of Indiana, not far from Columbus, in the southern central part of the State.

The center of population is the center of gravity of the population of the country, each individual being assumed to have the same weight. The method of determining that center is as follows: The population of the country is first distributed by "square degrees," as the area included between consecutive parallels and meridians is designated. A point is then assumed tentatively as the center, and the corrections in latitude and longitude to this tentative position are computed. In 1890 the center was assumed to be at the intersection of the parallel of 39 degrees, with the meridian of 86 degrees west of Greenwich. This would have made the center of population of the United States just two miles due north of Seymour, in Jackson County, Ind. From this assumed base the verifications were made and the true center was located.

The movement of the center has been steadily westward. On the accompanying map its unwavering march toward the west, with occasional dips to the south and the north, is shown. In 1790 it was east of Baltimore twenty miles. In ten years it had moved forty miles westward. The annexation of Louisiana brought it south and west, and in 1820 it was sixteen miles north of Woodstock, Va. In 1840 the pioneers of the West brought it north, and in 1850 it had moved south again. Texas had come into the Union. The growth of the great West had switched it back to the north in 1860, and it was near Chillicothe, Ohio. War reduced the population of the South in the decade between 1860 and 1870, and the center moved north near to Cincinnati. In another decide it had cleared Cincinnati in its westward progress, and in 1870 it had settled in central southern Indiana. The past ten years has carried the center westward about twenty miles and northward about seven miles.

Upon information given out by Government Census Director Merriam, a party at Columbus by mathematical calculations located the center of population in a wheat field on the farm of Frank Wright, nine miles north of the city and one and a half miles north of Taylorsville, in the southwest corner of the northeast quarter, section 15, town 10, range 5 east. An inscribed board marks the spot.

LIE TO THE CENSUS TAKER.

Women and Boys Misrepresent Their Ages from Different Motives.

Feminine vanity, as it is related to the desire to be esteemed young, and boyish ambition to attain the manly and voting age of 21 years, are plainly shown in census figures. This is no new revelation in the taking of the twelfth census, but it is an old tendency which has been shown by the figures of the past censuses of the United States, as well as of other countries. It has again been exemplified in the figures relating to the census of Cuba. A study of the statistics of Cuba has shown an excessive number of females between the ages of 15 and 19 years, inclusive, when compared with the number of males of that age. It looked, in fact, as if there were a good many thousand girls of that age in Cuba who would never find mates in life and who would end their days in single blessedness simply because there were so many of them compared to the youths who were growing up with them. That is what the figures would appear to indicate to the layman, but to the census expert they mean something else. They simply mean that girls below the age of 15 wish to represent themselves as older than they are, while those who have passed their teens cling to the age of youth to the extent of even deceiving the census enumerators. Young ladies who are sensitive on the subject of their ages fear that the enumerator, who generally lives in their neighborhood and frequently knows them, will "blab" their ages to all the marriageable young men and perhaps interfere with some attachment that bids fair to ripen into mellow love. The fact is, the enumerator, as a rule, is perfectly callous to the significance of the census figures and forgets them as soon as he records them. In Cuba 19 is equivalent to 25 years in the age of a young lady living in the northern portion of the United States.

The last census showed that in the United States there was an excess of girls between 15 and 19 years, but this age, as the favorite of young ladies, is the general average of north and south. If the statistics could be compiled separately it is thought by census experts that the Northern States would show the favorite age to be two to three years older, while in the south it would probably be a year or so younger.

The census statistics of England show an excess of women between 20 and 24 years of age, which indicates the favorite age of ladies in that country. The degree of error which is introduced into census figures by this systematic fibbing of young ladies about their ages is readily and unmistakably detected.

In the case of the young men the number of those who are shown by the statistics of the United States to be 21 is far in excess of what it could be, according to the number of those who are under and above that age. This is simply the result of ambitious youth to reach the voting age. In Cuba, where expectation of voting has not been nourished by the boy all his life and induced a preference of 21 as a desirable age, the last census showed no excess of men of that age.

STORY OF A SMOOTH DIME.

Like the Proverbial Cat, It Never Failed to Come Back.

That there is a whole lot of truth in that old saying about a bad penny always turning up, a young physician friend of the Saunterer firmly believes. The illustration of it he banks on was furnished by a silver dime.

"I got it in change somewhere," he said, in telling of the incident. "It was worn almost so smooth upon both sides as to closely resemble a piece of tin. I noticed it particularly because of a peculiar mark upon the edge. As soon as I discovered the unwelcome coin in my pocket I determined to get rid of it. Dropping into a cigar store up in my neighborhood, I bought a cigar and handed over the polished dime. The cigar man looked at it suspiciously, but as I am a good customer of his he took it and said nothing.

About two hours later as I was about to take a car down town after lunch I concluded to buy a paper. My car was coming and I rushed over to a news stand on the corner. Grabbing up the paper I wanted, I threw down a quarter—the only small change I had. The newsdealer hurriedly gave me my change and I got back to the car track just in time to swing myself on the car.

"When the conductor reached me I pulled out the change, and lo, there was my worn dime. I knew it by the peculiar mark on the edge. Handing the conductor another, I shoved the coin back into my pocket and rode on. On the corner near my office is an Italian, at whose fruit stand I spend a good bit of money each day.

"'Gi'me 10 cents' worth of peaches,' I exclaimed, rushing up to him after alighting from the car. 'I'm in a hurry.'

"He wrapped up the peaches, and, shoving the smooth dime into his hand, I grabbed the bag and ran. 'There, the confounded thing is gone at last,' I thought. 'I'll stay away from that stand for a day or two or until he gets a chance to work the dime off on somebody.'

"I reckoned without my host. Along about 4 o'clock in the afternoon I sent my office boy out for some change to give a customer who wanted to pay a bill. Whether or not you believe it, the very first coin I caught sight of in the several he brought me was that confounded 10-cent piece.

"'Where did you get this change?' I asked.

"'At the saloon around the corner,' the boy replied. 'Why?'

"I was too much worked up to answer. As I afterward discovered, the saloon-keeper had sent to the Italian for change and the latter had worked off the dime on him. In turn, the saloon man had gotten rid of it by sending it to me. Where is the dime now? In my collection of curios, properly labeled, and I wouldn't part with it for ten times its value."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

GOOD CHEWING-GUM TOWNS.

Salesman Says They Are Mostly in the West and Northwest.

J. J. Amend, traveling representative of one of the largest chewing-gum manufacturing companies in the United States, expressed surprise, in speaking to a New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter, that the establishment of a chewing-gum factory at that point is talked of.

"It is true that much of the gum we use comes by way of New Orleans, in its raw state, from the tropics," he said, "but I can see no other reason for putting up a factory here. I don't believe sugar is any cheaper here than it is in the North, and glucose is no cheaper, if as cheap. Then this is a very poor market, locally, for chewing gum."

"Why is that?"

"I don't know the reason, but it is a fact, nevertheless. Why, I know lots of towns in other parts of the country that use ten times as much chewing gum—yes, fifty times as much—as New Orleans, and they are not nearly as big as this city, either."

"Where's the best market for chewing gum in the United States?"

"All west and north of St. Louis. Lots of gum is sold throughout Kansas, Nebraska, the Dakotas, and Minnesota. Kansas City is a great town for it."

"How about Chicago?"

"Oh, Chicago is one of the greatest chewing-gum cities in the country. Chicago has gone ahead of New York in this respect. New York used to be a great town for it, and one couldn't go anywhere in the city without seeing girls working their jaws as if their lives depended on it. But the caricaturists and the paragraphists made such fun of the habit that a good many of the girls stopped chewing, and the sales fell off very heavily. Boston was a pretty good gum town at one time, but never so good as our Western cities.

"As a rule, the newer the city the better the chewing-gum trade in it. In an old city, like New Orleans, the people don't seem to take to the habit at all. The French element here hurts us, for the French are not gum chewers. The Germans don't chew gum, either. In some of the places where there are many Germans, as in some of the cities of the Northwest, we sell but little chewing gum. The young people like it, but the old people won't let them use it. I have seen many a boy spanked by his German mother for using chewing gum."

The American Parlor.

"We have a prevalent folly of setting aside a room in our houses which we very rarely use," writes Edward Bok, protesting, in the Ladies' Home Journal, against the bad taste exercised in furnishing our homes. "If means are at our command we crowd such a room full of puny gilt chairs, upon which no one dares to sit; on the walls we hang impossible paintings, with equally impossible, massive gold frames; an 'elegant' sofa upholstered in silk or satin, with a gilded frame, is introduced; a gold clock which never runs is put on a mantel of solid onyx; a 'Chippendale' cabinet is added—which always harmonizes so superbly with a Louis XV. sofa or chair—and we have what we call a 'drawing-room.' If we are of moderate means, then we make the 'drawing-room' as closely resemble one in some wealthy home we know of as possible, only with limited means we must purchase cheaper articles. Then, we have as good an example of the showroom of a cheap furniture store as it is possible to obtain. If we are poor, then we set around stiffly four or five black haircloth chairs; we put a marble-top table with a plush-album on it in the center; a haircloth sofa which no can possibly stick on; a Franklin stove that is never lighted; we hang a wreath of wax flowers in a glass case on the walls; a carpet riotous with the most gorgeous roses is put on the floor, and then, after we have carefully pulled down every shade in the room, so as to exclude God's pure sunshine and get a nice, musty and cemeterial smell in the room, we have what we call, in America, a parlor. And in either case we have a 'best room,' so best that we never use it, and people shown into it are always glad to get out of it. But we have a 'drawing-room,' or a 'parlor,' and, in the minds of some, without such a room no house is complete."

King Oscar Was His Host.

A story illustrating the simple bonhomie of the King of Sweden and Norway is told by M. Gaston Bonnier, the botanist. M. Bonnier was botanizing near Stockholm, when he met a stranger similarly occupied. The two botanists fraternized, and M. Bonnier suggested that they should lunch together at an inn.

"No; come home and lunch with me instead," said the stranger; and he led the way to the palace and opened the gate.

M. Bonnier was naturally astonished, but his new acquaintance was most apologetic.

"I'm sorry," he said, "but I happen to be the king of this country, and this is the only place I've got to entertain anybody in." So they went in and lunched, and talked botany together all the afternoon.

Zangwill's Estimate of Fame.

Israel Zangwill, the Jewish novelist, wrote his first book when he was a student at London University. The effort occupied four evenings—he always works in spurts—and he and a friend paid £10 to have the tale published in pamphlet form. It sold well at a penny a copy! One little shop in Whitechapel alone sold 600 copies, and it even got on to Smith's bookstalls. Zangwill's advice to would-be authors shows that he has not made a name without suffering. He says: "If you are blessed with talent, great industry and conceit, it is possible, by dint of slaving day and night for years during the flower of your youth, to attain to fame infinitely less widespread than a prize fighter's."

Insincerity.

"Our civilization demands a greater or less degree of mendacity," remarked the abstruse person. "We are constantly encountering some empty phrase, some conventional remark which is absolutely devoid of sincerity."

"That's right," answered the book agent. "That's perfectly true. I am reminded of it every time I walk up to a front step where there is a door mat with the word 'Welcome' on it."—Washington Star.

Florida Tobacco.

Florida, according to local papers, is becoming one of the great tobacco-producing States, and the product has been pronounced in some respects equal to that of Cuba. Sumatra wrapper tobacco raised in Florida recently took the prize at the Paris exposition over the world.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY...NOVEMBER 29, 1900

HON. J. M. ROBINSON WEDS.

Our Popular Member of Congress Marries a Fair Daughter of Fort Wayne.

The Fort Wayne Sentinel of Saturday says:

When Hon. James M. Robinson next leaves for Washington to resume his seat as the Twelfth district representative in the lower house of congress he will be accompanied by a Fort Wayne bride.

The marriage of Mr. Robinson and Miss Lillie M. Deihl will be solemnized next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Capt. and Mrs. Hugh M. Deihl, 49 Harmer street. Only a very few close friends will be present and the ceremony will be a quiet and simple home wedding. Rev. L. L. Henson, D. D., of the First Baptist church, will be the officiating clergyman.

Immediately after the nuptial knot has been tied Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, together with Mr. Robinson's mother, will leave over the Pennsylvania railroad for Washington, where they will take apartments at the Riggs house. Mr. Robinson's mother will also remain in Washington during the winter.

OBITUARY.

Senna Hughes, was born in Waterloo, Ind., Dec. 8, 1877, died at Girard, Pa., Nov. 21, 1900, aged 22 years, 11 months and 13 days.

He had always lived in Waterloo, and is the son of Dr. Willard and Catherine Hughes. He was a quiet young man, of a studious nature and quite ruminative. In January of 1895, he joined the U. B. church under the pastorate of Rev. S. H. Yager, and while still possessing faith, he allowed his membership to cease, stating that he was unable to contribute to the support of the church as he thought one ought, to maintain a membership. For several of the recent years he was the faithful carrier of the mail in Waterloo. Early in the fall he went east in quest of more lucrative employment, and from all accounts was prospering. However, it seems that he had started back to his old home, and at Girard, Penn., was run down by a train on the Lake Shore railroad, and so seriously injured that he only survived a few hours. His mangled body was cared for by strangers, to whom he was able to converse and direct as to where his friends could be found.

Funeral services were largely attended at the U. B. church, conducted by Rev. W. O. Butler, and the remains were laid in the Waterloo cemetery on Sabbath afternoon.

Surprised by Rebekahs.

Mrs. Geo. Everett is an active and popular Rebekah, and while here visiting, the ladies put up a little surprise on her. It was arranged to meet at Mrs. Mary Boyer's, and to make this easy, Mrs. Joseph Stafford invited her to spend yesterday at the Stafford home on the Avenue. In the evening they sauntered up town together, and Mrs. Everett was expecting to go on up to stop with her sister, Mrs. Will Buss. But at Mrs. Boyer's she was persuaded by Mrs. Stafford to stop "in just a minute." Finally she consented, and to her surprise found the house full of Rebekahs. Then followed a general good time, ending with light refreshments that were enjoyed by all. The novel feature of the evening was the gift of a set of silver knives and fork and spoon, to Master Morris Everett, the baby. Mrs. Everett has plenty of warm friends in Auburn.

New Business.

We have been wondering and guessing as to what new business would occupy the elegant room being prepared by Judge Roby in McClellan Block. It is the Packard Piano Co. of Fort Wayne. They will have at least a part of their goods in there tomorrow, and when all are in place and arranged will have the finest display of pianos and organs ever seen in this part of the state. The establishment will be in direct charge of the Packard Co., and sales will be made direct from the factory to the buyer. The excellence of their instruments is already known to our people and we predict for the new business a successful career. They invite all our people to call and see them, and see the fine instruments and hear choice music.

Don't be imposed upon. Refuse the dealer's substitute; it is not as good as Dr. Bull's. Salvation Oil cures Rheumatism, Aches and Pains. 15 & 25 cts.

The U. S. Grand Jury.

This body has adjourned after bringing indictments in forty-one cases. One of the most important was that of Jesse Weik of Greencastle for using a forged pass on railroads. He had been a postal inspector under President Harrison, and it now appears that he had each year forged a new pass, signing the name of the postmaster-general, who happened to be in office. It will likely go hard with him.

True bills were found against the following: John A. Boatman, postmaster of Catlin, shortage in accounts; Gilbert Dowden of Fort Wayne, sending obscene matter through the mails; William Hampton, Indianapolis, stealing letters from mail boxes at Lafayette; James M. Rogers and Clay Rogers, Baggstown, obstructing the delivery of the mails; Arthur Trenary, Fort Wayne, stealing from the mails; William Miller, Emanuel Collins, Haggerman Munts and Joseph Gentry of Indianapolis, election frauds; Charles E. Clifford of Frankfort, impersonating a United States secret-service officer; John W. Hunter, St. Joseph and Carey N. Young of South Bend, for counterfeiting gold coin; Robert C. McKee and Howard McKee, Lafayette, for counterfeiting silver coin; Geo. H. Swaggerby, Evansville, for violating the internal revenue laws.

The following were indicted for counterfeiting:

Henry L. Bachner, Princeton, Henry L. Jarell, Indianapolis, Henry Lewin, Bluffton, William H. McKinney, Greenfield, Sherman Ripple, Bluffton, Walter Rowden, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Harry Mitchel of Paducah, Ky. Edward Shagg, New Albany.

OBITUARY.

Leander Franklin Stamets, was born in Ashland Co., Ohio, July 3, 1857, died in Waterloo, Ind., Nov. 15, 1900, aged 43 years, 4 months and 12 days.

In early childhood he was brought to DeKalb Co. Ind., by his parents, who settled on a farm south of Auburn, subsequently removing to a farm home northwest of Waterloo, where he grew to manhood, having always resided in this county. Four brothers and one sister are still living. His parents, two sisters and three brothers having departed this life before him.

He was married to Miss Jennie Campbell Dec. 25, 1882. One child, Glenn Cornelia, came to bless this union, who with the mother mourn the absence of a kind husband and loving father.

His disease, that of diabetes, though of a year or two duration was so insidious as to have made deeper inroads than was suspected, and his death came in the nature of a shock, though its fatal character was well understood by his faithful companion.

Cottage services were under the auspices of the Ancient Order of United Workman at the residence in Waterloo, Revs. W. O. Butler and S. H. Yager officiating.

CARD OF THANKS.

We, Mrs. Lee F. Stamets and Glenn Stamets, take this method of expressing our thanks and appreciation for the kindly assistance and sympathy of neighbors and friends during the sickness and burial of our loved one.

W. A. Davison Hurt.

Will Davison, who has now a jewelry store at Garrett, came near having a serious accident yesterday morning. He was walking down the Wabash track on his way to the Junction, when a freight train passed him and as it was going slow he thought he would jump on and ride to the Junction. A brakeman, his brother, we believe, noticed a hat rolling out in sight and then it was found Will was rolled out to one side, and on being picked up, that his head was badly cut. He was taken to the Junction and from there went to Garrett where the doctor sewed up the gash in his head, taking five stitches. He was soon all right and came home last evening. It is supposed his foot slipped in trying to get on.

A Good Time.

Miss Ella Gregg entertained a number of young ladies at a spinster party last evening in honor of Miss Sisterhen of Ligonier. Each young lady was requested to bring a picture of some rejected suitor, and the time was passed in telling their reasons for refusing their offers. The costumes were unique and old fashioned and the dining room was tastefully and originally decorated with heartshaped cards bearing appropriate quotations. The menu was a conundrum luncheon which afforded much amusement to those present. The party departed at a late hour feeling they could well afford to remain spinsters while such royal enentertaing was tendered.

It Saved a Leg.

P. A. Danforth of Lagrange, Ga., suffered intensely for six month with a frightful running sore on his leg, but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in ten days. For ulcers, wounds, burns, boils, pain or piles it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25c, Sold by H. B. McCord, the druggist

STATE VOTE.

Indiana's Official Count is Now Complete.

The Election Marshals for taking up the federal vote met at Indianapolis Monday and from noon till midnight, the corrected, official vote was reported and tabulated. We give it for the benefit of our readers.

TOTAL VOTE.

VOTE ON ELECTOR.

The following is the vote on first electoral all the tickets. It will be remembered, that the first elector always has a higher vote than any other elector. This is owing to carelessness or ignorance on the part of the voter. Instead of marking the emblem for a straight vote, he marks the first elector for a straight vote. Then no elector is counted but the man marked.

Judge Zollars, the first democratic elector gets 4,364 more votes than the next elector.

Hanna, the first republican elector gets 3,226 votes more than the elector next to him. This shows the number of democrats and of republicans who marked the first elector thinking that made a straight ticket.

Phoeba Dermott.

Phœba Dermott nee Coburn, was born in Warren, Trumbull county, O., August 27, 1825, died at her home in Concord township, DeKalb county, Indiana, Nov. 22, 1900, aged 75 years, 2 months and 25 days. She was the oldest child of Asher and Hannah Coburn. He parents moved to DeKalb county when she was ten years of age, thus being among the first pioneers. She united with the Christian church at Coburn Corners when sixteen years of age, having the longest continued membership of any member of the congregation.

She was married to Jacob Dermott Oct. 23, 1845. To this union five children were born, four sons and one daughter, one son dying in infancy. She leaves three sons and one daughter nine grandchildren and a host of friends and neighbors to mourn her loss. Her father, mother, sister and brother all preceded her. Her husband died January 31, 1900. One of her last requests was that she might soon join him and be at rest. She was a devoted wife and mother, a kind and true neighbor. Funeral services were at the residence, Rev. L. W. Fairfield of Angola officiating. Interment at Coburn cemetery.

Pleasant Reunion.

There was a pleasant family gathering Sunday, Nov. 26, at the home of Geo. King, northwest of town. The reunion was in honor of Mrs. King's uncle, W. Smith, of Saginaw, Mich., who was visiting them. There was a social time, and a splendid dinner to which all the fortunate guests did ample justice. Among those who enjoyed this meeting were, Mrs. King's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Tess of Auburn, and her brother, H. L. Tess, wife and two children of Butler, Dr. Z. H Stamets and wife of Auburn and Henry Shade and wife of Keyser township.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. convened at the home of Mrs. Swineford last Saturday, and notwithstanding the inclement weather a goodly number of ladies were present.

A report of the convention at South Bend was given by Mrs. Ehlers and Mrs Barns, also some notes sent by Mrs. Maude Robbins.

The lesson, "Duties toward Human Life," was well conducted by Mrs. Mary F. Rose, and seemingly enjoyed by all present. A discussion followed, led by Miss Hague. Question: "Was Brutus, in Julius Caesar, honorable in his Motives?" Most of the members took part in the discussion, which made it very interesting.

Mrs. Guild gave an excellent paper entitled, "Are Modern Times Beneficial to Home Life?" in which she expressed her opinion that they are not.

Current News was given by Mrs. Swineford. The members of the club were pleased to have with them Mrs. Davenport, who has so long been unable to be present at the club sessions. She very kindly invited the club to meet with her next Saturday, which invitation was gladly accepted.

Was a Good Ratter.

About a year ago a weasel came up from the creek and took up quarters in Bachtel's mill. It seemed determined to stay. It got into the wood at the engine room and as no one molested it, it became quite tame. It was soon noticed that the rats were being thinned out, and before long all disappeared, and have been scarce ever since. The weasel is supposed to have fallen into the cistern and drowned.

One Taken; One Left.

'Squire Koons had his first case Saturday, the case against the two men accused of stealing the overcoats at the Junction. Mr. Harper was prosecutor and C. E. Baxter defended them. The case lasted about all day and gave the rival attorneys a good chance to show their mettle. But his honor preserved the dignity of the court very well. The result was that one of the men was held to the grand jury and the other was discharged.

ST. JOE.

August Kinsey returned from Battle Creek last Saturday.

M. F. Body and wife had some relatives from Garrett as visitors Saturday.

Herman Grubb, Mr. Myers and Grady Woodcox were at Hamilton Lake the latter part of the week. We look for some big stories of duck shooting when they return.

Worth Coats of near Butler was in this city Saturday marketing twenty-five head of hogs. Worth knows where to get the best prices going and always comes to St. Joe.

Freeman Abel has shipped his household goods back to this city and we suppose he and his family will return soon. There's no place like home.

Sol Barney and Harry Meek were at Indianapolis the fore part of last week attending I. O. O. F. grand lodge. They returned Thursday morning.

There are rumors of some great changes that are to be made in the business of St. Joe in the next few months. Some of these rumors are of such a character as to be called mushroom changes or in our opinion windy.

The handle factory which started out under such favorable conditions and was and is a boom for our little town, seems to be under a cloud but we hope that the clouds will disappear and that the factory may yet be a paying institution for its proprietor, Mr. Heatherington.

The little scolding the school board received through the News two weeks ago seems to have bore fruit as we see the walks to the school house are repaired and the pupils can get to school without fear of broken limbs. It's always that way with boys—a little scolding does them good.

The story is being told that one of our St. Joe boozers got on a spree Friday at Hicksville and on his way home stopped in the depot at this place and there got into an altercation with one of the boys and as usual pulled his gun and had it pointed at his victim's breast. Some of these days that gun will go off, and then what?

George Hamm and son went to Garrett Monday and while there will move Mr. Hamm's son-in-law, Mr. Reed, into the new home he has just completed.

The remains of the late Mrs. Jacob Dermott were laid to rest beside her husband in the Coburntown cemetery on Sunday, funeral from her late residence.

Mrs. James Hart was laid to rest in the Spencerville cemetery, funeral from the Methodist church at Spencerville.

A meeting was held at the opera house Thursday evening. The cards sent out as invitations said the meeting was to be for mutual benefit. What that is, we have not been able to learn. Future meetings will be held and it is to be hoped that something may be done to arouse the town and vicinity to pull together for the common good. We fear it will be a hard matter to get all to pull together for the common good of a favored few.

G. H. YESBERA,

AUBURN'S CLOTHIER.

Eat what You Like.

Starving is Not the Way to Cure Dyspepsia, Says Dr. Stone.

Dr. Stone's argument is this: The stomach supplies material for the nourishment and repair of the body. It must furnish material for its own repair, as well as for the repair of the rest of the body. Therefore plenty of good food is necessary. Overeating is of course harmful, but the proper supply of substantial food is always recommended to those taking Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure. Dr. Stone is in a position to know what he is about, for he has cured an immense number of dyspeptics with this unique double remedy,—a stomach cure and a liver cure.

People who for years have had to be extremely careful as to diet are often amazed at the early results from Stone's Dyspepsia Cure. They find that forbidden articles of food become easily digestable. This indicates the thorough manner in which this remedy cures. It is guaranteed to cure you. No matter what form of stomach or liver trouble you have, try Stone's Dyspepsia Cure. If not benefited by the time the first package is used, your druggist will refund your money. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord

IT IS NOW TIME TO MAKE YOUR

FALL PURCHASES

Never before in the history of this house have we been so well prepared to supply your needs. No part of our immense stock has been slighted in the least. No matter what you may want, in you may confidently expect to find it here and at your own price. Our reputation for handling strictly high grade merchandise shall be fully sustained in this season's stock.

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING, LADIES' WRAPS OR CARPETS,

UNDERWEAR.

We wish to call special attention to our Underwear Stock. We have spared nothing to make our showing in this line perfection itself. For the wee little ones we show either the wrapper or closed vest in wool or cotton from the light to the heaviest weight, and at prices which are satisfactory to you. For children we have either two piece or union suits in the different weights and marked to sell for less than they are worth.

Of Ladies' Underwear we have extra heavy fleeced lined cotton for 25c, a better grade at 30c and a very heavy fine one at 50c. We show an extra nice gray wool at 75c, and a very heavy soft and fine fawn wool at $1.00. Union Suits in all qualities ranging from 50c to $2.50 per garment. We have black tights all-wool and exceptionally fine quality at $1.00 and $1.50. We have an exceedingly heavy stock of Men's and Youths', underwear, wool or cotton, union or two piece suits, fleece lined or flat wear, from the cheapest to the very finest and every garment absolutely the best to be had for the money. We have filled one window with a full case of heavy fleece lined which were made to sell at $1.50 per suit. The manufacturer needed the money, we thought we could use the underwear at his reduced price, consequence we mark them $1.15 a suit and you get the benefit.

We are selling a number of W. B. and Royal Worcester straight front Corsets. Ask to see them—they are fine.

We are showing our second lot of Ladies' Dressing Sacques. You wont take the trouble to make one when you see these.

WE WISH TO SEE YOU OFTEN.

CUBAN RATS

Are Three Feet Long, and Are Good to to Eat.

Washington Special to New York World: The expedition sent to Cuba by the Smithsonian institution to collect strange animals and plants has returned loaded down with specimens and with tales of adventure more strange than the freaks they brought with them.

Rats of an edible species—some three feet long, including the tail, and weighing eighteen pounds—were captured, but none were brought back to this country alive. All were eaten by the hungry adventurers. These rats—and the snakes on the island, none of which are venomous—have nearly all been eaten by the famished Cubans and are very scarce. Ferocious giant lizards (iguanas) were captured and were brought back alive. These lizards are also eaten by Cubans, but the scientists "passed them up." Cuba has more than thirty species of bats, and many, including white bats, were captured and will be stuffed and added to the Smithsonian collection. In capturing the white bats, in a cave 100 feet underground, where thousands were hiding, several of the party were bitten. Numerous snakes, scorpions, tarantulas, giant spiders and huge dragon flies were taken. The collection is also enriched by many native birds, some with brilliant plumage, and numerous rare plants.

—Torturing skin eruptions, burns and sores are soothed and healed at once and promptly healed at once by applying DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, the best known cure for piles. Beware of worthless counterfeit. H. B. McCord.

Monday's Daily.

—Fresh all the time are the homemade candies at Had's.

—Joseph Link went to Garrett this forenoon to collect delinquent taxes.

—Mrs. Ralph Cobb is visiting in the country the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Worth Conte.

—Hon. Nick Ensley was here over Sunday. That means business or politics, we don't know which.

—St. Joe News:—Miss Kittie Bishop of Auburn has been visiting relatives here during the past week.

—Mrs. Mike Lumm came up from Columbia City today, called by the death of Mrs. Magdalena Lumm.

—Goshen Democrat, Nov. 24:—Auditor Seller of DeKalb county, was here today, the guest of Auditor Berkey.

—No other pills can equal DeWitt's Little Early Risers for promptness, certainty and efficiency.—H. B. McCord.

—J. R. Shilling the new trustee of Concord will have Thursday for his office day. This should be kept in mind.

—Mrs. Dr. Spooner came up from Peru yesterday for a visit with her father, Dr. Ford, and other relatives and friends.

—Willis Brown expects to leave Tuesday for his home in Waterloo, Iowa, so as to spend Thanksgiving with his family.

—TO TRADE OR SELL:—A small farm with house and barn. Will trade for town property. Address P. O. Box 634, Auburn.

—Word comes from Dr. Nusbaum that Ben Stiefel formerly of Butler and well known here, is proprietor of a hotel in Colorado Springs.

—A new sidewalk has been put down along the south side of the vacant lot owned by Nick Ensley just west of the Wabash station, across north.

If fortune disregard thy claim
Don't hang thy head in fear and shame
But marry the girl you love best
Rocky Mountain Tea will do the rest.

—Mr. Metcalf was here Saturday and corrected the notice of their union Thanksgiving at Norris Chapel. It is Thursday evening' the 29th. This is correct.

—Miss Minnie Jackman of Smithfield township, who has been here several days visiting in the family of her uncle R. C. Baxter, returned to her home today.

—St. Joe News:—Hadsell is thinking some of wearing a helmet to protect his nose, as some one tried to relieve him of that part of his face with a shot gun, last week.

—Unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice, week ending November 24. Martha Hallet, Elizabeth Penland, O. S. DeLand and W. A. Wells. Claimants will please call for letters in advertised list.—G. H. Forkner, Postmaster.

—Citizens of Fort Wayne have signed a petition to be presented to the board of commissioners at the December meeting asking that a special election may be ordered so the people may vote a subsidy of $100,000 to the proposed railroad from that city to Butler.

—Invitations have been received here for the wedding of Miss Etta Prickett of Auburn and Mr. Frederick Zimmerman of Cripple Creek, Col., to take place at the home of L. O. Byrer, Pappoose Gulch, at high noon, Nov. 28. Miss Prickott is a highly esteemed and very popular young lady of Auburn, and has the best wishes of her many friends.

—Mrs. Magdalena Lumm died Sunday, Nov. 25, 1900 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Funk, in Auburn The funeral will be at the residence on Wednesday at 1:30 p. m., and at the German Methodist church at 2 p. m. Services will be by Rev. Magdanz of the German Methodist church, and Rev. Hirsch of the German Reformed church.

—Metea, a village nine miles from Logansport, is the only town in the United States which has succesfully combatted the effects of rural delivery on country postoffices. The route was recently established and embraced Metea. Many influential farmers get mail at Metea, and protested so strongly against the service that the route was changed and now does not go within a mile of the town.

—Ed. Kelham, jr., the retiring trustee of Keyser township was here Saturday and went onto our 1902 COURIER list. We have had considerable dealings with Mr. Kelham and have found him a careful business man in every sense of the word. And the people of Keyser township found him an excellent trustee, his work there has been carefully done and he steps out into private life with a clean record.

—There is a move on foot to change postmasters here. Rumor has it that Maj. Kuhlman has his eye in that direction We had supposed there would be no change as the presidency goes on for four years more. But it seems there is one kind of sauce for presidents and another kind for postmasters. People would have expected a change had Bryan been elected, but this turn will surprise many. But it is no business of ours.

—We failed to get all the 100th Ind. boys in our item the other day. Those who attended from Auburn and vicinity were, John and Cyrus Olinger and their wives, Joseph Prosser and wife. Judge Hartman was already there holding court, W. H. Fair and wife came up from Butler township. Col. Headington and Col Johnson were both there and talked to the old comrades and all had a splendid time. John Haines and wife of Auburn were also of the number, he being a member of the regiment.

—Do not get scared if your heart troubles you. Most likely you have indigestion. Kodo Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat and gives the worn out stomach perfect rest. It is the only preparation known that completely digests all classes of foods; that is why it cures the worst cases of indigestion and stomach trouble after everything else has failed. It may be taken in all conditions and cannot help but do you good. H. B. McCord.

Attention Maccabees.

Notice is hereby given that Dec. 5, 1900, there will be an election of officers of Auburn Tent No. 51. Also one trustee for three years.—R. A. WILSON, Commander, GEO. H. SNYDER, Record Keeper.

The Spinning Wheel in Ireland.

The spinning wheel and the flax wheel are still found in the Irish cottages, where many a girl has her wedding dowry of linen and homespun made at home. Athough it is more the task of the older women, there are still girls who do their spinning stint and lay by a certain amount for their bedding outfit. A pleasant sight it is to see the elderly women outside their cottage doors, spinning the flax or the wool. As long as the weather is warm, the sturdy Irish woman, old or young, scorns a roof except to sleep under; the free air and sunshine are her choice, and the sweet sky is the fairest roof. There is still an excellent market in Dublin and London for homespun and woven goods, and many ladies of the nobility have of late done much to restore the industries of Ireland to their former place.

Molten Wood in France.

Molten wood is a new invention by Mr. de Gall, inspector of forests at Lemur, France. By means of dry distillation and high pressure the escape of developing gases is prevented, thereby reducing the wood to a molten condition. After cooling off the mass assumes the character of coal, yet without showing a trace of the organic structure of that mineral. This new body is hard, but can be shaped and polished at will; is impervious to water and acids, and is a perfect electrical non-conductor. Great results are expected from this new discovery.—United States Consular Reports.

Venezuela Balking.

The decision of Venezuela not to be represented in the Pan-American exhibition at Buffalo next year is to be regretted. Venezuela might, if she would, make a highly creditable and interesting display, and for her to do so would be no more than an agreeable sequel to the great service which the United States rendered to her only the other year. Nevertheless, without her participation, the exhibition will doubtless be a great success.—Chicago Journal.

Here's a Worried Citizen.

This is an age of hustle, bustle and sweat. A man hustles from early dawn until the katydids sing in the twilight for three meals a day and a place in which to lie awake at night and worry about it. If he doesn't overwork he is called lazy, and if he does overwork he goes crazy. He toils and saves through the days of his youth so that when he grows old he can wear a silk hat and sit on the knee of luxury, but when his hair turns to snow and his whiskers grow thin and gray in life's late afternoon, he finds he has been victimized and grievously bunkoed by his own calculations, and that rheumatism and poor relations have shattered all his dreams and punctured his long hopes.—Dallas City (Ill.) POLITICS OF THE DAY

FUTURE OF THE DEMOCRACY.

Marked Change in Character of Party Policy Is Probable.

The recent defeat sustained by the Democratic party is calling forth from prominent Democrats expressions of opinion as to the expediency of making a marked change in the general character of the party policy. The talk now heard of the adoption of a policy upon which a majority of the present party and the old-time Democrats can get together is likely to form an important feature of subsequent developments in America party history.

It will be observed that the leading members of the Democracy as it was eight years ago declare themselves strongly in favor of some such plan. Mr. Cleveland hopes that steps will be taken toward "the regeneration of the Democratic party." Mr. Olney in his public letter early in the campaign indicated that he would be in favor of a similar revision of the party policies. Mr. Whitney, Mr. Dickinson and many other Cleveland Democrats hold substantially the same view. From Mr. Bryan himself, however, and from some of his close followers comes the declaration that the party must stick to its present courses, not even abandoning the doctrine of silver coinage.

Unquestionably the near future is likely to bring about an interesting crisis in the affairs of the Democratic party. The fact that the party has been twice defeated by heavy majorities cannot fail to have weight for merely political considerations and without regard to the intrinsic merit of the issues involved. But "reorganization," it must be remembered, is in fact a practical matter—an affair to be worked out by the mechanism of party organization itself. The reorganization, if it is to come, must begin in the revolution of Democratic sentiment, which will have a chance to express itself at the Congressional elections two years hence and in the State conventions.—Chicago Record.

What They Voted For.

When the people voted for the reelection of Mr. McKinley they also voted for the following propositions: The passage this winter of a ship subsidy bill whereby John D. Rockefeller and his confederates are to receive a free gift of $180,000,000 of the people's money. The protection of all existing trusts for four years and the establishment of many new ones. Criminal aggression in the Philippines, whereby 8,000,000 people are to be conquered and made subjects instead of citizens. The abrogation of the Declaration of Independence. The protection of slavery and polygamy in our island possessions. Government by injunction, which does away with the rights of trial by jury and makes the laboring men helpless in the hands of their employers. The degradation of silver and the retirement of the greenbacks. A government by Wall street instead of a government by the people. The placing of our dependent provinces in the hands of corrupt carpet-baggers and opening a thousand places for such political scoundrels as Rathbone and Neeley.

The laboring men may not have realized that they would get all these things when they voted for a full dinner pail, but they will get them all and the prospect is that in addition they will be cheated out of the full dinner pail before many months roll over their heads.—Nonconformist.

Useless Diplomatic Attaches.

We assume, as a matter of course, that the United States government has had nothing to do with the alleged theft from the French war office of the plans and specifications of the new French field gun. It occurs to us, however, that in view of the current scandal, of which the United States is evidently the innocent victim, it would be wise to finally withdraw from our foreign diplomatic establishments all military, naval and irregular attaches. There is no earthly excuse for the arrangement upon any hypothesis of good faith and friendly dealing. All the information of which we can honorably avail ourselves will come to us without the aid of these attaches. Anything beyond that must be the fruit of disreputable and clandestine operations, of which we should be ashamed.—Washington Post.

Subservient to the Trusts.

Mr. McKinley's first administration was devoted to faithful service in behalf of the trusts at the expense of the American people. Under no other President had there been witnessed so complete a sacrifice of the rights of the many to the privileges of the few. The American government was transformed into a caste government—the very evil most dreaded by its founders, and against which they most strenuously warned those who should come after them. The result has been a tremendous increase of trust formations and a trust power so great that the combines were enabled to re-elect to the presidency the man who had so signally represented their interests in the government.—St. Louis Republic.

The Hanna Boom Launched.

The Republican party will now take notice that the M. A. Hanna presidential boom has been formally launched and must be taken into serious account. As for his own disclaimer of any idea of taking the nomination, it must be remembered that "no man ever refused the presidency of the United States" and that although there have been instances where nominees protested and declared they could not accept the nomination, not one of them but promptly yielded under pressure.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Senator Vest on the Outlook.

Senator Vest sees nothing to cause despair in the recent defeat of the Democratic party. He places as the prime cause of defeat the disposition of the American people, manifested in quite a number of instances in the past history of the country, to sustain an administration that is engaged in a war, regardless of the ethical merits of the controversy. Thousands of patriotic citizens, who were really opposed to McKinley's foreign policy, Senator Vest thinks, voted for him at the last election because they thought that we should first end the war in the Philippines and then settle other questions.—Kansas City Times.

Dangerous to the Party in Power.

The scheme to scale down Southern representation in the lower branch of Congress must reach fruition within a year or go over for another decade, since a new reapportionment, based on the census of 1900, must now be made. The chances are heavily against the consummation of the scheme, not because the Democrats will have the parliamentary power to prevent it, but because the Republican politicians, of whom the leading one is the President himself, are pretty sure to regard the enterprise as inexpedient from a party viewpoint.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Democrats Will Be Powerless.

In the Fifty-seventh Congress Democrats will only be uncomfortable and out of place. If any are allowed to keep the places to which they have been elected they will be compelled to sit helplessly by while the Hanna ship subsidy job is jammed through, while the English Nicaragua Canal appropriation is made for the benefit of the administration construction party and while the trusts come in and amend their various tariff schedules to give them a greater pull at the public blood.—Washington Times.

Rapacity Knows No Bounds.

The extortion of the trusts are first made in those articles which constitute the necessaries of life. It is easier to collect tribute upon the food which the people eat than in any other way. But we have also the spectacle of Andrew Carnegie holding up the United States government on a contract for armor plate for our new warships, showing that the limit of the power of monopoly is not the domestic necessities of the people, but extends to include the needs of the nation as a whole.—Boston Post.

Must Get Back to First Principles.

During the two presidential campaigns the Democratic party has been misled by jack-o'-lantern politics. It must come back to base and get down to bed rock if it hopes to stand upon its feet again, and unless it does the 7,000,000 votes it polled last week will begin to disintegrate, sloughing off from the main body State by State until the party itself peters out after the manner of its great antagonist of other days.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Teach the Lesson Thoroughly.

It is most desirable, in our view, that responsibility should be brought home to the Republican party and at whatever cost to the country. It will not learn otherwise what Republicanism means to it. And the Democratic party can well afford to endure the pain of a temporary defeat this year in order that the lesson to the country may be taught so thoroughly for once that it will never be forgotten again.—Charleston News and Courier.

Not So Terrible After All.

We believe in the dignity of the Senate and we rejoice that there are men there who can maintain that dignity against the upstarts that in the course of events get there occasionally. There is every reason to hope that it will be preserved, even when Roosevelt holds the gavel. He is not such a terrible person as he has been represented to be. His thundering has all been in the index.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Sandbagged by the Salt Trust.

The salt trust has advanced the price of table salt to $2.50 per 100 pounds. A little while ago it was selling the same grade at $1.10. All classes of salt are proportionately advanced, so that every packer, meat retailer, butter manufacturer, grocer, baker, ice cream maker and finally every housekeeper will feel the blow of the sandbag and a rise in the price of their wares is inevitable.—Minneapolis Times.

Congress and the Trusts.

We do not believe it possible for Congress to reach all of the trusts. Some of them are under the exclusive control of States. But Congress can lay its hand on tariff-protected, monopolistic extortioners and put a stop to the flagrant abuses of protection. It can do this without reducing either wages or revenues. Failure to do it will be trifling with power and duty.—Washington Post.

Time Enough to Make Sure.

President McKinley will have four more years in his high office—eight altogether. In all that time we ought to be able to learn whether it is really he who makes the crops grow abundantly, secures reasonable prices for wheat and procures employment for the workingmen at some sort of wages, or is simply lucky.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The People Pay the Bills.

As the trusts boost prices the people begin to realize that, after all, those millions collected from the trusts by Hanna to run a McKinley campaign finally come out of the pockets of the people. Electing a President in this glorious land of the free and home of the brave is getting to be a mighty expensive luxury.—Toledo Bee.

A Task for Congress.

The coming session of Congress will be asked to cut down the war taxes about $15,000,000. It may be possible to cut off some of the taxes of the corporations without interfering with the burdens of the plain people.—Rochester Herald.

The People Need Protection.

When the salt trust, the meat trust and the other trusts are able to squeeze 76,000,000 of people, is it possible that they need protection? It is rather the people who need it.—Savannah News.

AN OLD-TIME THANKSGIVING.

I WANT an old T hanksgiving, when life was well worth living,
And we all went down to grandma's on the dear old farm, you know;
Perhaps it might be blowing, perhaps it might be snowing,
But we never thought of weather on Thanksgiving long ago.

There were uncles, aunts and cousins, by the sixes and the dozens,
There was such a groaning table, the cutest roasted pig,
There were puddings, pies and cherries, and apple tarts and berries,
And doughnuts, cake and raisins, and turkeys all so big.

And they did not serve in courses, and post-prandial discourses
Were not so much in fashion, but the stories had their share
Of the old-time pioneering, of the heartiness and cheering
Of the sympathetic neighbor, and the Indian and the bear.

And we found the apple cider and the old potato slicer,
And the bins for all the apples, and preserves and pickled pears,
And we ranged the gloomy garret; we were very brave to dare it,
But the box of maple sugar and dried fruit were up the stairs.

And around the barn we rollicked, and through the loftas we frollicked,
And we ranged the turnip cellar, and we tumbled in the straw,
And we heard the cattle munching, and the lowing and the crunching,
And we climbed along the mangers where the horses fed, with awe.

O that was a Thanksgiving that was worth a year of living,
And hearts seemed so much truer and life so smooth in flow;
And friends somehow were nearer, and loved ones so much dearer,
When we went down to grandma's for Thanksgiving, long ago.

Dick's Thanksgiving Dinner.

BY JOSEPHINE VOSS.

LATE on the day before Thanksgiving the boys were returning after a day spent in the wood, and all were in high spirits. They had succeeded in trapping a rabbit, which was now slung over Dick Morris' shoulder in sportsmanlike fashion, for to him was due most of the credit of capturing it, and he felt very proud.

"What are you going to do with the rabbit, Dick?" Edward White asked, gazing admiringly at it.

"Yes, that's it," exclaimed Archie Rhodes, "what will be done with it? Somebody tell."

"Why, cook it, of course," said Dick, and then a happy thought struck him. "Oh, I'll tell you what, fellows. We'll have it for dinner to-morrow. What did we catch it for if we didn't want to use it?" And glowing with pride, he gave all the boys a hearty invitation to dinner at his home the next day.

"It's a go!" shouted Fred Miller; "it's a go! I'll come early in the morning so's to be on time."

With a burst of pleasure his companions joined him in accepting the invitation, and then all went home to dream of the morrow's feast when they would partake of the spoils of the day's adventure

* * * * * * *

"Did you bring anything from town for our Thanksgiving dinner?" Mrs. Morris was saying to her husband as Dick stepped in the door.

Mr. Morris laughed.

"Did I bring anything? Ha! ha! I brought a thirty-five pounder. I sold the colt this afternoon and turned all the money over to Pritchard and that just raised the mortgage on our home. I tell you, I was mighty thankful, and I thought we'd celebrate the occasion 'mong ourselves with the biggest turkey we could get. How's that?" he said, holding the fowl at arm's length.

"Couldn't we have a rabbit, too?" Dick suggested as he laid his bundle on the table.

"Mercy sakes!" exclaimed his mother, "where did you get that?"

With reluctance Dick told how in the spirit of fun he had trapped the rabbit and how Fred Miller's father had skinned and dressed it for him, and how he had invited all the boys to dinner.

"Well," said his father, "I don't mind havin' the boys come, but plain, everyday turkey's all they'll get and that's good enough for anybody. There won't be any frills on our dinner. And look ahere," he added sternly, "I don't 'prove of your trappin' rabbits for fun."

Dick was deeply disappointed and soon went to bed, but he couldn't sleep, and in the dead of night he stole out of his room.

"This is a nice fix," he said.

If he hadn't invited the boys, he wouldn't have cared. How would he tell them of the change in the menu of the expected feast? He simply couldn't do it, that was all. By the light of the moon that came in the window he saw on the table before him the nimble little animal that he had captured lying by the side of the big turkey, which had been made ready for the oven and was fairly bursting with delicious dressing.

"OH, I KNOW WHAT I'LL DO."

"Oh, I know what I'll do! There!" he said, as he unfastened the stout cord that bound the bulging sides of the turkey, scooped out the dressing, stuffed the rabbit in the ample cavity and fastened the cord again. "We'll have the rabbit anyhow, but nobody will know till it's cooked."

Then he went back to his room.

When he awoke in the morning the first thought that struck him was that his mischievous prank might spoil the whole dinner. Yes, he was sure it would. He had never heard of such articles of food being cooked together and he became badly frightened. He hastened to undo his work of the night, but it was too late. The turkey, with its strange consort, was already roasting to a nice brown in the oven. He felt very sorry and when the boys came he took them aside and told them everything.

"Say, that's the jolliest kind of fun," Archie laughed. "I'm glad I came!"

"So am I," put in Edward. "What's the matter, Dick? You don't seem to enjoy this."

Dick thought only of the spoiled dinner and what his parents would say when they discovered his trick.

Soon dinner was ready, and the guests were seated. Then came the vital moment. Mr. Morris took his place at the head of the table and was about to cut the turkey.

"I wonder what he'll say when he pulls the rabbit out," Fred whispered to Archie Rhodes.

"Guess he'll wonder what the turkey swallowed," was the humorous answer, and then both laughed.

"Cut that turkey, Sam," Mrs. Morris said to her husband; "what are you waiting for?"

Mr. Morris looked around at the smiling faces of his guests, then dug the knife deep into the savory fowl and suddenly stopped. "Sairy!" addressing his wife, "you——"

The boys burst into a fit of laughter. Dick turned a deep crimson and stood up.

"She didn't do it; I did it," he confessed.

"Sairy," Mr. Morris repeated, ignoring his son, "you burned the gravy. I smell it."

"No, I didn't. There! Pass the dressing around."

With a spoon he scooped the delectable filling of bread crumbs and chopped sausage and chestnuts out of the breast of the fowl, piled it on the plates, which were then passed around. Each boy stared in astonishment as he received his plate, and the meal began in silence.

"And now, boys," Dick's father said with a smile, "when you're finished with that we'll fetch in the rabbit."

And sure enough, it was brought in, covered with rich brown gravy and slices of lemon.

"Won't we have a feast, though!" he exclaimed, looking at Dick.

But this was too much of a surprise for Dick, and he hardly knew what to say. When the dinner was fairly started his father arose to make a speech while Mrs. Morris tried to repress a smile.

"As this is a day of thanksgiving," he began, "we'll all give thanks. First, 'cause the mortgage is all paid now, and second 'cause by a lucky streak the rabbit got cooked alone. It was discovered just in time. When two strange feet are found sticking out of a turkey where it ain't held together, 'tain't hard to guess what's happened, especially when all the dressin' left in a bowl right beside it and everythin', generally, looks as if it had been done in the dark. But seein' 'at you'd captured the poor little thing and wanted it so bad, we just thought we'd fix it up and serve it to-day, hopin' that in the future yaou'll never trap any more."

All laughed heartily as Mr. Morris concluded. For the first time that day Dick's mind was relieved of its great burden and he joined in the merry laughter. He never heard the end of his trick, but as his parents had taken it so kindly he respected their wishes and never again indulged in the sport of trapping rabbits.

Be as Thankful as You Can.

Perhaps you have the toothache,
Or perhaps you have the mumps;
Perhaps some other ailment
Has put you in the dumps,
But whatever be your trouble,
Emulate the Irishman,
And, if you can't be thankful,
Be as thankful as you can.

Don't forget that there are others
Who have burdens they must bear;
Don't forget that God's above you,
That He has you in His care;
O, the ills of men are many,
And the Lord has much to do
But be hopeful—by tomorrow
He may get around to you.

Some rival may have passed you—
There are other fights to win;
The man who gains the guerdon
Has to wade through thick and thin;
So, whatever be your trouble,
Emulate the Irishman,
And if you can't be thankful,
Be as thankful as you can.

Somber clouds may float above you—
There are always clouds somewhere
But the weather changes often,
And tomorrow may be fair!
Fix a goal that's worth the gaining,
In the distance, and then strive—
'Tis the thing beyond that ever
Keeps the heart and hope alive!

No man, since Father Adam,
Made a mess of men's affairs,
Has escaped the consequences—
We have got to have our cares;
But your burdens may be lightened
Through a very simple plan;
So, if you can't be thankful,
Be as thankful as you can!

The Lady to the Turk.

O turkey turk, my turkey turk,
This duty I should like to shirk;
As you may see, my turkey dear,
I shed for you a briny tear.
Since I'm so sad I trust that you
May prove a little tender, too.

What the Wishbone Said.

I cannot, cannot thankful be,
Don't ask me to, I beg;
Thanksgiving never comes but see
Some fellow pulls my leg!
—New York World.

SOME EX-STATESMEN.

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS OUT OF PUBLIC LIFE.

Cleveland, Harrison, Reed, Carlisle, and Mills the Most Notable of the Great Men Who Have Left the Circle of Active Politics.

It was an odd circumstance, says a writer, that in the canvass of 1900 tens of thousands of persons were ready to declare with positiveness just how Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln would have voted, if they had been alive, while nobody except Mr. Cleveland and the few who were in his confidence could have told on which side the ex-President would cast his ballot. Everybody knew that he was opposed to Mr. Bryan on the money question and was against Mr. McKinley on the Philippine question. He was with the Democrats on the latter question and with the Republicans on the former, and thus perceived a divided duty which was more embarrassing than Desdemona's. The ex-President declared shortly before the election that it was a "most distressing campaign," but he gave no intimation as to the party for which he would cast his vote. Ex-Secretary Carlisle and ex-Speaker Reed let it be known that they were likely not to vote at all, while ex-President Harrison, though in sympathy with the Republican party on nearly all the issues, declined to make any speeches in the canvass.

CLEVELAND.

Cleveland.

In one of its aspects this was an extraordinary condition. These men, all out of politics, were also out of the circle of political interest and activity. Mr. Cleveland for twelve years was by far the most potent personality in the Democratic party. He had been its Presidential nominee three times, and was elected twice. From 1884 to 1896 he was the dictator of the Democracy to almost as great an extent as was Jackson from his election in 1828 to his retirement at the close of the canvass of 1836. What Jackson was for eight years Cleveland was for twelve years. Jackson's exploit in crushing the United States Bank, which a majority of the Northern end of his party favored, was equaled by Cleveland's achievement in defeating free silver legislation, and in forcing a silverite Democratic Congress to aid in repealing the silver purchase section of the Sherman law.

CARLISLE.

Harrison.

Ex-President Harrison's isolation in the recent campaign was not quite so marked as was that of Messrs. Cleveland and Carlisle. Unlike them, he was in harmony with his party on most of the issues of national concern. Moreover, for his refusal to make speeches or take any active part in politics he could plead the demands of advancing age. Gen. Harrison is 67 years old, and he engaged in the heavy work of campaigning for a third of a century. Advancing age was, virtually, the reason which he assigned for not appearing at any of the gatherings in the Republican party.

HARRISON.

Carlisle.

Ex-Secretary Carlisle was a large figure for a much longer time than ex-President Cleveland, though, of course, at no time such a potent personage. Though a Union man during the war, he remained a Democrat, and entered public life soon after the war closed, first in State offices and afterward on the national stage. In the twenty years in which he was in national positions, beginning with his entrance into the House of Representatives in 1877 and ending with his retirement from Mr. Cleveland's cabinet at the close of Cleveland's second term in 1897, Carlisle was a big figure in his party. Since the death of Beck, whom he succeeded in the Senate, Carlisle was the most powerful personality in Kentucky. The drift in his party away from Cleveland, however, in the last year of Cleveland's second term, turned many of Carlisle's old friends against him, and he left Kentucky and located in New York.

GORMAN.

Reed's Self-Effacement.

But the most striking instance of self-effacement which has occurred within the memory of the present generation is that which has taken place in ex-Speaker Reed's case. Along until the meeting of the Republican National Convention at St. Louis in 1896 Mr. Reed was the most powerful personage in public life. The contest for the Presidency in that year was between him and Mr. McKinley, and though the latter won, the Speaker retained his old interest in the party and took the stump for the ticket. He retained his old power during part of the first half of the present administration, though he was opposed to the administration on an important part of its policy, that relating to the war with Spain and the accessions of territory which that conflict brought. This diminished his prestige to some degree, though until he left Congress less than two years ago he was still the most potent personality in the party and the country, next to President McKinley himself.

REED.

A good remedy for burns can be made by mixing equal parts of lime water and raw linseed oil.

For distressing headaches, try a mixture of citrate of caffeine, 32 grains; bromide of soda, 1 ounce; elixir of guarana, 4 ounces. Take a teaspoonful every four hours.

When the hands are blackened from housework, their natural appearance may be restored by the application of turpentine at night. Then rub heavily with cold cream, and sleep with gloves on.

Here is a favorite prescription for the alcoholic habit: Get the concentrated extract of avena nativa, or common oats, and administer fifteen to thirty drops in hot water whenever a stimulant is required.

For granulated eyelids and general eye troubles, wear dark protection glasses, and bathe the eyes several times a day with a solution composed of ten grains of borax and two ounces of camphor water.

The season of colds is at hand, and here is a standard remedy for a bronchial cough: Muriate of ammonia, 2 drams; fluid extract of cubebs, 2 drams; brown mixture, 2 ounces; syrup of wild cherry bark to make four ounces.

For earache, heat a few drops of vaseline in a spoon, hold in palm till it ceases to burn, and pour into the afflicted ear. Then put in some cotton. It will give almost instant relief, for the heat is excellent and the vaseline loosens up the dry matter in the ear.

In croup, the cases marked by severe paroxysms of noisy and difficult breathing and a peculiar cough should be treated with warm baths, the external application of hot water to the throat, the inhalation of vapor, and the administration of syrup of ipecac.

Excessive palpitation of the heart can always be arrested by bending double, head downwards, and hands hanging. If breathing is temporarily suspended while in this position, the effect is all the more rapid. Hiccough can almost always be stopped by this simple action.

Lumps on the soles of the feet are generally calloused spots. A callous is the result of undue pressure, and a felt ring should be worn about them. Get easy shoes. Soak the calloused spots in hot alum water every night, one teaspoonful to the quart, and pare them only when very large.

Plasters should not be used indiscriminately. Alt should be made porous, to prevent excessive irritation by checking the perspiration of the skin. The belladonna is the best in cases of muscular pain or weakness, those of gum ammoniac are desirable for swollen glands or enlarged joints, capsicum plasters are of great value as counter irritants, and the soap plaster for blistering. Those made of opium and tar, and the antiseptic surgeon's plaster, have their beneficial uses, the list including plasters of seventeen different kinds.

Rat Showed Him the Mine.

The actions of a rat led N. R. Ingoldsby to the discovery of a rich gold mine in Arizona. He named the property the Rat Hole mine.

Mr. Ingoldsby has been spending several months near Mammoth, on the San Pedro River, in Arizona. His purpose was to enjoy the hunting and make a collection of the animals and minerals of the Southwest. He pitched his tent in the canon of the San Pedro in the Santa Catarina mountains.

He had no neighbors and was for a long time unable to account for the disappearance of small articles that he left lying about his camp. At last he noticed that when anything was taken something was left in its place. This was usually a bit of stone or wood. The culprit he found to be a large rodent of the species known as the trading rat. The habits of the animal made an interesting study for Mr. Ingoldsby, and he often lay awake at night to watch for his visitor.

A silver spoon was missing one morning, and in its place was a piece of quartz carrying free gold. This still more excited Mr. Ingoldby's curiosity, and after several attempts, he succeeded in following the animal to its home. Near by was the ledge from which the gold-bearing quartz had been taken. Mr. Ingoldsby made an examination thorough enough to prove that his discovery was of considerable value.

The Girl and Her Vocation.

"The future wage-earning girl should have in her mind during the latter part of her school life the selection of her profession," writes Margaret E. Sangster in the Ladies' Home Journal. "I think it well for her, too, very frequently, but with intention, to cast about among her friends for suggestions, to ask the kind offices of one and another, and to make known her need of immediate employment so soon as she leaves school. Many good positions are lost because of indecision, or false pride, or unwise reticence on the part of those who seek them. The mental attitude of the girl in search of employment should be neither indifferent nor patronizing; she should set in motion every legitimate means, and let those who may be able to assist her know something of her situation. They can help, and she can seek with much greater hope of success if the goal in view be something definite."

Electrical Horsewhip.

An electrical horsewhip gives the animal a shock instead of a cut. A small battery is controlled by a push-button.

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It came upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

MRS. A. HARTLEY.

You ought to have known that when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

You ought to know that indigestion, exhaustion, womb displacements, fainting, dizziness, headache, and backache send the nerves wild with affright, and you cannot sleep.

Mrs. Hartley, of 221 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill., whose portrait we publish, suffered all these agonies, and was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; her case should be a warning to others, and her cure carry conviction to the minds of every suffering woman of the unfailing efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THOMPSON'S

..SECOND ANNUAL..

WABASH

Mexico Tour.

1901.

The Hon. James A. Gary, of Baltimore, Md., Ex-Postmaster General of the United States, in the Mexican Herald, City of Mexico, said in an interview:

"Our trip to Mexico with the 'Wabash Mexico Tour' has been an exceedingly pleasant one. I have not until now looked with favor upon traveling in this manner but I know of no wiser nor more delightful way to visit a foreign country than with a party managed by so capable and attentive a person as Mr. Thompson. It would be impossible for him to do more than he has done that would contribute to the pleasure and enjoyment of his guests."

The next grand thirty days outing to Old Mexico, covering over 7,000 miles of travel in a special train of Pullman cars, including dining car, serving all meals en route, will leave on February 20th, 1901.

Cost of this tour covering every legitimate expense, such as railroad fare going and returning; one half section in sleeping-car; all meals in the dining car; side trips; services of guides, interpreters, and conductors, etc., will be about $10.00 a day.

MEMBERSHIP STRICTLY LIMITED TO SIXTY (60) PERSONS. Apply early for accommodations to

"I shouldn' be surprised if I done sold dat mule aftuh all," remarked Uncle Rasberry.

"Is you got any offers?"

"No. But I's gwinter git one purty soon. Deacon Thompson stops hyuh every yuthuh day an' was'es half an hour tellin' me 'bout whut a no 'count animal it is. An' de deacon doesn't put in his time wifout he's got an object."—Washington Star.

The Other Parent.

"Now, tell me," said the kind-hearted woman, "you're a runaway, aren't you?

"Yes, I am, ma'am, ter tell the truth," replied the young tramp. "Mother died not long ago, and after that things didn't go right, and one day I lit out and I run till I was dead tuckered out."

"Poor boy! Couldn't go a step farther, eh?"

"Oh! no. It was 'cause I couldn't go a stepmother."—Philadelphia Press.

Caught.

Soak—I took first prize at de county fair.

Farmer—What did ye do with it?

Soak—Police made me put it back.

The Significance.

Visitor—Ah! What a picture of innocence that child is!

Mother—Dear me! I hadn't noticed! Gertrude, what have you been doing?—Puck.

Choice of Superfluities.

"Little Jim has curious ideas about being dressed up."

"What are they?"

"Well, when he wears a collar he doesn't want a necktie on; and when he wears a necktie, he won't wear a collar."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Draw at the Very Worse.

Pepprey—That was a fierce fight you had with Gussie. He claims he licked you.

Cholly—Oh, the boastah! It's twue he wumpled my cwavat dweadfully, but when it was all ovah his collah was twightfully wilted.—Philadelphia Press.

The Prospect.

Tailor—I wish you would let me take your measure for a new suit of clothes.

Young man—I have no objections, but that's all you will ever get for them.—Detroit Free Press.

Geographical Notes.

The Coast of Ireland.

The Golf of Mexico.

He Had Been Caught.

Willie (glancing up from his book)—Pa, what is a "man trap?"

Pa—Well, my son, the most effective man trap I know of is an old-fashioned rocking chair in a dark room.—Philadelphia Press.

Her Finish Is in Sight.

Towson—Is your daughter a finished musician?

Yorkrode—Not yet, but the neighbors are making threats.—Baltimore American.

In the Uncongested District.

Towne—Now that I'm out this far I may as well call on Brown also. He's your next-door neighbor, isn't he?

Subbubs—Yes; wait a moment and I'll megaphone and see if he's at home.—Puck.

A Difference.

Askington—Who was your friend whom I saw you walking with this afternoon?

Teller—Hoh! He wasn't a friend; that's my brother-in-law.—Harper's Bazar.

But Not Ornamental.

The nervous young man backed into the nearest chair. The fair girl glared at him.

"You're a bird!" she cried, sarcastically.

"Why—er—what?" he gasped.

"You're on my hat!" she fairly screamed."—Philadelphia Press.

Just for a Starter.

Sillicus—I was awfully downhearted before I got engaged. I married for sympathy.

Cynicus—Well, you've got mine.—Philadelphia Record.

Always on Hand.

"I suppose you know the type of man who is always looking for trouble?" remarked the philosopher.

"No," answered Colonel Stillwell; "you see, I'm from Kentucky. Down where I live nobody has to look for trouble."—Washington Star.

Why He Played Well.

Mrs. Waynpe—I thought the wedding music magnificent. A throbbing note of triumph, of ineffable joy, seemed to run through it, as though the organist were inspired.

Mrs. Nowitt—The organist was inspired, no doubt. He was the bride's first husband and now he doesn't have to pay alimony no more.—Philadelphia Press.

Narrow Escape.

Yunker—Did I ever tell you about that narrow escape I had from a hotel fire while I was in New York?

Eldster—Naw.

Yunker—It was the narrowest escape I ever went through. The check from Uncle John arrived while the landlord was talking of sending for a policeman.—Indianapolis Press.

Made Her Hair Curl.

"Since marriage I have had no need of curling irons," said Mrs. De Tanques.

"But still your hair is perfectly dressed. What's the reason?"

"Well, when you've got a husband you'll find that he can come home at any old hour in the morning with an excuse that would make your hair curl."—Kansas City Star.

Made Him Tired.

Brown—You are not so young as you were, you know.

Greene—I don't know whether I do or not. Ages mix me up awfully. If I'm not so young as I was, neither is my sister so old as she was ten years ago. Please don't ask me to explain. It makes my head ache every time I think of it.

Robbers.

Mrs. Hingso awoke suddenly.

"John?"

"Whashyouwant?" sleepily.

"There's burglars in the house."

"Let 'em burgle."

"You're a coward. They'll steal all the silver."

"Um-um."

"They'll take my jewels."

"All right."

Silence for a moment.

"John."

"Can't you let me sleep?"

"They aren't in the dining room," in an awful voice; "they are in the cellar, stealing the coal——"

"What!" leaping out of bed. "The scoundrels! Where's my revolver?"—Syracuse Herald.

Edition de Sucre.

"What a beautiful volume of Emerson's 'Essays' you have, Miss Madge."

"Yes, isn't it lovely? It's a candy box."—Indianapolis Journal.

Haunted Him.

Miss Sue Perstitious—Do you take any stock in dreams, Mr. Ledger?

Mr. Ledger—Do I? Why, sometimes after we've been taking stock at the store I don't dream of anything else for weeks.

A Little Late.

"I've come to tell you, sir, that the photographs you took of us the other day are not at all satisfactory. Why, my husband looks like an ape!"

"Well, madam, you should have thought of that before you had him taken."—Tit-Bits.

Was Suspicious.

"Now, Willie," said Mrs. Towne on the day they moved into their new suburban home, "why don't you go over and play in that big field?"

"I guess it ain't very nice there," replied the little city boy. "I don't see any 'keep off the grass' signs."—Philadelphia Press.

Making a Date.

Master of the Hounds—At 9 o'clock the hunt will begin—do you carry a watch?

Assistant—No, sir.

Master of the Hounds—Well, it doesn't matter. At 9:30 the factory whistle in the village will blow, and half an hour before that you may let the dogs out.—Fliegende Blaetter.

Suspicious.

Mrs. Leo Hunter—Why are you suspicious of Count von Squint? He can't help being cross-eyed.

Mr. Hunter—I know it; but he looks crooked.—Smart Set.

New View of It.

"Your friend Groome boasts that his wife is college bred. What's meant by college bred, anyway?"

"Mebbe it's the stuff they learn to make at cookin' school."—Philadelphia Press.

Kept Him in Mind.

"Pauline has one side of her boudoir devoted to photographs of her lost beaus."

"So many dead?"

"No; married."—Exchange.

Clever Lad.

He—Just as I was leaving your house last night your father met me face to face.

She—Did you bow?

He—No, I ducked.—The King.

An Occult Influence.

"The fortune-teller told me that some powerful influence was standing between me and success in life."

"Do you suspect any one?"

"I can't decide whether it is our baby or the cook."—Chicago Record.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

An Alpine Garden.

At Schachensee, in the Bavarian Alps, at an elevation of 1,500 meters, an Alpine garden has been laid out and planted by a foreman of the Munich Botanical garden. The plan and outlines of the work were furnished by Prof. Gobel. The land is the property of the crown. It is intended next year to build a blockhouse and furnish it with the necessary comforts for the use of scientific visitors. Alpine gardens already exist near Innsbrueck, in the Dauphiny, in Italy, and on the Maritime Alps. This Bavarian garden will be the means of rescuing the finest Alpine plants from destruction.

Forest Fires in Minnesota.

Minnesota has a law for the prevention and suppression of forest and prairie fires, has regular "fire wardens," and as a result the chief fire warden is able to report that there were only ten forest fires in 1899. These burned over 3,635 acres, but damaged timber to the extent of only $1,541.

The man who pays well fares the best.

Breath is the most useful thing in the long run.

Made Desolate by Winds.

Between Formosa and the coast of China lies a group of twenty-one islands, interspersed with innumerable reefs and ledges, which are called the Pescadores Islands. According to the investigations of a Japanese geologist, these islands have suffered in a remarkable manner from the northeast winds, which blow with savage violence there during nine months of the year. The original area of the islands has been greatly reduced by erosion, and their surfaces are barren and desolate, so that the wind-whipped group forms "a quasi-desert amidst the green island world of southeastern Asia."

False God.—The false God in America is not money. It is power.—Rev. Cortland Myers, Baptist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Temptation.—One of the greatest temptations of men is the desire to get rich either dishonestly or too fast.—Rev. C. M. Sheldon, Baptist, Topeka, Kan.

A Vital Religion.—The Universalist faith has a vital religion for mankind in its message of hope eternal in the Universal Father.—Rev. Dr. Perin, Universalist, Boston, Mass.

Our Ministers.—Our ministers must be more like Christ. A thorough reformation among our clergymen is demanded in order that crime may be checked.—Rev. J. B. Galloway, Presbyterian Paterson, N. J.

Liquor Traffic.—The evil of the liquor traffic is a problem to be met by education, not by abuse or bigotry. The Prohibition party should be temperate in speech.—Rev. S. H. Cox, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

God's Idea of Sin.—The crying need for saint and sinner is to get God's idea of sin. He calls you daily back to his book. The Bible is honest and does not whitewash sin.—Pastor of Reformed Church, Hackensack, N. J.

Our Respect.—Men don't want our pity, they want our respect. They want the recognition of common humanity. To help the world we must have a deep respect, man for man.—Rev. A. S. Hoyt, Congregationalist, Auburn, N. Y.

Spiritual Man.—I believe in the resurrection of the spiritual man out of this material body. I do not believe that the Lord's soul rose in a material body after his resurrection.—Rev. F. W. Millar, Universalist, Chicago, Ill.

Luxury.—Often the whole spirituality of a church is smothered by the incubus of worldliness. Worldly greatness, worldly riches when not guarded, are blighting to the soul.—Rev. Dr. Cramblett, Christian Church, Pittsburg, Pa.

Bread of Life.—Christ is the bread and water of life through the divine revelation which he is to us and through the divine life he gives us. "Lord, evermore, give us this bread."—Rev. D. N. Beach, Congregationalist, Denver, Col.

A Great Mistake.—Here is one of the great mistakes of American Protestantism. In locating our churches we go on the principle that the presence of a factory is sufficient reason that a church should not be located there.—Rev. R. H. Moore, Methodist, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Master's Teaching.—It is a feature of the Master's teaching that physical evils are not always punishment for moral evils. The world's suffering is the dark background upon which the tender remedial power of God is thrown.—Rev. J. L. Davies, Congregationalist, Akron, Ohio.

Future Punishment.—There are several very serious truths for us to consider when we study the doctrine of future punishment. In the first place, the doctrine of hell is clearly taught by Jesus Christ. He uses the word hell more than all the other writers in the Bible.—Rev. P. C. Curnick, Methodist, Detroit, Mich.

The True Churchman.—The true churchman will vote patriotically. A patriotic ballot will be given against a candidate for the Presidential office whose speeches create discontent on the part of the workingman and envy between various classes of American citizens.—Rev. Dr. MacArthur, Baptist, New York City.

Unison.—It may be that two in unison are better than two units apart. Two people acting together may supplement each other, the strong qualities of one balancing the weakness of the other. The combination of several for a common purpose is more powerful than individual effort.—Rev. H. D. Catlin, Unitarian, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Nest Building.—Notwithstanding the fact that man was made for heaven and eternity, the world is all alive with nest building. He seeks comfort, satisfaction and rest in temporal things. In a scene when all is flowing he tries to make fixity. God has to shatter what man builds, drive away what man gathers, take what man in vain tries to hold.—Rev. R. L. Davidson, Baptist, Kansas City, Mo.

Christianity.—Christianity is not a creed merely, but is life, which is more than a creed; it is not doctrine merely, but is the life out of which doctrine grows; it is not the church simply, but is far more, for it is life, and because it is life we cannot lay it aside as a garment and take it up again, we cannot divide and separate it from the secular life.—Rev. W. C. P. Rhodes, Baptist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Indifference and Neglect.—Our fathers found themselves under the tyranny of lords; their children are under the tyranny of the machine. But when every other danger has been capitalized, let us hasten to confess that indifference and neglect are perils that overshadow all other dangers whatsoever. The tendency of the well-to-do class is to sit at home and, as George William Curtis said, to cultivate the feeling that politics is tiresome and dirty; that politicians are vulgar bullies and bravos, half persuaded that the republic is the rule of a mob, and secretly longing for a strong man and a splendid and vigorous despotism.—Rev. Newell D. Hillis, Congregationalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Passenger Elevators.

A patent was taken out on a passenger elevator sixty-six years ago. But the first patent for a complete and practical elevator was given to Mr. E. G. Otis, of Yonkers, N. Y., in January, 1861; so that while the idea is much older the elevator itself is only thirty-nine years old.

Coal Galore in China.

Most of the province of Tse-Chau, China, is underlaid with large coal beds, and the coal area is said to be greater than that of Pennsylvania.

A LIFE SAVED.

A Druggist's Timely and Straightforward Advice Saves the Life of a Prominent Citizen.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 26.—(Special.)—Among the Catholic Foresters in this city, none is better known or more universally esteemed than Mr. S. P. Rush, conductor (president) of Holy Name Court, No. 26.

His many friends, inside the Order and outside of its ranks, were therefore much startled to learn that his life was in danger, he having Bright's disease, that most terrible and fatal disease.

Mr. Rush, however, made a grand struggle for his life, taking prescriptions and pills and powders, until his stomach refused food. At last, his local druggist, guided by the numerous inquiries being made at his store for Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised Mr. Rush to buy and try some. This he did, and to his delight he was restored to health and strength.

Mr. Rush says that after commencing the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills he felt much better, but it took two months to effect a cure.

"I took nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills during that time, so I know that I owe life and health to them."

What this wonderful remedy has done for Mr. Rush it will certainly do for anyone. It is the only remedy that has never failed to cure Bright's disease.

Mr. Rush is just now receiving the congratulations of his friends, but always finds time to say a good word for the medicine that saved his life.

PAIN OPENED HER SKULL

Mrs. Lasher's Remarkable Story—Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Her.

MRS. FRED. C. LASHER, JR.

The case of Mrs. Fred. C. Lasher, Jr., a well-known woman of Westport, N. Y., is one of the most interesting on record. It is an actual fact that headaches caused her head to split.

"For thirteen years," she says, "I suffered from terrible headaches night and day, until the bones of my skull opened so that the doctor could lay his thumb right into the opening on to my brain. Two doctors attended me and claimed that I was on the verge of insanity. I was under their care for nine years, but got no relief. Then I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and inside of a year the bones of my head had taken their natural shape again."

That Mrs. Lasher's statements are true is vouched for by reliable men of Westport, and by a Justice of the Peace there. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cured Mrs. Lasher when all other remedies failed, and it cures thousands of suffering women every year. If your head aches, if you cannot sleep and are weak and nervous, remember that this great curative agent, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, will make you well and strong.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a physician's prescription, formulated from a discovery after years of investigation and experiment. Dr. Greene, 35 West 14th St., New York City, is the discoverer. He can be consulted free personally or by letter.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

A Village Blacksmith Saved His Little Son's Life.

H. H. Black, the well known village blacksmith at Grahamsville, Sullivan Co., N. Y., says: "Our little son, five years old, has always been subject to croup, and so bad have been the attacks that we have feared many times that he would die. We have had the doctor and used many medicines, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is now our sole reliance. It seems to dissolve the tough mucus and by giving frequent doses when the croup symptoms appear we have found that the dreaded croup is cured before it gets settled." There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains no opium or other injurious drug and may be given as confidently to a babe as to an adult. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Opportunity For Business.

During the past year the Chicago & North-Western Railway Company built 474 miles of line through the most fertile portions of Iowa and Minnesota. These new lines of railway are now in full operation and are dotted with promising towns, which are trade centers for well located communities. A descriptive pamphlet with a list of business opportunities in each town may be obtained upon application to agents of the Chicago & North-Western Railway or to W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger & Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

What Would You Do?

If you were in our place and had Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for sale and knew it to be a certain cure for all stomach derangements, constipation or sick headache? Why, you would keep talking about it, swear by it and sell lots of it just as we do. At H. B. McCord's.

History from Confederate Standpoint.

Francis Burton Harrison, who is now a postgraduate student of Yale in the English course, ann.unces that he will write a history of the civil war from the confederate standpoint. His father was private secretary to Jefferson Davis. The young man has inherited literary aspirations from his talented mother, Mrs. Frances Burton Harrison, and these are encouraged by his bride, who was Miss Mary Crocker, daughter of the California millionaire.

Mrs. M. P. O'Brien.

Ivesdale, Ill., writes: "I have used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin as a family medicine with the best of results. For derangements of the stomach and as a general laxative I like it better than anything I have ever used. It is so pleasant to taste, my children are always anxious to take it. H. B. McCord.

Houseboats Moving South.

The annual southern migration of the houseboat dwellers along the Mississippi has been started, and a few of the houseboats have begun their long trip to a warmer climate. Every autumn hundreds of these boat dwellers start for the south after spending the summer living along the river banks.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Recommends it to Trainmen.

G. H. Hausan, Lima, O., engineer on L. E. & Western R. R., writes: "I have been troubled a great deal with backache. I was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure, and one bottle entirely relieved me. I gladly recommend it to anyone, especially my friends among the train men, who are usually afflicted the same way.

Women Members of Orchestra.

There are two young women playing in the orchestra at the Bastable theater in Syracuse. One is the wife of the leader of the orchestra, and the other is a special student at Syracuse university.

Don't Hesitate.

or fool away your money. If you are sick you can't afford it. Get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation, sick headache or any other kind of stomach trouble and you will be cured, for it is guaranteed by H. B. LoCord, the leading druggist of the town.

Friday's Daily.

—Mr. Edward Gallatin of Elwood, Arizona, is visiting his uncle, Auditor Seller.

—Willis Brown has arrived from Waterloo, Iowa, for a visit with relatives and friends.

—Mrs. James Griswold returned from Butler yesterday and reports Mollie Wilson better.

—Mrs. Frank Baughman and two children went to Butler today to visit her people who reside there.

—Mrs. Forsythe, mother of the boy whose arm was recently amputated, is now on the sick list. The family has its share of trouble.

WHAT HAVE YOU TO TRADE.—If you have a farm you want to trade for town property and part cash we can make a deal for you. MOODY & RICKEL

—Mrs. W. C. Hartman and little son went to Wabash on the afternoon train, after a few days pleasantly spent with the old friends and neighbors in Auburn.

—Dr. Baxter reports a nine pound boy born yesterday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Preston, who live on the Husselman place north of town.

—W. N. Myers relieved the pressure today, as the "Immortal J. N." says He added two cords of wood to our stock, a contribution that was very welcome.

—DO YOU WANT TO SELL YOUR PROPERTY?—We have several parties who want to buy property in Auburn. If you want to sell, call on us quick.—MOODY & RICKEL.

—Steuben Republican:—Frank Pipes of Auburn is here visiting his sister Mrs. Florence Kline. Frank was our "devil" two years ago this winter. He is a carriage trimmer now.

—Elton Yesbera is not calling for dry bread or pickles at his meals now a days. He has a lump on each side of his neck that pulls at his ears. In fact our young friend has the mumps.

—HUSTLING YOUNG MAN can make $90 per month and expenses. Permanent position. Experience unnecessary. Write quick for particulars. Clark & Co., Fourth & Locust sts., Phil, Pa. tf —Sen. Hughes, who until about August, carried the mail at Waterloo, from the postoffice to the trains; was killed Wednesday on a freight at Girard, Pa. We have no particulars. He was a son of Dr. Hughes, late coroner of this county.

—Since our last report the following marriage licenses have been issued: Byron Pepper and Louisa M. Dirrim; Curtis Krumlauf and Ella Lang; Levi Hollopeter and Minnie D. Hallobaugh; Washington Johnson and Fay Carey Corwin Shaffer and Ona M. Haines; Frank Marks and Cora Draggoo.

—Dr. Casebeer reports Calvin Forsythe, the lad whose arm was stripped in the tile machine, as getting along nicely The arm was amputated above the elbow and strange as it may seem, the lad was taken home in a comfortable condition and ate a good supper and has been feeling well ever since.

—Mr. and Mrs. I. M. Thomas have arrived from their visit to Topeka, Kansas, Wednesday night. They were visiting their son, John C. Thomas, and while there, David Thomas, a brother, from Strong City, Kansas, a sister, Mrs. Mary Jacobs, and a daughter, Ida, from Elmdale, Kansas visited them. So altogether they had a lovely visit and report fine weather in Kansas. They saw no snow while gone.

—Samuel Moody and wife have moved from Waterloo and are now "at home" in the Baker residence, now the property of Dr. Graham, on West Fifth street. Mrs. Moody is Dr. Graham's mother, and we presume the doctor will live with them, for the present, at least. Mr. Moody is a former Waterloo neighbor of ours, and we welcome him to our place. And we trust the ladies will give Mrs. Moody a hearty welcome —An old friend, E. B. Gerber, of Ligonier, has a knack of getting there, mainly we think, because people know his good qualities. We remember his being elected surveyor of Noble county in 1860, and several times since, he has been given places of trust by his county especially the difficult post of commissioner. At the recent election he was made representative by a plurality of 25, only one other democrat pulling through.

—To remove a troublesome corn or bunion: First soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it, then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood, and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily; rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn for a few days, to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequalled. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Saturday's Daily.

—Frank Nelson left last evening on a business trip to Muncie.

—George Quince is papering the new rooms in Mrs. Davis' house.

—Freeman Housel of St. Johns has bought the old Hall homestead.

—The next reunion of the 100th Ind., will be held in Portland the first Thursday in September, 1901.

—Mrs. Hines and daughter Effie came home last night from a few days visit with the former's son, Dr. L. A Hines at Warsaw.

—Mrs. John Arnes, daughter of W. S. Purdy, is at the home of her parents and on the sick list. Her husband is at Romeo, Mich.

—WOOD WANTED.—We want 35 cords of 20-inch wood delivered at the north or ward school house in Auburn. Must be sound hard wood.

H. C. SHULL, Sec. school board.

—At Warsaw Wednesday occurred the wedding of Dr. L. A. Hines and Miss Ollie Roberds of that place. The groom was a former Auburn boy and highly esteemed by all who know him. The COURIER extends congratulations —Among the members of the old 100th from this place, who were at Thursday's reunion at Angola, were Joseph Cullers, John Olinger, Henry Wolf, and probably others whose names we could not get. About forty of the members were present, and they had a grand meeting.

—WANTED:—Active man of good character to deliver and collect in Indiana for old established manufacturing wholesale house. $900 a year, sure pay. Honest, more than experience required. Our reference, any bank in any city. Enclose self-addressed stamped envelope. Manufacturers, Third Floor, 334 Dearborn St., Chicago.

—We are pleased to note that the Butler Record selects a column of items from the "Daily COURIER" giving full credit. The other papers who take the Daily are welcome to do the same. It costs us money to get these items and they are just as correct as any the other papers could get if they had a man paid to do it. And as we give six papers in exchange for one, it is only a matter of courtesy to be fully recognized.

—Cal Husselman starts today for the southern part of the state, where he has appointments to lecture at several farmers' institutes. His wife and little son, Ted, will be with him the first week or two. He will be absent about four weeks. The first two weeks will be spent in Warrick, Perry, Spencer, Crawford, Clark and Scott counties, and the other two weeks will have work for him in the north and west parts of the state. He will return at Christmas.

A Night Of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she could not live till morning" writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night. "All thought she must soon die from Pneumonia, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, saying it had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After three small doses she slept easily all night, and its further use completely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at McCords drug store.

Machinery Causes Most Accidents.

Most of the 1,277 claims paid by an accident company for the month of June last were caused by the use of tools or machinery. Forty-one persons were thrown from vehicles and the same number from bicycles. Thirteen were injured by animals, twenty-four by street cars and only three by electricity.

Bismark's Iron Nerve

Was the result of his splendid health. Indomitable will and tremendous energy are not found where Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels are out of order If you want these qualities and the success they bring, use Dr. King's New Life Pills. They develop every power: brain and body. Only 25 cents at B. McCord's Drugstore.

Constructing Another Summer Resort.

A thousand men are at work on a barren sand beach near New York which is to be turned into a summer resort, with a huge "amusement palace" and several hotels. The harbor will be created by dredging.

Called Him a Liar.

Barney Plumb says he called every doctor a liar until he tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. He says it saved him hundreds of dollars doctor bill, for one 50c bottle cured him of stomach trouble. Sold by H. B. McCord.

—The announcement of the death of Lydia E. Pinkman, discloses the fact, which will be surprising to many, that "she" was a man.

—J. W. Bryan of Lowder, Ill. writes my little boy was very low with pneumonia. Unknown to the doctor we gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. The result was magical and puzzled the doctor, and it immediately stopped the racking cough and he immediately recovered." H. B. McCord.

Mrs. Fremont Permanently Crippled.

Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, who is now in her sixty-ninth year, is living in Los Angeles. She is permanently crippled, as the result of an accident she met with early in the summer.

—After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on, take Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to cure, and will prevent pneumonia or consumption if taken in time. H. B. McCord.

—"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and find it to be a great medicine," says Mr. E. S. Phipps, of Poteru, Ark. "It cured me of bloody flux. I cannot speak too highly of it." This remedy always wins the good opinion, if not praise, of those who use it. The quick cures which it effects even in the most severe cases make it a favorite everywhere. H. B. McCord.

—C H. Hoyt, author of several plays, including "A Bunch of Keys," is dead.

The Teachers' Association.

The Teachers' Association was to begin at 9:30 this morning, but on account of the trains from Butler and Waterloo not getting in until later, the time for the opening exercises was changed to eleven.

When the meeting was called to order by Mr. Brown, the president, Mrs Ehlers, was called on and made an eloquent and appropriate talk to the teachers, and followed this by prayer. Mr. Keep, the retiring president not being present, Mr. Harrison was next. It was a well prepared address and along new and acceptable lines. It was especially appropriate. He not only welcomed them, but incidentally gave them many new ideas, esweclally as to Auburn. He said they might not meet many of our people, for Auburn is a very busy town and nearly every man and woman have duties that will prevent an attendance. But he knew by the character of our people and especially as to the members of our several literary clubs, that the hearts of our people are with the workers in our schools, and that the welcome is always sincere.

The incoming president, H. G. Brown, of the Auburn schools, then delivered his inaugural address, which was very clear and mostly devoted to business. He read a list of the committees for the coming year.

COMMITTEES.

Executive commmittee: Prof. Shull Proj. E C. Coleberd, W. H. Zigler, and Supt. H. H. Keep.

Auditing committee: A. L. Shultz, C. W. Rimmel and R. N. Coe.

Committee on resolutions: E. E. Lallar, H. Klopfenstein and W. A. Aldrich.

About sixty teachers were present.

The afternoon session of the Teachers' Association was called to order yesterday at 1:30, a good attendance being present. Excellent music was given by the second grade pupils, followed by a clear and intelligent paper by Miss Ethel Waterman on "What Peparation for the Teachers is Necessary Beyond the mere Requirements." Supt. J. Walter Johnson gave an "Interpretation of Dante," which was full of sound thought and clear meaning; he had given the subject earnest and and careful study. There were three minutes intermission, after which little Miss Sidney Farmer delighted the audience with two of her fine recitations, followed by a beautiful vocal selection by Miss Annis Warcop.

Prof. H. G. Brown then introduced Dean Vincent of the Chicago University who lectured to the teachers. He said many good and humorous things which will aid the teachers and help the children to adjust themselves to the requirements of life rather than fill them with a great amount of knowledge of books without the power to apply it. Herman Brown was then appointed to fill the vacancy of the auditing committee. They then adjourned until the evening session.

The receipts for the afternoon were $41.25.

In the evening the attendance was good, for Mr. Vincent's fame as an eloquent speaker had been established by his afternoon talk.

The first, singing by Miss Hoffman's class, which was excellent and did great credit to them and to her at their instructor.

Dean Vincent's lecture on the "Psychology of Crowds," was a masterly one, and his manner of delivery is superb. It is never possible for a newspaper to give much of an idea of the contents of a lecture. There is too much of it and it cannot be shown in all its brilliancy of delivery, so we can only say, those who were not there missed, in our opinion, the best lecture given in Auburn. It closed promptly at 8 p. m. and the company went to the opera house to hear the Temple Quartet. Receipts for the evening, $11 60. The total receipts for the day were $61 25

Opportunity For Business.

During the past year the Chicago & North-Western Railway Company built 474 miles of line through the most fertile portions of Iowa and Minnesota. These new lines of railway are now in full operation and are dotted with promising towns, which are trade centers for well located communities. A descriptive pamphlet with a list of business opportunities in each town may be obtained upon application to agents of the Chicago & North-Western Railway or to W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger & Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

How to Cure Croup.

Mr. R. Gray, who lives near Amenia, Duchess county, N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croup cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of the cough Remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Proposed New Laws.

Already a good deal of business has been mapped out for the coming legislature among the bills that have been prepared are the following:

$1,000 Worth of Good.

A. H. Thurness of Wills Creek Coal Co., Buffalo, O., writes: "I have been afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble for years, passing gravel or stones, excruciating pain. Other medicines only give relief. After taking Foley's Kidney Cure the result was surprising. A few doses started the brick dust, like fine stones, etc., and now I have no pain across my kidneys and I feel like a new man. Foley's Kidney Cure has done me $1,000 worth of good. Take no substitute. H. B. McCord

Queer Turkey Hunt.

A dispatch from Myeredale, Pa., Nov. 28, says: The wholesale shooting of turkeys in a town of 3,500 population was witnessed here this morning when fifty of the birds belonging to Charles Platt escaped from a farmer's wagon. When Mr. Platt pursued the turkeys they all took to the housetops. Mr. Platt, not being a good shot, employed H. G. Stahl, an expert with a rifle, to shoot the turkeys. Stahl, with an assistant, went around with a ladder and a gun shooting the turkeys from the roofs of store and dwellings. Not one escaped.

Pity and Beauty

The most beautiful thing in the world is the baby, all dimples and joy. The most pitiful thing is that same baby, thin and in pain. And the mother does not know that a little fat makes all the difference.

Dimples and joy have gone, and left hollows and fear; the fat, that was comfort and color and curve--all but pity and love--is gone.

The little one gets no fat from her food. There is something wrong; it is either her food or food-mill. She has had no fat for weeks; is living on what she had stored in that plump little body of hers; and that is gone. She is starving for fat; it is death, be quick!

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the fat she can take; it will save her.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.
If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

SENTINEL PRIZES.

John P. Ratts of Waveland gets the $300 Prize.

The democrats get left even in the matter of prizes in the Sentinel's guessing contest. Most of the democrats guessed on Bryan's plurality in in the state. But most of those who guessed McKinley would carry the state were republicans. And of course republicans get the money. The Sentinel waited till the official count was in, which was on Monday, and Wednesday, announced the result which we give today.

The official count of the electoral vote in Indeana having been completed, and President McKinley's plurality having been announced as 27,479, the first six prizes in The State Sentinel guessing contest have been awarded as follows:

John P. Ratts, Waveland, Ind., (guess, 26,411), first prize, $300.

L. J. Calglozier, Hooker, Ind., (guess, 26,511), second prize, $200.

S. B. Weaver, Kokomo, Ind., (guess, 26,266), third prize, $100.

C. E. Inman, Arcadia, Ind., (guess, 26,000), fourth prize, $75.

James H. Hamilton, city, (guess, 27,000), fifth prize, $50.

Berge Follett, Tremont, Ind., (guess, 27,000), sixth prize, $25.

FIFTH PRIZE AWARDED.

Mr. Hamilton receives the first prize over Mr. Follett by reason of his guess having reached the Sentinel office three days previous to the date of Mr. Follett's guess. Seventy more prizes remain to be awarded as follows.

Five prizes of $15, five of $10, ten of $5, twenty-five of $2 and twenty-five of $1. A large clerical force is at work upon the remaining prize list and all will be announced in tomorrow's issue of the Sentinel.

The money will be paid to the fortunate guessers Tuesday, Dec. 4.

GUESSING CONTEST INAUGURATED.

The State Sentinel guessing contest, closing with the awards given above, was inaugurated early in the presidential campaign which has just ended. The offer included a year's subscription to the Sentinel at the extraordinarily low price of fifty cents per year, each subscription entitling the subscriber to one thousand dollars worth of prizes, arranging from three hundred dollars to one dollar, the total amount being divided into seventy-six awards. The guesses were on the pluralities to be received by the successful presidential candidate in the state of Indiana.

RIVALRY WAS EXTENSIVE.

From the first announcement the most lively interest was manifested in the contest in Indiana and adjoining states, and the rivalry extended as far west as the Pacific coast, and as far south as Texas, numerous guesses being received from Montana, Washington, California, and many states of the south. The success of the enterprise was astonishing even to those who were most enthusiastic at its inauguration. Guesses and subscriptions poured into the Sentinel office rapidly from the first day after the initial advertisement appeared, and from the middle of October until election day every mail brought hundreds of half dollars with their accompanying guesses. A large extra clerical force became necessary to the handling of the subscriptions and the bulk of mail broke all records for a similar enterprise in Indiana.

Auburn's Corn Trade.

For many years, but little corn has been shipped from DeKalb county. The most of it was fed out and shipped as pork, beef and poultry. Sometimes we had to ship into the county, large amounts to supply our deficiency, and usually at a high price. Now, however, we are gradually finding that it pays to raise corn to send away. We were talking the other day to P. L. Bishop who buys grain at the Wabash elevators. He began to look up this line of business two years ago, and got it nicely started then, since which time the business has grown. In 1898 he shipped out twenty-one cars for his first season's work. Last year he shipped from here, over 60,000 bushels, and now at the beginning of the present season he has been doing quite a good business. Of course he buys at other points. He begins at Moores, and goes as far as Roann. The corn is shipped to Auburn in the ear, and at the elevator here he has a corncheller, and it is shelled before its final shipment. It looks a little odd to see a big pile of cobs such as one is in the habit of seeing at elevators in the prairie states farther west. It begins to look, also, as if the recent uncertainty in the wheat crop, would induce many farmers to give more attention to corn and not so much to wheat. The continued low price of wheat has made it unprofitable even when the yield was fair.

Badly Burned.

Ed. Baker, jr., was badly burned this morning at his father's bakery. He was taking from the oven a ham they had been cooking, when the grease spilled and ignited, the flame burning and scalding his arm from the wrist to the elbow. It is quite a painful injury.

Our Saturday Evenings.

CHAPTER LIX.

Indiana is about an average state in size and population, with 92 good counties and no poor ones. We recently spoke in the Saturday chapter of Brown county as being the only county without a railroad. It has been generally so stated. But our friend, Cal Husselman, who has been over that part of the state a great deal, is of the opinion that there are two or three others near it, in which he was never able to find a railroad. It may be.

But speaking of the size of states, Delaware has three counties only. They are Newcastle, Kent and Sussex, with a total population less than that of our Twelfth congressional district.

Rhode Island has about twice as many people, but until lately she had two state capitals, for the people could not agree on one. For a time, the legislature met alternately at Providence and at Newport. There had to be a state house of each. Lately, the meetings at Newport have been limited to a formal session of one week only. Now that is stopped and Providence only is the capital city.

Neither Idaho, Nevada nor Wyoming has as many inhabitants as are contained according to law in each congressional district of the old states.

The present ratio of representation is about 174,000. The ratio under the new census will be about 210,000. Idado has 161,771 inhabitants, Nevada has 42,334, Wyoming has 92,531. Nevada has actually fallen off in population since 1890. Its loss is over 3,400. Montana, which had less than the ratio when it was admitted to the union in 1889, has so increased in population that it has more than the ratio likely to be adopted in the next apportionment.

Although Nevada is apparently a decaying state, its admission to the union was an event which might be described as connected with the romance of national history. It came into the union in 1864 when the thirteenth amendment abolishing slavery in the states was pending. The validity of the amendment required that it should be ratified by three-fourths of the states. On the theory that the states in rebellion never were out of the union, there were not enough loyal states to ratify the amendment. It became necessary to admit a new loyal state.

Under these phenomenal circumstances a constitutional convention was hastily summoned in Nevada, then a territory, a state constitution was adopted, a copy was telegraphed to Washington at an expense of $6,000 in gold, and the state was admitted on this certified dispatch in time to vote for the ratification of the abolition amendment With this history the people of the large states have been tolerant of Nevada, although it has been known as a "rotten borough" in the union ever since its admission.

By the census of 1890 Delaware had less population than the congressional ratio. Its increase in ten years has been sufficient for it to catch up with the present ratio. But it will still be "shy" 20,000 or more under the new apportionment. Delaware, however, is one of the original states. It holds its representation in congress under the original compact between the states. It has a single member of congress by right of the agreement under which it entered the union. No such plea can be made for the right of overrepresentation enjoyed by the inadequate new states admitted to the union under political pressure.

The great wrong of admitting new states with an inadequate population does not consist much in the fact that they have representation in the house. As territories they had delegates. It consists in the fact that they have each two senators. Nevada, with a population 42,000, Wyoming, with a population of 92,500, have each the same number of senators as Illinois, with almost 5,000,000 population, or New York with over 7,000,000 population. From this source—the equal representation of the "rotten borough" states in the senate—comes the principal danger of corrupt congressional legislation.

Marvin Kuhns Escapes.

The noted desperado, Marvin Kuhns escaped yesterday from the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus. He was down in the basement repairing the radiators, being a handy man at almost anything. When the guard was not looking he crawled out the hole where coal is poured in. At least that is what is believed. It was the last seen of him. He will be remembered as the man who had such a fight with officers, Kemelly, Wilkinson and Jackson of Churubusco. He had been suspected of murdering a man named Campu, at Fostoria, a partner of his in horse buying, and officers were after him. After the Churubusco fight, and he was well enough to be moved, he was lodged in Fort Wayne, and later brought to Auburn where Ohio officers got papers for him and once took him away. He was sentenced for life.

Phoeba Dermott.

Phoeba Dermott nee Coburn, was born in Warren, Trumbull county, O., August 27, 1825, died at her home in Concord township, DeKalb county, Indiana, Nov. 22, 1900, aged 75 years, 2 months and 25 days. She was the oldest child of Asher and Hannah Coburn. He parents moved to DeKalb county when she was ten years of age, thus being among the first pioneers. She united with the Christian church at Coburn Corners when sixteen years of age, having the longest continued membership of any member of the congregation.

She was married to Jacob Dermott Oct. 23, 1845. To this union five children were born, four sons and one daughter, one son dying in infancy. She leaves three sons and one daughter nine grandchildren and a host of friends and neighbors to mourn her loss. Her father, mother, sister and brother all preceded her. Her husband died January 31, 1900. One of her last requests was that she might soon join him and be at rest. She was a devoted wife and mother, a kind and true neighbor. Funeral services were at the residence, Rev. L. W. Fairfield of Angola officiating. Interment at Coburn cemetery.

A Postmaster's View of It.

BLOOMINGDALE, IND., Feb. 20, 1899.
Pepsin Syrup Co.

GENTLEMEN:—After having given Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a fair trial in my family, I unhesitatingly pronounce it a boon to all suffering from indigestion, constipation and dyspepsia in all their forms with all their train of evil consequences. I have fought dyspepsia and constipation of a severe character for 25 years, have employed the most skilled physicians that I could reach, have spent hundreds of dollars and now I find more relief in this pleasant remedy than I have found in anything else. To all persons of sedentary occupations in life, I wish to say, buy it and use it. I have spent 12 years at the postmaster's desk, averaging 14 hours per day, and know now if I had had this remedy years ago it would have saved me much suffering.

Don't Happen Often.

A few days ago, as the new fast train over the B. & O. pulled into Garrett, an unusual thing happened for a road methodically controlled as the B. & O. is. As a general rule, a train changes engines at Garrett, but this train does not. It merely changes the fireman and engineer, who go right on with the same engine. On this occasion the fireman was on hand ready to get on the engine, but his engineer was not to be seen. The fireman who had just come in, rushed home as usual, and the engineer was about to do so, when he saw the new man was not in view. There was a hasty consultation of the headquarters officials, and the faithful engine was taking in deep breaths ready to begin its extra run. But no engineer came. There was no help for it. That train must go, and the tired, dirty and hungry engineer, in sight of home and a warm supper, had to climb back into the cab and pull out It takes patience, faithfulness and endurance to be a good trainman.

The VanLiew Case.

—Mrs. Emma VanLiew of Van Wert, Ohio, charged with throwing vitriol into the face of a neighbor, Miss Hammil, with fatal results, was brought into court yesterday and plead guilty to manslaughter. She was given ten years in the penetentiary, and taken there at once. Her husband is a banker and had been county recorder. It is supposed she had taken offense at criticisms Miss Hammil had made as to the conduct of her married daughter.

A TELLING INCIDENT.

A widow with two noble young boys traded her country home for a cottage in one of our towns. The cottage was near a little shoe shop where the honest workman plied his honest trade to the hurt of nobody. These boys went and came, in their daily toil, and were innocent and happy about the cottage door of their widowed mother. But a saloon took the place of the shoe shop and the music in the saloon attracted these boys. Awhile they stood on the outside and listened, and then they stood on the inside, and then the saloon got on the inside of them and you know the old story. The mother wept over her drunken boys. The oldest, intoxicated on the public square, picked a quarrel with a man, drew his knife and started towards him, and was shot down on the street. They carried his bleeding body to his broken-hearted mother. It was but a short time until the other boy came to his death through that same saloon. And this widow joined the great army of suffering mothers who make contributions of the precious boys to the infernal traffic. A little while after her last boy was buried the saloon took fire at midnight, and from it her little cottage caught fire, and she barely escaped with her life. She sat upon a pile of wood in her yard at the midnight hour and with a sad face in her wrinkled hands, while the dying embers of her little cottage threw their ghosts upon her pitiful form. The crowd that gathered were moved by the picture. A subscription was started, and soon a man stood by her saying, "Don't cry any more, we have raised money enough to replace your little house." Lifting her face from her her hands she said: "I wan't crying about the little house. It wan't much noway. I wan't crying about the furniture: there was little of it. But that same old saloon burned up John and Willie and nobody got up a paper to save my boys, and if you can not bring back John and Willie, don't bother about the little house. My life is ruined anyway."

W. C. T. U. CENSUS COMPLETE.

The results of the annual census of the W. C. T. U. show an aggregrate gain in membership for the year above all losses of 14 000 making a total membership in the Un ted States of 300,000, of whom 150,000 are active members. The national dues (not including local and state funds) for the year have amounted to $15,000, and extra assessments for the Frances Willard memorial fund amounted to $3,000.

CORN SQUEEZE OFF.

Plunger Phillips Settles With the November Shorts.

Chicago special: Finding themselves unable to produce enough contract No. 2 corn to fill sales made to George H. Phillips for November delivery, the shorts, including several leading elevator firms, it was announced Wednesday on the board of trade, had agreed to settle their shortage at 50 cents. The announcement came as a great surprise to those traders who had "tailed" the Phillips operation. At the moment, November corn was selling around 50 cents, one cent from the highest price on the deal. A rush to sell followed and the markets made no halt until just before the closing bell when it rested at 41 cents.

Various estimates were hazzard as to the profits of the "squeeze." As Phillips is said to have accumulated a line of more than two million bushels around 35 cents and it was admitted that his profits must have reached into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. On this point Phillips was, however, entirely non-committal.

Great Britian Shocked.

Lord Roberts cables from Johannesburg under date of Wednesday, Nov. 30:

"The DeWetsdorp garrison of two guns of Sixty-eight battery, with detachments of the Gloucestershire regiment, the Highland light infantry and Irish rifles, 400 in all, surrendered at 5:30 p. m. Nov. 25. Our losses were 15 men killed and 42 wounded, including Major Hansen and Captain Digby. The enemy is said to be 2,500 strong. Four hundred men were dispatched from Edenburg to relieve DeWetsdorp but they did not succeed in reaching there in time."

London special: The disaster at DeWetsdorp has sent a thrill of alarm through Great Britain.

Will Retain Isle of Pines.

The United States will retain possession of the Isle of Pines whatever the final disposition of Cuba, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Journal and Advertiser. It will be fortified and a strong garrison will be kept there. Lying south of the western end of Cuba, the Isle of Pines commands the western part of Yucatan entrance to the Gulf and forms an important outpost for the defense of the Nicaragua canal. While Secretary Root visited Cuba he went to the island and recognized its strategic importance. The state department now holds that under the treaty of peace the Isle of Pines passed to the Unithd States. Secretary Root holds a similar view.

Train in the River.

The night express for Cleveland, on the Cleveland & Pittsburg road, was thrown in the river two miles below Beaver, Pa. The scanty information at hand shows one man drowned and four others badly hurt. The accident occurred at a point where extensive fill-ins have been made and it is supposed the high water had washed the fill from under the track and let the entire train of engine and five cars into the Ohio river. The excitement was indescribable. The passengers were compelled to break their way out from the cars by breaking the windows and climbing to the bank.

Roasted to Death.

Thirteen people were killed and seventy badly injured by the collapse of the roof of the Pacific Glass Works, at San Francisco, while it was crewded with men and boys watching a foot ball game on the field adjoining. About eighty-five people fell through the roof upon the red-hot furnaces and glass vats below. All were horribly burned, and it is feared that in addition to the thirteen deaths already reported there will be several more.

Plot Against Roberts.

According to a special edition of the London Evening Standard, a plot to assassinate Lord Roberts, in which twenty foreigners are concerned, has been discovered. It appears that the conspirators laid a mine which was designed to be blown up while Lord Roberts was in church at Johannesburg, but the police and Lord Roberts' bodyguard frustrated the conspiracy. Ten men, mostly Italians, have been arrested.

Senator Davis Dead.

United States Senator Cushman Kellogg Davis, chairman of the committee on foreign relations of the Senate, died at his home in St. Paul, Minn., after an illness of two months. He has suffered greatly during his sickness and gradually sank away, being unconscious for several hours before death, and so far as could be known suffering no pain.

New York Publisher Dead.

Robert Dorr, the publisher of the New York Mail and Express, died at his residence in that city.

EASTERN.

The torpedo boat Blakely was launched at the works of George Lawley & Son, South Boston.

President McKinley, the members of the cabinet and Secretary Cortelyou attended a Union League banquet in Philadelphia.

A break in the sixty-mile level of the Erie canal four miles west of Rome, N. Y., washed out 100 feet of the banks. The water flooded the flats. All boats on the level were grounded.

Henry Seelig, a swindler whose stealings may aggregate $1,000,000, and who has been a fugitive from justice for four years, was arrested in New York City. He is said by the police to have been swindling Chicago merchants.

Arthur Kinney, 23 years old, committed suicide at Waverly, N. Y., by blowing off the side of his head with a shotgun. He was one of the gunners on the Marblehead when the Spanish cable was cut at Cardenas, and was honorably discharged last May.

A taste for gambling and evil companions has resulted in the downfall of Christopher Weiss of South River, N. J., who has left for parts unknown. Weiss was the bookkeeper at the American Enameled Brick and Tile works, and had stolen $6,000.

The Real Estate Investment Company of Philadelphia made an assignment to John J. Ridgeway, the president and a principal stockholder of the company. The assets of the company, it is said, amount to $300,000, while its liabilities are $100,000.

J. Hamilton Brown, wealthy and widely known throughout the United States and Europe as an inventor of ordnance, was quietly married in Brooklyn last August to Miss Helen Wilson, a waitress in a New York restaurant. He is about 60 years old, and his bride is 22.

Word was received at New York police headquarters that a clerk of the Seaboard Air Line had been arrested at Fernandina, Fla., for the theft of $50,000 from that line. It is said that the money taken by this clerk was lost through speculation with the firm of C. B. Lawrence & Co., that recently failed in New York and the principals of which are now under arrest.

WESTERN.

Floods were reported all along the Ohio valley. Damage to property at various points is considerable.

Leonard Day, son of a millionaire Minnesota lumberman, who died a few years ago, was killed in a midnight brawl in the West Hotel, Minneapolis.

The Akron, Ohio, Board of Education is planning to equip all the school buildings with bath rooms. J. W. Kelley, a prominent member of the board, originated the idea.

While lightering the cargo of the stranded steamer Isaac Ellwood in Mud lake, Michigan, the forward boiler of the lighter Stewart blew up, killing three men and injuring six others.

Fire destroyed the general merchandise store of Begole & Van Arsdale at Beatrice, Neb., causing a loss of $85,000. Several other smaller firms located in the same building were burned out.

The death of W. H. Lawrence at his home at Dover Bay, a Cleveland suburb, was indirectly due to his participation in a lawn tennis game last July, when he broke his arm while swinging at a ball.

Mrs. William J. Harris was granted a divorce by Judge Richardson in Spokane, Wash. Harris agrees to give her $125,000, as provided in their original agreement, and settles $25,000 upon her daughter Louise.

First Lieutenant Solon S. Arnold, U. S. N., from Port Orchard dry dock, was found in the Seattle tenderloin. He is out of his mind, and everything goes to show that he was stripped, robbed and clubbed by thugs.

Frank Speasmaker, postmaster and prominent business man, was found dead in his place of business at London, Ohio, by one of his clerks. He had shot himself in the head with a revolver taken from his show case.

Mrs. Caroline Clark Quantrell of Canal Dover, Ohio, mother of William Clark Quantrell, the famous guerrilla chieftain, has been admitted to the I. O. O. F. Home at Springfield. She is a little past 80 years of age.

The Union Pacific accomplished a run with the fast mail from Grand Island into Omaha which will go down in the annals of fast running as one of the record-breakers. The entire distance, 154 miles, was made in 150 minutes.

George G. Moler & Son, the largest and most fashionable dry goods and department store firm in Columbus, Ohio, made an assignment. The liabilities, according to a statement issued by the firm, are $133,000, and the assets $156,000.

Joe Mulhatton, known as "king of liars" among traveling salesmen, was sent to the insane asylum at Phoenix, Ariz. His trouble is attributed to overindulgence in alcoholic stimulants. He has been operating a mine near Florence.

A bank was opened at the village of Burns, Kan., and before 4 o'clock the same day $100,000 had been deposited in its vaults. Farmers, stockmen and citizens went into the little town with their money in old tin cans, stockings and purses.

A burglar entered the house of Jacob Goldman in Cleveland. Goldman's son Aaron, who was awakened by the intruder, grappled with the robber and was shot through the jaw and may die. Mrs. Goldman was also shot in the breast. The burglar escaped.

G. H. Zscheck, a botanist of Chicago, who has been visiting in St. Louis for several days, has made a discovery in one of the parks which he believes of importance to the botanical world. He is pretty certain that he has discovered a new plant, which he will investigate and name.

With one end of a rope tied around his neck and the other fastened to a beam, Robert Crotty, 10 years old, was found dead hanging about two feet above the floor of the porch in the rear of his parents' home in Chicago. The police think the case one of murder.

During a heavy gale of wind fire destroyed the Tiffin, Ohio, woolen mills. For a time the entire central portion of the city was threatened. The loss will exceed $100,000, partially insured. One hundred and twenty-five hands are thrown out of employment.

Chicago's commerce for the year 1900 will show a great falling off as compared to that of previous years, says Lyman E. Cooley. The engineer further declares that the commerce of the city has not maintained a relative growth equal to that of other parts of the world.

William Goepper, a Cincinnati street railway conductor who had been drinking heavily, attempted to kill his wife with a dumbbell and seriously injured her. When he thought he had killed her and the neighbors closed in on him he killed himself by shooting through his head.

Mrs. Frederick Williams, a prominent widow of Ashtabula, Ohio, flogged George Close, a well-known man of Painesville, in Toledo, most unmercifully. She knocked him into the mud and then used an umbrella upon him until she wore it out. She claims Close eloped with her young daughter.

Adele Nelson, a pretty 16-year-old San Francisco girl, filed suit for $10,000 damages against her former employer, John Kebs, a wealthy wholesale baker. In her allegation she declares that while she was busy performing an office task Kebs stealthily approached her, and, throwing his arms around her waist, kissed her.

Several hundred Indians in San Diego County, Cal., are threatened with starvation. They have made no provision for the winter, and are now suffering for want of food. Children and women are almost naked and there is not enough food in many of the lodges to keep the inhabitants thereof alive through the winter.

Mrs. Bridget Sullivan entered Probate Judge James P. Goodwin's office at Springfield, Ohio, and shot at him with a 32-caliber revolver. The bullet lodged in a box containing papers two feet above the judge's head. Mrs. Sullivan became enraged at the judge for committing her stepson, Frank Shaefer, to the Columbus asylum.

SOUTHERN.

Pearl Newman was convicted of murder in the first degree for killing William J. McCauley, an actor, whose home was in Philadelphia, at Huntington, W. Va., last October.

In the Kentucky Court of Appeals the case of Caleb S. Powers vs. the Commonwealth was submitted without argument. Powers is under life sentence as an accessory to the Goebel murder.

Ben Heflin, a 10-year-old boy, stabbed the 13-year-old son of J. F. Pennell to death at West Union, W. Va. The tragedy was the result of a quarrel caused by Pennell throwing Heflin's hat away.

The killing of two children by panthers in La Salle County, Texas, has aroused the ranchmen and cowboys of that part of the State, and a big hunt is being organized for the purpose of rounding up and slaughtering all the panthers and wolves to be found in La Salle and adjacent counties.

Sixteen hundred miners of Hopkins County, Ky., refused to obey the strike order of John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and continued to dig coal at the old rates. The miners are content with the wage scale as it exists, but the miners in the adjoining counties are dissatisfied.

Meager accounts of casualties by flood are coming in from west Tennessee. A few miles north of Dyersburg a woman and two children in a buggy were thrown into deep back-water by the sloughing of a levee over which they were passing, and all were drowned. At the south fork of the Forked Deer river a negro track hand of the Illinois Central was drowned. A mail carrier was drowned in Caney creek near Glymph by the upsetting of his buggy as he was attempting to ford the stream.

Terrific rumblings and reports startled the citizens of Bingamon Creek, W. Va., on a recent evening. The people rushed from their homes and beheld the hillside caving in, and great avalanches of earth, stone and coal rolling toward the creek. At daylight it was seen that five coal mines in that vicinity had been utterly destroyed. The strata of limestone above the coal had been rent, and the bluff or hillside, a half-mile long and twenty feet deep, was precipitated to Bingamon creek below, a distance of 100 feet, forcing the stream out of its natural course some distance.

Rev. Oliver C. Miller, a chaplain voluntarily attached to the Fourth cavalry, has reported at the War Department, having been invalided home from the Philippines. He says he knows of no city in the United States where there is so little crime or where crime is followed so quickly by punishment as in Manila.

The Pere Marquette Railway Company is going to place carrier pigeons on its fleet of six car ferries and line steamers, which will be in service on Lake Michigan during the coming winter. The dangers of winter navigation and the necessity of prompt news from vessels caught in the great ice floes are the leading causes of this novel move.

Bradstreet's says: "Unsettled weather conditions have operated to curtail retail and jobbing distribution this week, and imparted a quieter tone to several lines indirectly associated therewith. Stock speculation, too, has been less rampant, and last week's record of bank clearings has, therefore, not been equaled. There is, however, little or no apparent loss of basic strength, and, indeed, the general level of staple prices has been slightly advanced. This latter movement is most notable in the iron and steel trades, in raw cotton and to a lesser degree in the cereals and some hog products. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 3,827,296 bushels, against 4,062,020 last week. Corn exports for the week aggregate 5,235,568 bushels, against 3,976,914 last week.

TERMS TOO HARSH.

UNITED STATES REFUSES ASSENT TO PEKIN PACT.

Conger Notified that He Must Not Approve the Present Agreement as It Now Stands—Negotiations with Powers for a Modification of Demands.

Instructions went forward to Minister Conger Tuesday directing him not to assent to the agreement adopted by the ministers of the powers at Pekin until its terms had been greatly modified. In addition to these instructions, a Washington correspondent says, the government has entered into an interchange of views with the powers through their representatives in Washington and the United States ambassadors and ministers abroad to bring about such changes in the Pekin agreement as will permit the Chinese authorities to comply with the conditions set forth in that paper.

Through the action of the Secretary of State in making known to the powers a week ago the instructions sent to Minister Conger not to insist on impossible conditions, the government has succeeded in securing the views of nearly all the other nations in regard to the conditions which have now been tentatively adopted by Mr. Conger and his colleagues at Pekin. The views of Great Britain, Russia, Japan and France have been expressed to the government, and they are of such a character as to justify the hope that a more moderate policy than that outlined by the ministers will be arranged by the powers themselves.

It is too early yet, however, to indulge in optimistic views, for none of the powers is obliged to consent to any modified program that may be adopted by a majority of the nations. The main hope of this government that an agreement satisfactory to all concerned will be reached is based on the indications that nearly all the powers are willing to make modifications and the desire for harmony prevailing among them.

Demands Presented by Germany.

It is learned on the best authority that the agreement of the ministers at Pekin is along the lines of the French note presented to the powers early in October, but the proposals are of the radical character suggested by Count von Buelow, the German Chancellor, in his speech to the Reichstag on Nov. 19. In that speech Count von Buelow said: "We have nothing to gain by a partition of China, and we do not desire it."

Germany's good faith in that declaration of Count von Buelow is shown by the fact that the agreement of the ministers contains no reference to territorial indemnity. It is understood that the conditions adopted by the ministers are practically the same as that outlined by Count von Buelow, as follows:

1. The execution of eleven guilty princes.
2. Suspension of examinations for office for five years where the outrages occurred.
3. Erection of a monument to Baron von Ketteler at the scene of his murder and an apology to the German government by an imperial prince sent to Berlin for that purpose.
4. Edict announcing the dismissal and punishment of all officials in provinces where anti-foreign outrages may occur in the future.
5. Indemnity to states, corporations and individuals, including compensation to native Christians employed by foreigners.
6. Erection of monuments in every Christian burial ground where graves have been profaned.
7. Imperial proclamation suppressing Boxers and punishing leaders.
8. Reorganization of tsung-li-yamen and foreign affairs intrusted to one minister.
9. Recognition of the right of representatives of foreign powers to confer personally with emperor as in civilized countries.
10. Legations and line of communication between Pekin and the sea to be guarded by foreign troops.
11. Free worship in all parts of China.
12. Modifications of existing treaties for the extension of trade.
13. All forts on coast of China to be dismantled and importation of war material prohibited.

MRS. LEASE SEEKS DIVORCE.

Grounds of the Complaint Are Nonsupport and Incompatibility.

Mrs. Mary E. Lease will, it is said, file suit in the District Court of Wichita, asking that divorce be granted her from her husband, Charles Lease. She will charge incompatibility and failure to provide. Mr. Lease says he will not contest the suit. For the last three years Mr. and Mrs. Lease have not lived together. During the seven years prior to that she was in politics and was at home little of the time. Three years ago she wanted her husband to go to New York and live, so she could give her voice a wider scope, but he refused and is said to have objected to her going. She went anyway, and took her three children with her.

MARY E. LEASE.

Mrs. Lease is making very little money now out of her lectures. Last summer when Mrs. Lease changed her politics, her husband scored her in an interview. He said recently that he was getting tired of being referred to as "the husband of Mrs. Lease." He said that she was a very bright woman, so far as learning went, but that she was no kind of a wife for him. She will not ask for the restoration of her maiden name. They have been married twenty-seven years.

Mrs. Lease is a native of Pennsylvania. After her marriage with Mr. Lease in 1873 and her removal to Wichita, she was carried to the front by the political revolution in Kansas. She had already become proficient in the practice of law, and at once attracted attention as a leader of the Populist party. She made a national reputation by her intensely bitter opposition to the candidacy of the late John J. Ingalls for the United States Senate, and later by the campaigning she did in the South for Gen. Weaver, the Populist candidate for President.

CHAS. LEASE.

Mr. Lease is one of the solid, substantial citizens of the town, and is by no means the mere satellite of his brilliant wife, as those who do not know him imagine.

RIVERS IN A FLOOD.

Disaster Along the Monongahela, the Allegheny and the Ohio.

The damage done by the storm which swept the Atlantic seaboard, the eastern lake region and the Ohio valley Sunday and Monday can scarcely be estimated because reports have not been received from numerous localities where the loss was greatest. In Pennsylvania and West Virginia the damage by flood will reach into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. As far west as the State of Ohio the wind and rain wrought great destruction of property.

In their mad rush the waters ruined hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property, caused the loss of several lives, temporarily threw out of employment thousands of workmen by the forced suspension of the many industrial establishments lining the banks of both the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers, and rendered hundreds of families homeless.

From Ohio points come stories of desolation and destruction of property. In Columbus trees all over the city were broken and twisted and trains from all directions are badly delayed. At Chagrin Falls the telephone switchboard burned out and set fire to half a dozen houses. At Cambridge several buildings were blown down and their contents destroyed. The Ohio river and all streams in the southern portion of the State are rising rapidly. A reservoir, located a mile above Chauncey, burst and flooded the town. Nearly every residence in the place was damaged. A hundred yards of railroad track was washed out. One hundred men working in the Chauncey mine narrowly escaped drowning.

Trains all through Tennessee were badly delayed. No trains reached Paducah, Ky., over the Nashville and Chattanooga line for three days. Rain fell incessantly for more than fifty hours throughout West Virginia, and all the streams are overflowing. The Kanawha at Charleston reached the danger point, and people in the lowlands hastily moved out. In the Guyandotte valley the river and its tributaries are overflowing their banks and are bearing away quantities of property. Nine thousand logs have gone out, taking with them the false work of the two new Guyandotte Valley Railroad bridges south of Barboursville. Loss estimated at $20,000 to $25,000. The track of the new Guyandotte Valley Railroad, just completed to Salt Rock, a distance of eighteen miles, has been almost ruined.

ASKS FOR NEW SHIPS.

Secretary Long's Annual Report on Naval Affairs.

Two new battleships, two armored cruisers, six gunboats and half a dozen smaller vessels are asked of Congress by Secretary of the Navy Long in his annual report to the President. The request is more moderate than those of the general board of the navy, of which Admiral Dewey is head, and of the board of construction, made to the Secretary, but the appropriations necessary for the construction of the vessels would be at least $10,000,000 as it is.

Secretary Long makes his recommendations briefly and without urging them, but he puts them forward as desirable in the prospective development of the naval force.

There are now under way in the ship yards eight battleships and forty-five other vessels of all classes. During the past year three battleships, the Alabama, Kearsarge and Kentucky, one protected cruiser, the Albany, and two torpedo boats, have been finally conditionally accepted by the government.

Among other recommendations made is one that the grade of vice admiral be revived by Congress, that means be found for establishing a national reserve in addition to the naval militia of the various States, and that a hall of public records be built for the preservation not only of the accumulated records of the Navy Department, but also of all other executive departments. The building of a large dry dock in the Philippines and the erection of a statue to Admiral Porter are also recommended.

TWO VETERAN VOTERS.

One Lives in Maine and the Other in Iowa.

The first vote cast in Bowdoinham, Me., at the late election was thrown by Uncle Eben Lancaster, who is in his one hundred and second year. The veteran cast his first vote for James Madison in 1817. That was in November. Uncle Eben was 21 years old in October, 1817. Since then he has voted for every President down the line.

EBEN LANCASTER

William Zimmer, the centenarian of Clinton, Iowa, cast his first vote for James Monroe in 1820. He was born in April, 1799. He is hale and hearty and is seen on the streets of Clinton every fair day. He was born in Schoharie County, New York.

WM. ZIMMER.

Gave Up a Fortune for a Husband.

By the provisions of her late husband's will, Mrs. Lillian T. Edgerton of Plantsville, Ohio, inherited an estate valued at $80,000 and received $10,000 in life insurance, which she was to retain so long as she remained single. If she remarried, the property, with the possible exception of some $10,000, was to go to their children. All this wealth Mrs. Edgerton has sacrificed for love of a farm hand named Frank Baredon, who has been in her employ, and this week they were married.

Deaths from Gun-Shot Wounds.

Brig. Gen. George R. Sternberg, surgeon general of the army, has inserted in his annual report some interesting comments on comparisons of gunshot wounds received by American soldiers in the Spanish-American and Philippine wars with wounds inflicted by the heavier bullets used in the Civil War. The deduction drawn from comparative records is that the small-caliber bullet of today is less deadly than the old-time musket ball.

News of Minor Note.

The wine crop of Germany is as immense as that of France.

German agrarians demand that the government double the duties on tobacco.

A tannery at Rancho Del Chopo, Mex., was burned. Loss estimated at $500,000.

Many of the Italian railroads are to be shortly transformed to the electric system.

From all parts of the South come reports of a very unusual crop of sweet potatoes.

A new island has been formed out at sea, about ten miles from the mouth of the Rhone.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Killed and Dragged in Mud—Eccentric Men Die Unknown to Neighbors—Contract Let for Long Electric Lines—W. C. T. U. Will Petition.

Irvin Dye was murdered at Marion, the body being found in the rear of Manehan & Son's store, where it had been placed by his slayers after dragging the body through the mud from the rear of the Black Prince saloon. The officers learned that Dye and Albert Gallon were in company with two young women at Gallon's home early in the evening, and that they were joined by Thomas Hawkins, and the party walked down the street to the central part of the city. Dye, Hawkins and Gallon were seen later in the Black Prince saloon. The officers are working on the theory that the murder resulted from jealousy over a love affair.

Chicago Men to Build Road.

The Central Traction Company has awarded the contract for the construction of the electric line between Indianapolis and Kokomo. The road passes through Noblesville and Tipton and will furnish rapid transit service to such other small towns en route as Broad Ripple, Westfield, Cicero, Arcadia and Atlanta, paralleling the Lake Erie and Western part of the way. At Tipton a branch is proposed east to Elwood, while the main line will continue directly north to Kokomo. The entire length of line as finally surveyed and agreed upon is sixty-five miles. The construction work was let to a Chicago firm and it is understood the consideration is between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000.

Two Men Found Poisoned.

The bodies of the two erratic Holland brothers of Peru, Jerry and Pat, aged 62 and 56 respectively, were found in their house, the men evidently having been dead from eight to ten days. Pat was found upstairs face upward and Jerry downstairs in a position almost similar, near the kitchen stove, where natural gas was brightly burning. Food for supper lay untouched on the table. Hurried examinations by physicians show no marks of violence, but the belief is general that the men had been drugged while drinking and had died in a few minutes after reaching home. No reason can be assigned for suicide, as both were noted for jollity of nature.

W. C. T. U. Wants Pure Goods.

The organizations of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in this State will present a memorial to the national convention to be held in Washington, D. C., to create a new department to enforce and maintain the purity of liquors and that Congress be petitioned to pass a law that only pure whiskies be sold at saloons instead of adulterated liquor.

Peru man who found a purse containing $200 and valuable papers would not accept a $50 reward and requested that his name be not mentioned.

The Pendleton Gazette says a Hancock County man bet his wife against a farm, and lost. The woman objected, and the man who won wants the bet declared off, but the other fellow insists on paying.

Little May McPherson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McPherson, Muncie, is dead from diphtheria. She is the last of four children who have yielded to the malady in six weeks. The parents are almost crazed.

An unknown man attempted to assassinate Dr. Peter Drayer, a prominent citizen of Hartford City. Dr. Drayer was passing through an alley when a man fired two shots at him at close range, but failed to wound him.

Jerome D. Knapp, a prominent real estate dealer of Indianapolis, committed suicide at his home by taking strychnine. Mr. Knapp was an active church worker. It is supposed his mind became affected through religious excitement.

Miss Grace Hunt and Mrs. Lillion Rickrich have staked off claims on the Lynville gold field recently discovered in Warrick County and are preparing to work the same. Hundreds of claims are being staked off and people are flocking to the place.

Disappointed in love, Bennett Selwood left his home in Shelby County, in 1859. He learned a few days ago through a newspaper item that his sister had died, and he was the sole heir to her valuable property. He has returned and claimed the property.

Mrs. Burton Wisener, near Union City, had apparently recovered from diphtheria. She told her husband he need sit up with her no longer. Just as she spoke, she threw up her arms and exclaimed, "Oh, Burt, I am dying." Before he reached her she expired.

Addison Fields and Clara Dake, who were married recently at Shelbyville without the consent of her grandfather, Benjamin Dake, the girl afterward being locked in the Dake home and her husband driven from the premises, have been forgiven by the grandparent, who presented the young folks with a check for $2,500.

The charge against Oscar Speer for alleged complicity in the murder of Robert Weaver, at New Point, last July, has been dismissed.

Brooker Brothers of North Manchester, dealers in general merchandise, have made an assignment to A. Tilman. The liabilities are between $6,000 and $7,000 and the assets $12,000.

A man found on the streets of Pennville, raving like mad, was sent to the county infirmary. In a letter found in his valise he said the doctors have an ingenious and invisible way of inserting electric tubes into the pores of his body.

Notre Dame University suffered a fourth loss by fire in the year, resulting in a total destruction of the sacristy and its contents, the loss amounting to not less than $15,000.

Gold and silver have been discovered on the farm of Dr. J. A. Wilde, near Lynnville, and the wildest excitement prevails. Specimens of the ore were sent to a Cincinnati chemist and they tested $15 per ton gold, $3.60 per ton silver.

Martin W. Service, a well-known Lebanon farmer, has disappeared, leaving a note directing a neighbor to take charge of his 160-acre farm and use it for his brother Erastus. The two are bachelors and have lived hermits' lives for years.

He Emptied His Pockets.

The Comte de Corbieres, minister of the interior to Louis XVIII., while working in the king's cabinet one day, became absorbed in his work, and so far forgot himself as to place his snuff box on the king's desk after taking snuff.

The king observed this unheard-of familiarity from the corner of his eye, but said nothing. Presently the minister whipped out his pockethandkerchief ,and placed it beside the snuff box.

"Monsieur de Corbieres," remarked the king at last, "you appear to be emptying your pockets."

"Perhaps so, sire," was the calm response, "but that is much better than filling them."

The king smiled at the clever hit at the corruption of some of the minister's predecessors. Corbieres was noted for his scrupulous integrity.

AN ENEMY TO DRINK.

One Woman Who Has Done a Great Deal to Put Down This Evil.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 3, 1900.—(Special.)—When the Independent Order of Good Templars of Minnesota wanted a State Organizer, they chose Mrs. Laura J. Smith of 1217 West 33d street, this city. The American Anti-Treat League also selected Mrs. Smith as National Organizer. The reason is not far to seek. This gifted woman has devoted her life to a battle against Drink and Drinking Habits. Her influence for good in Minnesota is and has been very far reaching.

About two years ago, however, it seemed as if this noble woman would have to give up her philanthropic work. Severe pains in her back and under her shoulder blades, made life a burden and work impossible. Physicians were consulted, and they prescribed for Kidney Disease. Three months' treatment, however, failed to give Mrs. Smith any relief. Her husband was much exercised, and cast about him for something that would restore his good wife to health and strength. He heard of the cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and advised her to try them, which she did. She is now a well woman and says:

"Two weeks after I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills I felt much better, and at the end of seven weeks was completely cured. I have had no recurrence of the trouble, but I take a pill off and on, and find that it keeps me in good health."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers at 50 cents a box.

They are easily within the reach of all, and no woman can afford to suffer, when such a simple and sure Remedy is at hand.

Curious Irish Pledge.

A society has just been formed in Ireland for the purpose of pushing the sale of Irish goods and of putting a stop to the sale of foreign goods under Irish "colors." This society is called the Irish Shop Assistants' Industrial League, and is the result of a resolve among young men patriotically disposed to serve Irish goods wherever possible. The members sign a pledge which runs as follows: "I hereby promise to do my utmost to sell an Irish-made article on every possible occasion (when not detrimental to my employer's interests), and to do all in my power to promote the objects of the League for the sole purpose of upraising the industries of my country."

Innocence Abroad.

"My dear, you have been very naughty; you must ask God to make you a good child," said a fond mother, on bidding her little girl good-night.

The next morning the child announced:

"Mamma, I asked God last night to make me a good child, and He answered me."

"How did He answer you?"

"Why, he said, 'Great Scott! I know many little girls worse than you are!'" —Harper's Magazine.

Queer Visiting Cards.

In Korea visiting cards are a foot square. The savages of Dahomey announce their visits to each other by a wooden board or the branch of a tree artistically carved. This is sent on in advance, and the visitor, on taking leave, pockets his card, which probably serves him for many years. The natives of Sumatra also have a visiting card consisting of a piece of wood about a foot long and decorated with a bunch of straw and a knife.

DICK CROKER IN ENGLAND.

Glimpses of His Life There from the Pen of a British Writer.

One of the most discussed political figures in the last campaign was Richard Croker, boss of Tammany Hall, who sailed for Europe after it was all over to take the waters of Carlsbad for the benefit of his health. In England, where he spends a portion of each year, Mr. Croker is well known, and the following account of his life there, taken from Black and White, will be read with interest by Americans.

It is now more than five years, says the writer, since Richard Croker came over here to try his fortunes on the English turf and chose for his residence the old Moat House at Letcombe, near Wantage, Berks. People who only know Mr. Croker as the leader of Tammany Hall would be amazed at the quietness and utter lack of ostentation which characterize his life at Letcombe. A man of medium stature, with iron-gray hair, beard and mustache, and a strong American accent, he is often to be seen during the summer months, riding or driving in the neighborhood of Wantage, and anyone who has had the fortune to drive with Mr. Croker is not likely to forget it, for he goes down some of the steep Berkshire hills at a furious pace in his buggy, slashing vigorously with his whip all the time. He will drive a good horse, and that means a very fast trotter, and if a horse he has bought does not please him, no matter what the cost of it, it is just sold for what it will fetch.

A most extraordinary love for animals is one of his characteristics and he had at the Moat House five bulldogs, several prize cats and five St. Bernard dogs. Two of the bulldogs, Rodney Stone—the champion of the world and for which he paid $5,000—and Bromley Crib he took back to America with him, taking first-class passage for both.

To the local charities, the writer continues, he is a liberal subscriber. On Sunday mornings he usually drives over to Hendred, a village six miles distant, to the Roman Catholic Church, and in the afternoons he generally goes to see over his stables and farm. He is a man of immense physical strength, and on one occasion when some men were trying to lift a seven-foot flywheel on to a dynamo, but seemed to have a difficulty in doing so, Mr. Croker got up and put his shoulder under one of the spokes and lifted it himself on to the crankshaft. The tiger's head, with open mouth and teeth showing, which is the badge or coat-of-arms of Tammany, is to be seen here and there in the Moat House. In the drawing room it appears on various menu cards which were used at the great Tammany banquets. The New York papers are a source of unfailing interest to him, and he is often much amused at the cartoons of himself.

MLLE. MARGUERITE DE CASSINI

She Has Been Made a Countess in Her Own Right by the Czar.

Mlle. Marguerite de Cassini, who has just been made a countess in her own right by the Czar, is the grandniece and adopted daughter of Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador to the United States. The new Countess is a lady of remarkable beauty and of most charming personality. She has lived in Washington since she was 17, and has won the admiration of all who have met her. The new title with which she has been honored will establish her rank—which up to the present has been in doubt—among the ladies of the diplomatic set. It was rumored recently that the fair young Countess had been betrothed to M. Pavloff, the Russian minister to Korea, but the report has been denied.

A REMARKABLE ORCHARD.

It Is Over 122 Years Old and Is Still Bearing Fruit.

When Lord Howe landed in Cecil County on his way to capture Philadelphia a number of Friends, from their supposed sympathy with the invading army, were arrested by the Americans and sent to Winchester, Va., as political prisoners. Many of them being of the most respectable and wealthy citizens of the above-named city, they were not long in Winchester before the officers in charge of them, finding them to be men of honor and truth, paroled them on condition that the Friends of the neighborhood would board them free of expense to the then ruling power, says a writer in the Baltimore Sun. Among those who took them I mention Lewis Neale, Abram Hollingsworth and Isaac and David Brown, whose descendants are still living around Winchester.

Isaac Brown, great-grandfather of the writer, had three of the exiled Friends at his home, three miles north of Winchester. While they were with him in the spring of 1778 they planted an orchard with apple trees. Ever since then the orchard has been bearing fruit, and I send you a few of the apples from the orchard on the farm now owned and occupied by two granddaughters of Isaac Brown, Elisau and Catherine Brown, cousins of the writer, who annually send me a box of the apples as a reminder of the many happy days of youth spent with them over three-score and more years ago. The same house occupied by the Friends is still occupied by the present owners.

In the Historical library can be found the diary of the exiled Friends at Winchester, which contains the correspondence their wives had with Gen. Washington when they applied to him for their release. He declined upon the ground that they were state prisoners and were beyond his control.

The Gilpins, Whartons, Pembertons, Fishers, Drinkers, Penningtons and other well-known citizens of Philadelphia are the descendants of the Quakers spoken of above.

ONE OF BOOTH'S SOLDIERS.

American Noblewoman a Worker in the Salvation Army.

The Countess of Tankerville, one of the most devoted members of Gen. William Booth's Salvation Army, is now in this country and is accompanied by her husband, who was also a member of the Salvation Army at Tacoma, Wash., where the two first became acquainted and were married. At that time the Earl of Tankerville was third in succession to the title. The Countess was Miss Lenora Van Marter, a resident of Tacoma, and it was while engaged in army work there that she attracted the Earl's notice. He was so smitten by her rare beauty that he abandoned the gay life he was leading in order to be near her. Together they worked for many months in the streets of Tacoma, doing good to all with whom they came in contact. Finally the young man, by the death of relatives, came into possession of his estates and title. He at once married the young army lass and together they set out for England. Here they despised the gayeties of the social set they were entitled to enter and continued their work in the Salvation Army, winning high praise from Gen. Booth for their zeal and efficiency. They return to the United States to continue their chosen work for a time. Whether or not they will remain permanently has not yet been determined. If the work here shall seem to require their services they will stay; if England offers a more promising field for their endeavors they will return there. In any event they are determined that they will not forsake the army in the days of their prosperity.

Highland Venison.

Most of the red deer venison which finds its way to London is Scotch—wild venison, shot in the forests. There is great difference in quality in this highland venison. To be good, venison needs to be fat, and unlike most game the "artificially fed" deer, or, rather, the deer that enjoys the feed of a good English park, is better for the table than when picking up a hard living on a Scotch mountain, but there are varieties of Scotch deer. Those on forests with plenty of low ground attached grow fat and heavy, and the meat is as good as that of an English park-fed stag. At the end of October and beginning of November the flesh deteriorates rapidly and is rank and poor, evidence, if any were needed, that the shooting ought to have closed earlier, but a good deal of Russian venison, shipped ready and cut up into joints, is very poor stuff. The same rules as to season govern the supply of red deer venison from English parks, but the weight and quality of the latter are superior to the Scotch. Most large proprietors find a sale for their spare venison near home, and consequently it is less common in the market. Red deer hinds are again in season in winter, but the fallow venison is in every way better. Some is even stall fed, and the carcasses show almost as much fat as does small mutton.

Just in Time.

A circus paid a flying visit to a small northern town not long ago, and the price of admission was sixpence, children under 10 years of age half-price. It was Edith's tenth birthday, and her brother Tom, aged 13, took her in the afternoon to see the show.

Arrived at the door he put down ninepence and asked for two front seats.

"How old is the little girl?" asked the money-taker, doubtfully.

"Well," replied Master Tom, "this is her tenth birthday, but she was not born until rather late in the afternoon."

The money-taker accepted the statement, and handed him the tickets. But it was a close shave.—London Spare Moments.

Population of the British Isles.

The census will be taken on the last day of March, 1901. Ten years ago, when the last census took place, the population of the United Kingdom was 37,740,283. The registrar general estimates the present population at 40,931,471.

MISAPPROPRIATING A SMILE.

I was seated in the corner of a car,
When I got a most excruciating jar—
Not the ordinary kind
To which grimpen are inclined,
But a jolt that shocked me more than that by far.

From adown the aisle a fascinating girl
Set my senses in an amatory whirl,
When she turned a pretty smile
Toward my corner, and the while
Showed the tips of teeth that glistened as the pearl.

I responded with a twinkle of my eye
('Tis a little trick I studied, by the by),
And although I passed my street,
Still I kept my corner seat,
For the hope within my heart was running high.

Then it was I got the dolorific jar;
Just behind me, on the platform of the car,
Stood the man at whom, 'twas plain,
She was smiling through the pane,
And—I'd ridden half a mile or more too far.

A Walk with Ishbel.

I DON'T mind talking to you, you know," said Ishbel—she insists on being spelled that way—"because you are not a stupid boy and you have a nice detached point of view, but you must promise when I tell you things not to imagine I mean myself."

"How could I imagine you a thing?" I asked reproachfully.

"You know what I mean," said Ishbel with severity. "When I was quite young," she pursued—she is 22—"I used to fancy that authors put themselves into their stories. Now I know they never do."

"Well, I am not quite young," I said crossly. "Go on."

"But you didn't promise."

"I promised."

Ishbel adjusted her hatpin. "Once there was a girl," she began, "who at the age of 17 was sent to England to visit her father's people. That's rather a nice beginning, isn't it?" she interrupted herself. "It sounds as if it might be print. Do you think if you saw a story with a beginning like that you would read it?"

"Candidly?" I inquired.

"Of course."

"I don't think I should."

There was a dangerous glitter in her eye.

"But," I hastened to add, "reading a story is very different to have you tell it, you know. I could listen to you for a thousand years."

She was mollified. "It won't take that long," she assured me with a smile. There is no word for her smile but delicious.

"Do go on," I said. "Did she like the people?"

"Well, some of them," doubtfully. "You see they were English and she was an American."

"Yes."

"And—and young, they bullied her a little. The next time," with animation, "I mean, when we go over, I don't think they'll bully me."

"I don't fancy they will."

"And so you see she didn't have as good a time as she might exactly. But she did have a love affair."

"Oh," said I.

"Yes," said Ishbel. "He was a sort of distant connection of hers, a lawyer, what they call over there a solicitor, you know. He—she said he was very much in love—and so was she."

"Confound"—I began.

"I beg your pardon," said Ishbel.

"I meant," I said, sternly, "it is very wrong of deterimentals to make love to girls."

"It is," agreed Ishbel. "But he was very—oh, very honorable. Things had gone, well, they had gone rather far, you know, but the week before she sailed, when he proposed—at least he didn't exactly propose, but he told her he had only 300 a year, and that, of course, it was out of the question in England to marry on that, and he couldn't bear the idea of hampering her with a long engagement and—what did you say?"

"Oh, nothing."

"Are you sure? You put me out. Well, he said she mustn't be engaged to him, but he would hold himself engaged to her, and some day when the senior partner dropped off—I do wish," petulantly, "you wouldn't mutter like that."

I groveled.

"Where was I?" demanded Ishbel. "Oh, well, then they said good-by, you know, and she was perfectly miserable—if you look so horribly cross I shall send you home—oh, dreadfully miserable. She felt that she didn't care a straw about other men, and there were—she said there were some very nice men in the steamer coming home, too. Balls and parties had no attraction for her, and fancy, for ever so long she hardly took any interest in her frocks. Oh, it was horrid. She only lived for his letters—and somehow they—well, they were not exactly satisfactory. She supposed it was because he was so very honorable, and they were not really engaged, you know. But one day she thought it all over and decided that sort of thing would have to come to an end. She knew she would never be happy for a moment till he came out, as she knew he would some day, to claim her, but she made up her mind to stop thinking about him as much as possible and try to seem happy, no matter how perfectly miserable she was in reality. The idea was, you see—I think she got it out of a poem—to lock his image up in her heart."

"I see," said I. "And how did it work?"

"It worked very well," said Ishbel, reflectively. "She knew she was wreached, but she didn't allow herself to thing about it."

"And what happened?" I asked briskly.

"Well, after three years he came."

"Oh, he did?"

"Of course," said Ishbel sharply. "Did you imagine he didn't?"

I coughed. "And she unlocked her heart?"

"Yes," said Ishbel.

"And the image——"

"It's a very odd thing," replied Ishbel, slowly, "but it wasn't there."

I caughed again. "Was her heart—did she find the receptacle—er-empty?" I asked.

"She didn't tell me that," said Ishbel. We walked on. "So that," I remarked, presently, "was the reason why that long-legged English fellow——"

"But you promised," cried Ishbel.—Boston Post.

RAFTERS OF LIVING GREEN.

Description in "Eben Holden" of a Day in the Cornfield.

We climbed the wall as he ate, and buried ourselves in the deep corn. The fragrant, silky tassels brushed my face and the corn hissed at our intrusion, crossing its green sabers in our path. Far in the field my companion heaped a little of the soft earth for a pillow, spread the ollcloth between rows, and as we lay down drew the big shawl over us. Uncle Eb was tired after the toil of that night and went asleep almost as soon as he was down. Before I dropped off Fred came and licked my face and stepped over me, his tail wagging for leave, and curled upon the shawl at my feet. I could see no sky in that gloomy green aisle of corn. This going to bed in the morning seemed a foolish business to me that day and I lay a long time looking up at the rustling canopy overhead. I remember listening to the waves that came whispering out of the further field, nearer and nearer, until they swept over us with a roaring splash of leaves, like that of water flooding among rocks, as I have heard it often. A twinge of homesickness came to me and the snoring of Uncle Eb gave me no comfort. I remember covering my head and crying softly as I thought of those who had gone away and whom I was to meet in a far country, called heaven, whither we were going. I forgot my sorrow finally in sleep. When I awoke it had grown dusk under the corn. I felt for Uncle Eb and he was gone. Then I called to him.

"Hush, boy! lie low!" he whispered, bending over me, a sharp look in his eye. "'Fraid they're after us."

He sat kneeling beside me, holding Fred by the collar and listening. I could hear voices, the rustle of the corn and the tramp of feet near by. It was thundering in the distance—that heavy, shaking thunder that seems to take hold of the earth, and there were sounds in the corn like the drawing of sabers and the rush of many feet. The noisy thunder clouds came nearer, and the voices that made us tremble were no longer heard. Uncle Eb began to fasten the oil blanket to the stalks of corn for a shelter. The rain came roaring over us. The sound of it was like that of a host of cavalry coming as a gallop. We lay bracing the stalks, the blanket tied above us, and were quite dry for a time. The rain rattled in the sounding sheaves and then came flooding down the steep gutters. Above us beam and rafter creaked, swaying and showing glimpses of the dark sky. The rain passed—we could hear the last battalion leaving the field—and then the tumult ended as suddenly as it began. The corn trembled a few moments and hushed to a faint whisper. Then we could hear only the drip of raindrops leaking through the green roof. It was dark under the corn.

UPON A CATARACT'S BRINK.

Thrilling Experience of a Voyager on the Ottawa River.

The horrible experiences of one who has been swept away by some merciless current and finds himself at last at the brink of a cataract may possibly be imagined, but there are few who survive to relate to us the particulars of such an ordeal. Yet there is one instance where a man was saved at the very edge of the falls.

There are few more imposing bits of scenery in Canada than where the Ottawa River pours thundering and foaming over the Chaudiere Falls. When the water in the river is low, as it is in autumn, there is a fall of about forty feet, but when the river is swollen by melting snows in the spring the apparent depth of the fall is lessened. At any time the rush and swirl of the great river over this ledge of rock is a sight worth seeing.

In some places the water pours over in a dense and irresistible volume, while at other points a shallow stream will spray itself over a higher table of rock.

On the upper Ottawa are floated booms of logs which feed the large lumber industries of that region. Handling these wet logs is a treacherous business, and it is easy to lose one's foothold and fall into the swift stream. Accidents of this kind occur frequently. The only case that did not have a fatal termination is the one referred to here.

The man was busy forking these logs with those sharp tongs used to swing them about and draw them in, when he missed his footing and fell into the river. Though a strong swimmer, he could not withstand the current and was swept out into the stream and on toward the falls. Nearing the falls, he found himself still conscious, and it happened that he was being floated over one of those tables of rock where the water was so shallow that he felt himself touch. He struggled to regain his feet, and was successful in so doing, so that he found himself standing in, perhaps, a foot of rushing water, at the brink of the cataract, a great current surging by him on every hand.

But it seemed hopeless. He saw no way of getting to shore, and no one from the shore could get to him. Many people on the banks of the river were watching him and trying to study out some plan to save him. Finally a large derrick was brought to bear, such as is used in building operations. A great arm with ropes was swung out over the current, and when the man had fastened himself securely with the ropes he was raised up high and swung in, just as a large stone would be raised in constructing a building.

Work and Atmosphere.

During the building of a railroad in Switzerland, at an altitude of ten thousand feet, the discovery has been made that the atmosphere is so rarified that men employed upon the work cannot continue their labors for half so long a time as is possible when working in a lower atmosphere. The cold also may have something to do with it, for, as every one knows, the atmosphere becomes colder and colder the greater distance it is above the surface of the earth. Were it not for the atmosphere, indeed, the ordinary temperature of the world would be below zero to the extent of three hundred degrees Fahrenheit.

Too many culinary assistants are sure to impair the flavor of the consomme.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

LIFE AND CHARACTER OF THE GREAT VIRGINIAN.

Man Who Wrote the Declaration of Independence and Who Contributed Largely to the Founding of the American Republic.

No father of the republic was more frequently or more extensively quoted in the remarkable campaign of 1900 than Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence, and for this reason we take the opportunity of reproducing certain extracts from an article on his life and character contributed by John De Morgan to The Book World:

Jefferson, says the writer, was in many ways the most remarkable man of the age. His individuality stood out prominently and his earnestness and sincerity made him so conspicuous that his very name became almost synonymous with that of the republic. He was essentially the man for the time and throughout all ages, when the mists of prejudice and passion, and misrepresentation have cleared away, Jefferson will stand out on the pages of history as one of the greatest men the world has produced.

His Early Manhood.

At the age of 20 Jefferson began the study of law; he was admitted to the bar in 1767. Two years before he had listened to the eloquence of Patrick Henry when that famous speech was delivered which set the colonies ablaze with opposition to the stamp act. In 1769 he was elected a member of the House of Burgesses and at once introduced a bill giving owners a right to emancipate their slaves. The bill did not become a law until some years later.

In 1772 he was married to Martha Skelton, a young and charming widow who played the spinet to his violin and delighted to sit at his feet, her head resting on his knee, and listen for hours to his reading from his favorite authors. Theirs was an ideal union, but she did not live to share her husband's triumphs, for she died in 1782.

He was elected to the first Congress in 1775 and, in the words of John Adams, "brought with him a reputation for literature, science and a happy talent of composition." When, a year later, he was appointed Chairman of the committee to draw up a declaration of independence, his co-laborers unanimously left the matter in his hands, and from the pen of Thomas Jefferson emanated the most remarkable impeachment of an existing government and a declaration of the rights of man that ever burst on an expectant world.

Beginning in the years immediately preceding that Declaration of Independence and closing in the early part of the administration of John Quincy Adams, the writings of Thomas Jefferson are a rich depository of principles in the science of government.

He was a voluminous writer and his reflections and theories, his profound and original ideas in the realm of religion, morals, education, law, the rights of man, and other topics, are well worthy the study and attention of the people.

What He Foresaw.

He predicted that a time might come when there would arise an aristocracy of wealth, and he expressed a hope that the country would "crush in its birth the aristocracy of our moneyed corporations, which dare already to challenge our government to a trial of strength, and bid defiance to the laws of our country." He had a genuine contempt for the aristocracy of birth, and said: "An honest farmer occupies a more dignified place in the scale of beings, whether moral or political, than a lazy lounger, valuing himself on his family, too proud to work, and, drawing out a miserable existence by eating on that surplus of other men's labor, which is the sacred fund of the helpless poor."

Between 1779 and 1809 Jefferson was in office either as Governor of Virginia, Minister to France, Secretary of State, Vice President or President; in every office he served the people faithfully, but made many enemies by his honesty and truth.

In Virginia a great struggle was going on in favor of religious liberty. The Established Church had become so narrow and dogmatic that all who dared to differ from it in matters of faith or politics were treated as heretics and cruelly persecuted. The church, at that time, was essentially an English institution, and many of its clergy considered it a sacred duty to preach loyalty to England; this still further antagonized many. The struggle was a fierce one, and Jefferson, naturally, became one of the leaders. He argued and worked so diligently for religious liberty that his enemies branded him an "infidel," and some called him an "atheist."

It is doubtful whether any political writer wrote so strongly in favor of true religion than did Jefferson. Some of his most eloquent sentences, some of the passages from state papers, paragraphs from private and public letters were redolent with piety and full of humble reliance on the Creator.

After his second Presidential term he retired to Monticello and spent the remaining seventeen years of his life with his books, correspondence with litterateurs in all parts of the world and in establishing the University of Virginia.

When he passed away July 4, 1826, the country lost the first and greatest of its political thinkers, a man who, beyond all others, labored to create a commonwealth in which all should be partners, instead of a republic of the few, a nation of classes. He wielded a mighty power, but, unlike many, his work was with the pen, for he was no orator. No statesman ever had so large a correspondence, and in all the thousands of letters and essays and treatises he wrote there will be found something of eternal value, for he never wrote without thought, and he never thought without developing something original or bright, something which tended to elevate the people and make the nation more free.

A suspicious disposition and a fondness for talking is the combination which makes a gossip.

NEW COREAN MINISTER.

One of the Ablest Statesmen of the Hermit Kingdom.

Prince Min Tong Whan, the new Corean minister to Washington, belongs to the progressive party of his native land and is one of the foremost and most influential statesmen in the "Hermit Kingdom." Prince Min has traveled widely. He made a tour of the world when accredited as special ambassador to Queen Victoria's jubilee, going to England by way of India and the Suez canal, and traveling leisurely over the continent before going to London. He returned with his suite through the United States, which he traversed slowly, remaining for some time in the large cities, studying the customs of the people.

PRINCE WHAN.

Prince Min remained for several weeks in Washington. During his stay in Washington the Prince, who, like all of his countrymen, acquires foreign languages easily, learned to speak English with fluency, and studied the American system of government.

The new minister is taller than the average Corean, with a military figure and carriage that might have been acquired at West Point, an intellectual face and the grace and manners of a man of the world. He is cultivated, erudite and familiar with the history and traditions of the Occident, as well as with those of the Orient. He is, in a word, a broad-gauged, well-balanced man who may be expected to administer his legation in a way creditable both to his country and acceptable to this government.

"An education is the safest investment, pays the highest interest, is most readily exchanged, never depreciates in value, never suffers from over-taxation, is never in danger from thieves, never ends in a lawsuit to break the will after the owner's death, and may be gain for all eternity."

"The color of the school exercise boards is a matter of great importance, but has been strangely neglected," says the Pharmaceutical Era. "From time immemorial it has been a matter of common knowledge, even among uneducated people, that black is the worst of colors for the eyes. Every seamstress knows how much more trying to the eyes black goods are than those of any other color, particularly in a poor light. The best color for the school exercise board, according to the Era, from a hygienic point of view, is some shade of a cream white, a dead surface of soft, mellow tint, varied in its degree of whiteness to suit the quantity and quality of the light afforded. The crayons for these boards should be of sky blue color for ordinary work, while for occasional work a canary orange and a clear dark green might be used."

Never scold nervous children nor "make fun" of them. They suffer enough without your threats or sarcasm. Pretend not to see their awkwardness when in company, nor their grimaces when alone. A case was reported the other day of a boy of 10 years who, on being vexed, and often without any apparent provocation, will clench his hands and make the most frightful contortions of the muscles of his face and head till his poor mother fears he is idiotic. By no means. He is the brightest boy in his class at school, fond of reading and of natural history, but he is of highly nervous temperament, and has not been taught to control the little wires, so to speak, on which he is strung. This is no single case. There are thousands of children who give way to their nerves in similar fashion. Talk to them about these curious little fellows that should be their servants, not their masters. Never whip them. The man or woman who whips a nervous child is on a level with brutes that have no reason. Encourage them. Help them. Be patient with them. They are the making of our future successful men and women, for they will work hard at whatever they undertake. Brace up your own nerves first, and then be indulgent toward the capers of your over-nervous children.—Home Comfort.

Chinese Wives Subordinate.

Many of the characters in the Chinese language are very suggestive of the relationship between husband and wif, and leave no doubt as to the subordinate position which the woman occupies in Chinese domestic life. The part which the Chinaman plays in securing his bride is vigorously illustrated in the word to seize, the character for woman crouching under the Chinese symbol for claws, while the character for wife, indicated by a woman placed beside a broom, is evidence of the Chinaman's opinion with regard to the proper position of his helpmate in his household.

Every mother and father should remember when they buy the children every new fangled toy, and membership into every club that is organized, that some day the children will knock very hard because their parents are poor in their old age.

The Nicaragua Canal.

It may surprise many to know that the commission we sent to inspect the Nicaragua canal route, were also ordered to go to Panama and do the same thing. They report on both. The French had partly made the Panama canal, then became bankrupt, and a new company is working at it. But they will give up to the United States if they have to. We have secured a grant from the government of Columbia permitting us to buy out the old company if we wish, and finish the canal. In Nicaragua, things are about the same way. There has been some work done, but not as much as at Panama. Is is a longer route, but much farther north than the other. It will cost about 200 millions. The one at Panama will cost about 140 millions. We want to make it 35 feet deep and 150 feet wide. Congress will settle the matter.

The Biggest Trust Yet.

The alum baking powder trust is making the most of its opportunity. This trust combines over a hundred manufacturers of this pernicious article and is now endeavoring to gather the grocers into its fold to aid it in disposing of its goods. Where the grocer will permit, the trust will put its name upon the package, when it is sold as the grocer's own private brand. This powder is sold to the grocer for 55 cents a dozen pound cans. The grocer retails it for 25 cents a pound. Paying 5 cents and selling for 25 cents may be a smart business transaction for the alum baking powder people, but think of the evil that is being worked upon the innocent consumer!

A dispatch from Vancouver, Saturday, says, the out going steamer Empress of China carried the record-breaking cargo of beer. It is 50,000 barrels and had taken 75 trains of cars to bring it here. It goes to Manila.

The army bill is being discussed by leaders in congress. The most of the plans favor an increase to 100,000 men. The navy is being increased also, at as rapid a rate.

Oom Paul Kruger has finished his stay in Paris and now goes to Holland. It is said he is tired of visiting and anxious to get back to South Africa.

The San Francisco horror is still the leading topic. Thursday, about 200 persons climbed onto the roof of a glass factory to see a game of foot ball. The roof fell in and a part of the men lit on the top of the big furnace in which glass was melting. The heat on top was 500 degrees Fahrenheit, and they were either too badly hurt or stunned by the fall to get up. They simply roasted till the others came and pulled them off. Nine were killed outright or roasted to death. Fifteen are fatally hurt and others may die.

A terrible storm swept over the island of Guam, our new half-way station on the Pacific Nov. 13. The villages were mostly destroyed and hundreds of natives perished. The U. S. gunboat, Yosemite, was driven to sea and disabled. Efforts were made to get it to the shore, but failed and she went to the bottom. Several of her men had been drowned.

OBITUARY.

Frederick H. Kring was born in Stark county, Ohio, July 27, 1841. He was married to Miss Maggie Miller when a young man. To this union were born two daughters who are still living. After the death of his wife he came to DeKalb county and followed the carpenter's trade. On the 8th of May, 1883, he was united in marriage to Clara E. Kruse, to whom were born four children, two sons who died when young, and two daughters who are living. After their marriage they settled down in Auburn where they have since lived. The carpenter trade was his life occupation. He was a skilled workman and made an honest living for his family. Seven years ago he became a member of the Knights of the Maccabees of Auburn Tent No. 51, of which tent he was a faithful member and advocate to the time of his death. Two years ago Mr. Kring fell from a building and received an injury from which he never recovered. At first he suffered from heart trouble which later developed into dropsy. During the two years of his sickness his suffering was beyond description. All during his illness he and his family received the kindest attention of the order to which he belonged. He had received from the tent in money about $152.00 and last spring was put on the disability fund and drew from the Supreme Tent, one tenth of the amount insured for, which was $100, leaving yet for his family $900, which will be paid within a few days. The care and attitude of the Knights of the Maccabees to Mr Kring was that of a brother. Sir Knight Kring leaves to mourn his death, a wife, four daughters, two brothers, five sisters, besides many other friends. After a long period of intense suffering, Mr. Kring fell peacefully asleep Sabbath morning at nine o'clock, Dec. 2 at the age of 59 years, 4 months and 5 days. The funeral service will be held at the Lutheran church to morrow at 2 p. m. The service will be under the auspices of the Knights of the Maccabees of Auburn Tent. Interment will take place in the Evergreen cemetery. Rev. J. D. Brosy will officiate.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met with Mrs. Davenport last Saturday with a large number present, and the lesson was one of unusual interest, conducted by Mrs. Mollie Rose. The subject, "Duties Concerning the Property of Others," proved to be of intense interest to all present, all taking part in the discussions. The conversation, "Was Shylock a Revengeful Jew or a Persecuted Hebrew?" conducted by Mrs. Emanuel, brought out a very earnest discussion and many differences of opinion were expressed, both for and against the Jew.

Mrs. Lodewick was on the program for a paper but chose to give her work, "Educated Maternity," in the form of a talk or conversation. As the subject was an interesting one for a body of woman it was decided that a more widely educated motherhood was needed.

The club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Barns next Saturday.

Corner on Eggs.

The latest corner in produce markets is the corner on eggs. It is known that the Armours, Swifts and other great packers of meat who also control the refrigerator cars, have got control of all the visible supply of eggs in the country, and then ordered the price raised. It is estimated that a profit of half a million is the result. The average price of eggs all over the country for the past year is about 10½ cents. Now it has gone up to 20 cents and over in the markets, and about 25 cents at retail.

Kuhns Heard From.

It appears that Marvin Kuhns, after getting out of Columbus, stole a horse a few miles out, and a short distance farther on, stole a buggy and harness. Later on it is claimed he was seen on a Nickel Plate freight train going west. He may turn up at Fort Wayne yet and shoot the men who shot him in the desperate fight at Churubusco.

It digests what you eat and is a certain cure for dyspepsia and every form of stomach trouble. It gives relief at once even in the worst cases, and can't help but do you good. H. B. McCord.

—A little bit of a man has a whole lot of prejudice to overcome before he can amount to anything.

—Help is needed at once when a person's life is in danger. A neglected cough or cold may soon become serious and should be stopped at once. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures coughs and colds and the worst cases of croup, bronchitis, grippe and other throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord.

—Society divides into two parts—those who take a paper and those who take a neighbor's paper.

—Now is the time when croup and lung troubles prove rapidly fatal. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results is One Minute Cough Cure. It is very pleasant to take and can be relied upon to quickly cure coughs, colds and all lung diseases. It will prevent consumption. H. B. McCord.

—Mischief—That which is easiest to do when you don't intend to.

—Don't use any of the counterfeits of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Most of them are worthless or liable to cause injury. The original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a certain cure for piles, eczema, cuts, scalds, burns, sores and skin diseases. H. B. McCord.

—Some folks are too trivial to be even talked about.

—When you need a soothing and healing antiseptic application for any purpose, use the original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, a well known cure for piles and skin diseases. It heals sores without leaving a scar. Beware of counterfeits. H. B. McCord.

IT IS NOW TIME TO MAKE YOUR

FALL PURCHASES

Never before in the history of this house have we been so well prepared to supply your needs. No part of our immense stock has been slighted in the least. No matter what you may want, in

DRY GOODS, CLOTHING,

LADIES' WRAPS

OR CARPETS,

you may confidently expect to find it here and at your own price. Our reputation for handling strictly high grade merchandise shall be fully sustained in this season's stock.

UNDERWEAR.

We wish to call special attention to our Underwear Stock. We have spared nothing to make our showing in this line perfection itself. For the wee little ones we show either the wrapper or closed vest in wool or cotton from the light to the heaviest weight, and at prices which are satisfactory to you. For children we have either two piece or union suits in the different weights and marked to sell for less than they are worth.

Of Ladies' Underwear we have extra heavy fleeced lined cotton for 25c, a better grade at 30c and a very heavy fine one at 50c. We show an extra nice gray wool at 75c, and a very heavy soft and fine fawn wool at $1.00. Union Suits in all qualities ranging from 50c to $2.50 per garment. We have black tights all-wool and exceptionally fine quality at $1.00 and $1.50. We have an exceedingly heavy stock of Men's and Youths', underwear, wool or cotton, union or two piece suits, fleece lined or flat wear, from the cheapest to the very finest and every garment absolutely the best to be had for the money. We have filled one window with a full case of heavy fleece lined which were made to sell at $1.50 per suit. The manufacturer needed the money, we thought we could use the underwear at his reduced price, consequence we mark them $1.15 a suit and you get the benefit.

We are selling a number of W. B. and Royal Worcester straight front Corsets. Ask to see them—they are fine.

We are showing our second lot of Ladies' Dressing Sacques. You wont take the trouble to make one when you see these.

WE WISH TO SEE YOU OFTEN.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure "digests what you eat" so that you can eat all the good food you want while it is restoring the digestive organs to health. It is the only preparation that digests all kinds of food. H. B. McCord

Now You Are Sick.

In a Little Time You Can be as Well and Vigorous as You Ever Were.

We don't always call ourselves sick when we suffer from indigestion or liver trouble. But we are sick. We are often perilously sick. Dr. Stone says, and a host of authorids support him, that the beginnning of every serious organic disease can be charged to the failure of the stomach to keep up the repair and vitality of the body. Rheumatism, heart disease, kidney diseases, cancer, insanity, etc., can often be traced back to a simple case of dyspepsia. Dyspepsia has not always been curable, but it is now. When the dyspepsia disappears, other trouble that you thought separate ailments will go too. Headache, palpitation of the heart, debility and many affections of the bladder and kidneys, are entirely due to the imperfect workings of the stomach or liver. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure promptly restores these organs to normal condition. It will help you at once and cure you quicker than you now believe possible. Your druggist will refund the money if the remedy fails. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

BUTLER.

Two of Charles Capp's little boys are down with malarial fever.

Mrs. Hannah Moughler and son John, of Garrett, were calling on Butler friends last week.

Mrs. Sarah Repp of Glenn, Mich., a sister of J. A. Campbell, is expected to visit him and other Butler friends.

The Thanksgiving services at the M. E. church last week were well attended all the ministers of the city being present except one.

Corn, hay, potatoes and other grain is coming into our market in large quantities, notwithstanding the bad condition of the roads.

Mary J. Hanes, relict of Charles Hanes deceased, was married last week to Joseph Sewell of Hamilton. Mr. Sewell's first wife was killed in the Butler yards.

E. A. Campbell and family of Toledo spent Thanksgiving with J. A. Campbell. Mr. Campbell is among the oldest engineers on the Lake Shore road, his run being from Toledo to Cleveland.

Considerable inquiry is being made as to what the Wabash will do since they have lost their Eel River suit. Rumor has it that work will be commenced soon on the Fort Wayne connection.

The Levy fire sale continues and has resulted in demoralizing nearly every trade in town. Parties from Cincinnati made an effort to buy the whole outfit, but were not successful. Merchants generally would be glad to get the stock out of town.

The new coal dock and elevator approaches completion. It is a new departure in the way of coal docks; is about forty feet square and sixty feet high. The coal is dropped in the cellar like pit and elevated by machinery to the great elevator above, from whence it is dropped into the tenders by chutes from above.

OBITUARY.

Catherine Hush, was born Sept. 20, 1840, and departed this life Nov. 25, 1900, aged 60 years, 2 months and 5 days. She leaves a faithful sister, two brothers and a large circle of friends and relatives.

Sister Hush joined the M. P. church and, on March 19, 1899, she had her membership transferred to the M. E. class at Maple Grove. Being sorely afflicted, she was deprived of the advantages of public worship. But she lived a consistent Christian life and spent her last hours here praising God and pleading with her brothers and sisters to meet her in heaven. Funeral services were held in the M. E. church at Spencerville, interment in Spencerville cemetery.

Public Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the commissioners of DeKalb county, Ind., will receive sealed bids for blanks, blank books and stationery on December 24, 1900, at 10 a. m, in commissioners room, Auburn, Ind. Specifications and requisitions are on file in the Auditor's office.

There are now eighty-four Maori schools in the colony, and a number of scholarships are provided for Maori children to enable them to proceed to the higher schools or to undergo a course of technical training.

The Boston Athenaeum has long contained three busts which no one in that city was able to identify. The assistant librarian, a young woman, has just recognized them as excellent likenesses of Lewis Cass, the great statesman; Nicholas Biddle, one of the most eminent financiers of the century, and a Russian prince, famous all over the world.

A farmer in Southern Missouri recently received some garden seeds from the Department of Agriculture in an official envelope, on the outside of which was printed the usual warning: "Penalty for private use, $300." He immediately sent them back, with a letter to the effect that he had not used one of them and was not subject to any fine.

Neodesha, Kan., has a population of about 1,500, which includes more thin people than any place twice its size in America. Many men weigh less than 100 pounds, though in good health. Physicians say that the petroleum and natural gas wells there are responsible for making the people look like whitened refugees from a famine district in India.

Since 1897 Jay Jansen, agent in charge of a whaling station at Cape Haven, Baffin Land, has been alone at that isolated spot. The relief steamer Lily of the North, carrying a year's provisions for the lone watcher, was recently wrecked and now it will be impossible to reach him before next summer, by which time he probably will have died of starvation.

A peculiar incident was witnessed in the Bethany Presbyterian Church of Trenton, N. Y. The sermon had a soporific effect upon Harry Tidd, a young druggist, and he fell asleep. While still in slumber he arose, removed his coat, vest and collar and was about to further disrobe when the women in his vicinity screamed. An usher aroused him and led him out of the church.

Rest rooms for farmers' wives are being established in some towns in the West. They are located in the business center and are made cozy and comfortable with easy chairs, lounges, books and magazines. Some offer tea at the nominal price of 3 cents a cup. These rooms are sustained by women's clubs in the cities, or the merchants of the cities contribute to them, with the idea that they help to draw trade.

A group of apartment houses in Utica, N. Y., is provided throughout with electrical cooking utensils, consisting of three round platters, or "stoves," an oven and a broiler. When not needed they can be stowed away, leaving no outward trace of the use to which the room is put. The air is not vitiated and the apartment is kept much cooler. The same apartments are provided with electric curling tong heaters, which are much appreciated.

The plot of ground on which stands the historic monument erected at Tappan, N. Y., by the late Cyrus W. Field in memory of Andre, the revolutionary spy, has been sold for nonpayment of taxes. Since the death of Mr. Field the memorial has been neglected, and it has now passed into the hands of George Dickey, of Nyack, who says he will obliterate it. The monument was unveiled Oct. 2, 1879, and in April, 1882, attempts were made to destroy it by an explosion of nitroglycerin.

A Chicagoan just returned from a tour of the far West saw the following location notice on a mining claim in the Grand Encampment, Wyoming: "We found it and we claim it by the right of founding it. It's our'n. Its 750 feet in every direction except southwest and northeast, and there is 300 feet on each side of this writin'. It's called the Bay Horse, and we claim even the spurs, and we don't want nobody jumping on this Bay Horse—that's what's these trees is around here for and we've got the same piece of rope that we had down in old Missouri."

Unique among woman's clubs, perhaps, is that which was launched five years ago in Honolulu and is now reported to be at last on a firm footing. It was started by an American school teacher, who was wont to invite young girls to her home once a week for informal conversation on some topic. The outgrowth was a full-fledged club of thirty-four members, most of them being Hawaiians, with a mixture, however, of Chinese and Portuguese. The president this year is a Chinese girl, who wears her quaint national costume when she fills the official chair.

QUEER THINGS IN CHINA.

Features of an Oriental City that Struck a Missionary as Peculiar.

Miss Louise Hodgkins, in a letter to Zion's Herald dated early in the present year, describes her arrival at the city of Chinkiang, on the bank of the Yangtse River. The primitive character of the city is not due entirely to its age, for it has been largely rebuilt since the Taiping rebellion, a date that in China corresponds to our "before the war." With a chance to begin afresh, the inhabitants only crowded closer to the shore, leaving the hills to the fort, the barracks and the various missions.

It was 10 o'clock at night when the writer reached this Chinese city. A bright starlight enabled her to follow a friend through the Concession, along the unpaved streets, and up to the heights beyond.

"What are these curious haystack mounds?" was the newcomer's first question, as she picked her way among strange hillocks.

"Oh, these are the graves," was the reply. "Didn't you know we lived in the very middle of a graveyard?"

There were hundreds of them, each surmounted by a cap of fresh sod of the size and shape of an inverted milk pan. This sod is the new cap provided annually for the traveler journeying to the undiscovered country, Miss Hodgkins did not chance, as often happens, to stumble over a coffin left uninterred until the family Solon should declare that the propitious moment for burial had arrived.

"And what are these?" was her question a few minutes later, as by the light of a coolie's lantern she and her friend stumbled among graves and mud-puddles, and came suddenly upon what looked like the top of the traditional prairie-schooner, save that it was a trifle broader and was thatched.

"These are the huts of the very poor," was the answer; and huts they were. Windowless, doorless—except for an entrance hole—fireless, floorless, they were all the shelter the occupants had through winters as severe as those of New England. The deep breathing within and the occasional bark of a dog gave constant token that the travelers were passing through a thickly settled neighborhood.

Next morning, under the sunlight, the graves looked numberless, but they were seen to blossom with violets and dandelions. Far below, too far for its squalor and wretchedness to be seen, stretched the city, while under the windows of the house was the parade ground.

Breathlessly the newcomer inquired what the soldiers at drill were doing with the long fishing rods, with which they appeared to be running violently at each other, uttering wild Indian yells.

It was explained that this was an ancient form of onslaught come down from the days of Confucius at the latest. Its object is to trip up the antagonist with the long stick, throw water in his face, and in the midst of his bewilderment at this extraordinary treatment to cut off his head.

The writer found it hard to believe her eyes and ears. And all this was after the recent Chino-Japanese war, when the Chinese found out to their humiliation, but evidently not to their enlightenment, what the enemy would do while they were shaking sticks and fans at them.

Charles Dickens' Present.

The fondness of Charles Dickens for children was manifested in his daily life as well as in the pages of his books, and it was forcibly illustrated on many occasions. One day he was walking in the neighborhood of Gad's hill, not long after he had acquired his property there, when he suddenly ran into a little girl wheeling a doll's perambulator. In an instant the tiny vehicle upset, the dolls being thrown out.

It was a bad accident as far as they were concerned, for wax heads and limbs are not calculated to stand much hard usage. The little maid burst into tears, and, much to the novelist's sorrow, refused to be comforted.

"Then come home with me," Dickens whispered soothingly, "and we'll see if we can't find some grand waxen lady in silks and satins for you."

So back to the big house the two went, and, sure enough, up in his children's nursery he managed to discover a few prettily dressed dolls. With these safely tucked in her perambulator the little girl trotted off.

But it is in the sequel that the best part of the story lies. The child's heart was set on making some return for this kindness, so her parents, who had not the faintest suspicion of her friend's personality, took her to town to choose something. Her choice fell eventually upon a gorgeously bound book.

When Dickens the next day undid the parcel his small visitor brought him he was surprised and delighted to see a copy of "David Copperfield."

Not until many years later, when they met again in society, did the little girl learn who the "kind gentleman" was.

A Short Cut to Glory.

This amusing story from the chronicles of an English rural town illustrates the danger in kindling ambition in the rural breast.

An officer of a Yorkshire yeomanry regiment in an address to his troop made a stirring allusion to the medals worn by some army veterans in the ranks. One of the volunteers afterward went home in a very thoughtful frame of mind, and the next morning he came on parade with several medals on his breast. Said the officer:

"I didn't know you had been in the regulars."

"No, I ain't," said the man.

"Well how about the medals, my good fellow? They can't be yours."

"Can't they?" the man promptly replied. "Aye, but they be. My old coo won 'em all at Otley Cattle Show."

The man who is prudent in the choice of his companions is provident of his time.

TALKING BY SIGNS.

UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE IS ONE OF MOTIONS.

Confucius, Rameses and Sitting Bull Might Carry on a Conversation—Though Not Speaking Same Tongue, Indians Can Understand Each Other.

There is an old story of the man who was too bashful to talk in company and who received from a friend the rude advice, "If you can't talk, make signs." There was more to this remark than might at first appear. It points back to the infancy of human intelligence. The language of signs is as old as the hills, or at least as old as humanity; it is old as any form of animal life wherein thought or emotion has required expression.

The American Indians are the greatest sign talkers now left in the world; or, perhaps more properly, it might be said that they were such until the advance of white civilization changed many of the requirements of their lives and thus altered many of their customs, this among them. The average white man never learned the sign language of the Indians, perhaps having contempt for it, perhaps ignorant that such a thing existed. It was only the half savage trapper or hunter, the voyageur or plainsman whose life was spent among the tribes and who thus perforce must learn some manner of speech, who came to understand fully and practice habitually the sign language. Not all white men can learn the sign language, though some pick it up readily, just as certain persons learn foreign languages more readily than others. The sign talk was in all cases best used by whites who had been among the tribes from early youth. In some cases it was so habitual that it was employed, as it often is by the Indians, as a regular means of daily conversation instead of spoken speech.

To the "tenderfoot" who first went upon the plains in the old days there were some signs or marks which were early accepted as obvious or generally understood. Thus, he saw a slim pile of rocks upon the edge of some coulee or ravine. He did not know what that meant at first, and the older plainsmen told him it was the sign for water. Not even the plainsmen could tell who first invented that sign or who was the first to employ it. It was "always there."

The beginner on the plains learned other things, among these the fact that the plains were capable of vast distances, which could be traversed better by the eye than by the horse or by the weary human foot. A mile away he saw a horseman riding in a circle—a circle which would appear the same when seen from any direction. He did not know what this meant, but when he was told it said "Come ahead," he did not bother about riding over to the man he wanted to have come ahead. He simply rode his circle, just as had the Indians from whom the white men got this plains sign. If the man were on foot and wanted his friends to come ahead he signified it by squatting down and rising up a number of times in succession—a sign which looks pretty much the same from any direction. You can see such a sign a mile or more, and it is easier to talk that way than to try to shout over vacant miles of prairie.

The Indians used yet another sign to say "come ahead" when secrecy was necessary. This was made by taking hold of the lower part of the blanket or robe which one was wearing and holding it out from the body, then motioning with it in toward the legs—a sign as obvious as the beckoning hand, and visible at a greater distance. A blanket fastened to a long pole and thrust up into the air meant to a moving and scattered party: "Go into camp here." Yet other signals, as for "Attention," or "Be careful," were made by the rolled or folded blanket.

Smoke Signals.

The traveler upon the plains in the early days soon learned the significance of the spires of smoke which he sometimes saw rising from a distant ridge or hill, and which in turn he might see answered from a different direction. It was the signal talk of the Indians, across miles of intervening ground, a signal used in rallying the warriors for an attack or warning them for a retreat when that seemed advisable. The Indian had a way of sending up the smoke in rings or puffs, knowing that such a smoke column would at once be noticed and understood as a signal and not taken for the smoke of some campfire. He made the rings by covering his little fire with his blanket for a moment, then suddenly removing the blanket and allowing the smoke to ascend, when he instantly covered up the fire again. The columns of ascending smoke rings said to every Indian within a circle of perhaps twenty or thirty miles, "Look out! There is an enemy near." Three smokes built close together meant "Danger." One smoke merely said "Attention." Two smokes meant "Camp at this place." Travel the plains and the usefulness of this long distance telephone will quickly become apparent.

Sometimes at night the settler or traveler saw fiery lines crossing the sky, shooting up and falling, perhaps taking a direction diagonal to the line of vision. He might guess that these were the signals of the Indians, but unless he were an old-timer he might not be able to interpret the signals. The old-timer and the squaw man knew that one fire arrow (an arrow prepared by treating the head of the shaft with gunpowder and fine bark) meant the same as one column of smoke puffs—viz.: "An enemy is near." Two fire arrows meant "Danger." Three arrows said imperatively, "This danger is great." Several arrows said, "The enemy are too many for us." Two arrows shot up into the air at once meant, "We shall attack." Three at once said, "We attack soon" Four arrows at once said "We attack now." An arrow shot off in a diagonal direction said as plainly as a pointing finger, "That way." Thus it seems that the untutored savage could telephone fairly well at night as well as in the daytime.

In the forests as well as upon the plains it was sometimes necessary for one man to communicate with another while the two were separated by days of time or miles of distance. What boy has not left a slanting stick to tell his companion which path he has taken in the woods? The boy does without instruction precisely what the savage does. When one party of Indians wishes to tell another party where it has gone the leader places a stick, stuck slantwise in the ground, pointing in the direction taken by the departing party. This is an index finger, saying plainly, "That way." But if the newly arriving party saw a cross stick stuck into the earth at right angles to the index it was known, in the language of the signs, that the first party intended to travel one day. Two cross sticks meant two days, and so on. These people could not write a letter to pin upon the stick, but their message was none the less plain to those who read it.

Sign Talk Proper.

Such were some of the long distance signals of the tribes, simple and easily understood by all. This is something interesting to study, but it has properly no connection with the sign language used as a common vehicle of communication in conversation. The sign language proper was executed by the movements, gestures and positions of the hands and arms, sometimes of other members of the body. To learn the simple signals of the plains was easy to any one who cared to do so, but the mastery of the sign talk was a matter far more complex and difficult and for some white men the task was too much. Indeed, it seems that there were degrees of proficiency in the sign talk even among the Indians themselves.

Some of the Indian signs are simple and readily understood. When the sign talker straddled his left hand with the two split fingers of the right you caught the idea of "horse" almost at once. When he held the hands thus and advanced them with a series of short, choppy, forward movements, you saw that the horse was going, that it was galloping. When the talker hooked his two forefingers and held his hands up at the sides of his head you saw the hooked horns of the buffalo, and you knew what he meant. If he thrust both arms above his head, spread out, and with the fingers spread out, you saw the branching antlers of the elk unmistakably. The wolf sign, the first two fingers of each hand held close together and upright at each side of the head, indicated the erect ears of that animal plainly. Not quite so plain, yet plain enough if you are a hunter, was the sign for the mountain bighorn sheep—the two hands, one at each side of the head, describing the outward and forward curve of the horns. The finger and thumb slightly approached and held at the side of the head indicated less obviously the pronghorn of the antelope. The sign for snake was simple, and any one would understand it—the extended forefinger thrust out before the body in a waving line, like the course of the snake in traveling. Not quite so obvious is the sign for "liar, liar, he lies." Here we get back to the ancient symbol of the serpent, which seems to be the synonym for duplicity among all peoples and for all times. The liar sign is made everywhere by the forked fingers thrust out in front of the mouth, or across the body—"He speaks with a forked tongue." This is ancient Indian rhetoric for you, but it is correct. The sign for "truth, it is true," would obviously be the single finger used in a similar manner—"He speaks with a single tongue."

Yet others of the simpler signs are easy of comprehension by the man who is capable of casting off his customary habits of thought and trying to be a child again. Thus, we say a man is in doubt, he wavers mentally, he is shaken in his mind, he hesitates. When the Indian sees something strange to him, whose name he does not know, about which he is in doubt, he points to it, then shakes his loosely extended fingers in front of him. "What is that?" I don't know what that is," he says, plainly, when you come to think of it.

Now, stop to think what you do with your hand when you say "No!" and say it emphatically. What does the heroine do on the stage when she spurns the villain's suit? Hand palm out, swept sharply down and to the right. It is "No" as plain as can be. Upon the other hand, we all know the implication of the extended hand when it is held in front of the body, as when one shakes hands or is pleased, or says it is all right—the gesture of assent or of concurrence. When the Indian would say "Good; it is all right," he throws out his right hand in front of him, palm down, the edge of the hand away from him. When he says "Yes" he snaps his forefinger down upon the hand as he brings the hand quickly down in front of him. It is hard to explain, but when you see him do it you know he means "I've got you."

Best Sign Talkers.

Among the various Western Indian tribes the Southern peoples seem to have been the most proficient in the sign language, just as the Southern races of Europe are those who talk best with their hands. The Kiowas and Comanches were admittedly the best sign talkers, though this was no doubt merely by reason of the fact that they had, in the days when sign talk ruled upon the plains, more occasion to use the sign language. Maj. J. W. Powell points out, in his interesting compilations from the records of the government ethnological office, the fact the Kiowas were supposed to get some of their sign talk from early Spaniards, or, at least, after the advent of the Spaniard they appear to have obtained great proficiency. It may be possible that these Southern tribes, meeting white men often in the earlier days, came to perfect themselves in the most feasible form of communication which then seemed possible.

One will not see so much of the old sign talk among the tribes to-day if he travels among the reservations of the West, for the Indian is nothing if not practical, and he does anything in the easiest possible way. The changes in his life have rendered it unnecessary for him to rely much upon the sign language. There are halfbreeds and Carlisle graduates to interpret for him, and he likes to stand up before the Great Father and make a speech in that way, being always an orator, an actor, and an individual well aware of the full value of stage effect and dramatic action. He does not use the sign language because he does not have to use it. Hence it is now passing away. Scientists are beginning to study it, and are making minute records regarding the old speech of the plains. The United States government and the Smithsonian Institution are doing all they can to learn the old forms. The few trappers and hunters of the past who were once familiar with the sign talk, and who still live to tell us about it are sought out and interviewed carefully. Once a common fact, because it arose from a common necessity, it is now disappearing to join the ancient and soon to be forgotten story of one of the most interesting and most dramatic regions ever known in all the history of the world.

When Eugenie Led the Fashion.

In her day Empress Eugenie was the leader of fashion and her pin money for dress was fabulous. Her feet and hands were so small that her maids who had her shoes and gloves as perquisites could find no market for them, so they were presented by the empress every year to the orphans of the Eugenie Napoleon asylum, where fifty fatherless and motherless girls were educated at her cost. All the white shoes and white gloves which those girls wore at their first communion were those which had been worn by the empress.

Lover (ardently)—I love the very ground you walk on. Heiress—Ah! I thought it was my estates you were after.—Tit-Bits.

Parke—"I've just had my telephone taken out." Lane—"What for?" Parke—"My next door neighbor put one in."—Harper's Bazar.

Bad Times.—"He has always run his business like clockwork." "Yes, and now his creditors have wound it up."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Mrs. Bicker—There you go again! You always were a fault-finder. Mr. Bicker—Sure; and I'll never forget the day I found you.—Chicago News.

The Bachelor—"Single blessedness is a good thing." The Benedict—"Well, isn't double blessedness twice as good?"—Yonkers Statesman.

Justice—"What were you doing in Colonel Pullet's chicken coop?" Uncle Mose—"Fo' de Lawd, judge, I was jes takin' de census."—Harlem Life.

Snarley—"You don't have to be an artist to draw a check." Yow—"No, but you have to be a royal academician to get it cashed."—Syracuse Herald.

"It is claimed that the Dowager Empress of China started in life as a servant-girl." "No wonder they stand in awe of her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Would you start out on a journey on Friday?" "No, indeed." "Why are people so superstitious?" "I'm not superstitious, I am paid on Saturday."—Answers.

She—"I wonder why it is that so many old maids have fat bank accounts?" He—"Probably for lack of anything else, they husband their resources."—Brooklyn Life.

"How did you ever happen to marry him?" "Why, he made me mad." "Mad? How?" "He acted as if he didn't think I would and rather hoped I wouldn't."—Chicago Post.

"What is that quiet, inoffensive little man over there in the corner?" "Inoffensive? Say, don't you start him up; he's the professor who is master of eight languages."—Chicago Record.

On the Contrary: Vane Glory—I hope Swainston said nothing about me the other night, old chap? Cecil Swarve—Not a word, old man; in fact, we had quite an interesting little chat.—Judy.

"Mr. Hardcase," said the minister, "I saw your son in a saloon yesterday." "Did you?" replied Mr. Hardcase; "I hope he had the politeness to ask you to have something."—Philadelphia Record.

City Nephew—"What do you think of Dr. Pillsbury as a physician?" Farmer Hayroob—"Safest doctor anywhere in this part of the country—nearly always off fishin' when he's wanted."—Judge.

Hoax—Why is the merchant who doesn't advertise like a man in a rowboat? Joax—Because he goes backward, I suppose. Hoax—No; because he has to get along without sales.—Philadelphia Press.

Warwick—England keeps getting friendlier than ever to us since she got into trouble with the Transvaal. Wickwire—Yes; she now claims that she sympathized with us in our war with the Hessians last century.—Judge.

A Long-sought Friend: Christian Scientist—First, you must eliminate fear. Witherby—Have you no fear? Christian Scientist—None whatever. Witherby—Then you're just the one I'm looking for. Come and help me discharge my cook.—Life.

Fairlie—Jack, have you that ten pounds I lent you the other day? Flyntie—Not all of it, old chap; but what I have will do me a day or two longer. Jolly kind and thoughtful of you to inquire, though.—Glasgow Evening Times.

"Don't you find that Mr. Aster's poems," said the young poet's misguided admirer, "are full of words that burn?" "Well, no," replied the editor, "I never put them to that test; I merely drop them in the waste basket."—Philadelphia Press.

"Don't you get tired," said the talkative customer, "standing there hour by hour ironing one stiff-bosomed shirt after the other?" "No," answered the Chinese laundryman. "It rests me to think I don't have to wear them."—Washington Star.

"There is safety in numbers," said the trite conversationalist. "There is," answered the man who talks on politics; "if you can't convince a man by your argument you can always silence him by quoting a lot of statistics that he knows absolutely nothing about."—Washington Star.

"What did you expect to prove by that exceedingly long-winded argument of yours?" asked the friend. "I didn't expect to prove anything," answered the orator. "All I hope to do was to confuse the other fellow so that he couldn't prove that I didn't prove anything."—Washington Star.

The Only Way: Mrs. Dimpleton—My dear, it is being reported around that we owe everybody. Dashaway—And the worst of it is, it's true; so what are you going to do about it? Mrs. Dimpleton—Do? Why, we must correct such an impression immediately by giving an elaborate dinner party.—Life.

Blanche—"I wish you'd listen to this. Laura writes to have me hunt up literary information for her club paper on no less than seven topics." Dorothy—"Dear me! What will you do?" Blanche—"Oh, I won't find time to answer the letter until after she has done needing the information."—Indianapolis Journal.

One of Gilbert's Pungencies.

W. S. Gilbert, the famous librettist, was quick at repartee. A noteworthy instance followed the discussion in the papers upon the incomes of high ecclesiastics and the well-worn remark of Becky Sharp was quoted: "Easy to be good on $25,000 a year." "Yes," added Gilbert, slyly looking around on the company, "some of us have to be good for nothing." Pausing for the murmur of approval that came promptly enough, he added, "And some of us are!"

LIEUTENANT PETERSON

Says Peruna Is the Finest Tonic and Invigorator He Ever Used.

Lieutenant Charles Peterson, Hook and Ladder Co. No. 21, writes the following letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from 827 Belmont avenue, Chicago, Ill.:

"Last year I had a severe attack of la grippe which left me very weak, so that I was unable to perform my duties. Several of my friends advised me to build up on Peruna, and I found it by far the finest tonic and invigorator I had ever used. In two weeks I was strong and well, and if ever I am exposed to unusual hardship incident with my duties at arcs, I take a dose or two of Peruna and find that it keeps me in good health. Charles Peterson."

Lieut. Chas. Peterson.

The above is only one of fifty thousand letters we have on file attesting the merits of Peruna.

There are a great multitude of people in all parts of the land who have entirely lost their health as a result of la grippe; who have recovered from an attack, but find themselves with weakened nerves, deranged digestion, and with but very little of their former powers.

There is no disease known to man that leaves the system in such an outrageous and exasperating condition as la grippe.

For this class of sufferers, Peruna is a specific. Peruna should be taken according to directions and in a few weeks the sufferer will be entirely restored to his accustomed health.

Chinese Ignorance.

One of the delights of travel in China is the innocent ignorance of the people. They think themselves the most sophisticated and heaven-enlightened people on this earth, and so make their native childishness the more engaging. They live very close to the primeval superstitions, and the gods and devils, between whom they make little practical distinction, command their healthy respect. Our slipper boat men stuck a bunch of incense sticks into the bank at the foot of some bad rapids, to placate the favor of the spirit of the rapids, who, indeed, was so far pleased as to let us ascend. Our house boat admiral laid out an elaborate offering of chicken and rice and soup and pork and chicken blood and lighted candles as we entered the North River on our downward journey. "What is this for, Captain?" we asked. "For the enjoyment of the spirits of the river," he replied; "they are eating half the sacrifice." "But it is all here still," we told him at the close. "Well," he replied, "at least, the candles are gone."—Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

WOES OF WORKERS.

The American man or woman is industrious. Our leisure class is small, our working world very large. Many of our leading citizens of great wealth are hard workers. Our laboring classes are found in herds and hordes in the "hives of industry." What is all this work for? In most cases it is for daily bread, in many for maintenance of others. Great numbers also work to acquire wealth. Some for great commercial prominence. Some to preserve intact a splendid inheritance. Necessity, generosity and ambition are the inspiration of all classes of industry, and the object of every one falls to the ground when ill-health attacks him.

Maintaining health is the most vital thing in the world for workers of every class, and the usefulness of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, as a strengthener of the constitutional and vital powers, is beyond all question. This great remedy enters into partnership with Nature and helps human beings do their work without giving up to premature decay. The strain of work is on the minds of some, on the bodies of others, but the nourishing of either, or both, is in the nerves and blood. Nervura acts directly on the fountains of health and its strengthening power is wonderful.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA

for the Blood and Nerves.

What does the worker do when some chronic trouble manifests itself? He takes some stimulant or something which is designed for temporary effect, and simply weakens his already overworked system. How different from this is the work of Nervura! How beautiful its support to the natural powers! Without shock of any kind its purely vegetable elements seek out the weak spots and build them up. Immediately the circulation of the blood improves and the sluggish elements are expelled. The nerves are quieted, the quality of the blood is enriched and the new and strengthening tide communicates itself to every muscle of the body.

Mr. JOHN D. SMITH, Electrician for the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., of Lynn, Mass., says:

"When a man has been sick and is cured, it is his duty to tell others about it, that they, too, may get well. Three years ago I had been working almost night and day, could not eat regularly, and got only a few hours' sleep at night. No man can stand that long, and I soon began to be prostrated. I could not sleep when I tried, and my food would not stay on my stomach. I was in a terrible condition, and was much alarmed.

"I went to doctors, but they did me no good. Learning of the wonderful good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. It cured me completely of all my complaints. I eat heartily and sleep well, thanks to this splendid medicine. I believe it to be the best remedy in existence."

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give all health seekers his counsel free of charge. His office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, and his advice may be secured by personal call or by letter through the mail; no charge is made in either case. The worn-out in body, mind, or sexual powers will get prompt help from Dr. Greene. His advice is absolutely confidential and is free to all.

HUMOR OF THE WEEK

STORIES TOLD BY FUNNY MEN OF THE PRESS.

Odd, Curious and Laughable Phases of Human Nature Graphically Portrayed by Eminent Word Artists of Our Own Day—A Budget of Fun.

He—Philosophy, my dear madam, is something it takes all one's life to acquire.

She—What, then, is the use in acquiring it?

"The supreme satisfaction of knowing that one's whole life has been a mistake."—Life.

Blame It on the Moon.

"The moon exercises a marked influence on commerce, astronomers say."

"Oh, yes; whenever a man walks with a girl on moonlight nights he buys her a lot of caramels and other stuff."—Chicago Record.

Sarcasm.

"Oi burnt me hand terribly bad."

"How did yez do it?"

"Sure and Oi put me hand in th' wather to see if it was biliin'."

"And was it?"

"No, frazin'."

An Injustice.

"The fact that you were disguised makes the case against you very dark," said the magistrate to the prisoner.

"Your honor," replied the prisoner, courteously, "you do me an injustice. I was not in disguise. I was merely traveling incog."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Reconsidered.

He—You need not fear. I shall do nothing desperate just because you have refused me.

"Then, darling, I repent. It was only the thought that you might do something romantic that made me refuse you."—Life.

Intervals in an Exciting Life.

"Ma, when I get big I'm goin' 'way off to be a pirate."

"Are you, Bobby?"

"Yes, but don't you be scared; I'll come home at night to sleep."—Chicago Record.

An Admirer of Honesty.

"Yes, sir," said Farmer Corntossel, "if there's anything I do like an' admire, it's an honest man. An' that's why I'm so proud of our new neighbor down the road a piece. Ef there ever was an honest man he's one."

"Are you sure he's honest?"

"Certainly; one of these frank, generous, sincere kind."

"How do you know?"

"Traded horses with him day before yesterday, an' I reckon I got at least sixty dollars the best of him."—Washington Star.

The Fickle Thermometer.

"Here, young lady, I've brung back this thermometer you sold me."

"What's the matter with it?"

"It ain't reliable. One time ye look at it it says one thing, and the next time it says another."

Just Like Other Men.

She—Which would you rather marry—the prettiest woman in the world or the homeliest?

He—The prettiest, of course. Why do you ask?

She—Merely to find out if you weren't just like all the other men.—Detroit Free Press.

His Views.

Jack Bachelor (engaged)—Of course, I realize that matrimony is a very important step, and all that!

Ned Newlywed (hoarsely)—Step? Great Scott, man! It's a whole flight of steps and something to fall over on every step!—Puck.

No Limit.

"I understand that you are a distant relative of the wealthy Goldmans."

"Yes."

"How distant?"

"As distant as they can keep me."—Philadelphia Record.

Favorable Chances.

Rudolph—If I should ask old Bullions for his daughter's hand what do you think of my chances?

Harold—Very fair. You have youth, health and a good constitution and should pull through with careful nursing.—Puck.

Many Lines There.

Tellit—To be successful in business a man must confine himself to one line.

Askit—What if he is a palmist?—Baltimore American.

Woman's Rights.

Stox—Do you believe in women having the same rights as men?

Stugg—Yes, I do. There was one stood in front of where I sat in a car to-day and tramped all over my feet, and if she'd been a man I would have hit her one, sure.—Detroit Free Press.

Trust Worthy.

"Is he a trustworthy patriot?" asked the earnest citizen.

"I should say so," answered Senator Sorghum. "A man that can make money as brilliantly as he can is worthy of all the trusts he is able to control."—Washington Star.

Worth Remembering.

"It is the man at the top of the ladder who can reach things," remarked the haughty representative of a noble family.

"True," remarked the sarcastic man in homespun, "but it is the man at the bottom who can upset the ladder."—Chicago Evening Post.

What Constituted the Insult.

"What did you strike this man for?" asked the magistrate.

"He called me 'Reuben,'" answered the shock-headed individual whom the police had brought in.

"What is your name, anyhow?"

"Reuben, your honor—but he didn't know it."—Chicago Tribune.

Just Her Idea.

Wiggles—They say that a man and his wife grow to look like each other after they have lived together for a long time.

Mrs. Wiggles—Do they? That's lucky for the men, now, isn't it?—Somerville Journal.

He Had It.

"The fact is," said the fat man, "I married because I was lonely as much as for any other reason. To put it tersely, I married for sympathy."

"Well," said the lean man, "you have mine."—New York World.

Wing Repartee.

The Easy Mark—She said she had 'other fish to fry.' I wonder if she insinuated that I was a fish?

The Soubrette—Impossible! All lobsters are crustaceous.—Chicago News.

Happy Retort.

"Now, don't gimme any song about misfortune an' wantin' to be a hard worker 'n all that," said the hard-faced lady. "I can see right through you."

"Gee!" said Dismal Dawson. "I knowed I ain't had nothin' to eat for three days, but I didn't know it had thinned me down like that."—Indianapolis Press.

Wisdom of Solomon.

Teacher—Who was the wisest man?

Little Boy—Solomon.

Teacher—Give an example of his wisdom.

Little Girl—He had 600 wives.—Detroit Free Press.

A Compromise.

Parson—Why, Johnnie, I'm sorry to see you stealing. I shall report the matter to your father.

Johnnie—I'm sorry, too, parson, but now I'm caught I'll divide with ye, if ye won't tell dad. Come now, what do ye say?

In the Wrong Class.

"Mrs. Pheedem's boarders seem to be nearly all students who belong to the normal class."

"Yes, but she tells me that their appetites are abnormal."

Looking for Bargains.

"Mrs. Bargainhunter seems to be dreadfully worried about the health of her children."

"Why, they looked to me exceptionally strong and well."

"Yes; that's what worries her. A cut-rate drugstore has just opened in the neighborhood, and she's crazy for an excuse to see what kind of bargains they have."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A Congenial Fellow.

Blobbs—What a companionable young fellow young Bjones is.

Slobbs—Yes; he frankly acknowledges that he doesn't know anything about politics, religion or golf.—Philadelphia Record.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

She—I like him because he's so extravagant.

Her Aunt—That isn't the best possible quality in a husband.

She—Of course not! I'm not going to marry him!—Puck.

What's in a Name?

Mrs. Waggles—Do you know why this is called a golf hat?

Waggles—Yes, my dear. It is because people who play golf don't wear them.—Judge.

Jealous Beauties.

Rob—What does that mean? Both of those pretty girls cut you dead just then.

Roy—Alas! yes. I made a stupid mistake. I told Lily she was as sweet as a rose, and Rose that she made me think of a lily.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Homeric.

The following very little classic comes from Cornhill:

A few years since two gentlemen, each bearing the surname of Homer, not an unusual one in Dorset, contested a county division, and at a public meeting one of them, feeling suddenly unwell, had to retire, when a local humorist, on his opponent's side, remarked:

"Homer's Odd, I see."

"Homer's Ill, I add!" promptly rejoined an adherent.

The Open Door.

The Empress Dowager trembled with rage.

"Shut the door!" she shrieked, bestowing a terrible look upon the Christian powers. "Don't you see you're letting in about a million flies?"

Her majesty's strenuous resistance to the inevitable is thus shown to proceed upon the promptings of her basic femininity, and is hereupon a mystery no longer.—Detroit Journal.

To believe that a task is impossible is to make it so.

Women Sailors.

In Norway, Sweden and Finland women are frequently employed as sailors, and do their work excellently, and in Denmark several women are employed afloat as state officials, generally in the pilot service. They go far out to sea in their boats and meet the vessels coming into port, and, having nimbly climbed on board and shown their official diploma, they calmly and coolly steer the newcomer into harbor.

The Chinese Almanac

Predicts the weather, and notes the days which are considered lucky or otherwise for commencing any undertaking, or for applying remedies to diseases. A lucky day is not necessary when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is taken for constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, liver or kidney troubles. It will cure all these disorders.

Frightened Once.

"It seems funny to hear you admit you ever had stage fright," said the first-nighter. "It was at the beginning of your career, of course."

"No," replied the great actor. "It was during my last Western tour. The man appeared at the stage door so suddenly and flashed his revolver so expertly the shock nearly killed us passengers."—Standard and Times.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

June 12th, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yesler Way, Seattle, Wash.

MISS PEARL GOOD

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is just simply wonderful the change your medicine has made in me. I feel like another person. My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yesler Way, Seattle, Wash.

The Earth's Shadow.

The earth has a shadow, but few ever observe it or, if they do, have no knowledge of what they are looking at. Some of us have seen on beautiful summer evenings just before sunset a roseate arc on the horizon opposite the sun, with a bluish gray segment under it. This is the shadow of the earth. The same shadow is always observable on the occasion of an eclipse of the moon.

THOMPSON'S
..SECOND ANNUAL..
WABASH
Mexico Tour.
1901.

The Hon. James A. Gary, of Baltimore, Md., Ex-Postmaster General of the United States, in the Mexican Herald, City of Mexico, said in an interview:

"Our trip to Mexico with the 'Wabash Mexico Tour' has been an exceedingly pleasant one. I have not until now looked with favor upon travelling in this manner but I know of no wiser nor more delightful way to visit a foreign country than with a party managed by so capable and attentive a person as Mr. Thompson. It would be impossible for him to do more than he has done that would contribute to the pleasure and enjoyment of his guests."

The next grand thirty days outing to Old Mexico, covering over 7,000 miles of travel in a special train of Pullman cars, including dining car, serving all meals en route, will leave on February 27th, 1901.

Cost of this tour covering every legitimate expense, such as railroad fare going and returning; one half section in sleeping car; all meals in the dining car; side trips; services of guides, interpreters, and conductors, etc., will be about $10.00 a day.

MEMBERSHIP STRICTLY LIMITED TO SIXTY (60) PERSONS. Apply early for accommodations to

LIBBY'S
EXTRACT of BEEF

Made without regard to economy. We use the best beef, get all the essence from it, and concentrate it to the uttermost.

In an ounce of our extract there is all the nutrition of many pounds of beef. To get more nutriment to the ounce is impossible. Few extracts have as much.

Our booklet, "How to Make Good Things to Eat," tells many ways to use beef extract. It gives recipes for lunches and the chafing dish. Send your address for it.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

May Be Kuhns.

The Columbus City Post believes that Marvin Kuhns is, or has been in that part of the country since his escape from prison at Columbus, Ohio. On Tuesday a stranger driving a horse and buggy stopped at Arcola, and tried to trade for another horse, but left without having succeeded. His actions aroused suspicion, which was strengthened by subsequent events. After leaving Arcola he made another attempt to trade horses with a farmer named Aker and succeeded. During the afternoon Sheriff Stout of Allen county arrived and identified Aker's new animal as a horse which had been stolen from a man named Sherry of Preble, Adams county. Mr. Elmer Gandy, who runs the stave factory at Arcola, saw the stranger, and is positive it was Marvin Kuhns. Mr. Gandy is a Churubusco man, and knew Kuhns very well. He says he could not have been mistaken as he was to well acquainted with the outlaw.

A Good Time.

Auburn Lodge No. 12, A. O. U. W. is noted for its surprises, but the one last evening certainly takes the cake—in fact is entitled to the whole bakery. Having arrived at the good of the order, one of the Brothers arose and said that there was a treat in readiness for us, and asked permission to produce it. Consent being given, an empty table was brought in and a half dozen teacups placed thereon. Next came cookies and doughnuts, and then to cap the climax, the irrigating fluid was brought in, in a large left handed looking glass and placed on the table with the remark, "Help yourselves boys." On investigation we found the contents to be some of Bro. Brandon's noted cider, with doughnuts floating therein. To say that the punchbowl was soon drained of its contents is to put it mildly. All enjoyed the treat, and those not there missed a good thing.

No Right To Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, skin eruptions and wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate the stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming, woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at H. B. McCord's Drug Store.

How to Cure Croup.

Mr R Gray, who lives near Amenia, Duchess county, N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croup cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of the cough Remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear. For sale by H. B. McCord.

Special Election.

Governor Mount is expecting to receive official notice of the death of Representative Drummond, in Allen county, and as soon as he has received such notice he will, in turn, notify the sheriff of that county to advertise a special election for the purpose of filling the dead legislator's place.

Attorney-General Taylor says that the law requires the sheriff to post notices of the election at least ten days before it is held. The election is to be carried on in the usual manner, and the result will be canvassed as was the November vote.

A Pleasant Entertainment.

Bird Spitler and Will Bristol and the Misses Bernice and Kathryn Boltz, drove to Priam yesterday and were the guests of E. E. McFerren at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Landon. They were entertained right royally and enjoyed a bountiful dinner and a pleasant time. After dinner Chas. Reeves of Hartford City contributed to the general amusement by reading a selection, "Seein' Things at Night." Miss Armstrong of Priam rendered two very fine recitations and was followed by Miss Bernice and May Bourne. A fine recitation by Chas. Reeves proved him amateur elocutionist of no mean ability. A duet by Earl McFerren and May Bourne received much applause. Miss Boltz contributed her part to the entertainment by whistling to an accompaniment on the piano by Miss Bernice Boltz.—Dunkirk Evening Star.

A Postmaster's View of It.

BLOOMINGDALE, IND., Feb. 20, 1899. Pepsin Syrup Co.

GENTLEMEN:—After having given Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a fair trial in my family, I unhesitatingly pronounce it a boon to all suffering from indigestion, constipation and dyspepsia in all their forms with all their train of evil consequences. I have fought dyspepsia and constipation of a severe character for 25 years, have employed the most skilled physicians that I could reach, have spent hundreds of dollars and now I find more relief in this pleasant remedy than I have found in anything else. To all persons of sedentary occupations in life, I wish to say, buy it and use it. I have spent 12 years at the postmaster's desk, averaging 14 hours per day, and know now if I had had this remedy years ago it would have saved me much suffering.

A New Dodge.

Two indigent fellows of nimble wit, worked an ingenious scheme on a bartender in a down-town saloon, and while they only got a drink of whisky they displayed a cleverness of mind that was worthy a better endeavor.

They walked into the bar and the one man called for a drink of whisky.

"What'll you have?" he asked the other man.

O, said the other carelessly, "pass me up. I don't want anything."

The first poured his glass full to the brim and drank half of it. Then he coughed and choked, made wry faces, and appeared to have swallowed a dose of sulphuric acid and sorghum molasses.

"Holy Moses," he said, "talk about rotten whisky. Say, just taste that."

The other looked curious, and taking up the glass drank up the balance of the contents.

"Gee, he said. "Fierce."

Then both smacked their lips and walked out, while the bartender went into a state of trance.

Consumption

is destruction of lung by a growing germ, precisely as moldy cheese is destruction of cheese by a growing germ.

If you kill the germ, you stop the consumption. You can or can't, according to when you begin.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil: take a little at first.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other.

It acts as a food; it is the easiest food. Seems not to be food; makes you hungry; eating is comfortable. You grow stronger. Take more; not too much; enough is as much as you like and agrees with you. Satisfy hunger with usual food; whatever you like and agrees with you.

When you are strong again, have recovered your strength—the germs are dead; you have killed them.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

STOLEN HORSE FOUND.

Sheriff Hathaway Has One of the Smith Horses.

About ten a. m. today a big horse was brought up town from the Junction and put into Gene Trout's livery barn. It was one of the span of horses stolen from Fremont Smith southwest of the Junction, Jan. 29. The thief had taken the horses, carriage, harness, lap robes and all, a very valuable outfit. It was believed the horses had been taken west, but they were not found. But Sheriff Hathaway had not given them up, and has been gathering clues ever since. On Monday of this week, a detective in Chicago, whom he employs to assist when in need of help there, sent him word that he had got track of one of the stolen horses, being guided by the postal cards the sheriff had sent him. Yesterday the description having proved satisfactory, Mr. Hathaway went to Chicago and found that the horse was owned and used by a laundry man. They called there and on proof that the horse was stolen, the man had to give it up. It was put on the cars and reached here this morning. Mr. Hathaway came in on a passenger train.

It appears that the thief, on his way to Chicago, traded the good rig he had, carriage, harness, robes and all, for a poorer outfit, the rig he got being an old jump seat affair. On the 3d of July the thief sold both horses to a horse dealer for $120, and July 6, the dealer put them on the market. The horse was bought by the laundryman, while the mare was sold to a party in Pennsylvania, and was soon after shipped east with several car loads of horses. She is now in Washington county, Pa., and may yet be recovered.

The laundry man loses nothing as he goes to the dealer for his money. The dealer can get nothing of the thief. But he will lose nothing, as the mare brought him more than he gave for both.

The thief has been captured in Wisconsin for stealing a horse there, and is in jail. He will no doubt serve a good term in the state prison. The detective and the horse dealer have been up to see him and the latter says he is the man he bought the team of.

W. C. T. U. Column.

It is the fault of our legislature that so many saloons, gambling houses and other dens of vice are allowed to be operated in Pennsylvania. Years ago, one of the Western states paid thousands of dollars yearly for the killing of wolves. It was the only available method for wiping out the dangerous beasts; but in the course of time the state was freed of them. In Pennsylvania today the forces are acting in exactly the opposite direction. People are paying millions of dollars yearly, not to drive out the saloons, but to give them a deeper root in the very heart of our cities. There can be no real comparison between saloons and wild beasts The saloon kills not only physically, but morally and mentally, while the wild beasts of the prairies can do only bodily injury. CAUSES MANY MURDERS.

The use of intoxicating liquors does cause many divorces; what proportion it is impossible to tell. Crimes which are of personal violence (no element of robbery entering into the same) are frequently caused by intoxication. My observance is that one-half the fights, merely personal assaults and murders, where no attempt at robbery or theft is made, are caused by intoxicating drinks. The observance of Temperance would tend to lessen crime. Crime is much more prevalent here, pauperism more common than in some other countries—Japan for instance. My observation is that life and property are five times as safe there as here. Crime is more common in this land than it was sixty years ago, while the use to excess of intoxicating drinks is much less. Schools better, education more common, yet breaches of criminal laws more frequent. From this it by no means follows that the use of intoxicants is a good or education a bad thing It is merely a matter of consideration in determining what we shall do to prevent pauperism and crime. JUDGE A. N. WATERMAN, Chicago, Ill.

Our Saturday Evenings.

CHAPTER LX.

You don't need to go away from home to find out that Mrs. Partington was right, when she said [he said would be nearer] that "We are all poor creatures."

A bevy of young Auburn misses swung along the sidewalks not many moons ago, chatting with the gushing enthusiasm of the silver age of ten. They also chewed gum energetically.

"I just waved my hand at Frank, just this way, a time or two, and Fred happened to see me, and he was so mad he wont speak."

Then there was an inergetic interchange of opinion in regard to Frank and Fred. We Americans begin early to take an interest in the world's affairs.

More to the point for our text, is a story told by ex-Clerk Mike Long.

As already noted he has been assisting at the great slaughter fire sale of A. Levy & Co. of Butler.

The first day's sale exceeded $2,200, and the crowd was simply terrible. (They had advertised in the COURIER, and of course the people came.) The jam became so unmanageable that the doors had to be closed, and when the people were waited on they were sent out the rear door, and then the front door admitted a new lot.

But to prove that we are all "poor creature." In all big sales of this sort, there is more or less stealing. The Levy sale was up to the standard in this regard. One woman had concealed some desirable goods under her shawl, and held it there by keeping her arm close to her body. A watcher saw the whole thing, and just as she was going to start out, came carelessly past her in such a way, he jogged her arm upwards and the goods fell to the floor. She wondered how on earth that bundle came under her arm!

But more to the point is what befell a rather well known man. He had been sauntering and pushing about, and stopped by the stock of umbrellas. He looked over the stock, selected a high priced one and took it from the rack. He carried it around in plain sight in his hand for some time, and probably had he been asked if he wished to buy it, he might have talked business. As it was, when he got near the door, he walked out. A watcher followed, saw him go to his buggy, lift up the flap poke the umbrella under the seat and then saunter over to Wolff's store. The watcher also lifted the curtain, pulled out the umbrella, took it back to the store, and replaced it in the rack. The honest (?) admirer of good umbrellas, got through at Wolff's came out, leisurely, unhitched his horse, and without looking under the seat drove home.

Probably he hurried to tell his wife what a nice umbrella he got for family use, but some dishonest scoundrel had stolen it while he was at Wolff's store. We are all "poor creeturs."

All these things remind us of some incidents at one of the great Lackey sales that used to be held every year. An astonishing number of people had to be watched, and several humiliating disclosures were made.

It was always so. Several years ago, the store of McQuiston & Long had similar experiences. At one big sale Mr. Long happened to be up at one part of the store, where numerous goods were hanging, we don't remember just what they were, but he stood among them, fairly well concealed, when he saw a woman he knew, concealing some valuable goods. He came at once from his hiding place. The woman was very indignant and denied it, but she also was made to lift an arm and the tell-tale goods came in sight. It is but fair to say that she has long since ceased to be a resident at Auburn. Don't ask the COURIER who these people are. We don't know. But we still insist that Mrs. Partington knew human nature.

Keep us from temptation. Perhaps if the opportunity had not been given people, they would not have sinned Though of course that is a poor excuse. Many men who would have gone through life as honest men, have fallen while in offices of trust, where the opportunity and temptation lay open. Sins against morality and temperance occur under the same conditions. It is safest to avoid bad company and keep away from all opportunities for temptation.

Delmore and Wilson.

It is a current report in theatrical circles that the popular comedians, Delmore and Wilson, are the best all-around fun makers on the road today. They are this season under the guidance of that astute young manager, Ira J. La Motte; who has directed some of the most important productions of the past five years. He has secured for his stars a rollicking musical comedy and has given it the familiarly interesting title of "My Aunt's Nephew," the story of which developes some intensely amusing family complications.

The cast includes a dozen exceptionally pretty women who sing and dance with unusual grace and abandon. This excellent attraction will appear at Henry's opera house, Thursday, Dec. 13.

The Delicious Fragrance

from a hot Royal Baking Powder biscuit whets the appetite. The taste of such a biscuit—sweet, creamy, delicate and crispy—is a joy to the most fastidious.

ROYAL Baking Powder improves the flavor and adds to the healthfulness of all risen flour-foods. It renders the biscuit, bread and cake more digestible and nutritious.

Royal Baking Powder makes hot breads wholesome. Food raised with Royal will not distress persons of delicate or enfeebled digestion, though eaten warm and fresh.

Imitation baking powders almost invariably contain alum. Alum makes the food unwholesome.

The Fat Stock Sales

A dispatch from Chicago yesterday says:

One hundred dollars apiece for steaks and $10 a pound for roast beef was paid at the fat stock show today when Schwartzchild and Shulzberger, of New York, bought B. R. Price's Aberdeen-Angu steer Advance for $150 a pound. This was paid for beef on the hoof and as the steer tipped the ocale at 1,430 pounds the price was $2,145.

Another important sale of the day was a carload of fifteen Angus cattle bied by W. R. Kerrick of Bloomington, Ill. These cattle brought $3,469, or at the rate of 15 and 1-2 cents per pound. This is the highest price ever paid for a carload of cattle. A. Webber of Kansas City was the purchaser.

Too Much Pork: Not Enough Fat

Without doubt the fat in pork is about as hard to digest as anything can be. A person has to have a strong digestion and must be engaged in hard work in order to take care of this food, although it is true a large number of persons depend upon it especially through the cold weather. The fact is, however, that as a rule fat is largely deficient in our food; that is, a fat which can be easily digested and promptly assimilated by the system. Cod liver oil, as we find it in Scott's Emulsion, is the most easily digested of all fats; it is just the food the body must have to give it nerve power, brain power and digestive power. d1w1

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

Victory for the Boers.

London special: The war office has received a dispatch fro: Lord Kitchener, dated Bloemfontein, announcing that General Delarey with 500 Boers, attacked a convoy, proceeding from Pretoria to Rustenburg at Buffelspoort, burned half the convoy and killed fifteen men and wounded twenty-three, including Lieutenant Baker. The Boers, the dispatch adds, suffered considerable loss, some of them being killed with case shot, at fifty yards. Guns and assistance were sent from Rustenburg and Commandon Nek and the Boers were driven off.

The advices also say General DeWet crossed the Caledon, December 5, at Karree Pont drift, making for Odendal. General Knox was following him, the drift was held by a detachment of the guards, and and the river was forded.

Eagan Restored to His Rank.

Orders issued by the Secretary of War announce that the remainder of the sentence imposed upon Commissary General Charles H. Eagan has been remitted and he is restored to active duty in Washington. The second order, made public simultaneously, states that General Eagan, on his own application, has retired under the thirty years' service provision. Eagan's retirement promotes Acting Commissary General John Weston to the vacancy. Eagan was disciplined for calling Lieutenant General Miles names during the airing of the canned beef scandal.

Guatemala Must Yield to Uncle Sam.

In the absence of any official report of the facts, the State Department has taken notice of the press reports of the arrest at Port Barrios, Guatemala, of the American railroad contractor, May, the alleged reason being that he was in debt and that the laws forbade the departure of persons in such condition. An instruction has been sent by cable to United States Minister Hunter, at Guatemala City to make an immediate investigation of the case, and if he finds that the facts are as set out in the press reports, then he is to insist upon the release of May.

Storms Swept Britain.

London special: Storms have been sweeping over the British coasts and the ships in the channel have had rough experiences. Several minor wrecks have been reported. The steamer Rossgull of Plymouth, foundered off the Island of Jersey. Her passengers were saved, but a boat containing nine of her crew is missing.

Killed in a Coal Fall.

Paul Prebles and Frank Andrews were killed by a fall of coal in the Luke Fidler mine, at Snamokin, Pa., owned by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company. The men were working on a breast of coal at the time, when a large mass above them gave way and completely covered them.

Hobson a very Sick Man.

There is no change in Lieutenant Hobson's condition. He is still very ill in New York. Hundreds of letters and telegrams arrive for him but none are sent to his room, the physicians forbidding it. There are also many callers but no one is allowed to see him.

The Fiend Captured.

John Gibson of Catalettsburg, charged with killing his infant step-daughter with a hot poker, is in jail at Marysville, Ky. He says the object in burning the girl in so many spots was to make it appear she died from small-pox.

Terrible Mine Explosion.

Mexico City special: An explosion of dynamite at the mines of San Andres de Lasierra killed or wounded many miners. At the latest advices twenty-six dead bodies had been recovered.

Three Men Killed.

Three men were killed and two seriously injured by a fall of rock in the World-Herald mine, at Aurora, Mo. The men set off a heavy blast, which loosened a bowlder in the roof.

Five Section Men Killed.

An engine on the Grand Trunk Railway at Inglewood Junction, Ont., crashed into a hand-car on which were five section men. Every man of them was killed instantly.

No Forts on Canal.

President McKinley has decided to fight the amendment to the Nicaraguan Canal bill which provides for fortifying the canal.

Fort Wayne Masonic Temple Attractions.

Dec. 10.—"Devil's Auction."

Manley will Accept.

Hon. Joseph H. Manley of Maine, who has been offered the position of Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in place of George W. Wilson, deceased, will be in Washington soon, when it is expected he will accept the appointment.

Deaths from Foot Ball.

A table compiled shows that during the past foot ball season eleven deaths and sixty-two serious injuries and 450 minor injuries have resulted on the gridiron in this country. The number is in excess of last season.

EASTERN.

New York's plans for a permanent Dewey arch have been abandoned.

A severe gale has raged all along the New England coast and has done great damage to shipping.

In Portland, Me., two persons lost their lives and two others were severely burned as the result of a small house fire.

H. E. Goodman of Chicago was probably fatally hurt in a mine accident at Vintondale, Pa., while bravely protecting miners from death.

The announcement that a sugar refinery would be built near Fort Lee, N. J., in 1901 at a cost of $1,250,000 excited interest among Eastern sugar refiners, but no details of the plant were obtained.

The Abbot, champion trotter of the world, with a record of 2:03¼, went under the hammer in New York for $26,500, and may soon become the property of Richard Croker, czar of Tammany Hall.

Frank Tuscani was murdered at Hackensack, N. J., and the man who slew him was then in turn stabbed repeatedly by the friends of the victim. It was practically a lynching on the part of Tuscani's friends.

Women and children were trampled under foot as they fought, panic-stricken, to reach the door of Payton's Theater in Williamsburg, N. Y., after an intoxicated man in the gallery had cried "Fire!" No lives were lost.

The residence of Mrs. Margaret A. Beck at Boston, Mass., was robbed of $8,337 in money and Morris Arenburg, 18 years of age, who had been employed at the house, is under arrest as one of the principals in the robbery.

Edward B. Quinn, editor of the Magazine of Successful Americans, died at New York from scalds received by jumping into a bathtub, the hot water faucet of which had been turned on during his absence from the room.

Axtell, the wonderful trotting stallion that was sold for $100,000 on the day that he made a 3-year-old record of 2:13, back in 1889, was the star of the Fasig-Tipton horse sale at Madison Square Garden, New York. He sold for $14,700.

The Jersey Central's New York flyer was wrecked at Vulcanite, N. J., by running into the rear of a coal train. William Miller, the engineer of the passenger train, was fatally hurt, and Benjamin Burwell, the fireman, had both legs crushed.

Gov. Stickney of Vermont has affixed his signature to the bill prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors, and it became a law within an hour after its passage by the Senate. The law is popular, and its enforcement will probably be strict.

Eastwood Eastwood, Mayor of Central Falls, R. I., died from blood poisoning resulting from a cut in his toe during the removal of a corn. The chiropodist did not deem the cut serious at the time, but later the best medical skill was employed in vain to effect a cure.

WESTERN.

Five highwaymen held up a crowded car in Chicago, seriously beat the conductor and robbed Edward Wright of $317.

Henry Zimmerman, son of a resident of Chicago, has been sentenced at St. Paul, Minn., to the State reformatory on conviction of forgery.

A freight train collided with a construction train on the Southern Pacific, five miles out of Sulsun, Cal. Five are dead and twenty-two injured.

Two men, Charles Harris and P. D. Batson, were killed and four seriously injured at Grannis, Ark., by the explosion of a planing mill boiler.

After serving as postmaster and assistant postmaster continuously for thirty-eight years, John Pynn of St. George, Utah, has resigned. He is 85 years old.

Three men in a wagon, one of whom was killed, were struck by a Chicago, Burlington and Quincy passenger train at the railroad crossing in Harlem, Chicago.

The American Car and Foundry Company of Detroit has received an order for 600 cars for the Northern Spain Railway. The contract has to be filled by March 1.

Reuben Lockman of Wyoming committed suicide with a rifle, causing instant death. He was subject to insanity. The tragedy took place on the grave of his favorite dog.

The jury in the Whipple murder case at Bermidji, Minn., brought in a verdict of not guilty after several hours' deliberation. Much indignation is expressed at the result.

According to announcement from Seattle, the Great Northern will soon take steps to run its line into Vancouver to compete with the Canadian Pacific in oriental business.

John Baines, a former constable, was murdered in a most shocking manner at Dallas, Texas. The police found him running wildly in Elm street, all on fire. His eyes had been burned out, his clothing saturated with turpentine and ignited. He made a dying statement, on the strength of which John Chapman and Ed. Faulkner, saloonkeepers, were arrested, charged with the murder.

In an opinion handed down the other day the United States Supreme Court put the stamp of its approval upon "Jim Crow" cars—that is, coaches exclusively for colored passengers on railroads. There was, however, one dissenting voice, that of Justice Harlan, who solemnly declared that no State had a right thus to classify citizens of the United States. The case was that of the State of Kentucky against the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, to compel it to use "Jim Crow" cars. The court decided for the State.

Bradstreet's says: "Unsettled weather and holidays are a drawback to retail and jobbing distribution in many markets, but the general situation is still a most satisfactory one and the iron and steel, coal, boot and shoe, hardware and lumber trades are conspicuously well situated. The one unsatisfactory feature in cotton is the depression in the export branch, which tends to weaken brown goods. The feature in the grain market was the carrying to a successful conclusion of the November corn corner in Chicago. Following the private settlement of the shorts, at a basis of 50 cents a bushel, came a drop to 41 cents. At New York the influence of this corner—one of the few successful corn corners on record—was to advance prices slightly, owing largely to the deflection of supplies. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregate 2,497,880 bushels, against 3,827,296 last week and 3,699,400 in the corresponding week of 1899. CONGRESS IS AT WORK

HEARS PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE ON MONDAY.

Very Busy Session Looked For on Account of Many Important Legislative Measures to Be Acted Upon Before March 4 Next.

Washington correspondence:

The second session of the Forty-sixth Congress convened Monday at noon. The President's annual message was read, and the Senate and House then adjourned out of respect for the memory of Senator Davis of Minnesota. The real work of the session began Tuesday. Congress must adjourn March 4, but an enormous amount of legislation will be accomplished. Nearly every important measure that has been selected for passage at this session, including the army reorganization, steamship subsidy, Nicaragua canal, Pacific cable, rivers and harbors, public buildings and amendments of the war tax bills, has been considered in committee.

President McKinley's annual message to Congress was presented immediately upon the assembling of Congress at noon. It had been planned to withhold the message until Tuesday, so that both houses might adjourn immediately after assembling on Monday as a mark of respect for the late Senators Davis and Gear, but this plan was altered after a conference between the President and Senator Frye. The message was presented in the usual manner and received by Senator Frye, as president pro tem. of the Senate, and Speaker Henderson. It was read in both houses. It was deemed best not to violate the old tradition of Congress regarding the presidential message and its presentation on the opening day of the session.

No business was transacted beyond the reading of the President's message owing to the death of Representatives Daly of New Jersey and Huffecker of Delaware, and Senators Davis and Gear, which occurred during the recess.

The leaders of the House are preparing to press with great vigor the important business of the session. Already considerable preliminary committee work has been done on the important measures, and the House found work cut out for it as soon as it assembled.

In the Senate after the reading of the President's message the formal announcement of the death during the recess of Senators Davis and Gear brought the sitting to a close. Senator Allison made the announcement in the case of his late colleague, Senator Gear. These announcements were preceded by the ceremony of swearing in the new members, who this year are Mr. Dolliver, who has been appointed to succeed Senator Gear, and Mr. Dillingham, who takes the place formerly occupied by Senator Ross of Vermont, and the appointment of the usual committees to wait upon the President and the House of Representatives.

The expenses of the government, which were $360,754,159 in 1897, the last year before the war, had leaped to $487,713,791 in 1900.

Total revenues, which in 1897 were $347,721,705, have sprung under increased customs receipts and a war tax still in force to $567,240,851.

The army in 1897, which consisted of 25,000 men, has grown to 103,000. In this the expenses have swollen from $23,275,402 to $130,000,000, the amount of the estimate for next year. The navy has more than doubled in size; its cost has advanced from $30,500,000 to $87,000,000.

These are only a few of the things to excite remark as Congress reassembles. The plans that are going forward further to qualify the United States for holding the place it has taken among the great world powers challenge the imagination. The whole membership of Congress from Senator Frye and Senator Hanna down to the youngest members of the Senate and all the Representatives from Mr. Payne of New York down to short-term members are excited over a ship-subsidy bill.

Congress is expected to take the step, in passing the Spooner bill, that will commit the United States to the government of the Philippines by something other than the war power under which the President is now acting, and the government must meet the proposition of fortifying our colonial outposts in the Philippines, in the Ladrones, at Guam, in Hawaii and in Porto Rico.

On Tuesday the Senate accepted credentials of Jonathan P. Dolliver of Iowa as successor to the late Senator Gear of Iowa. Passed bill appropriating $250,000 in aid of interstate exposition at Charleston, S. C., in 1901, and admitting exhibits thereat free of duty. By a vote of 38 to 20 decided to take up the ship subsidy bill as unfinished business, and Mr. Frye spoke at length in support of the measure. In the House Chairman Hull of military affairs committee asked unanimous consent to take up army reorganization bill, but Mr. Sulzer (N. Y.) objected. Bill by Mr. Marsh (Ill.) to assist military instruction in the public schools was passed. Received resolution from Mr. Sulzer urging that Great Britain arbitrate South African war.

The Senate on Wednesday passed bills permitting Captain B. H. McCalla and Commander W. C. Wise of the United States navy to accept decorations from the Emperor of Germany; also House bill providing for the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the establishment of the national capital in Washington. Listened to Mr. Frye's closing speech on the ship subsidy bill. The House under special order took up consideration of the army reorganization bill. Messrs. Hull (Iowa), Grosvenor (Ohio) and Parker (N. J.) spoke in support of it, and Messrs. McCall (Mass.), Cochran (Mo.), Kleberg (Texas), McClellan (N. Y.), Shafroth (Colo.), Cummings (N. Y.) and Cox (Tenn.) against it.

GAGE MAKES REPORT.

Secretary Presents an Exhaustive Financial Statement.

Secretary of the Treasury Lyman J. Gage on Tuesday submitted to Congress his annual report. The report shows that the revenues of the government from all sources for the year ended June 30, 1900, were $669,505,431.18. The principal items in this total are from internal revenue, $295,327,926.76; from customs, $223,164,871.16, and from the postal service, $102,354,579.29.

Expenditures for the same period aggregated $590,068,371, including $140,877,816 for pensions, $134,774,767.78 for the military establishment, including rivers and harbors, forts, arsenals, sea coast defenses and the war in the Philippines; $55,953,077.72 for naval establishment, and $98,542,411.37 for the civil establishment. Interest on public debt was $40,100,338,270. This leaves a surplus of $79,527,060.18.

Referring to the working of the new gold standard law, the report says:

"Promptly on the passage of the act of March 14, 1900, there were transferred to the divisions of issue and redemption the records and accounts relating to the issue and redemption of the government notes and certificates. Up to Oct. 1 the total redemptions in gold from the new reserve fund of $150,000,000 were $22,530,854 in United States notes and $3,594,708 in treasury notes. The sums drawn from the reserve have been daily restored from the gold in the general fund. Exclusive of that reserve, the assets and liabilities of the new divisions were $723,062,179 on June 30, and $740,965,679 on Nov. 1.

"Comparison of the state of the treasury shows an increase of $24,887,093.39 in the available cash balance, exclusive of the reserve of $150,000,000 for the year. The cash actually in the vaults of the treasury, as distinguished from the deposits in banks and other assets not consisting of money, increased by $6,621,398.14. The most notable increase was in the smaller denominations of paper currency, which are in demand for moving the crops. Of these, the treasury held $14,062,172 more than last year. The excess of assets over current liabilities was, on June 30, $49,723,017.60 in 1899, and $50,327,501.76 in 1900."

Secretary Gage reports a saving of $7,000,000 annually in interest under the bond refunding provision of the money act. The total amount refunded was $352,083,450. The bonds outstanding Nov. 15, 1900, admitted to the privilege of refunding were $487,065,490.

The coinage executed during the fiscal year was: Gold, $107,937,110; silver dollars, $18,244,984; subsidiary silver, $12,876,849.15; minor, $2,243,017.21; total, $141,301,900.36. This was exclusive of 50,000 Lafayette souvenir silver dollars. At the time of this report the gold reserve in the treasury was $242,000,000.

On the country's foreign commerce the report says:

"Four great facts characterize the foreign commerce of the fiscal year 1900: First, it exceeded that of any preceding year, and for the first time the grand total of imports and exports passed the $2,000,000,000 mark; second, manufacturers' materials formed a larger proportion of the exports than ever before; third, manufactured goods formed a large proportion of the exports than ever before; fourth, exports were larger than ever before, and were more widely distributed than in any preceding year.

"The total exports of the year were valued at $1,394,483,082, of which $1,370,763,571 were of domestic production. Of this vast sum manufactures formed 31.65 per cent, against 28.21 per cent in 1899, 23.14 per cent in 1895, and 17.87 per cent in 1890. The total exportation of manufactures during the year 1900 was $433,851,756, against $339,592,146 in 1899, an increase of nearly $100,000,000, or about 28 per cent."

REPORT OF SECRETARY ROOT.

Wants 60,000 Men to Speedily Restore Order in the Philippines.

The annual report of Secretary Root, made public Monday, is interesting, owing to the vast number of subjects considered. He details the trend of events in the Philippines, Cuba, Porto Rico, China and Alaska, showing the great activity of American soldiers in these new spheres of usefulness.

Especial importance attaches to his recommendations with regard to the Philippines. He wants 60,000 soldiers for the immediate future in the islands, in order that the 400 posts may be sufficiently garrisoned. In a few months native soldiers can be depended upon to police the islands at much less cost, but American soldiers are needed to stamp out the rebellious Tagalogs.

He also recommends the coinage of a special dollar, of the same weight and fineness as the Mexican dollar, for use in the Philippines. This is necessary because of the fluctuating price of Mexican dollars. He also suggests that an insular dollar be coined, and which the United States will undertake to redeem in gold at 50 cents. The Secretary of the Treasury inclines to the latter course.

With reference to Cuba, Secretary Root finds much gratification in the improved conditions. He dwells upon the eagerness of the natives to gain an education and the facilities that are being provided; the abolition of filthy prisons, of disease-breeding pens for the insane and helpless invalids, all of which have been wiped out.

Highly complimentary reference is made to the work of United States soldiers and civilians in Porto Rico, China and Alaska.

The annual report of Attorney General Griggs is chiefly confined to statistics on departmental work. The trust issue is not mentioned. He urges that Congress increase the appropriation for a new building for the department and asks that the time limit on construction be widened, owing to the rise in the price of building material.

MERCIER CRIES WAR.

Tells French Senate Invasion of England Would Be Easy.

Gen. Mercier in the French Senate Tuesday startled everybody by disclosing part of the plans he has in mind for the invasion of Great Britain by a French army. In fact, Gen. Mercier went so far and caused such a remarkable sensation that President Fallieres was finally obliged to order him to stop his speech in dread that he might reveal important state secrets.

The naval bill was under discussion and Gen. Mercier demanded that the government embody in the plans for the modernization of the army and navy certain methods for rapidly embarking expeditionary corps. In arguing for his proposition he all but threatened Britain with invasion.

TERMS AGREED UPON.

UNDERSTANDING REACHED ON CHINESE QUESTION.

Compromise Is Made—Conferences Are to Begin Soon—Inability of Court to Inflict Death Penalty Recognized—Provisions Regarding Indemnity.

The acute phase of the crisis in the Chinese negotiations was passed Wednesday, when all the interested nations reached a harmonious agreement in regard to the demands to be made on the Chinese government, to which assent must be given before formal peace negotiations may begin. Instructions were sent to Minister Conger by Secretary Hay to sign the preliminary agreement, and it is now assured that the formal conferences between Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching, the Chinese plenipotentiaries, and the ministers of the powers will be initiated shortly.

Advices were received at the State Department from Mr. Conger that the ministers had modified the agreement in accordance with the instructions sent to their representatives by the respective governments. The agreement was necessarily a compromise, but on the whole it is satisfactory to the United States, the two main points of punishment and indemnity being arranged in conformity with the views of the President and Secretary of State. The State Department learned that an agreement such as that reached would be acceptable, if not wholly satisfactory, to the other powers.

Compromise on Punishments.

The main question at issue was that of punishments. The ministers had adopted an article of the agreement which provided that twelve Chinese dignitaries should be executed for their complicity in the anti-foreign troubles. To this the United States objected on the ground that the Chinese imperial authorities or the powers were unable to inflict such severe sentences on the powerful officials named, chief of whom was Prince Tuan, the father of the heir apparent to the throne. Russia promptly came to the support of the United States in this contention, and all the other nations followed suit with the exception of Germany, which desired the most exemplary punishment inflicted on those who were directly responsible for the murder of Baron von Ketteler.

As a result of exchanges within the last week Germany, it is understood, has come around to this view that the Chinese government, which is charged by the powers with the infliction of the punishments, was unable to carry out capital sentences on the principal offenders. Guaranties, however, must be given that these men will be punished severely, and the powers must have evidence that the punishments have been carried out in good faith.

As to indemnity, the agreement contains a provision that the Chinese government shall acknowledge liability for injuries to governments, corporations and persons, and agree to pay damages, actual and exemplary, to be fixed hereafter in such manner as the peace plenipotentiaries shall decide. The amounts to be paid are not fixed nor is any limit of indemnity named. This government and Russia favor the transfer of the indemnity question to the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague, of which ex-President Harrison, Chief Justice Fuller, Attorney General Griggs and Judge Gary of Delaware, formerly United States Senator, are the American members.

All the other demands heretofore adopted by the ministers are included in the agreement, with no material modifications. These embrace the proposals of France and Germany, the more radical being suggested from Berlin. While objecting to some of them, this government devoted its efforts mainly to securing modifications of the punishment and indemnity clauses, and was finally obliged to appeal to the powers over the heads of the ministers in Pekin to bring about the adoption of less severe demands in these matters.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Expect to Make Money in Ginseng Culture—Country Shows Low Death Rate—Hermit's Will Is Found—Boxcar Murderer Must Hang.

A company of Muncie men will soon embark in an entirely new business—that of raising ginseng for the market. The roots of this particular plant are in great demand for medicinal and other purposes, and the members of the Muncie company propose to go west and cultivate the plants. They report that they have been offered a big tract of government land for the purpose and that the leading drug markets have amazed them by the prices offered for the roots. This will be the first organization of the kind in the State and the venture promises to be unusually profitable.

Death Rate High in Towns.

Secretary Hurty of the State Board of Health has prepared his annual report, which shows that the average death rate in Indiana for the year ended Sept. 30, 1900, was 14.00 per 1,000. The total number of deaths in the State in the twelve months was 35,458. The population of the cities and towns of the State is 847,000 and the deaths in this class were 12,736, or 15.03 per 1,000. In the country districts the population is 1,669,160 and the number of deaths 22,722, the death rate being 13.5 per 1,000.

Old Will Is Discovered.

A will made by Judge Horace P. Biddle, author and jurist as well as hermit, in 1882, has just been found by his favorite niece and heir, Eva Peters Reynolds. At the time of his death, which was about a year ago, Mr. Biddle lived on an island in the heart of Logansport. Since that time all search for the document has been in vain. The will does away with Logansport's chances of getting the 9,000 volume library and the remaining property will be contested for in the courts.

Murderer Sentenced to Hang.

In Terre Haute, on his plea of guilty, William Radcliffe was sentenced to be hanged Feb. 15, 1901, for the murder of James Hogue in a box car of the Big Four road near that city. Daly, Radcliffe's accomplice, was sentenced to forty years in the penitentiary. Radcliffe is in a dying condition.

Boy Shot by His Father.

Amos Moore, a Martinsville carpenter, went hunting. His 7-year-old boy went out with him, and stopped in the weeds to tie his shoe. Just then a rabbit jumped up, and Moore fired, not seeing his son in range. The entire charge took effect in the boy's arm and legs, one shot plowing the skull.

Child Drinks Fatal Potion.

John Fear, the 5-year-old son of Lewis Fear of Marion, drank a quantity of concentrated lye, thinking it was water. The mother had placed the cup on a table and stepped out. When she returned the child was in the throes of death.

Whooping cough prevalent at Snyder.

Big oil well struck in Madison County.

The beet sugar industry did not prove a success in White County.

Martinsville may have another big brick factory, employing 100 men.

Terre Haute car works will begin building 500 coal cars for the C. & E. I. Railroad.

Peru will get its water supply from a system of wells instead of the Wabash river.

Standard Oil Company leased 2,260 acres of oil land in Adams and Wells counties.

Two-year-old son of James A. Mitchell, Noblesville, died from eating strychnine tablets.

Mrs. Hamilton Miles, aged 74 years, who resided five miles southwest of Hartford City, took strychnine because her husband contemplated moving to town. She died.

John Koon, aged 69 years, of Evansville, while ewalking in his sleep fell from a second-story window and his neck was broken. Koon was worth $50,000 and was an extensive land owner.

After being closed down eight months the South rolling mill in Terre Haute of the Republic Iron and Steel Company has resumed operations in all departments. The mill gives employment to 300 men.

At Lakeville Otto Robertson, a prominent St. Joseph County farmer, aged 30, tried to board a Vandalia freight train to ride to his home, slipped and fell so that his body was literally cut to pieces by the car wheels.

The Laruche window glass factory, a 10 per cent co-operative concern at Matthews, was destroyed by fire. The owners are mostly Hartford City workers. The loss is estimated at $25,000, partially covered by insurance.

The two constitutional amendments which were voted on at the recent general election in this State, have failed to carry, according to an official declaration of Gov. Mount. The Indiana constitution provides that the amendments shall have received a majority of the votes of the electors of the State. Owing to ignorance and carelessness on the part of many voters they did not receive such a majority.

The Indiana Legislature, which assembles Jan. 10, will be called on by Gov. Mount to enact an anti-trust law. The Governor says that in his message to the General Assembly he would recommend the passage of a bill limiting the arbitrary power of combinations in trade which affect trade and labor.

Furnace rooms of the MacBeth lamp flue factory, Elwood, were flooded by the stopping up of a big ditch. Work had to stop until the water was pumped out.

Mrs. Margaret Johnson, near Chesterton, started into a pasture to milk a Jersey cow, when she was attacked by the animal, receiving injuries which proved fatal.

Fire at the illuminating gas plant of the Richmond Light, Heat and Power Company caused $10,000 damage to machinery and rendered the plant useless temporarily. An explosion caused the fire.

Fire destroyed the two oldest buildings in Rockville. One of them was built more than sixty years ago.

Charles F. Backman, Mount Vernon, arrested for desertion from the army, says he deserted because he did not get enough to eat.

Mrs. S. L. Van Petten, Anderson, was awarded a gold medal by the police department for capturing a burglar in her home.

Mrs. Louise Spanwick committed suicide at her home in Anderson by hanging herself to a gas pipe. Mrs. Spanwick had a quarrel with William Williams, one of her boarders, whom she intended to marry, and he left her.

PARTING.

Overhead a great aurora,
Flashing all among the stars,
From its wide arch in the northward
Flinging up its opal bars.

'Round the dim lights of the city,
Distant sound of harp and song,
Sat we in the shadowed garden,
Speaking of our parting long;

Wondering of the unknown future
What for us it held in store—
Sweetest meeting like the present,
Or farewell for evermore?

Whether with earth's lights around us
We should clasp each other's hand;
Or, beyond these narrow limits,
In yon vast, mysterious land.

Spirit met with spirit, knit up
Threads of life that broke below,
Telling in each other's bosom
All the trouble and the woe?

Happy in the recollection
Of the fated hour we met.
Perfect love and peace succeeding
Every longing and regret.

HER LITTLE MASQUERADE.

BELLE stood at the telephone.

Her brow was puckered into a frown, although she said, sweetly enough, "Yes, papa, I shall be delighted."

"But you don't look delighted in the least," said Irene, who was watching her from the cushioned window seat.

"And my countenance speaks the truth. Papa telephones that he has invited two guests to dinner to-night; Mr. Fairfax, of Richmond, who has come to the city with his friend, Dr. Somebody—I did not catch his name—presumably from the same place. Papa always expects his visitors to be joyfully received, therefore I pretend to be pleased."

"But why do you seem worried? This is not a tragedy, surely."

"Because they will be here in less than two hours and Katy left this afternoon. The Fairfax family live like princes, so mamma used to say, and I don't know what this member will think when Gusta spills the wine and upsets half the dishes, as she will be sure to do if I ask her to come from the kitchen to wait at table."

"Can't you explain the situation?"

"Yes, but I hate such explanations. You see his cousin is my friend and she has told him a great deal about my housekeeping and how well I have managed since mamma's death, and I do so want the domestic machinery to run smoothly while he is here."

"I wish I might help you," said Irene. Then she sprang to the floor and cried: "I will help you! I will play the role of maid, and I promise you not a dish shall be upset."

"Nonsense! I couldn't allow my guest to do such a thing."

"I will do it, not as your guest, but as your new maid. I leave for Chicago early to-morrow morning and I need not see either of them again. Oh, do consent, Belle! I will wear that blonde wig you had for the fancy dress party, and I will make a cunning little cap. With your father's defective sight and his absentmindedness he will never guess who I am, and he will think I am spending my last evening in Cincinnati with the Lorings, as I had intended to do. Oh, what fun! I am never so happy as when I am masquerading."

Belle yielded a reluctant consent and Irene went gayly upstairs to prepare her costume.

"If nature had not already done well by you I should have said she made a mistake when she did not give you flaxen hair with your dark eyes," said Belle as her friend in plain dark gown, white apron, and coquettish cap appeared in the dining-room.

With eyes demurely cast down, Irene began her task, but suddenly the flowers, electric lights and everything seemed to be whirling around, for in one of the guests she recognized Norman Kendall, the hero of the one romance of her heart! But he could not possibly recognize her under the present circumstances, she thought, and with a mighty effort quickly regained her composure. Everything went smoothly and visitors and hosts adjourned to the parlor, where, having served coffee, Irene returned to take away the cups.

"I am sorry my daughter's friend, Miss Lemont, is not with us to-night," said Belle's father, as he leaned back comfortably in his easy chair. "By the way you may have met her, Dr. Kendall, as you also are a Chicagoan."

"Chicago is a large place," returned the young man, vaguely.

"We will present you at the depot in the morning, as she returns on your train. But I warn you not to lose your heart, for she says she will never marry. We think she has been disappointed in love."

The delicate cup Irene had taken from Dr. Kendall's hand was crushed under her nervous grasp, and she hurried from the room.

"I think your maid must have cut her hand; I will see what I can do for it if you will excuse me for a moment," said the young physician as he followed her.

He found her at the end of the hall. "Let me see your hand, Miss Lemont," said he.

"It is but a mere scratch," she replied, coldly.

He took the hand and pressed it to his lips. "There is a wound in my heart, dear, which only you can cure; will you?"

Then she whispered, half laughing, half crying:

"Thanks to that dear, blundering old man, you must know that I will say 'yes.'"

THEY GET A NEW IDEA OF THE UNITED STATES.

COMPARATIVE AREAS OF UNITED STATES AND FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

L'Illustration, one of the leading illustrated papers of Paris, has been trying to give its readers an idea of the immense extent of the territorial possessions of the United States. By means of the map here reproduced it is shown that New York State is as large as England, that Montana is equal to Japan, that Spain is no larger than Utah and Nevada, and that Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois together contain as many square miles of territory as Germany. When it comes to Texas it will surprise many people to know that Belgium, Switzerland, Holland, Portugal, Turkey, Roumania, Bulgaria, Servia, Greece and Palestine could be put down comfortably in Texas without filling the Lone Star State to overflowing. Pennsylvania and Cuba are about the same size, and Italy and the Philippines together are no larger than the territory of Arizona. Egypt is as large as Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and the territory of Oklahoma taken collectively. Other interesting comparisons may be made by a careful study of the map.

NO SUCH THING AS LUCK.

Sporting Man Says Chance Does Not Exist Except in Real Life.

"The old saying that 'the odds are against the guesser,' is firmly believed in by nearly all gamblers," said a turfman who prides himself upon having reduced betting to a mathematical formula.

"The axiom is a good deal deeper than most people suppose. Taken literally, in games of pure chance, it is false; applied to human nature it is true. Suppose, for example, that two men pitch pennies; the chances for heads and tails are perfectly even, and it can make no difference which of the players does the guessing. Where the guesser appears to have greatly the worst of it is in such a game as faro or roulette. The effort to forecast each turn is likely to unsettle his nerves; the guesser becomes irritated and demoralized, makes reckless bets, presses bad luck and winds up broke. In fact, the chief advantage of a 'system' for gambling is that it saves nerve force. The bets are placed according to rule, and the layer and the game are on the same cold, mechanical basis. In playing the races the odds are seemingly 'against the guessers,' for the reason that they are influenced by all sorts of hints, tips and premonitions, mostly wrong. It isn't really a case of guessing, but a case of misplaced confidence.

"Luck is something that doesn't exist except in real life. The late Prof. Proctor once delivered a lecture in Philadelphia on the 'Mathematics of Chance,' and proved conclusively that there was no such thing as luck. Afterward he took a dice box and attempted to demonstrate the fact to some skeptical sports, and went broke in eight minutes by the watch. There is absolutely no reason why people should have streaks of good or bad luck. I can demonstrate to you on paper that the thing is impossible, and you can demonstrate to me by ocular evidence that it happens every day. So there you are.

"It's a funny fact, by the way, that the two principal 'systems' at Monte Carlo are based on diametrically opposite theories of luck. One is called the 'maturity of chance.' To illustrate, suppose red turns up three times in succession; according to the system, the chance of it appearing again is greatly diminished and grows less with each repetition. Consequently the player bets on black. The other is the 'system of runs.' Its votaries hold that a color which has once 'repeated' is apt to keep on, at least five or six times in succession. Each brand of cranks proves its cause by the daily record kept year in and year out at the Casino. You pays your money and you takes your choice."

TRAGEDIES OF THE STAGE.

Large Number of Those Killed or Wounded in Playing Their Parts.

In the Grinelle Theater in Paris the other day an actor came near killing his professional friend with a stage dagger whose spring got out of order. The victim yelled so naturally and the blood flowed so freely that the audience was delighted and never realized the realism until the curtain dropped. The accident prompted a Parisian scribe to hunt up the record of things somewhat similar upon the stage. According to his story, Mme. Benoin, at Prague, in a suicide scene stabbed herself seriously.

William Moritz killed his associate, Temple Crozier, in the Novelties Theater of London.

In the play of "The Indian Emperor" the English actor, Farquhar, playing the part of Guyomar, dangerously wounded another player, who, unfortunately, had to take the part of a Spanish General, after which Farquhar wisely bid farewell to the stage.

Macready in "Macbeth" at one time came so near scoring a victory at Dunsinane that poor Macduff had to be taken to the hospital, where he remained for six weeks.

Garrick in "Othello" half choked more than a dozen Desdemonas.

In the banquet scene of "Macbeth" Charles Kemble flung away his wine cup with such violence that it smashed a chandelier, and the pieces of broken glass flew almost into the face of Mrs. Siddons, who was playing Lady Macbeth, but she never moved a muscle.

Sarah Bernhardt, playing the "Dame aux Camelias," with Darmont in the role of Armand Duval, turned many heads temporarily during the play and provoked some astounding ridiculous interruptions.

But it will be hard to beat the record of the old-time "Passion Play" performed a few hundred years ago before King John II. of Sweden. A fatal blunder on the part of the actor in the role of Longus the Centurion caused the death of two artists. Enraged, the King bounded upon the stage, sword in hand, and with a first-class right-hand swing that made the blade whistle, decapitated poor Longus. The audience rose in a fury and literally tore his majesty to pieces.

This last story needs confirmation, but it holds good with the gallery, in the light of the historic fact that a French ambassador to Spain, Gaubier de Branault, witnessing a representation of the battle of Pavia, in which a Spaniard got largely the better of a Frenchman, killed the unfortunate actor who played the Spaniard. All of which goes to show that there is only one step between the stage struck and stage stuck.

The Best of Life.

Not till life's heat is cooled,
The headlong rush slowed to a quiet pace,
And every purblind passion that has ruled
Our noisier years at last
Spurs us in vain, and, weary of the race,
We care no more who loses or who wins—
Ah! not till all the best of life seems past
The best of life begins.

To toil for only fame,
Handclappings and the fickle gusts of praise,
For place or power of gold to gild a name
Above the grave whereto
All paths will bring us, were to lose our days—
We, on whose ears youth's passing bell has tolled—
In blowing bubbles, even as children do,
Forgetting we grow old.

But the world widens when
Such hope of trivial gain that ruled us lies
Broken among our childhood's toys; for then
We win to self-control!
And mail ourselves in manhood, and there rise
Upon us from the vast and windless height
Those clearer thoughts that are unto the soul
What stars are to the night.

Electricity.

The word electricity is formed from the Greek "electron," meaning "amber." The ancients knew that when amber was rubbed other things stuck to it. The thing which caused the object to stick was and is electricity. Just what electricity is no man knows. Electricity is in everything. Rubbing is a way of bringing it to life. Rub a comb with a piece of silk, and bits of paper will cling to the comb. You have brought electricity to life.

Brushing the hair sometimes makes the head itch because electricity is produced by friction, and touches the nerves in the scalp. Cats rub their ears when it is likely to rain because the air is filled with more electricity than usual, and the electricity pierces the skin of the animal. Electricity at this time is also in the hair of the cat and makes her feel as though she were covered with cobwebs.

Electricity may make light and heat, yet electricity itself no one can see. Electricity has a smell of its own. If you stand near a big motor, you smell something called ozone—the same odor you will notice in the summer after a heavy shower.

No More Botany Bay.

As there is an inevitable propensity throughout the English-speaking world to associate the name of Botany Bay with convictism, a movement has recently been started in Australia which has for its object the abolition of that name and the substitution of Banks' Bay instead. The Sydney Sunday Times suggests that the change be effected before the new century, that the new commonwealth may start under the best and brightest condition without the taint on its fair name now suggested by the name of Botany Bay.

GIVE UP THEIR LIVES.

DOCTORS SOMETIMES DIE FOR THEIR PATIENTS.

Heroic Physicians Whose Devotion to Their Profession and to Humanity Lead Them to the Performance of Supreme Acts of Sacrifice.

A young girl who lived in the little village near Cork, Ireland, broke an artery in her chest and lost almost every drop of blood in her body. The doctor who was called had only been qualified a year and was not out of his twenties. He injected salt into his patient's veins to bring her around, then, turning to her naturally anxious parents, he said: "I can save her life if anyone will allow me to inject a quart of their blood into her system."

Although there were two strong sons in the room, neither said a word, but their mother, a delicate woman, volunteered to give the required quantity. The doctor saw at once that she required every drop she had in her body, and without another word he bared his arm, cut a vessel and allowed the blood to run into the veins of his patient. He saved the young lady's life, but he was never able to make good the blood he had lost, and about six months later he died.

Another case somewhat similar occurred in Salem, Mass. A wealthy merchant, as a result of an accident, lost a large quantity of blood, and when the doctor arrived he was lying in bed, white and apparently dead. The unfortunate man had only just been married, and his wife prayed to the doctor to save her husband's life. The doctor felt sure that if he gave his own blood to bring back the patient's life it would take him weeks to make good the loss, and that possibly he might never make it good at all. He would not allow the wife to make the sacrifice, but gave nearly a quart of his own blood. The merchant recovered, but the doctor who gave him back his strength and life is a feeble, pale-faced man, unable to work or follow his profession. He lives with the merchant and his wife, who look after him as if he were their own brother.

A country doctor died of typhus fever early in the year. He was called to attend a young man who was infected with the disease, and he went into the room where the patient lay and carefully examined the body. At the time the doctor was in a low state of health, and he caught the dreaded fever and died within a fortnight.

A young French doctor some time ago inoculated himself with cholera germs and suffered many weeks of serious illness in order to experiment with a new medicinal discovery which was believed to cure all germ diseases. Unfortunately, the medicine refused to act, and the plucky doctor died of the fever he had given himself.

When Koch's fluid was first discovered half a dozen German students were the first persons to have it injected into them. No one knew whether the fluid was not as deadly a poison as a dose of strychnine, and the men who allowed the drug to be injected into their systems are worthy of the highest praise. The dose given to them was far too powerful, and two of the number were nearly killed outright.

DID AS SHE WAS TOLD.

But the Footpad Was Much Surprised as a Consequence.

It happened out on a suburban boulevard the other night, and the heroine is an athletic girl out of high school only a year. The girl was returning to her home a little later than is customary for young women to be on the streets, and when she was within a block of her house a man sprang out from behind a tree and demanded her pocketbook. Upon the girl's hesitation to give up her money the man stepped nearer and growled:

"Hand me your pocketbook, and be quick about it, and don't make any fuss."

Now the pocketbook that the girl carried was the kind that has a strap which slips over the owner's hand, and when it is worn it lies over the back of the fingers.

When the man made a second demand for the pocketbook, the girl stepped close to him and "handed" it to him, but not in the manner expected. She just landed one on the jaw with the hand that carried the pocketbook. The leather spread out over the little fist, and as there was considerable silver in it, the blow was vicious. The robber went down in a heap.

He was on his feet in a second and came back at the girl with a look of the greatest surprise on his face.

"Hand me that pocketbook," he growled.

"All right," answered the girl, striking him again on the side of the jaw. This time the man did not get up so quickly, but lay a moment groaning on the ground. This was the advantage the girl was looking for, and she took to her heels and was soon within her home. And here follows another queer part of this true tale. When she flew through the doors of her home and was met by her mother and sisters, this strange girl didn't faint, but she just sat down and laughed a loud, ringing, wholesome laugh, and made light of her adventure, thus further shattering the traditions of her sex.—Kansas City Journal.

A MISSIONARY'S DRESS.

Why He Was Compelled to Adopt the Chinese Costume.

Dr. Crawford, my amiable Baptist host, who, with his wife, has been residing in China for nearly half a century, explained to me why the missionaries were compelled to abandon our Western dress. When he first came to China to preach the gospel he considered it hardly compatible with the dignity of an American citizen to wear a pigtail and felt slippers. Moreover, the Western dress appeared to him an advantage in his mission, as more liable to attract the attention and respect of the population in the different places he visited. In fact, no effort was needed to get an audience together, for great crowds usually collected about him, anxious to learn what the tall stranger with the stovepipe hat, narrow trousers and leather boots had to say. But hardly had he begun to preach to them in their own language than they became bolder, investigated the cut of his coat and trousers, touched his boots, interrupted him continually with all sorts of questions—how the leather boots were put on and off, where he got the trousers, how much the materials cost, and where he had learned their language—as if the God whom he preached interested them but little.

Tired of these continual interruptions, he at last determined to satisfy the curiosity of his listeners from the very outset. Arriving in the next village, he addressed the crowd assembled about him as follows: "Brothers, I hail from America; my trousers are made of wool stuff, to be got at Shanghai for 2 tiao per yard; my boots are made of calfskin, and are put on in the same way as the socks you are wearing; your language I acquired in Pekin, and I have come to tell you about the true God," etc. This, however, satisfied the audience but little. They waited patiently till he had finished, and then, instead of approaching him, crushed by the eternal truths, in order to ask for baptism, they again began questioning him about his trousers. Finally he became convinced that it was by far the best policy to adopt the Chinese dress, and for nearly fifty years he has worn no other.—Century.

PROTECTS THE HEN COOPS.

Burglar Alarm Designed to Warn Off Chicken Thieves.

"You might think," said an electrician, "that burglar alarms are made only for houses and stores and banks, and that sort of thing, but they have nowadays electric burglar alarms made for chicken coops to circumvent the chicken thief. The chicken house is so wired with the help of simple contrivances designed for that purpose that the opening of any door or window in its sets ringing a gong in the owner's house, which is connected with the chicken coop by wire, and the thief can't stop the gong's ringing by shutting the door or window again; it can be shut off in the house only.

"What's to hinder the thief cutting the wire? Why, nothing, I suppose, if he could find it in the dark, but while these alarms are set up with overhead wires from the coop to the house they may be connected by wires underground, suitable insulated wire being provided for this purpose. For that matter there is one system in which the alarm is started by the breaking of a wire. It is a more or less familiar fact that the chicken thief sometimes avoids all doors and windows, for fear of trap guns and that sort of thing, and just lifts a board off the roof to get at the chickens, this being a handy way also, because from there he can pick the chickens off the roost conveniently. But nowadays there runs across every board on the under side of the roof a light, easily broken wire, which is, however, sufficient to carry the required current. It is impossible to lift a board in the roof without breaking the slender wire, and, in this case, by means of suitable contrivances the breaking of the wire starts the bell to ringing.

"The cost of a chicken coop burglar alarm for a single chicken coop, wire connections with the house and all, would be very small, a few dollars. The cost of setting up a complete burglar alarm system for a big chicken ranch, with many coops and buildings, would of course be considerable, amounting to $300 or $400, more or less."—Chicago Chronicle.

Wonderful Feat of Memory.

That memory can be trained to a remarkable degree has long been admitted, but a test to which Henry M. Pillsbury, the chess expert, recently submitted was one of the most remarkable illustrations of mental capacity ever witnessed. While at the Northampton Club at South Bethlehem, Pa., not long ago he had, while blindfolded, participated in a team of four whist and at the same time contested in ten games of chess—nine of which he won, the other having been drawn—he offered to memorize thirty words, no matter how hard they might be, the selections to be read to him only once. Prof. Merriman, of Lehigh University, and Dr. Trelkeld Edwards, of Bethlehem, picked out most of the following words: Antiphlogistian, pereosteum, takadiastase, plasmin, ambrosia, Trelkeld, streptococcus, staphelococcus, micrococcus, plasmodium, Mississippi, Freiheit, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, American, Russia, philosophy, Piet-Potgieters-Rost, Salamagundi, Oomsillecootsi, Bangmamvato, Schlochter's Nek, Manzinyama, theosophy, catechism, Madjesoomsiopa. Pillsbury memorized these words and repeated them in the order given and in the reverse order, and he did not have any difficulty in repeating them the next day.

Machine Paperhanging.

This is a German invention. The arrangement used is provided with a rod, upon which the roll of paper is placed. A paste receptacle with a brushing arrangement is attached in such a manner that the paste is applied automatically on the back of the paper. The end of the wall paper is fixed at the bottom of the wall, and the implement rises on the wall, and only needs to be set by one workman. While the wall paper unrolls, and, provided with paste, is held against the wall, an elastic roller follows on the outside, which presses it firmly to the wall. When the wall paper has reached the top, the workman pulls a cord, whereby it is cut off from the remainder of the roll.

Ball-Bearing Watch.

One of the most ingenious devices at the Paris fair was to be seen in the Swiss watch factory exhibit and consists of a ball-bearing pocket timepiece. The principle has been already applied to the driving wheel of the clockmaker's throw and also for the winding arbor of clocks. Its application to a watch, however, with satisfactory results requires exceedingly fine mechanism and minute balls. The watch was made by Leon Gruet, a foreman of a Parisian watch concern. In it the arbors roll on steel balls of two sizes. It is spoken of by competent authorities as one of the most interesting horological exhibits.

FINE WINTER SPORTS.

CANADIAN PEOPLE ENJOY VIGOROUS OUTDOOR FUN.

Skating and Tobogganing Are Popular Diversions in Season—Advantages of a Straight-Away Skate—American's Nervy Exploit in Montreal.

Ellsworth Hagge, of Montreal, was speaking at the Hotel Imperial recently of winter sports in Canada. "You have little idea here in New York," said Mr. Hague, "of what winter really means—that is, the 'sporty' side of it. You never know here what a love of virile life it is that fires the blood in your veins and spurs you on to increased effort when you feel the smooth ice under the sharp blade of your skate and know that that ice stretches away for miles and miles. A straightaway skate like that kills rink or pond skating for you. With the wind in your face or at your back, as the case may be, the fire in your blood and the glory of it all drive you on and on, and you feel no fatigue. No! Give me skating in the open and over a long stretch to get at the true inwardness of the sport.

"Of snowshoeing, tobogganing and skeeing you know nothing and all these are sports to make the blood leap and to cause one to cry aloud for the pure love of being alive. In Montreal tobogganing has been carried to its ultima thule. Nowhere else can slides in such perfection be found. Take that lightning slide—I had almost said drop—for a long distance! The first time it is experienced it is something to make the heart stand still. Our perfectly constructed slides are high, banked at the sides with snow to prevent the toboggan from jumping or accidentally going off. The carefully watered center is a sheet of glare ice and in running over this the toboggans get up a speed that is simply terrific.

"Some of the slides have jumps in them and when the toboggans go off one of these jumps they cover with their human freight an incredible distance before alighting. The jump slides, though, are only for the stoutest hearted.

"One of the nerviest things ever done in Montreal," continued the speaker, "occurred there in a winter season some fifteen years ago. It was perpetrated by a countryman of yours, and was the result of an after-dinner wager made in one of our clubs. The American laid a heavy amount that he would go down one of the straight toboggan slides on skates. It was a thing that had never been attempted in Montreal and one I do not think is likely to grow popular, for a fall would result in almost certain death or in injury so frightful as to make death seem preferable by comparison.

"The American took all bets, and when the time arrived for the trial he appeared with a pair of old-fashioned skates, generally called 'rockers.' You probably know the kind—where the steel is in the form of a half moon from toe to heel, the blade is all circle and affords no semblance of an angle to offer resistance. They were very popular in the '60s and '70s, but no one but an expert could use them. It was an exceedingly wise choice, for a skate with a straight runner would have deflected or jumped at a small obstacle, which the rocker, on the other hand, would pass safely over.

"When the appointed hour arrived and the man appeared, far away at the head of the slide, all present held their breath. It did not seem possible that he could make that fearful descent in safety, and a majority of those present looked for him to pitch over the low sides and to be killed in the fall. With hardly a moment's delay he started. At first he seemed to move slowly, and then his speed rapidly increased. Everybody waited for the fall that did not come. Stiffly erect, that black figure descended quickly. Half way down his speed was so great that it seemed to the onlookers beyond human endurance for him to retain his balance longer.

"Yet, flying ever faster and ever standing erect, he held on until he struck the level at the foot. Shooting out on this like a cannon ball he crossed to the soft snow like a streak of light. Then his speed materially decreased, and when his snow-clogged skates finally pitched him headlong he received no injury. He was up in a trice without assistance, and his first words were a request for a drink. About twenty were handed him. Beyond a slight pallor he showed no sign of the great strain he had undergone, and I never heard that he afterward suffered from it.

"Without exception it was the most wonderful feat of balance and simon-pure nerve I ever read of or saw. When the dinner came off, that was part of the bet, it was what is politely termed an event. It began with oysters and ended with the next morning's breakfast. Anything that chap wanted in Montreal he had but to ask for. He could have lived there all the rest of his days free of charge. But after two weeks of it he packed up and went away. He gave as his reason that, while it was pleasant to have the freedom of a city and everything supplied to you gratis, he thought that if he stayed his demise would occur in about three months; he, therefore, preferred to go off somewhere else and by supporting himself be able to live to a hoary old age."—New York Tribune.

A Precious Necklace.

The most magnificent and costly pearl necklace in the world is in the possession of the Countess Henckel, a lady well known in London and Paris. It is made of three historical necklaces, each of which has enjoyed considerable celebrity in former times. One of them, valued at £12,000, was sold to the Countess by a grandee of Spain, and it is known as the "necklace of the virgin of Atokha;" the second belonged to the ex-Queen of Naples; and the third was the famous necklace belonging to the Empress Eugenie, and by her sold to a London jeweler for £20,000.

New Warships for France.

The French warships of all sizes to be begun or carried forward during 1901 number 111. The list includes four battleships and seventeen submarines. All are expected to be completed by the end of 1905.

SERMONS OF THE WEEK

Not Divided.—Christ is not divided; neither is heaven nor Christianity.—Rev. R. H. Moore, Methodist, Indianapolis, Ind.

Sinners.—That sinners are punished by suffering, is proven by the Scriptures, but retribution never falls upon the innocent.—Rev. J. L. Davies, Congregationalist, Akron, Ohio.

Desire to Rule.—The desire to rule is just as strong in the combination of workingmen as it is in the trust. It is the desire of labor leaders.—Rev. Cortland Myers, Baptist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Man.—The one thing in this world that has worth is man. The one element that is eternal in the only sense in which that word is worth considering is man.—Rev. Wm. T. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.

A Christian.—A Christian is always more of a Christian when he reaches out beyond himself and his home, and takes his place in a worldwide field.—Rev. A. S. Hoyt, Congregationalist, Auburn, N. Y.

Man's Mission.—Man will never wholly fulfill his mission in time or eternity until he has attained unto the perfect likeness of Jesus Christ, the God man.—Rev. P. L. Davidson, Baptist, Kansas City, Mo.

Life.—Life cannot be set right by merely attending to little things, which may be right or wrong, according to the opinions of men, or mere matters of no concern at all.—Rev. N. H. Lee, Methodist, Denver, Colo.

Responsibility.—Men dodge responsibility. It is one of the moral uses of political agitation that we are compelled to assume it. The right will prevail as it always has.—Rev. A. J. Canfield, Universalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Characteristic of Christ.—The character of Christ is the foundation of Christianity. What he was and is in his distinct personality is the vital principle underlying all he did and taught.—Rev. Dr. Wilson, Episcopalian, Chicago, Ill.

Missionaries.—The blood of missionaries cannot be measured in dollars and cents. We wish China to know that the Protestant Christians of America went there for their good, not for their money.—Rev. Dr. Brown, Presbyterian, New York City.

Suffering.—Whatever may be our construction of the meaning of hell, there is no doubt it implies suffering. If hell does not consist of burning coals of fire, it does consist of remorse, of conscience, separation from God, everlasting despair and hopelessness.—Rev. P. C. Curnick, Methodist, Detroit, Mich.

Life.—More and more, as we consider it, must it impress itself upon us that this is a most wonderful life, in the midst of which we are living. The past of no people, no age, presents anything to compare with it. Are we getting the most out of this life?—Rev. T. B. Payne, Universalist, Boston, Mass.

Sabbath Work.—It is not easy to determine in every case just when Sabbath work must cease. The changed conditions of life, especially in the city, make necessary some work almost. The Sabbath saves us from the worldly routine, and checks our desire to work.—Rev. J. D. Rankin, Presbyterian, Denver, Colo.

Religion.—It is not true that the highest spirituality interferes with the largest possession and use and enjoyment of the things of this world. But it is true that religion earnestly and emphatically forbids the making these things the chief concern of the soul.—Rev. Dr. Hawkins, Methodist, Baltimore, Md.

The Human Sense. The human sense of ourselves is purely an innovation. It is not the legitimate basis of life, for there can be but one standard of being. By stimulating the mind to divine action we come into possession of our divine inheritance of health and body and health of mind.—Rev. F. E. Mason, Spiritualist, Brooklyn, N. Y.

A Secondary Thing.—How pitifully in contrast is our conduct with the master's, and the entire spirit of the religion which we profess. Let our Christian living be no longer a secondary thing. Gather the choicest affections of your heart and bring to him the choicest gifts you can find.—Rev. Dr. Peters, Baptist, New York City.

Sin Has Pleasures.—Let us hasten to confess that sin has pleasures. There is a secret witchery in its delights. You are very much mistaken if you take the devil for an innocent idiot. He knows he cannot get a man or woman to swallow his hell-made pills without sugar coating them.—Rev. Mr. Van Wart, Reformed Church, Hackensack, New Jersey.

Missions.—We cannot be content to live in a Christian civilization when we are next door neighbors to a civilized barbarism. We must overcome it or they will overwhelm us. I take no stock in that weird dream that is called the "yellow danger," because it is based merely on brute force and outnumbering multitudes, and leaves out God and his mysterious providence. Meanwhile the lie is given to the scoffs and sneers at the unfruitful unreality of missions, by the courage of the men who risk and the men who have laid down their lives by thousands in China this very year. Meanwhile the call is all the louder to re-enforce the ranks and push still farther on the only religion that really makes the peace.—Bishop Doane, Episcopalian, Albany, N. Y.

Long Distance Railroading.

Long distance electric railroading is likely to receive an impetus, thinks Prof. Short, by the rotary converter, which changes the alternating current into a direct current. It is only recently that these rotary converters have been developed, and he believes that the great success being attained by this new machine will stimulate the adoption of electricity for long distance, high speed railways, and that in a few years we will see electric trains operated over lines 100 or even 200 miles in length.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY...DECEMBER 13, 1900.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met with Mrs. Barns on Saturday afternoon, with a large number in attendance. The lesson led by Mrs. Schaab was of great interest, the subject being "Duty in Regard to the Property of Others."

This was "Art Day" and the first paper was a fine one, given by Miss Edna Davis, entitled "Art for the People." This was given in an original and attractive manner, being in the form of a story; "The Barbizan School of Art" was the title of an excellent paper by Mrs. Lackey, in which she gave some interesting history in regard to art. The symposium, "Since I was a Little Girl," conducted by the president, was entertaining and nearly every one took a different line of thought on which to speak, making the exercise an interesting one. Mrs. Lewis was appointed as a committee of one to meet with a like committee from the Culture Club to confer together as to the advisability of some local philanthropic work.

Club then adjourned to meet with Mrs. Zimmerman next Saturday.

Trustee's Notice.

I will have Friday of each week for my office day. All who have business to transact with the township are requested to call that day at my office at the mill.—WILLIAM SEELEY, trustee Newville township.

FATAL EXPLOSION.

Mrs. Dr. Darby at Waterloo Meets a Terrible Death.

Another terrible accident is reported today. Yesterday about 1 p. m. Mrs. Dr. Darby who had been suffering from rheumatism, set on the stove to warm, a bottle of liniment in which one of the ingredients was gasoline. She probably left it there longer than she intended, and noticing that it was foaming went to take it off when it exploded, throwing the fiery fluid over her and setting her clothes on fire. Her screams attracted her son Had and and he and a neighbor. Peter Becher, succeeded in putting out the fire, and her husband, the Doctor, who was up at the drug store, came. But she was wholly burned over from her head to the hips, and the hair of the head all gone. All possible was done for her, Dr. Broughton of Waterloo, Dr Gilbert of Kendallville, and Dr. Fanning of Butler, all assisting her husband. But in vain. She lingered till today noon when death came to her relief. The deceased was an estimable lady and a wide circle of friends will be shocked to hear of her terrible death. Her daughter Vernie is at the university at Bloomington, and was sent for.

Surprised.

Friday was the 60th birthday of G. B. Monroe in Richland township and some of his friends planned a surprise party on him. Now, he never did like "surprises" and so after the second team had driven up and deposited its occupants at the door, he began to realize what was going on, and without saying a word, quietly picked up his hat and struck out through the woods to a neighbor's house two miles distant where he spent the day. So that his friends were the victims of their own surprise. However, they left their presents and ate their dinner before driving back home.

Commissioners' Court.

There has been a good deal of work done by the board the past week.

Oscar Price, Waterloo was appointed constable of Grant township in place of L. S. Stamets deceased.

D. C. Beehler of Garrett was appointed justice of the peace to fill a vacancy, but it was found he lived in the city, when the vacancy was in the country and the appointment was revoked.

Sheriff Hathaway filed his bonds, $5,000 for his new term.

The matter of the railroad election in Concord township has been already given. The election is to be at the usual polling places, Jan. 8. They vote to decide whether the township shall give the proposed Butler-Fort Wayne road $10,000, conditioned that a depot be built conveniently near St. Joe and Spencerville. The petition has twenty-nine names.

Liquor licenses were granted to Ed. Eldridge, Auburn; Isaac Whirledge, Garrett; H. E. Geddes, Ashley; Dan Hook and Wm. Oberlin, Butler; Earl Miller, Auburn Junction.

Charles E. Downend applied for a license but was refused, as he had not given full time notice in his advertisement.

The long contested change in the location of a piece of road in Franklin township, between Carpenter and Houlton, was ended by allowing the change asked by Carpenter.

DITCHES.

Nancy Chapman and Geo. Shoner petitioned for a ditch. Granted and viewers appointed; J. W. Jackman, Geo. Newcomer and Amos Snyder. Meet at source of drain, Dec. 22.

Adam Hartman joint drain in Fairfield and Noble county. Viewers, D. D. Metcalf, Cal. Husselman and Frank Teeters. Meet with the Noble county viewers at the source of drain Dec. 28. The Noble county viewers are: John K. Riddle, W. K. Rosenberry and John Longyear.

Geo. W. Scattergood petition for drain. Viewers, J. C. Hodge, J. S. Graham and Samuel Brandon. Meet at source Dec. 19.

Final reports were made and accepted on the Jacob H. Smith drain and the Ben Casey drain.

Monday was given over to examining and checking up the accounts of auditor and treasurar.

Tuesday was allowing of claims not reached before, and cleaning up odds and ends.

Today, Wednesday, they examined and checked up the court allowances, and closed up the work of the session.

Mr. Bartles at the poor farm is anxious to resign, but up to date no one has been chosen to take his place

OBITUARY.

Joseph Strause, son of Philip and Sarah Strause was born in Berks county, Pa., Jan, 30, 1832. When a young man he removed to Wayne county, Ind., where he was united in marriage to Miss Catharine Krick Jan 17, 1858. To this union were born eleven children, four sons and seven daughters, all of whom are living and were present at the funeral. After residing in Wayne county for four years he came to DeKalb county, Ind., and settled on a farm in Keyser township two miles southwest of Garrett, where they have since lived. Father Strause remembered his creator in the days of his youth and united with the Lutheran church of which he remained a faithful member throughout his life. He exemplified his religion in his daily walk among men. Father Strause was loved and honored as a good man in his own community, and it is there that he will be missed. He was an upright citizen, honest in his business transaction, and clean in his social relations He was a kind and affectionate father and husband After an illness of nearly two months, he fell asleep in the christian faith last Friday Dec. 7, 1900, at the age of 68 years, 10 months and 7 days, leaving to mourn his death, a wife, eleven children, eleven grandchildren, three brothers and four sisters besides many other friends. The funeral service was conducted from Cedar Chapel yesterday, Dec. 10, at 11 a. m. Interment took place in Cedar Chapel cemetery, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

DeKalb County Medical Society.

As this society has not been reporting any of its proceedings and, therefore, not spoken of in the county papers, many in our county may not know of its existence or the important work it is doing in the medical field. It has not been as largely attended by the members of the profession of DeKalb county as it should be or as desired. It holds its meetings in the afternoon of the first Thursday of each month, usually in the lecture room of the Baptist church, but frequently in the office of one of our local physicians. The last two meetings were held in the office of Dr. Swarts. Great interest is now manifested by the members in the consideration of "Specific Medication." Dr. Casebeer recently read a very interesting paper entitled "Are there Specifics in Medicine?" In this, contrary to the usual teaching, he took the broad ground "That there Are Specifics in Medicine" and presented many arguments and illustrations in support of this position, arguing that the correct settlement of this question involves the vital principle underlying the question of medicine being an exact science or necessary to establish the claim that medicine is a science.

The faithful members of this society ever on the alert and willing to admit only what will stand the test of the severest criticism and the closest scrutiny, have decided that so important a paper should have a whole session devoted to its discussion. They have, therefore, appointed the first Thursday in January for a full and free discussion of this subject. Dr. F. W. Shumaker of Butler, has consented to lead the negative in the discussion with a paper or an address. Dr. Casebeer will be called upon to re-read his paper and then a free and general discussion will be in order. All medical men of whatever school of practice are cordially invited to come and participate in the discussion of this interesting and important subject.

It is also the day for the annual election of officers and all members are especially requested to be present.

D. J. SWARTS, Pres.

F. M HINES, Secy.

Uncle Sam's Expenses.

The secretary of the treasury has sent to congress the annual estimates of the expenses of the government for the coming year. They aggregate $626,741,762, a slight decrease from the total estimates of last year. The appropriations for the present year are $586,655,362. The estimate covers every branch of government service.

The war department estimate is $176,658,342 and the navy department $88,913,248.

The total for rivers and harbors, including continuing contracts, is $33,881,317.

The total for pensions is $144,000,000.

A Good Hunting Joke.

Another mean man has been found He is a farmer in the next township—east. A few days ago he killed a big fox squirrel, and after skinning it stuffed the hide and took it to the woods where it was securely fastened to the limb of a big tree. When along came one of our nimrods and shot away all of his amunition, but the squirrel remained in the tree. He then climbed up to the squirrel's perch and when he saw the joke he was so hot that he burned a hole in the seat of his pants sliding down the tree. He left the squirrel for another hunter.

G. A. R. Election.

At the regular meeting Wednesday evening, Dec. 3, of DeLong Post No. 67, the following officers were elected: Commander, D. J. Swarts; S. V. C. Samuel DePew; J. V. C., William Sheffer; Adjt., Wm. H. McIntosh; Quartermaster, J. N. Thomas; Surg., J. B. Casebeer; Chaplain, John Otto; O. D, James May; O. G., Henry Wolf; Sgt. Mgr., Joseph Davidson; Q. M. Sgt., Enos Casebeer. Representative to encampment, James May; Alternate, Wm. Elson.

Trustee's Notice.

I will have my business days on Wednesday and Saturday of each week my office being at J. W. Baxter's law office on corner of Seventh and Cedar streets. All those who have business with the township, are requested to call on those days, MILES BAXTER, Trustee Union Township.

CONSOLIDATION

SLAUGHTER SALE

COMMENCING

SATURDAY, DEC. 15.

It is early in the seson to speak of the SLAUGHTER of our Winter Stock, but necessity knows no law, and our goods must go. Our temporary store in Ashley will be closed after January 1 and the large stock of goods we have there is to be consolidated with our stock in Auburn in order to make room for it.

We Must Sell Out

A portion of our immense line of Fall and Winter weights on our counters, shall we wait till the season is over? No! We will give you the benefit of the reduction now when you need heavy clothing.

The slaughter of Manilla,
The slaughter of Tien Tsin
The slaughter of Spion Kop

—Were mild as compared with the coming—

Slaughter of our Prices.

We have put the knife deep into our stock with the result that the big cut from the former price stands waiting for you, but it will not wait long. Our clothing stock must be reduced in a few days. If you have been waiting for a "money saving time" to make your purchases, that time has now arrived. What we want is to convert these goods into money. We will put the knife deep into our clothing department

Do Not Make a Mistake

Come and see what we have to offer you

Your little boys can be dressed cheap. Our overcoat trade has been splendid, but we have a few more left

Several men fell dead at our low prices. The widow sued us for $25,000. The judge decided in our favor, the verdict was that our goods were much below our competitors.

We will knife our Hat and Cap Department. Will give you $1.50 hat for $1.13 and so on as long as they last.

Remember the place for bargains is at the popular clothing store of

ALUM BAKING POWDERS.

Congress Acting to Suppress Their Sale.

The report of the senate committee on manufactures upon the subject of food adulterations and food frauds has awakened great interest throughout the country.

If there could be published a list of the names of all articles of food found by the committee to be adulterated or made from injurious ingredients, it would be of inestimable value to the public.

The recommendations of the committee that the sale of alum baking powders be prohibited by law, will make of special interest the following list of names of baking powders which chemists have found to contain alum:

BAKING POWDERS CONTAINING ALUM.

Chapman's.....Contains Alum
Manf. by Chapman & Smith Company Chicago.

Crown.....Contains Alum
Manf. by J. F. Dieter Co., Chicago.

Kenton.....Contains Alum
Manf. by Potter, Parlin & Co., Cincinnati.

Cameo.....Contains Alum
Manf. by Cameo Baking Powder Co., Chicago.

It is unfortunate that many manufacturers of alum baking powders state that their powders do not contain alum. It is only right that consumers should have correct information as to the character of every article of food offered to them.

A Peculiar Remedy.

The Distinctive Features of the New Remedy Which is Curing so Many Stubborn Cases of Stomach and Liver Trouble.

Those who become interested in the remarkable new remedy for dyspepsia and liver troubles. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure, and examine a package find it to be two remedies in one. The package contains a supply of both large and small tablets. They stop the fermentation of food, cause an increased flow of digestive fluids, and tone up and strengthen the stomach. The smaller tablet has a stimulating and cleansing action on the stomach, liver and bowels. One remedy restores the function of the stomach and insures the digestion of food. The other cleanses and purifies the system and expels the waste matter. You can see the need of both; but you can't realize how promptly and effectively they act without trying them. Better yet, they are soothing and gentle in their action. You would hardly know you had been taking medicine if it were not for the sense of bodily comfort and the increased vigor that so promptly results. Dr. Stone's New Dyspepsia Cure is guaranteed. Price 50 cents. Sold by H. B. McCord.

No matter for whom you intend this something, we have the right article. We wish to call your attention to a few things we have to offer—which make desirable, sensible and useful presents.

FURS We dare say there are more offerings made in this line than any other. Realizing this fact we have fixed ourselves. Our stock is simply fine. Scarfs of all kinds $3.00 to 18.00. Collarettes and Storm Collars $3.00 to 22.00, and a fine line of Fur Capes sent us on consignment which we are able to offer at fully 15 per cent. under their actual value.

Children's Sets and Muffs in abundance.

Dress Goods Aside from our regular line of Dress Goods which is the most up-to-date in this section of the state, we have arranged a table in the center of our Dry Goods room on which we place an immense number of remnants in Dress Goods, running from 1 to 8 yards. These ends we are bound to close out. On most of them we cut the price in two—some of them even more than that. You can select a fine present from this table.

Smoking Jackets You can give nothing that will please a man better than a garment of this kind. We show four styles ranging in price $7.00 to 10.00. The newest styles and colorings, maroon, Oxford grey, brown and tan. If we haven't the style in stock we can get it for you in three days. Don't put off looking this up until the last moment.

Ladies' Jackets and Capes The season has been backward, so much so, that merchants as a rule find that they have not sold out in this line so closely as they would like. We are no exception to the rule. We have now on hand about 70 Ladies' Jackets—not a last year's garment in the lot—all new, clean and up-to-date. We have decided to lose some money on them; therefore offer them at a discount of 33⅓ per cent. We have about the same number of Capes in Plush, Crush Plush and Kersey on which we give a discount of 25 per cent. We have 24 Misses' Jackets and 51 Child's Jackets and Long Coats, which we offer at ⅓ off regular price.

Dressing Sacques One of the most highly appreciated presents, combining beauty, comfort and durability. Made from heavy all-wool eiderdown, plain and applique trimmed, $1.00, 1.50 and 2.00. Colors, grey, cardinal, light blue and pink.

Umbrellas No more sensible nor acceptable present can be given. In colors we have cardinal, brown, myrtle, navy, royal blue and purple at $3.50 to $5.00. Black silks, all grades —"Lion" brand exclusively, absolutely guaranteed, 50c up to $6.50. The most beautiful handles we have ever shown.

KID GLOVES for one and all; all sizes, all colors and all prices. Every pair fully warranted. UNDERSKIRTS in black and colors, prices ranging from $1.00 to $4.00, and each garment the best to be had at the price...CORSETS:—We make a specialty of the Royal Worcester, the best Corset in this or any other land. We are selling a great many of the new Erect-Form Straight-Front Corsets, white or drab at $1.00. The "Dowager" is the proper thing for stout figures; will not break down over the hips. Try a pair...TABLE LINENS and NAPKINS make fine Christmas gifts. We have the reputation of carrying the finest line of these goods in the city. We ask you to call and look through this line, knowing that we can save you money.

Handkerchiefs Each year we make this line just a little stronger than the preceding year. This year beats them all. We show

One lot pure linen, beautifully embroidered lover's knot each	$1.50
One lot pure linen, embroidered daintily each	1.75
Six styles pure linen, very fine and handsome patterns each	1 00
Three styles pure linen, pretty and durable each	.75
Six styles pure linen, excellent value at the price	.50
The choicest stock of 5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30 and 40c ever shown in the city

Silk and Wool Waists These garments are especially pleasing and no woman can have too many of them. In order to make them go quickly we cut the price and that very deep.

4 Silk Waists which we sold at $7 00, we mark	$3 98
5 Silk Waists which we sold at 6 00, we mark	3.48
10 All Wool $3.00 Waists, black red and tan, we mark	2.25
24 $2.00 Waists; Wool, Mohair and Mercerized Cotton, now	1.50
27 1 50 Waists; Wool and Mercerized Cotton	1 00
41 1.00 Waists; Imitation French Flannel and Cotton, now	.75

Ladies' Suits We expect to sell every suit from our stock before January 1. The prices we name on them will do the work. We have 39 of them.

$22.00 and $20.00	Suits marked down to	$13.98
18 00 and 16.00	Suits marked down to	12.48
15.00	Suits marked down to	9.98
13.00 and 12 00	Suits marked down to	8.48
10.00	Suits marked down to	6.98

It will pay you to come early and get first choice. You won't have another opportunity of this kind to get a late style suit at less than they cost to manufacture.

SILKS We wish to close out every silk waist pattern in the house. In order to make sure of doing this we have marked every piece of fancy silk way down, in many cases less than actual cost. For instance,

11 patterns, 4 yards in each pattern, was $3.20, we mark	$2.40
17 patterns, 4 yards in each pattern, was $4.00, we mark	2 98
3 patterns 4 yards in each pattern, was $5.00, we mark	3.25
2 patterns, 3½ yards in each pattern, was $5.50, we mark	3.75

THERE ARE MANY ARTICLES IN OUR CLOTHING and GENTS' FURNISHING DEPARTMENT which make fine presents, such as Neckwear, Mufflers, Shirts, Mackintoshes, Overcoats, Suits, Hats, Caps and Dress Suit Cases.....We sell a great many Rugs and Carpet Sweepers for this occasion.....You may rest assured we have exactly what you want.....As Christmas is nearly at hand we urge you to come early. We will be better able to take care of you right.....We wish to see you often.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

President McKinley's message, of course, gives the people what they voted for. But nobody reading it would imagine that it was the expression of the head of a democratic government. There is not one line in it, for instance, expressive of dissatisfaction with the condition of the masses of the people. The man of a thousand years hence reading it would suppose that everybody here was happy, and that the President had only to suggest a few little things to make our social condition complete.

The first thing mentioned in the message is prosperity. The last word of the message is peace. Mr. McKinley asks for 100,000 soldiers. He says that 60,000 men must be kept in the Philippines for an indefinite period. He tells us that last year we were taxed seventy-nine millions in excess of Government expenditures. He recommends that taxes be now reduced thirty millions, indicating his purpose to spend forty-nine millions more than last year, or at least to have the money handy.

He devotes a passage to warning us solemnly against national extravagance. He demands the passage of the ship subsidy bill, which will pay as a bonus to one steamship company alone—that owned by the Standard Oil Trust—more than two millions annually of Government money. He has negotiated a treaty giving Spain an extra hundred thousand dollars for small islands that we forgot to take before.

Mr. McKinley asks for further legislation—if any can be devised—to put us more thoroughly on a gold basis. He says not one word to contradict Hanna's statement: "There are no trusts." In a feeble, perfunctory way, like a bad boy saying his prayers, he remarks that "combinations, if injurious," might be "restrained."

The Filipinos are to be made good Americans—almost as good as we are. The savage tribes are to be treated by Mr. McKinley benevolently and in paternal fashion, as we have treated our Indians. Mr. McKinley asks for a cable to Manila via Hawaii. But he says no word of Government ownership of that cable. He praises the work of the postoffice, but says nothing about a parcels post system, which would delight the people, and help every business man. He says nothing of a system of postal savings banks, whichwould give security to the deposits of the poor, give to the masses of the people the money now paid to a few Government bond owners—and interfere with the plans of a few bankers.

It is not a bad message. It provides for the views and needs of the well-to-do. You are living under a government, not exactly a republic, since its main concern is the welfare of the few. It is a sort of cross between a monarchy and a financial oligarchy. It is just as much a republic as England is an autocracy—England is not an autocracy. But you voted for this sort of government, fellow citizens.—Chicago American.

A Dangerous Innovation.

In the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution it is provided that Congress shall have power to raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years. It is evident that the intent of the framers of the Constitution was to put a curb on militarism by clothing Congress with authority to establish the army and by imposing a limit upon Congress itself in making appropriations for troops. The proposition to transfer these powers to the President is a most dangerous innovation. It constitutes not only a departure from the spirit of the Constitution, but it is positively unrepublican.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Menace to the Republic.

Mr. McKinley's phrase that "the republic is safe" cannot efface the fact that conditions are looming up in this country that resemble those which signalized the interregnum of Rome's transmission from a republic to the dominion of the Caesars. This menace will grow. The elements in control of Mr. McKinley's party, in the fatuous belief that their late success at the polls means an indorsement of their dangerous policies, seem bent on pushing these policies to the point where free government, except in name, will be extinguished.—Kansas City Times.

Even the Republicans Gag.

If the industry can flourish without a subsidy—and we believe it can—there is obviously no more reason for Congress subsidizing ships than for subsidizing locomotive or bridge works. The arguments formerly employed in favor of the shipping subsidy bill are rendered obsolete by present conditions. Owners of obsolete ships, filled with obsolete machinery, may need a subsidy to let them out whole, but the enterprising builders of new and modern craft can get along very well without it.—Minneapolis Tribune (Rep.).

Can Best Be Done Now.

A trust asking for tariff protection and then forcing up the price of its products on the people of this country, whose government gave the protection, is an object that is very offensive to those who are thus oppressed. When the people see how this state of affairs can be ended it will be done, and Mr. Hewitt is wise beyond his fellow millionaires in seeing that it can best be done if the scales fall from the eyes of the rich before another French revolution is provoked.—Utica Observer.

Unpleasantness in Hawaii.

With even Hawaii "going back" on him and her native voters sending as delegate to Congress a man counted as one of the stanchest adherents of the Liliuokalani regime, the excellent Mr. McKinley must begin to feel that his election day doll is "stuffed with sawdust." Obviously, dangerous ideas of local self-government and independence are gaining ground in what were once known as the Sandwich Islands. Possibly the Filipino junta has been employing agents in Hawaii. And to think how easily trouble might have been avoided had a system of restricted suffrage been established there!—Boston Globe.

The President's Opportunity.

Senator Hale of Maine, with the experience of years to guide him, utters a prompt cry of warning to his party to "go slow" in the use of power conferred on it in the recent elections. There is one man, and one man only, who can really stem the tide of which Senator Hale is in fear. That is the President. His pen is his scepter and if he dares to use it in veto of reckless expenditure its sway will be absolute. We do not venture to assume that he will do so. There will come an early test of the power of the conservative Republicans to restrain the greed of those who will assail the public treasury. It is the ship subsidy bill. If that can be blocked there will be some hope of moderation for the next session.—New York Times.

Cost of Red Tape.

Some months ago a government pensioner died in Ireland. His widow sent in a bill for funeral expenses amounting to $82.67. The Government auditor found some flaw in the bill, declined to "O. K." it and ordered an examination. The red tape and incidental expenses of the investigation cost something like $2,000, but the widow's bill has finally been thrown out. The government is out more than $1,900 in the matter, but, then, there must be something to keep the clerks busy.—Savannah News.

The President's Impulses.

The President's first impulses are possibly of the best. They were in the matter of Porto Rico tariff legislation to which we have alluded. But noble and generous impulses are of small value unless they are accompanied by a resolute tenacity of purpose. When the firm tread of Mr. Hanna is heard outside the President's door noble impulses take flight to give place to Mr. Hanna's notions of what party exigencies require.—Rochester Herald.

Has a Big Job on Hand.

The fact of the matter is that the administration realizes that a difficult task is ahead of it in the Philippines, for which more soldiers will be needed than it dares avow. If, then, some scheme can be railroaded through Congress which will permit of a great army obtained under false pretenses all will be well. This is ingenious, but scarcely practicable. The American people cannot be fooled all the time.—Boston Traveler.

A Preposterous Attempt.

The attempts to prove that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty has grown in favor since it was first introduced are not meeting with much success. It is preposterous for this nation to construct a canal in which an enemy operating against the United States will have the same privileges as the nation which built it.—Peoria Herald-Transcript.

Big Outlays in Prospect.

Senator Burrows, of Michigan, names as the three prominent measures to be acted on by Congress the army bill, the ship subsidy bill and the Nicaragua Canal bill. They cover a prospective expenditure of fully $500,000,000, every cent of which must come from the pockets of taxpayers.—Pittsburg Post.

Some Will Have to Wait.

As there is a limit to the amount of money in the treasury, it is already evident that some of the jobs waiting for a congressional appropriation will not be provided for this winter. Hanna's O. K. was too freely distributed when he was collecting cash for the campaign.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

When Popping the Question.

Having waded through one hundred standard love stories, a man of statistical mind thus tabulates the various ways in which lovers believe in popping the question. In one hundred cases where the proposal was accepted no less than sixty-seven kissed the lady and began "all of a sudden." Eighty-one declared they could not live without her, while seventy-two held the girl's hand, and thirty-six took her in their arms. Twenty-six lovers sat down to put the question, four fidgeted about with their handkerchiefs—which three afterwards required to wipe away the tears of joy; three stood on one foot, three "reclined on the grass." Only four thought it necessary to go down on both knees, but twice as many knelt on one. In thirty-two cases kissing took place. Only four kissed the girl on the cheek, but ten saluted the fair one's curls. Three kissed her eyes, two her hands, one the top of the head, one her nose (by mistake), and one her shawl. Acceptance of the proposal caused a lump in the throat of thirteen lovers; the same number had qualms of conscience, while five had eyes "calm and clear." Nine declared themselves "the happiest men alive," seven were deliriously happy, but five were too full for utterance.

He Addressed the Jury.

A man who had never seen the inside of a courtroom until he was introduced as a witness in a case pending in one of the Scottish courts, on being sworn, took a position with his back to the jury and began telling the story to the judge.

The judge, in a bland, courteous manner, said: "Address yourself to the jury, sir."

The man made a short pause, but, notwithstanding what had been said to him, continued his narrative.

The judge was then more explicit, and said to him: "Speak to the jury, sir; the men sitting behind you on the benches."

The witness at once turned around, and, making an awkward bow, said, with perfect gravity, "Good morning, gentlemen."—Buffalo Courier.

He that may hinder mischief, yet permits it, is an accessory.—E. A. Freeman.

TRIALS OF THE "NOTES AND QUERIES" MAN.

ELOPED IN A BALLOON.

TEXAN'S DARING WAY TO WIN A BRIDE.

Lovers Have Eloped on Horseback, Escaped Irate Fathers by Boat—They Have Also Used Railroad Trains, but in Mexico They Ballooned It.

Since the world began lovers have always ben equal to the task of uniting their destinies and fortunes in spite of opposing parents and guardians. They have eloped on horseback, escaped the vengeance of irate fathers by sailing across stormy waters, and they have used special railroad trains to put themselves beyond the reach of angry pursuing parties, but in Mexico for the first time a heroic young man and a brave girl used a balloon to elope. Randall Howard, a wealthy young man, whose home is in Marion County, Mo., went to Southern Texas about a year ago to get the benefit of the salubrious climate of the valley of the Rio Grande. He divided his time between Eagle Pass and Del Rio, frequently making excursions into old Mexico. He seemed to be well supplied with money, and being of a jolly, liberal disposition he soon became well known and popular with the best classes of people, both in Texas and Mexico. He was fond of hunting, and nothing pleased him better than to collect a crowd of young people and make a trip to the Santa Rosa Mountains, where game is abundant and the finest fish in the world are easily caught in the clear waters of the numerous beautiful streams. During one of these pleasure excursions young Howard made the acquaintance of Don Antonio Sanchez, a wealthy ranchman, and was invited to visit his hacienda. Howard accepted the invitation, and he was warmly welcomed by the old don's wife and beautiful daughter, who had just returned from a convent school in the City of Mexico.

Not many little walks had been taken through the orange groves of the old hacienda, where the frost never gleams and the flowers bloom forever, before the young Missourian became satisfied that the beautiful Spanish girl reciprocated his affection for her. He abandoned his Texas friends and moved his effects to the little village not far from Don Antonio's ranch. Howard had been warned by his sweetheart that her father's remarkable politeness and apparent warm friendship for his guest could not fne relied upon to withstand the test of parting with his daughter. "He likes you very well, Senor Howard," the young girl would say, "but he is the son of one of the veterans that Santa Anna led into Texas, and it is hardly probable that he will ever permit me to marry an American." The ardent lover soon discovered that the young girl was well informed. One day when the old don was gradually falling into one of his most hospitable and affectionate moods over a bottle of wine the young man boldly approached the subject. The glass dropped from the old don's trembling hand and his eyes flashed with rage. The hilarious, amiable host of the previous moment was instantly transformed into a furious human tiger. "What!" he roared. "My daughter marry a Texas American? Never! Such audacity! I invite you to my hacienda and you take advantage of my hospitality to steal the affections of my innocent child." As Howard prudently began to rise to his feet, Don Antonio began to shout orders to his peons. To one he said: "Bring me my pistols;" to another, "Lock up my daughter," and to another, "Call the dogs." It suddenly occurred to the young Missourian that Texas was a nice country, and it did not take him long to find a trail that led towards a crossing on the Rio Grande.

After sending his sweetheart a letter by a faithful peon he set out for St. Louis, where he developed a plan to accomplish his purpose, which has succeeded after one of the most desperate and perilous adventures that two eloping lovers ever experienced. Mr. Howard secured the services of an accomplished aeronaut, and after purchasing a good balloon he returned to Texas. Taking several faithful friends into his confidence, he sent a trusty Mexican to the little village of Santa Rosa, which is only a short distance from Don Antonio's ranch, to distribute circulars announcing that Prof. Le Roy, a famous aeronaut, would make a balloon ascension from the plaza of the little pueblo on a certain day. Senorita Alma was well informed as to the part that she was expected to act in the plan that her daring lover had devised. Promptly at the appointed time Prof. Le Roy appeared on the plaza of Santa Rosa and began to inflate his monster balloon. The well-disguised lover mingled with the great crowd that had assembled to witness the ascension. The old don's curiosity had drawn him to the plaza, where he walked about, paying little attention to his daughter, for he thought that he had scared her audacious lover away. As the big balloon began to sway in the air, the lovers drew closer together, and at a signal from the aeronaut they approached the balloon. When the air ship was ready to start on its voyage Prof. Le Roy stepped into the basket and a secret signal was given. Before any one realized what was taking place, the daring lovers sprang over the side of the car and accomplices cut the ropes.

The airship shot towards the clouds, but not before Don Antonio had seen his daughter in the arms of the hated American. With the agility of a youth, he seized one of the ropes and, drawing his revolver, he shouted: "My daughter," and instantly fired. Le Roy seized a knife to cut the rope, but the girl caught his arm. She realized that the balloon was already so high in the air that the fall would kill her father. Howard grasped the situation, and with heroic generosity he turned to Le Roy and commanded him to let the airship descend. "I will doubtless lose my life," he said, "but I cannot consent to be responsible for the death of Alma's father. Don Antonio was still clinging to the rope and rapidly sending pistol balls into the car. The balloon slowly descended until the feet of the enraged father were almost upon the earth. Howard bent over the side of the car, and after cutting the rope he waved his hat at the old don, and shouted: "I will be good to Alma, and when you wish it we will come to see you." The airship, relieved of the weight of the defeated and furious old man, shot upwards again. The lovers could only hear howls of rage mingled with oaths, and they were glad to be beyond the reach of the desperate man who was clenching his fists and shaking his pistol towards them. Some hours afterward the balloon descended near the little city of Del Rio, in Texas, and the lovers took the evening train for San Antonio, where they soon found a priest, who made them happy.

BIRD SUPERSTITIONS.

Some of the Quaint Rhymes That Used To Be Believed.

To dream of the lark is a good augury for future wealth, health and riches won by industry. It is somewhat doubtful if a search among old lore and records of the past would reveal a single omen, legend or proverb disrespectful to this merry bird. We are told, "If larks fly high and sing long, expect fine weather," and another prognostication is evidenced if they rise before they sing at dawn, with an overcast sky, when rain may be looked for, but when they fly very high, singing as they rise, a fine day is to be expected. If field larks congregate in flocks severe cold is indicated. Regarding finches, the plaintive note of this bird is by many taken as indicating rain, and in Scotland the following jingle is common:

"Weet-weet
Dreep-dreep!"

The feathered denizens of the farmyard have ever been associated with proverbs, such as "Children and chicken must always be pickin'," "Curses, like chickens, come home to roost," "A laying hen is better than a standing mill," "Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," "The fool puts his last hen in the pot," "The crowing cock loves his own music," and "Geese follow their leader, if he's a big enough goose." Of fowls there is a rhyme thus:

If fowls roll in the sand,
Rain is at hand."

And when they look toward the sky, or roost in the daytime, rain may be expected; but if they trim their feathers during a storm the rain is about to cease, while their standing on one leg is considered a sign of cold weather.

With regard to ducks and geese, we are told:

"When ducks are driving through the burn
That night the weather takes a turn."

In the Morayshire there is a rhyme thus:

"Wild geese, wild geese, ganging to the sea,
Good weather it will be;
Wild geese, wild geese, ganging to the hill,
The weather it will spill."

The whiteness of a goose's breastbone is supposed to indicate or foreshadow the quantity of snow during the coming winter, as shown in the following lines:

"If the November goosebone be thick,
So will the winter weather be;
If the November goosebone be thin,
So will the winter weather be."

When turkeys perch on trees and refuse to come down snow may be looked for. When swans fly it is a sign of rough weather, while guinea fowls squall more than usual just before rain.

Mahogany Forests Nearly Extinct.

The true mahogany tree is a product of the American tropics, but has been so near exterminated that the wood of kindred species is now largely imported from Africa and the far East, especially the inexhaustible forests of the Sunda Islands. The Swietonia glauca of Borneo is equally fine grained, but a trifle paler, though after being soaked in oil the wood is almost indistinguishable from that of its South American congenor, and takes a brilliant polish. Extensive groves of the genuine mahogany are said to exist in eastern Peru, but under present circumstances are more inaccessible than those of Senegambia.

Where the Bicycle Still Flourishes.

In the high school at Carthage, Mo., the boys and girls own bicycles worth in the aggregate $3,000. Two years ago there were only three bicycles "going to school."

It seems to be a debatable question with a woman these days whether to take a poor husband to a woman's magazine for treatment, or to the Lord in prayer.

SIX CENTURIES TO BUILD.

Cologne Cathedral Was in Process of Erection Six Hundred Years.

While the first stone of Cologne Cathedral was laid on Aug. 15, 1248, and the body of the edifice was not opened until Aug. 15, 1848, 600 years later to the very day, it was not, however, until Aug. 15, 1880, that the splendid structure was finally reported completed, having thus occupied in building the record time of exactly 634 years.

The castle of Kingsgoberg, which stands at the southern extremity of Jutland, took 294 years from the laying of the foundation stone to the rigging of its master's banner on its highest flagstaff. Its foundation stone was the skull of its builder's bitterest enemy. Three months after its laying Count Jhorsing, the builder of the castle, was killed. His son was then in swaddling clothes. He did not continue his father's work until aged 24.

On his twenty-fifth birthday he was thrown into prison by the son of the man whose skull lay in the earth at Kingsgoberg's foundation stone. In this manner master after master of Kingsgoberg was stopped putting another stone toward the completion of the founder's work till civilization intervened.

Between Perth and Kingussie, in Scotland, on the direct John o' Groats to Land's End road, stands Murthley Castle, a magnificent Elizabethan structure, designed in the early part of the present century. It is not likely to be finished, however, building experts declare, for at least another decade.

Only a few miles distant, on the same main road, is the vast, unfinished palace of the dukes of Athol. It was begun by the fourth duke, who died in 1830, and who planned it on the most sumptuous style. When completed it will be one of the finest private residences in the kingdom.

For over twenty years Lord Bute has been busily building a great mansion on the island of that name. It is not yet completed, nor likely to be for another ten years. At the end of that period Mount Stewart, as the place is to be called, will be one of the most gorgeous establishments in the world.

Restormel Castle, in Cornwall, took ninety years to build, of which period exactly one-third was occupied in excavating the foundations. The solid rock upon which it stands is almost as hard as iron. Indeed, "Restormel" means, in Cornish, "the palace of the iron rock."

Milan Cathedral was begun in 1386 and finished under Napoleon in 1805—419 years.

The Duomo at Florence was commenced by Arnulfo in the year 1294, the last block of marble being placed in position in the facade in presence of the King on May 12, 1887, a period of 593 years.—Stray Stories.

Rubber Heels Are Worn.

Everyone knows that when soldiers cross a bridge they are ordered to break step, so that the regular vibration of so many feet shall not endanger the safety of the structure. Now an army surgeon of France has discovered that the brain jar due to long marches in regular step is as trying on the human frame as such marching is on the structure of a bridge. To the regular repetition of a shock to bones and brain caused by this uniform and long-continued marching are due the peculiar aches, pains and illness of the troops. On a one-day march, he says, this shock is repeated 40,000 times, and often the strongest men who can walk the same distance without trouble when not in line succumb to the strain in two or three days. Therefore this surgeon proposes as a remedy the use of rubber heels. This device has been tried in the French infantry with great success.

But our army has a better plan than that. We simply break the step with the command "route step." At this gait the men march in columns of fours at the rate of three to three and a half miles an hour. They carry their pieces at will, keeping the muzzle elevated. They are not required to preserve silence, nor to keep the step. And that's why the American doesn't wear rubbers.

Old Teacher.

Among the many epitaphs to be read on Burial Hill, in the historic town of Plymouth, Mass., is one which breathes such defiance to the world at large as is seldom found, even on a gravestone.

The stone marks the burial-place of Tabitha Plasket, a Plymouth widow who died in 1807. After her husband's death it is said that the Widow Plasket taught a private school for children of tender years, and thriftily managed to do her spinning at the same time.

When her small charges became unruly and overstepped the bounds of discipline, Tabitha's favorite mode of bringing them to a sense of their wrongdoing was to pass skeins of yarn under their arms, and suspend them from nails on the wall. A row of little culprits hanging in this way must have been an amusing spectacle, but it appears from Mrs. Plasket's epitaph that her methods did not always meet with approval from parents and friends.

Adieu, vain world, I've seen enough of thee;
And I am careless what thou say'st of me;
Thy smiles I wish not,
Nor thy frowns I fear,
I am now at rest, my head lies quiet here.

Some Big Houses.

The Sultan of Turkey has built at Mecca the biggest house in the world. It is intended for the accommodation of pilgrims, and is capable of sheltering 6,000 persons. The next biggest house in the world is in a suburb of Vienna. It accommodates 2,112 tenants. Next come the three Rowton Houses in London with 800, 677 and 500 tenants respectively.

Many Muscles in the Trunk.

The trunk of the elephant has no fewer than 4,000 muscles—at least, so said Cuvier, the famous comparative anatomist. The whole of the muscles of a man's body added together only number 527.

The Glowworm.

A neat little brush is attached to the tail of the glowworm, and it is used to keep clean that part of the insect from which the light gleams, so as to make it more distinctly visible.

CHALDEAN EXPLORATION.

A Long Series of Surprises During the Last Four Decades.

Scientists in charge of the proposed expedition to excavate the sites of Ur of the Chaldees and other ancient Babylonian cities are making great efforts to awaken further interest in the plan and to complete the fund necessary to begin the work. Excavations in the ruined cities of ancient Babylonia have given the world a long series of surprises during the past few decades. It was a surprise in 1842 when the French consul discovered a palace containing 200 rooms and covering twenty-five acres of ground, concealed in a mound north of Nineveh. The beautiful bas-reliefs which lined the walls and the carved stone floors speak of the magnificence of the palace. Another surprise came when the scholars read in the inscriptions which were found in the ruins that the ancient builder was the Assyrian King who captured Samaria and took captive ten of the Hebrew tribes.

Again the world was surprised when among the clay books from the vast library taken from a palace at Nineveh one was found containing a story of the flood, another the story of the creation of the world, similar to the Biblical story. Still another surprise came when the palaces of five Kings of Assyria who are mentioned by name in the Bible were discovered and found to contain records of the Assyrian relations with the Hebrews supplementing the historical portions of the Old Testament.

A few years ago, when it was still generally supposed that the world was created about 6,000 years ago, it was a surprise to find at Nippur remains of a developed civilization of nearly twice that age.—New York Evening Post.

Moon Worship in China.

The fete of the moon is celebrated in the eighth month in the year, and this lasts six days. Presents are then made on which the figure of the moon is apparent, and a large pagoda is illuminated. Firecrackers and music and family reunions prevail. A midnight banquet on the last night terminates the feast and then the descent of the goddess of the moon (which we call the man in the moon) is awaited. She is supposed to visit the earth at this time to grant the wishes of mortals. The moon, with the Chinese, is the patroness of poetry, and autumn is the poet's favorite season.

Could Have His Choice.

As the tired hunter emerged from the woods a cultivated prairie, dotted here and there with pretentious dwellings, met his eye. Evidently he was on the confines of civilization again.

"Any big game in this neighborhood, young man?" he asked, addressing a languid youth who was sitting on a fence.

"Biggest game I know of anywhere's about here," responded the young man, leisurely slapping a mosquito to death, "is golf."—Chicago Tribune.

DO YOU FEEL LIKE THIS?

Pen Picture for Women.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels bearing down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

MRS. JOHN WILLIAMS.

No other medicine has such a record for absolute cures, and no other medicine is "just as good." Women who want a cure should insist upon getting Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when they ask for it at a store. Anyway, write a letter to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her all your troubles. Her advice is free.

A NARROW ESCAPE. A GRATEFUL WOMAN.

MRS. F. J. LYNCH, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch, 324 South Division street, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen—"I earnestly recommend Peruna to any suffering women as it cures quickly. I had a most persistent cough, which nothing seemed to cure. Two bottles of Peruna did more for me than all the doctors seemed to do. In a couple of weeks I found myself in excellent health, and have been enjoying it ever since. Hence I look on Peruna as a true friend of women."

MRS. F. J. LYNCH.

Chronic Coughs and Colds Are Catarrhal Diseases.

Catarrh Is the Continual Scourge of Christendom.

Catarrh hovers ominously over every city, and nestles treacherously in every hamlet. It flies with vampire wings from country to country and casts a black shadow of despair over all lands. Its stealthy approach and its lingering stay makes it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient.

It changes the merry laugh of childhood to the wheezy breathing of croup, and the song of the blushing maiden to the hollow cough of consumption. In its withering grasp the rounded form of the fond wife and mother becomes gaunt and spectral, and the healthy flush of manhood turns to the sallow, haggard visage of the invalid.

Cough takes the place of conversation, speech gives way to spitting, the repulsive odors of chronic catarrh poison the kiss of the fondest lovers, and thickened membranes bedim sight, impair hearing and destroy taste.

Like the plague-stricken Egyptians a cry of distress has gone out from every household, and the mildew of woe clings to every hearthstone.

Catarrh in some form, catarrh in some stage lurks as an enemy in the slightest cough or cold and finishes its fiendish work in heart disease and consumption.

No tissue, function, or organ of the body escapes its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter, and secretions dry up under its blighting presence. So stubborn and difficult of cure is this disease that to invent a remedy to cure chronic catarrh has been the ambition of the greatest minds in all ages.

Is it therefore any wonder that the vast multitude of people who have been cured of chronic catarrh by Peruna are so lavish in their praise of this remedy? That the discovery of Peruna has made the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of the people, but many medical men declare it to be true.

As a drug store in this age of the world is incomplete without Peruna, it can be obtained anywhere with directions for use. A complete guide for the prevention and cure of catarrh and all diseases of winter, sent free by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

THOMPSON'S WABASH MEXICO TOURS

SECOND ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE.

1901.

Under the Personal Direction of Mr. R. G. Thompson.

The Hon. James A. Gary, of Baltimore, Md., Ex-Postmaster General of the United States, in the Mexican Herald, City of Mexico, said in an interview:

"Our trip to Mexico with the 'Wabash Mexico Tour' has been an exceedingly pleasant one. I have not until now looked with favor upon traveling in this manner but I know of no wiser nor more delightful way to visit a foreign country than with a party managed by so capable and attentive a person as Mr. Thompson. It would be impossible for him to do more than he has done that would contribute to the pleasure and enjoyment of his guests."

The next grand thirty days outing to Old Mexico, covering over 7,000 miles of travel in a special train of six Pullman cars, including dining car, serving all meals en route, will leave on February 27th, 1901.

Cost of this tour covering every legitimate expense, such as railroad fare going and returning, one-half section in sleeping car, all meals in the dining car, hotels, side trips, services of guides, interpreters, conductors, etc., will be $320 from Fort Wayne.

"Silent French," the Englishman.

Gen. French is known as "Silent French." The now famous cavalry leader started his career on the deck of a man-o'-war, abandoned it for the infantry, and on leaving this entered the cavalry branch of the service. For about twelve days he was an Eighth Hussar, from which he transferred to the Nineteenth, at that time one of the slackest and worst disciplined regiments in the service. However, under that splendid horse-soldier Barrow, well backed by French, the regiment was rapidly licked into shape, and became famous for its scouting and the skill and cleverness of its non-commissioned officers.

I do not believe Piso's Cure for Consumption has an equal for coughs and colds.—John F. Boyer, Trinity Springs, Ind., Feb. 15, 1900.

Accosted by a Pigeon.

The homing pigeon has proved that locality is a faculty fully developed in the bird's little brain, but a writer in the Boston Herald gives an instance of memory that was most touching.

A lady living in the top story of a Boston skyscraper, had been in the habit of feeding the pigeons and sparrows who flew to the little balcony before her window, and had succeeded in taming some of her pensioners, one or two pigeons even eating out of her hand.

One day, while passing along Park Street, this lady was surprised to see a pigeon flutter away from some companions strutting in the middle of the road, and come upon the sidewalk, where it almost tripped her up in its efforts to attract her attention.

It fluttered around her, evincing every sign of pleasure and recognition, and when she called it by name, the little creature fairly flew at her.

Now, in the midst of all that passing throng the pigeon knew its benefactor, who, with tears in her eyes, says its recognition gave her more joy than if the queen had saluted her.

Mr. Blank gave his new groom, Patrick, a letter and 2 cents, with instructions to mail the letter at the postoffice.

Presently Pat returned and deposited the 2 cents on his employer's desk with an air of conscious pride.

"How's this, Pat," said Mr. Blank, in surprise; "didn't you mail the letter?"

"I did thot, sir," said Patrick, gleefully.

"But why did you return the money?"

HER HEART WAS TOUCHED.

A South Dakota Mother and Her Little Girl Expresses Their Gratitude in an Open Letter.

Folsom, Custer Co., South Dakota, Dec. 10.—(Special.)—Mrs. H. D. Hyde has given for publication a letter expressing her unbounded gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills for the double cure of herself and little daughter.

Mrs. Hyde has been troubled with pains in her heart for over three years, and for a long time her little girl suffered from weak kidneys. The grateful lady does not seem able to find words strong enough to express her gratitude. She has written the following:

I cannot say too much in praise of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are the greatest kidney and heart medicine I ever used. I had been troubled for over three years with a severe pain in my heart, which entirely disappeared after I had taken a few doses of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I also gave them to my little girl, whose kidneys had been weak, and she commenced to improve from the very first dose. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly a wonderful medicine. I would be pleased to have this, my statement, published, as I feel it my duty to let others know just what the Pills will do for them.

MRS. H. D. HYDE.

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure. 50c a box. All dealers.

Too Far.

"I think that my husband carries his business proclivities too far," said Mrs. McBride to Mrs. Darley.

"How so?"

"I had a birthday last week, and he gave me a $20 gold piece. He also asked if I would allow him a discount of 25 per cent. if he would give me next year's birthday at the same time. I told him I would do no such thing."

Nasal Catarrh quickly yields to treatment by Ely's Cream Balm, which is agreeably aromatic. It is received through the nostrils, cleanses and heals the whole surface over which it diffuses itself. Druggists sell the 50c. size; Trial size by mail, 10 cents. Test it and you are sure to continue the treatment.

Announcement.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation.

Serious Complaint.

Askit—Whatever became of that patient of yours you were telling me about last spring?

Dr. Sokum—Oh, he's got a complaint now that's giving me a great deal of trouble.

Askit—Indeed! What is it?

Dr. Sokum—It's about the amount of my bill.—Philadelphia Press.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science have proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

MINISTER SAVED

Rev. Henry Langford entirely cured of Nervous Prostration by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

REV. HENRY LANGFORD.

Rev. Henry Langford, the eminent Baptist divine, of Weston, W. Va., has just escaped utter nervous and physical prostration. He is pastor of four churches. "For ten years," he said, "I have been nervous and growing worse all these years. During the last four or five years I became so nervous I could scarcely sign my name so it could be read. I was so nervous that I could not read my own sermon notes after they had been laid aside awhile.

"I was unable to hold my head steady in the pulpit, nor could I hold or handle my books and papers without embarrassment, owing to the trembling and weakness of my hands and arms. I was so nervous that I could scarcely feed myself. In fact, my nervous system was wrecked.

"I tried many remedies recommended by physicians, but found no permanent relief.

"One day I was in the store of R. S. Ogden, at Sardis, W. Va., and he said to me: 'You take two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and if you say it don't help you, you need not pay for it.'

"I took two bottles of this medicine and found so much relief that I bought two more bottles, and now I am wonderfully improved in health and in strength. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy did it. I can heartily and truthfully recommend it to the sick. Too much cannot be said in praise of this splendid medicine. I say this for the good of other sufferers from nervous and prostrating diseases who can be cured by this remedy. For myself, I am thankful to God that I found Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and for what it has done for me."

DR. GREENE'S OFFER OF FREE ADVICE.

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give his counsel free to all who write or call upon him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. His advice is from his great skill and experience and will shorten the road to health. Thousands come to him and write to him constantly. Do not put off getting the right advice, if you are ill.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Our Saturday Evenings.

CHAPTER LX.

E. M. Bishop, in speaking of the dishonest people whose tricks were referred to in the "Saturday" of last week, is of the opinion that things depend very much on the kind of a gathering you are in.

For example: A week or two ago there was a large gathering of workers in the Christian Endeavor societies at Lafayette. It was a state meeting, and brought together hundreds of people from all over the state and included persons in all walks and conditions of life, as well as those following almost every kind of business. But they were all of one mind on questions of morality and honesty. Mr. Bishop said one of the greatest pleasures of the meeting was to note the scrupulous honesty, voluntary and unwatched, in a couple of little transactions.

When the daily papers came out, with an account of the meeting, the publishers sent a large bundle of papers into the vestibule of the room where the meeting was held, and letting it be known that they were a nickel apiece, left them there. Each member was to make his own change when he took a paper. The papers were nearly all taken, and when the nickels were counted, they tallied exactly with the number of papers gone.

The same thing occurred when Prof. White of New York, brought in his pamphlets "Bible Study" which were 25 cents each. The professor put them on the vestibule table and let them sell themselves. A large number were taken, and as in the case of the dailies, the money left was exactly right.

There is encouragement in cases like these. They certainly are in very marked contrast with the ones mentioned last week in which people of ordinary honesty fell when the temptation came.

Some may say these conditions of strict honesty and morality are accidental. But they are not. In the case of the C. E. people mentioned those people have been trained in honesty and morality, and it cannot be taken away from them. They are reliable.

In the cases of temptation mentioned, some of it may have been accidental and some not. Many natures are naturally dishonest, and only wait for an opportunity.

Of this class, is that man Cyrus Jackman, who soon after coming of age, ran for prosecutor on the democratic ticket for this circuit. He has since said he was never a democrat. But no one knows whether to believe the latter statement or the former. For a man who will lie on one side of the question [illegible] depended on the chance of making some thing by it. That he is naturally a dishonest dead beat is shown by the fact that for a year or two he took the Weekly COURIER, having ordered it without solicitation, and saying he would pay when he came down again. He never came and his name went out from the daylight of that honored list into the blackness of utter dark on the "D B list."

There is sometimes honesty where we would not expect it.

A doctor in Hinsdale county, Colo., killed a man in a fight and was sent to the county jail for a year. The sheriff is gone most of the time and the doctor carries the keys and keeps the other inmates safe. He, himself goes where he pleases, practices his profession, but makes the county furnish him fuel and clothes, because, he is a prisoner. The taxpayers kick and have petitioned the governor to pardon him.

And then there is the person who finds a lost pocket book that contains money. He knows money is not easily identified and in three cases out of four he keeps it.

Imported Opossum.

Monday, Mr. Mader, the coal dealer received a big car load of soft coal and climbing onto it to begin unloading, he found lying among the big pieces on top, a strange animal, dead and frozen stiff. He had never seen an opossum, but some one told him what it was. Mr. Pooler came along and Mr. Mader gave it to him. It is supposed that some one in the coal region killed the animal and threw it up onto the load of coal, intending, no doubt, at noon to take it home to eat for they are considered a delicacy. It was no doubt still in prime condition, and Mr. Pooler being used to roughing it in regular army, would no doubt enjoy it. The pelts are also of some value.

For detailed information call on or address nearest Baltimore & Ohio Ticket agent, or B. N. Austin, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER HORROR.

Charles Mitchell Burns to Death at the Junction.

Another awful visitation shocks the community today. Last night Charles Mitchell, a well known young man employed at the Hanna foundry at the Junction, had gone on a spree, and about ten o'clock, Garrett Link, who has a saloon there, led him home, as he lived with his brother George, three doors west of the foundry. But Charlie refused to go in, and Link went back and got Joe Morr to help him, but Charlie still refused to go into the house. So they finally took him back to the foundry, took his keys and opened the door and went in. They fixed up a lot of slabs, such as are used under the boiler, into a sort of bed for him, right in front of the furnace doors, put him on it and left him asleep. There was but little fire in the grate and though he was close to it, it was not supposed there was more than heat enough to keep him comfortable. It will never be known how it happened.

When the foreman, Jacob Snull, went in there this morning at 5:30 to see that fire was started under the boiler, he saw something smoking and smouldering near where the head of the slab bed was. The room was still dark, but he examined and found the object was a dead body. He ran to the Mitchell home to get Charlie to come and help him, but Charlie had not been there. The brothers, John and George went with him, and the terrible fact was made plain that this was Charlie himself. He had been dead for some hours. It looked as if he had rolled off his bed on the side from the fire and rolled and struggled all over the room, finally getting back to the spot near the head of where he had slept. There, an iron stand on which a torch had been left, had fallen over onto him and still lay on him. At this point he had evidently quit struggling and died, but the remains of his clothes kept smouldering. All over the room were signs of the terrible struggle in the darkness, with a fiery death. In the southeast corner of the room was found a partly burned shoe and near by, his watch, which had evidently fallen from his burned clothes, and striking the ground, stopped at 3:45. The floor of the room is earth and cinders strewn with pieces of coal, etc., etc. Signs of the death struggle were everywhere. It must have been terrible.

He was taken to his brothers and coroner sent for. He is badly burned, some of his flesh burned to a crisp and baked in a horrible manner.

A Poker Election

A dispatch from Vancouver, British Columbia, says:

Deciding a parliamentary contest by a game of poker is the latest method of election adopted by pioneer miners in British Columbia. In the election for the representation of the Yale Cariboo district in the Canadian house of commons the returns from a remote polling place just received reveal a curious condition. The 150-mile house in Cariboo, a pioneer mining locality, went solidly for Galliher, the government nominee, neither of the other two candidates for parliamentary honors receiving a single vote.

An analysis of the reason developed the explanation that at the 150-mile house the electors had concluded to avoid political dissensions and had resolved to vote as a unit. It was decided that the combined vote of the locality should be a jackpot to be played for by adherents of the three parliamentary candidates. Galliher, the liberal nominee; McKane, the conservative candidate, and Foley, the labor nominee, selected respectively their most expert poker players, who were grizzled old miners of the' 60's, and the game was started with fifty chips in front of each player. The poker expert representing Candidate Galliher won.

$1,000 Worth of Good.

A. H. Thurness of Wills Creek Coal Co., Buffalo, O., writes: "I have been afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble for years, passing gravel or stones, excruciating pain. Other medicines only give relief. After taking Foley's Kidney Cure the result was surprising. A few doses started the brick dust, like fine stones, etc., and now I have no pain across my kidneys and I feel like a new man. Foley's Kidney Cure has done me $1,000 worth of good. Take no substitute. H. B. McCord

OBITUARY.

Chas. W. Mitchel, son of Jacob and Martha Mitchel, was born in Adams county, Indiana, Jan. 31, 1862, and departed this life at Auburn Junction Dec. 13, 1900, aged 38 years, 10 months and 12 days. Charlie led an honest and industrious life, and his genial disposition will be missed by everybody. He made his home with his youngest brother, Geo. Mitchel, who lives at Auburn, Junction, Ind. He leaves to mourn his death, a father, two sisters, two brothers, besides a host of friends.

—The person who disturbed the congregation last Sunday by coughing, is requested to call on H. B. McCord and get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. It always gives relief.

HER COMB CATCHES FIRE.

Peculiar Cause of Serious Injuries to Miss George.

Miss Mattie George was seriously burned in a peculiar manner Monday night while attending a birthday party at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Bertha Crane, 533 Tacoma avenue.

She was bending over in front of a grate when a celluloid pompadour comb used for arranging her hair, caught fire. She screamed and ran out into the hall and was followed by Arthur Crane, a fourteen-year-old cousin, who caught her as she was fainting from fright and smothered the fire with his coat, which he had removed as he followed the young woman.

Miss George's hair was almost entirely burned off and her scalp was severely injured by the flames. Dr. Robinson was called and dressed the injuries. Yesterday Miss George suffered greatly from the shock and pain and was greatly grieved about the loss of her hair which was of luxuriant growth.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

BUTLER.

Mr. Titler, who was severely injured by having his arm cut by glass at the Levy fire some time ago, is having a serious time with it. Fears are felt that he may lose his arm.

—Geo. Coffrin, of whose illness previous mention has been made, improves very slowly. He is able to be up and around, but unable to work.

—Boon Madden has about completed the repairs on his Butler dwelling and will move into it this week.

—Samuel Miller has moved into his Butler home. It is a convenient, expensive and up-to-date residence.

Mrs. M. A. Young, sister of J. A. Campbell, is visiting him and other Butler relatives.

The different Sunday schools are making dilligent efforts to have creditable exercises for Christmas. The M. E. church will have a cantata, which promises much for the children.

—Mrs. Sarah Repp, who has been visiting her brother, J. A. Campbell, and other Butler relatives, returned to her home in Glenn, Mich., last Monday night. She also visited at Toledo and other parts of Eastern Ohio.

Weddings have been the order of the day for a few weeks past; among the latest being Cal Beard and Minnie Oberlin.

Dwellings to rent are getting scarce in town and rent is advancing.

J. A. Campbell visited Helmer and Stroh on business last week.

The Lutherans are holding a revival meeting with varied success.

Chas. Campbell and wife are expected home during the holidays.

Was it Kuhns?

Kuhns, or someone of his kind must be having his busy season now. On Wednesday night, a man of his description stole a dark bay horse and a Parry top buggy from a farmer named August Zink, near Rochester, in Fulton county. The thief was met by a neighboring farmer, who was coming home about ten o'clock. He spoke to the stranger, who refused to reply, but hurried on. No further news of the affair has reached us.

Frank L. Searight of the Cleveland Press, who has been here a day or two to see what further, if any news can be had of Kuhns, was yesterday looking up the Columbus end of it. He got Marshal Hilkey to wire to the Ohio prison to see if they had sent any officers here. The telegram in reply was signed by the warden, W. N. Darby, and said "No officers have been sent from here, but our reward is increased to $250."

If nothing new develops, Mr. Searight will return to Cleveland today.

The Best Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest, give it a trial and you are sure to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. One application gives relief. H. B. McCord.

HISTORY OF A WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

News of Crimes and Criminals, Accidents, Fires, Etc., from North, South, East and West, Sanwiched with Minor Affairs.

Lone Robber Holds Up a Train.

New Orleans special: The south bound Illinois Central fast mail train was held up and robbed by a lone train robber about one mile above the upper limits of the city. Though the train crew say they saw four or more men concealed in the bushes, only one man figured in the action and his booty consists of only one registered mail pouch from Durant, Miss., and six other registered letters from points between Cairo and New Orleans. Conductor Kinnebrew was shot in the groin and J. C. Parker, railway mail clerk, has his left eye powder burned by a shot directed at his head.

Counterfeiters Caught.

At Elnora, Daviess County, Indiana, United States Marshal Peck and Town Marshal Pershing surprised and arrested a gang of alleged counterfeiters in their den. The parties arrested are Michael Deckard, Jesse Page and Schuyler Chambers, all of Elnora. The officers captured a quantity of spurious coin, quicksilver, dies and nickels. The town is in an uproar over the arrests. An attempt to use counterfeit nickels in trying to beat slot machines, it is said, led to the apprehension of the gang.

Three Children Cremated.

A fire occured at Golinza, about twelve miles from Tionesta, Pa., which resulted in the death of three children of A. W. Grubbs. The mother had gone to call on a neighbor, leaving the children in the house, when an unexpected pressure of gas came on, overheating the stove and igniting the building. When discovered the fire had gained such headway that it was impossible to enter the building and the little ones, who were aged 5 and 2 years and 6 months were burned to a crisp.

A Fatal Wreck.

A special from Great Falls, Mont., says: Great Northern passenger train No. 3, westbound, was wrecked near Brocton, eighty-one miles east of Glasgow. Three passengers were killed and many slightly injured. The train was running about forty-five miles an hour, making up lost time, when a truck broke down while passing a switch. The engine and three cars passed over in safety, but the next four cars pitched over an embankment. Three sleepers remained on the rails.

Child Burned to Death.

The 6-year-old daughter of John Parks of Scottsburg, Ind., was burned to death. The parents and larger children were absent from home, and the smaller children began parching corn, when the little girl's clothing caught fire and her body was burned to a crisp. This is the second child which the family has lost by violence within a year, a son having been run over by a wagon and instantly killed.

Fireman Seriously Injured.

The building, foundry and machinery of the Lane & Bodley works at Cincinnati, were burned, the total loss being from $200,000 to $250,000. They were large manufacturers of saw mills, traction engines and many other articles, and about 200 men will be thrown out of work. Capt. Packer of the fire department, was seriously injured while working at the fire.

Boers Wipe Out British Force

The London Daily Express publishes a rumor of a serious disaster to the British arms. According to this report the Boers attacked the camp of Gen. Clements, in the Barberton district, capturing the camp, killing a number of British officers and taking prisoners all the British troops, including four companies of the Northumberland Fusiliers.

To Ship Rails to Norway.

Negotiations are in progress for the chartering of five tramp steamships which will carry from Philadelphia 11,800 tons of steel rails to Norway. The orders for the rails will be placed by the state railways of Norway with the Pennsylvania Steel company and the Maryland Steel company.

Fighting Vice in Topeka.

Topeka, Kan., has begun a crusade against vice by subscribing $26,000 as a fund for the prosecution of saloon keepers. The officers of the Good Citizenship Federation say they will make the subscription $100,000 before they are through with it.

Lots of Gold.

The Shabby Smelting Company, in conjunction with the Statistician of Mines, approximates the total gold yield of Alaska during the current year at $25,724,233, including $4,000,000 from Nome.

Steal Alger's Silver.

Ex-Secretary Alger found burglars in the dining room of his residence in Detroit, and tackled them. He tripped up, and before he could make another dash they escaped with $300 worth of silver. Mr. Alger was not seriously hurt.

Count Comes After the Cash.

The principal items of the total are seven steel steamships on the great lakes (34,933 gross tons) and four smaller steel steamships (8,456 gross tons, which could pass through the new Welland canal), and one steel schooner barge (2,790 tons).

Bradstreet's says: "Weather conditions are still a drawback to the trade in winter-weight goods, but it is notable that a better report comes from the Northwest than for some weeks past. Southern trade advices remain good, but retail business at Eastern markets is still reported backward. A hopeful feature this week was the taking of a large lot of brown cottons for export to China. Finished products monopolize the activity in the iron and steel trades, with bars, plates, sheets and bridge material most active. Even in finished lines, however, there is less reported doing in new business, but Pittsburg and Chicago mills are reported sold ahead sixty to ninety days. At Chicago plates are scarce and a premium is offered for early deliveries of galvanized and black sheets. The rail makret is active and 60,000 tons were sold at Chicago this week."

WORK OF CONGRESS.

HOUSE.

On Thursday the House, after having had the army reorganization bill under consideration for two days, passed it by a vote of 166 to 133. A heated discussion was precipitated by an amendment offered by Representative Littlefield (Me.), and finally adopted, embodying the recommendations of the W. C. T. U. for the abolition of the canteen. The bill provides for a fighting force of 96,280 men. The fact that both Representatives Grosvenor and Dick of Ohio, who are generally credited with being the mouthpieces of the administration on the floor, made speeches indorsing the Littlefield amendment prohibiting the sale of liquors on military reservations and at military posts was accepted by a majority of the Republicans of the House as a direct intimation that the President wanted the canteen abolished.

Butter won a victory over oleomargarine in the House of Representatives on Friday. The final vote stood 196 to 92 in favor of taxing the imitation product 10 cents a pound. There was a long debate. Those who favored the Grout bill claimed the additional tax on colored oleomargarine was the only effective remedy for preventing fraud upon the public, while those who opposed it contended that fraud would be prevented by the substitute and that the real purpose of the Grout bill was to destroy the oleomargarine industry. Those who participated in the debate were Messrs. Henry (Rep., Conn.), Grout (Rep., Vt.), Lamb (Dem., Va.), Davidson (Rep., Wis.) and Tawney (Rep., Minn.) in favor of the bill, and Messrs. Wadsworth (Rep., N. Y.), Lorimer (Rep., Ill.), Bailey (Rep., Kan.), Grosvenor (Rep., O.), Williams (Dem., Miss.), Foster (Dem., Ill.) and Bailey (Dem., Tex.) against it. The bill as passed makes "all articles known as oleomargarine, butterine, imitation butter or imitation cheese transported into any State or territory for consumption or sale, subject to the police power of such State or territory," but prevents any State or territory "from forbidding the transportation or sale of such product when produced and sold free from coloration in imitation of butter." The bill increases the tax on oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter from 2 to 10 cents a pound and decreases the tax on oleomargarine uncolored from 2 cents to ¼ cent a pound. An amendment was added putting the bill into effect July 1, 1901.

Under a special order adopted at the last session the House devoted Saturday after 1 o'clock to paying tribute to the memory of the late Representative Alfred C. Harmer of Pennsylvania. When the House met a bill was passed to include cherries in the list of fruits from which brandy can be distilled under section 3,255 of the revised statutes, after which the House took a recess until the hour set for the eulogies, when memorial addresses were made by Messrs. Bingham of Pennsylvania, Cummings of New York, Grosvenor of Ohio, Adams of Pennsylvania, McCleary of Minnesota, White of North Carolina, McAleer of Pennsylvania, De Armond of Missouri, Otey of Virginia and De Morrell of Pennsylvania.

The first of the great supply bills—the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill—was passed by the House on Monday in record time. The bill carries $24,496,308 and has 131 pages, but there was less than ten minutes' debate upon it. An amendment providing for twelve additional temporary clerks to dispose of the accumulated business in the office of the comptroller of the treasury was adopted.

In the House on Tuesday the consideration of the bill for the reduction of the war taxes was begun. Mr. Payne of New York, chairman of the committee on ways and means, opened the debate. Mr. Swanson of Virginia, a member of the committee on ways and means, followed, presenting the views of the minority. The House also adopted a resolution for the appointment of a special committee of five members to investigate the death of Oscar L. Booz of Bristol, Pa., while a cadet at West Point. This course was taken over the head of the military committee, which reported in favor of allowing the War Department to conduct the inquiry. The Speaker appointed the following members: Marsh (Ill.), chairman; Wanger (Pa.), Smith (Iowa), Driggs (N. Y.) and Clayton (N. Y.).

Wednesday was devoted to the Washington centennial celebration.

SENATE.

The Senate was in executive session for more than four hours on Thursday, the entire time being devoted to the discussion by Senator Morgan of Alabama of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty for the abrogation of the portion of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty which relates to the Nicaragua canal. The Senate passed a bill providing for a bridge across the Mississippi river at Dubuque, Iowa, so that draw shall be 175 instead of 200 feet.

In the Senate on Friday resolutions were received from the Southern Industrial convention, in session at New Orleans, La., urging the passage of the ship subsidy bill. The rest of the day was devoted to executive session until adjournment was taken until next Monday. During the progress of the executive session, in connection with the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, an amendment was offered by Senator Teller striking out the treaty prohibition against the fortification of the Nicaragua canal when constructed. Mr. Teller contended that if the United States desired to build the canal it should proceed to do so without trying to secure the consent of Great Britain. He said the opinion of Secretary Hay that the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was necessary as a preceding performance was only the opinion of one man, and he quoted from public documents to show that former Secretaries of State had differed in their opinions in this respect. He also showed that in some instances there had been breaches of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

On Monday Charles A. Towne of Minnesota, recently candidate of the Populist party for Vice-President, was sworn in as United States Senator to succeed the late Cushman K. Davis. A number of Federal appointments were confirmed, and the principal part of the day was spent in executive session on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

The first speech in opposition to the ship subsidy bill in the Senate was delivered on Tuesday by Mr. Clay of Georgia, one of the minority members of the committee on commerce, which reported it to the Senate. He is recognized as one of the most vigorous opponents of the bill in the Senate and during nearly two hours was accorded close attention by Senators on both sides of the chamber. The Senate then in thirty minutes passed forty-five of unobjected pension bills on the calendar. An act providing that entrymen under the homestead laws who served in the United States army, navy or marine corps during the Spanish war or the Philippine insurrection shall have certain service deducted from the time required to perfect title under homestead laws was passed. The Senate then at 4:20 p. m., on motion of Mr. Lodge, went into executive session. There were no set speeches on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

The Senate transacted no business of public importance on Wednesday owing to Washington's centennial celebration. Made Mr. Hanna's speech on the ship subsidy bill a special order for Thursday morning.

GALA DAY AT THE CAPITAL.

Washington Celebrates Its Centennial with Ceremony.

The celebration of the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the seat of Federal government in Washington was observed Wednesday. A hundred years ago the transfer was made of the capitol from Philadelphia to Washington, President and Mrs. Adams driving over from the old seat of government to the site selected some years before by President Washington. For months the residents of the city have been preparing for a fitting observance of this historical event, the design being to bring out the development which a century has brought forth, not only in the capital, but in the nation.

The city was in gala attire, and from an early hour the streets were filled with eager and expectant throngs. Pennsylvania avenue was a picture of color from end to end, the business houses being hung with bunting, flags and patriotic devices. The great public buildings added their share to the brilliancy of the spectacle. From the front of the Treasury radiated an enormous sunburst of red, white and blue. Farther on, the War, State and Navy Departments and the Department of Justice were resplendent in the national colors. At the other end of Pennsylvania avenue the massive front of the capitol was hung with long streamers, and from the dome fluttered a myriad of flags, while the front of the huge Postoffice Department was covered with the national colors.

The program of the day began with a reception at 10 o'clock by President McKinley and members of his cabinet to the Governors of the States and territories at the Executive Mansion. This was followed by the unveiling in the east room of the model of the proposed enlarged Executive Mansion, which is to be a lasting memorial of the celebration.

The other events of the day were a parade from the White House to the capitol, participated in by the President and other dignitaries and visiting and District militia, joint exercises by the Senate and House in the hall of the House of Representatives, and a reception at night to the Governors of the States and territories at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

DEATH IN A TYPHOON.

Fearful Storm Sweeps Along Section of Chinese Coast.

Foundered ships, razed buildings and hundreds of dead men lie in the wage of a great typhoon which swept up the Chinese coast Nov. 10 and ravaged Hongkong, Klow, Queen's Road, Kenedytown and other points in the British sphere. The American ship Benjamin Sewall was driven ashore, the English gunboat Sandpiper foundered, nearly all of her crew drowning, and seventy-seven steam launches were crushed and sunk by the storm's fury. Two hundred natives were drowned. The mammoth dredge Canton River, after weathering the gale of Hongkong for hours, suddenly listed to port and capsized with nearly all on board. Sixty men clung to the upturned boat for a little time, but of these only a dozen were rescued. There were many brave deeds done by sailors while the wind and waves raged.

News of the storm reached Victoria, B. C., by the steamer Empress of India, which was at her wharf in Klow when the typhoon broke. Her seamen had a stormy passage and they tell hair-raising stories of the scenes along the coast when the gale was at its height. Beginning at dusk the wind came out of queer-shaped clouds of black in the southeast and moved over Hongkong Island, heavy at first, but not fierce enough to frighten the people. Then it began to grow stronger and angrier and the waters of the China sea rolled shoreward like many tidal waves. By midnight the typhoon was raging as only an oriental tornado can rage. It was toppling buildings from their foundations, burying people in the wreckage and tossing big ships around like tiny corks.

The typhoon blew for forty-eight hours in the neighborhood of Hongkong. Then it moved north without abating its force. The officers of the Empress of India say that it must have done awful damage at points farther up the coast.

GOING TO MANILA.

American Mosquito Fleet to Travel Over 13,000 Miles.

Five little cockleshells of the navy are to travel more than 13,000 miles, to the Philippines. The flagship of this mosquito fleet will be the gunboat Annapolis. Her consorts will be the gunboat Vicksburg, the converted yacht Frolic and the tugboats Wompatuck and Piscataqua. They are to be sent in response to the request of Rear Admiral Remey for small vessels to do patrol duty in the Philippines.

The cruise will be interesting. Vessels of the size of the Wompatuck, the Piscataqua and the Frolic have never made so long a journey. The limited coal capacity of these vessels presented a difficulty, but this was covered by the plan of taking the southern route, where frequent stops for coal could be made. The itinerary marked out is from Hampton Roads to the Bermudas, to San Juan, Porto Rico; to Barbadoes, then across the Atlantic to the Azores, to Gibraltar, and then through the Mediterranean, stopping at small ports along the European coast, through the Suez canal and to Manila.

INDIANA INCIDENTS.

RECORD OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK.

Strange, Barren Spot in Steuben County—Parent Prosecutes His Son—Convicted Murderer Faints at Verdict—Woman Burned by Flaming Mixture.

Steuben County claims the distinction of being the only county in the State having a spot of land upon which vegetation absolutely refuses to grow, while the surrounding soil is apparently the same and very productive. This place is located about a mile south of the Michigan line and near Clear lake, and is the subject of a strange tale told by many old settlers. In a grove at the head of the lake is a circle of earth about fifteen feet in diameter, on which no vegetation will grow. The cause assigned by tradition for this is that this grove was the torture ground of the Bawbeese Indians and that it was in this circle that the stake was set up. It is believed that the ashes of so many murdered human beings has rendered the place accursed and hence this dearth of vegetation.

Son Forges Father's Name.

John Reddington was convicted at Anderson of forging certificates of deposit belonging to his father, Patrick Reddington, and was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. The father filed the affidavit against him. Young Reddington has been a school teacher at Elwood and bore a good reputation. His father is a well-to-do farmer. It developed that the young man had forged his father's name before and the latter had always paid to save the son. For the last offense he was very vigorous in the prosecution.

Faints at Jury's Verdict.

William Gates, indicted for manslaughter for the killing of James Rairden Macks, was adjudged guilty by the jury at Richmond. He was given an indeterminate sentence of from two to twenty-one years in the penitentiary. The verdict was not expected by Gates, who fainted away when it was announced.

THE FOUR MEMBERS OF THE AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL BOARD OF ARBITRATION.

Benjamin Harrison, Melville W. Fuller, John W. Griggs and George Gray, the gentlemen named by the President as the members of the American International Board of Arbitration, are not only eminent citizens of the United States, but are peculiarly competent for the important work they will have to do should the peace conference at The Hague produce more than theatrical results, says a Washington correspondent of the Chicago Times-Herald. Mr. Harrison is a lawyer whose learning is not unknown to Europe. Justice Fuller, as the head of the Supreme Court of the United States, is par excellence an arbiter. He is a judge of judges, and his reputation abroad is as wide as it is good. Senator Gray is the foremost jurist of Delaware, was the member of the Spanish-American peace board at Paris in 1898, and has been mentioned for an associate judgeship of the Supreme Court. Attorney General Griggs is one of the most widely known lawyers in America.

SONG.

The sunlight on the hill, dear,
The black storm on the plain.
Be these as Fate shall will, dear—
For sunlight or for rain.
This thought alone can thrill, dear:
"We shall not meet again!"

Nay—not by any river
Or flowering field of grain—
On heights of high endeavor—
In vales of peace of pain;
One grief, dear heart, forever:
"We shall not meet again!"

No world will pause to wonder:
Heedless it drifts amain,
The blue or black skies under,
With all its grace and gain.
And we, dear heart, asunder,
Never to meet again!

ABOUT A MINX.

MISS BETTY MAYNE had been back in Lindenthorpe for a week, and for a week Lindenthorpe had been shocked. Miss Mayne felt hurt. When she returned she had been homesick for the sea and the seaboard folks, left behind when her aunt carried her up to London years before, and friendliness was in her heart toward them. Instead of receiving the same, she had been met with envy and jealousy and all uncharitableness. Partly it was her fault, partly theirs. They only remembered her as the imp and scapegoat of the village, who played on the rocks all day long with bare feet, and they resented her grown-up fashionability. She could not help realizing that she was better dressed, knew more of the world, and was in many ways a hundred years ahead of Lindenthorpe.

It was Sunday that the shock of shocks occurred. To begin with, several minutes after service had begun Miss Betty Mayne walked in—almost strolled in—as cool as a cucumber and clad in the most outrageously fine dress, and stood in the entrance (instead of modestly finding herself a seat) poking away at the stones with a green parasol until Mr. Attenborough, who was church warden—the youngest church warden Lindenthorpe had ever had—rose in his Sunday best to show her to a place.

People were more disgusted than surprised when Miss Mayne, after fanning herself ostentatiously for some time, rose and stalked out of church by the front door. Such behavior was to be expected from a Minx. It was what followed that left Lindenthorpe resigned to anything short of an earthquake. Miss Mayne wandered down toward the beach in a pensive mood and took a seat on a bit of sandstone. She was a pretty sight in blue and gold, whatever Miss Griggs' opinion might be * * * A church warden is at liberty to differ from a Sunday schoolmistress on a question like this, and Silas Attenborough, as he walked from church down to the sea and saw the Minx on her rock, differed in toto from Miss Griggs. He felt a desire to rebuke the Minx for her conduct in church that morning, but was it wise to venture onto the rocks? He was in his Sunday clothes and not very sure of foot among slippery seaweeds. Nevertheless, his sense of duty being strong, Mr. Attenborough crossed the rubicon, and at length reached the sandstone rock. The Minx nodded to him. "I saw you in church this morning," she said.

"I see you," said Mr. Attenborough, gravely.

"It was very funny," she went on. "The very first thing I noticed was a chalk mark on your coat from leaning against the pillars—and I do believe you've got it on still."

This was hardly the conversation Mr. Attenborough had pictured to himself, and he rubbed the chalk away before replying.

"It seemed you left the church avore the sermon?"

"Dreadfully ventilated, isn't it?" she said, nodding. "I really wonder people don't get suffocated sometimes."

"It's agreeable by t' sea here avore dinner," he remarked.

"The same as ever," she said. "All Lindenthorpe's the same as ever—the sea and the village and the folks. They might have slept and never waked since the day I left—seven years ago. Oh!"—she roused herself to sudden animation—"but I'd like to shock them!"

"Shock 'em?" said Mr. Attenborough, aghast.

"Shock you all—because I detest people who can be shocked. And if I knew for certain that I detested Lindenthorpe I'd be content to leave it and never see it again." She sank back against the rock.

"Would you now?" said Mr. Attenborough, astonished.

She nodded. "It's quite true," she said.

"I doan't think I'm easy't shock," he said guardedly.

"Perhaps you're right," she said. "But," she pointed a finger toward the shore, "is that Miss Griggs over there?"

He followed the direction of her finger and saw that most of the congregation were assembled in groups about the shore.

"'Tis indeed," he groaned, "an' Mrs Griffin and t' whole Sunday school watching us. I think that we shud be getting back."

"Don't let me keep you," she said.

"It is not keeping me. 'Tis only"—he looked about him for an excuse. "Zip me! T' sea——"

"What do you mean?"

"T' sea!" said Mr. Attenborough. "It's coom up——"

She sprang to her feet in great indignation.

"This comes of your talking. Why couldn't you keep your eyes open—what is to be done?"

"Could yew wade?" suggested Mr. Attenborough apologetically. He knew nothing of the rocks and what depths cut him off from the shore. Only he remembered that in old days the imp of the village knew every inch——

"Wade? In my best things?" Her scornful tone made him feel more at fault than ever.

"P'r'aps they'll send us a boat," he said.

"After we're drowned?"

"P'r'aps I could—take yew over to th' shore."

"See how deep it is first," she said, imperiously.

He let himself down gingerly, and the water closed over the knees of his best trousers.

"Think yew would loike to be carried?" he asked dolefully, stretching out his arms for her to hurry. But she kept him there while she struggled to hide her laughter, and then said threateningly:

"If you drop me I shall never forgive you——"

"And if I doan't drop yew?" said he.

"Lindenthorpe never will——"

"Coom!" he said. And at that she let him take her into his arms. The folks of Lindenthorpe on the beach were taking much interest in the proceedings. "The Minx!" said Miss Griggs—"did you ever?" The church warden was splashing through pools of water, regardless of his appearance, and only careful to protect the affected burden in his arms. Most of Lindenthorpe was assembled on the shingle when he reached the uninvaded sand. Miss Betty Mayne made no motion of descent.

"Shall I set yew down here?" he asked.

"No," she said, "it's damp—I should wet my shoes. Carry me right up to the shingle."

He breathed deep, not because of her weight, which was nothing, but because of the publicity of the thing.

"Whom be I carrying?" he asked. "Be I carrying ma sweetheart?"

"If—you will," she said, stormed by his unexpected boldness. He put her down in the middle of the assembled folks, some of whom feigned to be watching the sea. Miss Griggs happened to be the nearest, and she shook her head archly at the church warden.

"I'm shocked," she said. "We're all shocked, Mr. Attenborough."

"Are yew?" said he. "I'm—I'm sweethearted."

WILHELMINA'S WOOING.

How the Queen of Holland Met and Won Her Fiance.

Some interesting particulars of Queen Wilhelmina's courtship and betrothal are supplied by the Paris correspondent of the London News. Although the Queen of the Netherlands made the acquaintance of the Grand Ducal family at Cannes, she did not, it appears, see her betrothed till she went last year to Berlin. She had heard a good deal about him from his sister-in-law, the Princess John, nee Saxe-Weimar, and daughter of the late Princess Pauline of the Netherlands, Duchess of Saxe-Weimar. The moment the Queen and Prince Henry saw each other they were mutually impressed, and so strongly that the Queen would hear of no other suitor. She pleaded "a cold" as excuse for not attending a dinner where she was to pass in review a number of aspirants. The Queen mother, seeing this, prudently curtailed the visit to Berlin. Inquiries were in due course set on foot about Prince Henry. All the reports received about him were favorable, and the Queen arranged to have opportunities to become better acquainted with him. Instead of coming to the Exposition, she planned an excursion to Schwarzburg. Rooms were taken at an hotel in a picturesque site for the Queen, her mother and the Dowager Duchess, who was asked to be their guest.

Prince Henry was not disinclined to fall in with the little plan. He obtained a furlough to come to see his mother. He got up excursions to the show places in the principality, and accompanied the two queens in their walks, rides and drives. She was supremely happy in his company, and was sorry when it was time for the party to break up. As she was leaving, she said to the Prince: "What a happy tour! I never spent such a happy time in my life, and I feel I owe so much to you." Correspondence followed, and one fine morning the Prime Minister was summoned by the Queen to Loo. She lost no time in informing him that she was engaged, and to whom. She said she hoped the Council would give its consent to the marriage she had decided upon. The Prince of Mecklenburg belonged to the oldest house in Germany, its international situation was high, it played no part in European politics, Prince Henry could play no part in German politics, his career had been highly honorable, and he was beloved in his own family circle. "When you see him," added the Queen, "you will, I am sure, be of the opinion that I could not make a better choice, whether for myself or my people."

MAN EATERS OF PATAGONIA.

Peril of a Ship's Crew from the Big Cannibals of South America.

The British steamer Westhall is at Pigeon Point, on the Delaware River, discharging a cargo of nitrate of soda from Iquique, on the west coast of South America, says the Philadelphia North American. She sailed from that port, and Captain Morgan explains his good run by the fact that instead of rounding the Horn he took the shorter but equally perilous passage through the Straits of Magellan. While in those lonely waters the crew observed the strange rites of the natives of Patagonia and the "land of fire," and have many weird stories to relate of their adventures.

When the Westhall entered the straits from the Pacific Captain Morgan thought it advisable to steam only in the daytime. The steamship was kept moving between sunrise and sunset, and the lead was heaved continually that no chance of going ashore should be taken.

At night they came to anchor well out from the inhospitable coast and the watch was doubled to prevent a surprise from the man-eating Patagonians. Frequently the latter could be seen on the beach.

They were nearly seven feet tall," said First Officer Barton, "and, although the straits were filled with thin floating ice and it was very cold, all of them were naked. Some of them, whom we took to be chiefs, wore around their shoulders otter skin mantles about three feet square.

"It was at the time of the year when they appoint a custodian for the care of the sacred fires, which they never allow to be extinguished, and it was also a season when human sacrifices are deemed most aceptable. I forbade all the men in the crew from going on shore, but one day while we stopped for nearly three hours to repair a condenser I made an exception in favor of three seamen who wanted to go gunning for an ostrich which they had observed.

"They embarked in the jolly boat and had scarcely set foot on land when fully 100 of the most hideous-looking savages I have ever seen came rushing down upon them from the hills. You never saw such a scramble in your life as those fellows made to shove off. When they did get away it was in a shower of arrows, which seemingly only a miracle prevented from killing them. If the cannibals had been versed in the methods of the North American Indians and not shown themselves so soon our men would certainly have been boiling in a pot right before our eyes and we would have been powerless to aid them."

As the Westhall neared Staten land, on the Atlantic side of the straits, it was noticed that several settlements had been made in lower Patagonia and many rude ostrich farms were seen.

Roman London.

The London of the Romans lies buried about eighteen feet below the level of Cheapside, and still deeper than that is buried the earlier London of the Britons. In nearly all parts of the city there have been discovered tessellated pavements, Roman baths, tombs, lamps, vases, sandals, keys, ornaments, weapons, coins, and statues of the ancient Roman gods.

Progress of Steam Navigation.

The rise of steam navigation was slow. Like most things new, it had opposition. In the sixteenth century an unsuccessful Italian genius tried to apply steam to navigation. In 1736 a British patent was taken out for a steamboat. It was 1807 that witnessed Fulton sailing up the Hudson in a boat driven by steam. In 1838 steamships crossed the Atlantic.

INDUSTRIES OF CUBA.

AGRICULTURAL HISTORY OF THE ISLAND REVIEWED.

Land Owners, Formerly Cattle Graziers, Are Now Successful Planters—Fruits and Vegetables Are Fine—Sugar and Tobacco.

Agriculture, which is the main industry of Cuba, has been given the most careful attention in the United States census report, which has but recently been issued. There are several chapters in the bulky volume which have been devoted to the subject of agriculture with interesting and valuable results. Special schedules were prepared for the taking of census statistics from the plantations. Even so the greatest difficulty was experienced in procuring accurate statements, since the majority of the farms had been abandoned throughout the war and were still unsettled. Traveling over miles of rough country the census enumerators found everywhere devastation and ruined homes, still deserted and uncared for. Tending to complicate matters also was the fact that many of the plantations had been divided into small patches of ground in order to avoid the taxes levied even on the smallest subdivision of ground at the rate of $5. The majority of the tenants resulting were but of temporary residence and were able to give almost no information concerning the land and its productiveness. The schedules which were after much work returned therefore are somewhat defective. Previous to the last war there were in Cuba 90,960 plantations, farms, orchards and cattle ranges, which were valued at 220,000,000 pesos, or about $200,000,000. The only manufactories were those producing cigars and the sugar mills producing raw sugar, molasses and rum.

CUBAN NATIVES AND PLANTATION EQUIPMENT.

Cattle-Raising Formerly General.

In the early days of the island cattle-raising was the principal industry, agriculture being very generally disregarded. The land was held in great open ranges, privately owned but unfenced and almost unguarded, like one great wild country. The chief agricultural products of Cuba are now tobacco and sugar, with some fruit-raising, which of late years has depreciated owing to the almost universal fruit-growing of California. At present there is scarcely more coffee raised than is required for hom use, although the soil and climate of the eastern provinces are particularly adapted to coffee-raising, and it is believed that the industry will again be revived. It is likewise believed that the growth of fruit for exportation will receive a new stimulus and that Cuba will rival California in the raising of limes, lemons, oranges, olives, pineapples and many other fruits and vegetables. Oranges will grow in any part of the island and are unrivaled for their delicacy of flavor and amount of juice. The largest of the banana farms are in Porto Principe and Santiago, from where they were shipped in large quantities to the United States before the war. The growing and preparation of sugar and tobacco for the foreign market are the largest and richest of Cuba's industries.

AGRICULTURE IN CUBA.

Statistics for the years from 1893 to 1899 for the production of sugar are as follows:

1893	815,894	1896	225,221
1894	1,054,214	1897	212,051
1895	1,004,264	1898	300,000

The report contiues: "We could have ground that year more than 1,100,000 tons of sugar had it not been for the war."

United States the Main Market.

Statistics showing the distribution of the crop for the year 1897 is a fair estimate of all preceding years. They are as follows:

	*Tons.
Crop of 1897	212,051
Exported to the United States	202,703
Exported to Nassau	83
Exported to Spain	1,337
Local consumption, whole year	38,000

Tons of 2,240 pounds.

For many years the tobacco trade of Cuba was a crown monopoly, with a royal office and warehouse at Havana and branch houses throughout the provinces. In these storehouses the planters could store their tobacco, receiving such prices as might be established by the crown for each crop. In later years the tobacco monopoly was sold to private companies and was again resumed by the crown in 1760. Finally, in 1817 by a royal decree the trade and cultivation of tobacco were declared free on payment of a tax by each planter equivalent to one-twentieth of the product. Since that date the taxes have varied, but have usually been very high.

The average production of tobacco, in bales, in 1894-5 was in the neighborhood of 560,000 bales of fifty kilos, or 62,000,000 pounds of leaf, valued at $22,000,000. Of this amount nearly 40 per cent was retained for home consumption and used in the manufacture of cigars and cigarettes, and this is about the proportion with normal crops.

Since 1895 the crop has been as follows:

1897	375,000	1899	220,000
1898	88,000	1900	460,000

The amount of the exports to the United States during those years is thus given:

	Pounds.	Value.
1897	4,410,073	$2,306,067
1898	4,691,456	4,338,078
1899	8,102,974	6,916,360
1900	11,815,451	9,704,331

Except for cigars and cigarettes the numerous forms in which tobacco is used are not manufactured in Cuba. Tobacco is raised as an article of commerce in but four of the six provinces of Cuba, Pinar del Rio, Habana, Santa Clara and Santiago de Cuba, although there is no question but that it could be advantageously raised in the other two.

One of the industries which is now practically dead, but which was formerly the source of wealth and fame to the island, is coffee raising. It is one of the industries for which a great future is promised, since it is known that for richness, flavor and the productive capacity of the trees the coffee of Cuba is not surpassed by that of any other West India island or by South America.

History of Coffee Production.

In the years 1843 and 1846 violent hurricanes visited Cuba and seriously damaged the coffee crop. Owing to these disasters the increased coffee trade of the East Indies and South America and the larger and more certain profits of sugar cultivation, the coffee industry of Cuba rapidly declined and by 1850 the amount exported was but 192,060 arrobas. The coffee plantations were converted to other uses and the trade in coffee practically disappeared. The world's estimated coffee crop of 1900 is 15,285,000 bags of 134¼ pounds each. Of this amount Cuba is credited with 130,000 bags, not enough for home consumption. A consideration of these facts may result in the revival of this important industry, which, under free institutions, it is believed will regain its former position among the agricultural resources of Cuba.

The raising of stock, which used to be one of the important resources of the country, is no longer of any importance, excessive taxes having driven the landowners into other branches of farm production. There are, however, few better countries for stock-raising than Cuba and future promises are bright for those who again undertake it.

A Quaint London Custom.

It is curious how few persons have noticed the ancient and quaint custom which is observed every evening during term in the walks of the Middle Temple of sounding the call that warns members of the inn that it is time to dress for dinner in the hall at six. The custom is as old as the Middle Temple itself, where it alone exists.

At about five-thirty p. m. the warder on duty emerges from a side door of the hall with an old-fashioned cow horn, richly ornamented with silver, and, commencing in Fountain court, blows a sustained blast on it, which he repeats in New court, Essex court, Brick court, Pump court, Elm court and at the entrance to Crown Office row. The whole operation lasts about ten minutes, and when it is over the warder, who is a kind of beadle in plain livery, returns the horn to the butler's pantry.

Nobody seems to take any notice of the horn blowing except small boys and ticket porters, who occasionally chaff the warder while he is engaged in his musical efforts.

Why He Was Pleased.

When the children attending a certain school reassembled after the summer holidays one of the teachers asked her little pupils if they were pleased to get back to school.

"Yes," was the almost unanimous response.

Taking the boys individually, the teacher next asked:

"Why are you pleased to get back to school?"

"Because," answered the bright youth, "I gets a bit o' rest at school. In the 'olidays I just runs herrins all day!"

Some gave one reason, some another, but it was reserved to a little tot at the bottom of the class to startle the teacher.

"And now, Johnny," said the lady, kindly, lifting the youngster onto her knees, "why is Johnny pleased?"

"Must I tell the troof?" asked Johnny.

"Of course, Johnny. Now, why are you pleased?"

"Because I ain't, so there!" replied the incorrigible.—London Tit-Bits.

Moved by Electric Power.

A house in Wellsville, Ohio, was recently moved by electric power taken from a trolley line. The house was being moved along the street where there was an electric car line. Two cars were hitched to the house by a rope, and it was quickly pulled to its new destination.

Lonely Lives of Herders.

Not even its greatest admirer could call the Australian bush beautiful. It is a somber, sage-colored wild of eucalyptus forest, interspersed with arid tracks of thorn and spinnifex. There is no shade and the silence is intense. At far intervals you come across a squatter's clearings, with its little community of human beings. Deeper still in these solitudes, alone and almost lost, live the shepherds and bushmen, each an Alexander Selkirk marooned in a great waste of grass or forest. Once a month they are visited and their rations carried to them, but for the rest they live in solitary exile, the only companions their sheep cattle and dogs. Cut off from human intercourse, they almost lose their faculty of speech and become as witless as their sheep or cattle. And when they return to civilization for the short holiday that is allowed them it is too probable that they hand in their "cheque" for the half-year's wages to the proprietor of the shanty known as the "Bush hotel," and stay there to drink it out.—Newcastle Chronicle.

Skiroin Sentenced.

At court yesterday afternoon occurred one of those sad, little dramas with which those who are often in the court room become familiar.

November 17th there was a dance near the Junction at Mr. Werntz, we believe, and a number of young men were there. Among these were the young men who were afterwards arrested for stealing an overcoat. They were all brought before a justice, and then one of them, Charles Skiroin, plead guilty. The others were allowed to go free, as there was no proof against them, and they denied having any hand in the matter. Skiroin has been in jail ever since, and about four o'clock yesterday, Deputy-sheriff, Will Baird, brought him into court. Prosecutor Harper was on hand as well as Justice Koons, who had originally committed him. The young man told the judge his story. It had the usual beginning. He had thought it was smart to get drunk then go to the dance. He says, while there he did not have much knowledge of what was going on. He had gone there with an overcoat, and when he started off, took an overcoat. He came up to the waiting room at the Junction and was going to stay in there all night. Pretty soon he was roused up and accused of taking the coat. That was the substance of his story. He had no excuse to offer except that he was drunk. He said he had not often been drunk and was never in trouble before. He is twenty-four years old, though he looked much younger. The judge gave him a sensible talking to, and told him he could be sent to the penitentiary from one to two years, or to jail for six months. But as he seemed penitent and determined to reform, and had already been in jail about a month, he gave him thirty days with the sheriff.

OBITUARY.

Henry Balzer was born in Pursia, Germany, in the town of Witumberg, Nov. 22, 1832. He came to this country when fourteen years old in company with his mother and two sisters. They settled down in Dayton, Ohio, where Mr. Balzer followed the shoemaker's trade. It 1853 he was united in marriage to Fredarica Adams. To them were born two daughters. His wife died while living in Dayton. He continued his residence in Dayton and was married again to Margaret Miley. To this union were born seven children, two sons and five daughters. His second wife died while living in Mechanicsburg, Ohio, Feb. 28, 1896. On the 9th of last June, Mr. Balzer came to Auburn, Ind., to live with his son George, at whose home he departed this life last Sabbath afternoon, Dec. 16, at the age of 68 years and 24 days. Many years ago he united with the German M. E. church where he held his membership at the time of his death. He live a Christian life and died in peace. On the 2nd of May, 1864, Mr. Balzer enlisted as a private in the United States army, and was honorable discharged on May 2, 1865. Thus another of the nation's noble defenders has fallen in death to await the final roll call in the last great day. He leaves to mourn his death, seven children and two sisters besides many other friends. The funeral service was conducted from the house on North VanBuren street Tuesday at 2 p. m. Interment took place in Woodlawn cemetery, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating.

Changes at the Poor Farm.

Supt. Bartels at the Poor Farm has resigned and is anxiously waiting to have a man put there in his place, as he expected to move to town this week. Various rumors are afloat as to his successor, and it is likely one will be chosen soon. It has been known for some time that Commissioner Gunsenhouser wished to resign and take charge of the Poor Farm, and that matter is now being discussed. In case he becomes superintendent, it is supposed his son-in-law, Mr. Countryman, down at Newville, will be his assistant. And a new commissioner will have to be chosen in his stead. The two other commissioners do this, if they can agree on a man. If they cannot agree, Auditor Seiler will be called on to help them, and a man who gets his vote and that of one commissioner will get the place. It may not be settled before we go to press.

A Growing Business

In a brief talk Saturday, with J. C. Lochner, the new member of the Auburn laundry, we were somewhat surprised at the extent of their business. We always knew they were busy at the times we called there but did not know they had reached out so far beyond Auburn's limits.

Mr. Lochner informs us that they do work now for six other places, namely; Waterloo, Fremont, Camden and Montgomery, on the north; Churubusco on the Wabash road and Sherwood on the B. & O., receiving these six baskets, at least, once a week, and oftener as occasion demands. Their work has been so satisfactory that when they get a town they hold it. We can testify that their work is first-class They have also been adding additional, new and improved machinery, at a considerable expense, and we look to see it continue one of Auburn's livest lines of business.

IN WIFE'S ARMS.

William Shoup Dies Without a Moment's Warning.

We clip the following from an Elkhart paper of last week:

William T. Schoup died very suddenly Sunday morning of heart failure at his home, 822 West Cedar street. The young man was 26 years of age and had been an employe of the Stimpson Scale company. He returned from work Saturday evening and ate a hearty supper after which he and his wife went down town. When they returned home he was apparently in his usual good health and retired without complaining of feeling ill. About 2 o'clock his wife was awakened by his labored breathing and as she raised him in her arms he gasped twice and expired without speaking. She summoned aid but he was passed all medical assistance. The young wife, Mrs. Carrie Schoup, was so overcome by the shock of the sudden taking away of her life companion that she is nearly prostrated.

Coroner Eisenbeiss this morning held an inquest to ascertain the exact cause of death. He did not render his verdict today. It was found out, however, that the deceased had on previous occasions suffered from attacks of rheumatism of the heart and this was doubtless the immediate cause of death. He had made no complaint and when he and his wife retired at 11 o'clock was feeling in excellent spirits and health.

Friends will meet at the house Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock and go to the Zion church where the funeral will be held and interment made in the Zion cemetery.

Deceased was a son of A. D. Schoup of Richland and well known in that part of the county. He had been employed in the Lake Shore shops at Elkhart in which city he had recently married an estimable young lady. His father had a letter from him only the Wednesday before his death, saying his health was good. He was, however, troubled with heart disease, and the coroner decided his death came from rheumatism of the heart.

His foreman and the men in his room on Monday sent his wife the following:

December 10, 1900.

MRS. W. T. SCHOUP:—Believing that at a time like this, a few dollars in money would be of far more value to you than a floral offering; we inclose herewith $13.50 which we beg you to accept as a slight express of our sympathy in this, your hour of bereavement. Yours in heartfelt sympathy,—The men at the shop.

Club Notes.

The L. L. C. met with Mrs Zimmerman last Saturday. Mrs. Rose Husselman, vice-president, presided in the absence of the president. Mrs. Guild was added to the committee on Philanthrophy to assist Mrs. Lewis. Miss Nellie Buckley acted as secretary, the regular secretary being absent. The lesson was ably conducted by Mrs. Maude Robbins, and proved to be of unusual interest. The subject was "Duties Toward the Liberty and Honor of Others."

The poem, "The Cry of the Children" by Mrs. Browning, was given by Mrs. Sprott, as substitute for Mrs. McCord. Current news was conducted by the chair, the work having been sent by Mrs. Nusbaum, who was unable to be present. Club adjourned to meet after the holiday vacation on Jan. 5, with Mrs. Maude Robbins.

That Cough Hangs On

You have used all sorts of cough remedies but it does not yield; it is too deep seated. It may wear itself out in time, but it is more liable to produce la grippe, pneumonia or a serious throat affection. You need something that will give you strength and build up the body.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

will do this when everything else fails. There is no doubt about it. It nourishes, strengthens, builds up and makes the body strong and healthy, not only to throw off this hard cough, but to fortify the system against further attacks. If you are run down or emaciated you should certainly take this nourishing food medicine.

Idaho Letter.

The following letter from Mrs. E. W. Koons has been received by Miss Maggie Sibert, and will be interesting to all the old friends in Auburn:

LEWISTON, IDAHO, Dec. 11, 1900.

MY DEAR AUNTY:—Here it is Tuesday and I have not written to you the promised letter, but I am sure you will excuse me for you know how busy we would be visiting. Mamma and papa are both kept busy answering questions. They both stood the trip well and are getting rested so that we can begin to go out and see the town. Sunday afternoon we took them to climb the first hill and was really surprised how well mamma got up the grade. When she got to the top she wanted to pitch a tent and live up there for the air is so exhilarating. It made her feel like a new being. I am sorry for her sake that we do not live up there, but I can't say that I enjoy the climb so often. It takes the wind out of me.

Papa has been resting up, but I expect he will have great times roaming around and watching the new ways of doing things.

The sun is shining so bright and warm today, and we have planned to go down town this afternoon. I want to show the folks the town. How I wish I could see you too, aunty, and have you here. We haven't done much else but to eat, sleep and visit, but we have planned lots of things to do after Xmas. We are going to have a Xmas. turkey, and if you will come to dinner you will be a welcome guest.

Now be sure and answer my letter right soon for I will want to hear from you often. Papa and mamma send love and you know that I love you as I always did. Your girl,—DELLA.

Married.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox near Corunna at high noon Dec. 15, 1900, Mr. William J. Lower and Miss Vesta Kimmel, Rev. S. J. Mellinger, pastor of the M. E church, officiating. Immediately following the ceremony, a small company of invited guests sat down to an elaborate dinner of which all partook with a relish. After some time spent in a social way, the bride and groom left for South Milford where a reception was tendered them at the home of the groom's mother. The bride is the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Kimmel of Hudson, and a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cox. The groom is a teacher in the public schools of Brimfield, this state, which place they will make their home for the present. Their many friends join in wishing them a prosperous voyage on the sea of life.

Strause-Stonestreet.

A very beautiful and pleasant wedding took place at the residence of John and Ida Stonestreet near Cedar Creek station Thursday evening, Dec. 13, 1900. The contracting parties, Elmer, the youngest son of James and Catharine Strause, and Bessie, the oldest daughter of John and Ida Stonestreet. Rev. T. E. Lancaster of Columbia City was the officiating clergyman. About sixty-five invited guests were present. The supper was very elaborate. Miss Maggie Snyder furnished the music and played the wedding march. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful and costly presents.

Talks With Kuhns.

A reporter of the Indianapolis News went up into Green township, Noble county, and had an interview with Marvin Kuhns yesterday. He found Kuhns at the home of his brother Joseph, well armed and ready for anything. But he says he does not want trouble. He is going to apply to the Ohio authorities for a parole or a pardon, through his attorney, G. W. Loutitt of Fort Wayne. He says he did not kill Campan, and if pardoned, will lead a better life.

Junction Changes.

There was another change in the railroad force at the Junction. Mr. Bell of the Lake Shore informs us, since Mr. Shull, night operator for the B. & O., was sent to Albion, his place has been taken by a man from the C. H. & D., road at Washington Court House, Ohio.

On Saturday last, the telegraphic instruments at the B. & O. brick freight house were moved over to the passenger station and installed there, and this work will again be done there as it was for many years. The B. & O. now have a day operator and a night operator. The latter sells tickets to night passengers, a convenience that has long been needed.

Trustees Office Days.

I will have my business days on Wednesday and Saturday of each week my office being at J. W. Baxter's law office on corner of Seventh and Cedar streets. All those who have business with the township, are requested to call on those days, MILES BAXTER, Trustee Union Township.

I will have Friday of each week for my office day. All who have business to transact with the township are requested to call that day at my office at the mill.—WILLIAM SEELEY, trustee Newville towmship.

I will be at my home on Friday's of each week for the tha transaction of all township business. Parties who wish to see me for that purpose are requested to call on that day. JOHN H. REINOEHL, Trustee Fairfield township.

—N. A. Lung, trustee of Butler township, will be in his office on Thursday of each week for the transaction of township business.

Latest News.

Two negroes were lynched at Rockport, this state, last evening. They had waylaid and brutally murdered a barber who was going home from his shop at 2 in the morning, getting the Saturday's earnings he had in his pocket.

It is now reported that the emperor of China has become a Christian. But even if it is true, it amounts to but little to foreigners, as he has been given no rights in the government for some time past.

The jury failed to agree in the trial of Miss Jessie Morrison at Eldorado, Kansas. She had killed a woman, but claimed self defense.

Chicago is having another season of housebreaking and similar robberies.

Congress will have a holiday recess from Friday of this week to Jan. 3.

Jesse Weik of Greencastle, on trial in the U. S. court for using a government pass he had no right to, on railroads, pleaded guilty last week and Judge Baker fined him $500 and costs. He was a federal officer some years ago and did not give up his pass when he quit, but has used it ever since.

It is expected some of the volunteer regiments in the Philippines will be sent home soon after the holidays.

Congress has so far put in a good deal of time on preliminary work. In the senate, they are wrestling with the Nicaragua Canal matter. The struggle is not over the mere building of the canal, which nearly all favor. But the trouble is over the distasteful conditions. The Clayton-Balwer treaty of 1850, provides for the building of a canal at some such point to be jointly controlled by the United States and Great Britain. Since we have more recently been preparing to build the canal, we have seen how foolish it would be for us to do the work, furnishing the means, and let another nation have as much control as we have. Expecting to get things in better shape recently our secretary of state, Mr. Hay, and the British minister at Washington have made a new treaty, the "Hay-Pauncefote" treaty, which, while it leaves out the joint control in the old treaty, is still objectionable. It provides that through the United States may keep the canal it has built, from being interfered with by other nations it shall not build any fortifications for its defense. This would leave us no other way to defend our $200,000,000 canal, than to build and maintain always, a navy capable of whipping Great Britain on the sea. Another bad provision was that the "Hay-Pauncefote" treaty would not go into effect till after it had been submitted to other powers and received their assent. This also was a bad break, as it would make us a party to all European complications, which we have always kept clear of. It would also make it impossible ever to revoke such a treaty, till all the powers that had signed it, would give their consent We could not afford to build the canal unless we could control it. So the treaty is being amended. The treaty will be so amended, that the United States can fortify the canal if she chooses. The Clayton-Bulwer treaty will also be wiped off the books, or else we will not build the canal. Great Britain will object to our revoking the Clayton-Bulwer treaty but it will be in vain. She has already broken it by taking the colony of Belize in 1862, although the treaty plainly says "neither nation shall exercise control over any part of South America."

Endowment at Life Rates.

The Union Central Life Insurance Company has paid in DeKalb county $24,000 in matured policies in the last fourteen years, since I have been their agent, and these Life Rate Endowment policies are just commencing to mature. This company can do this because of its exceptionally high rate of interest and low rate of death losses. During this time we have paid here $28,000 in death losses; out of this, seven homes were saved to the widows and orphans of the insured.

—J. F. Hollopeter made this office glad with a load of wood this morning. We are ready for all such favors.

—Just think of it! Roast beef, potatoes, coffee and bread and butter at Had's. Noon lunch, all for 15 cents.

—Attorneys C. M. Phillips and W. XX. McDonald were here from Waterloo today looking after legal business.

—C. M. Brown got a postal from Mr. West today saying he is better and up and around. We are glad to hear this.

—In looking over the city you will find the largest and best assortment of holiday goods at H. B. McCord's drug store.

—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Prosser have returned from their visit with J. R. Culbertson and other friends at St. Joe.

—TO TRADE OR SELL:—A small farm with house and barn. Will trade for town property. Address P. O. Box 634, Auburn.

—TIMBER WANTED: — Elm and hickory butts. For dimensions and prices call on the Moltitor Mfg., Co. of Auburn Junction. 8tw —Our, friend Joe Stahl, relieved the pressure of the zero wave Saturday by a monster load of wood for this office. It was a most welcome guest.

—We have a stock of holiday goods this season which will surprise you. Don't buy before you see our stock. H. B. McCord, the druggist. 51

—Daniel Houck, Concord township, was here Saturday and went on the 1901 list of the Weekly. P. J. Rinehart of the same township also went on the same list.

—You can't go hungry when you can get a big noon lunch at Had's for 15 cents. Just think of it! Roast beef, potatoes, coffee and bread and butter, all for 15 cents.

—The Mrs. Adams property was sold Saturday, the fortunate man being Engineer J. J. VanAuken. We are glad he got it, as it is desirable property and will make him a good home.

—FARMERS WANTED:—At Had's restaurant to try the big 15 cent lunch at noon time. Roast beef, potatoes, coffee and bread and butter. A good, clean, square meal, all for 15 cents.

—WANTED:—A man with rig to advertise and introduce our goods Straight salary $15.00 weekly and expenses. Send stamp, Station 2, ROYAL CO-OP. MFG. CO., Indianapolis Ind.

—Court opened on time today and a good lot of probate work was done. There is no grand jury, as it is Judge Hartman's plan to call them every other term only. This saves expense, and besides he can call them any time if occasion requires.

—MARRIED:—At the Presbyterian parsonage by Rev. Burrowes at 2 p. m. Dec. 15, 1900, Leben H. Reavis and Dora Myers. The happy couple left for Fort Wayne on the afternoon train to remain over Sunday. The COURIER extends congratulations.

—Mrs. Barns, who was at Columbia City, came home today and reports all the relatives well there except Mrs. Martin, who is ill as the result of cancer of the nose. It has now been removed by means of plasters and she is now in a fair way to full recovery.

—Mr. Henry Balzer died at the home of his son, Geo. Balzer on North Van Buren street, Sunday evening at 5 o'clock. Funeral services will be conducted from the home tomorrow at 2 p. m., by Rev. J. D. Brosy. Interment will be in Woodlawn cemetery.

—One of the prettiest and most elaborate floral offerings was that contributed by the physicians of Auburn for the funeral of Mrs Dr. Darby. It was a star and crescent of white roses, with a mound of pink ones. It was a very graceful act of sympathy to a bereaved member of their profession.

—David Thomas has some squashes he laid away in the fall of 1899, one year ago in October. Last spring he examined them and found they were in such good shape he let them be. A few days ago he looked at them again, and they are bright and nice. They were in a cool, dry, quiet place. He says he is going to see how long they will hold out.

—Coroner, Chas. Comesky, had his first experience in sitting on a case, last week, when the unfortunate Charlie Mitchel was burned to death. It was a terrible case for the first one, or even for an officer of long experience. But we are told he officiated like a veteran. We venture to say that our new coroner will attend to the delicate and sad duties with ability.

Tuesday's Daily.

—Holiday goods for everybody at H. B. McCord's.

—J. H. St Clair of Grant was in town Saturday.

—Go to Had's lunch counter at noon and call for his big 15 cent lunch.

—John Brandon is employed in the postoffice during the holiday rush.

—Santa Claus will again have his headquarters at H. B. McCord's this season.

—Go to Had's restaurant at noon and tell himthat you want to try his big 15 cent lunch.

—We have the most beautiful line of 25 cent novelties ever seen in Auburn. H. B. McCord. 51

—All letters sent to Santa Claus should be sent in care of H. B. McCord's drug store.

—What we want you to do is to call and see our holiday showings. No trouble to show goods. d20

—Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Phelps are moving into one of Chas. McClellan's new houses in East Auburn.

—Arthur Nelson went to Fort Wayne yesterday and left there last evening on a business trip to St. Louis.

—Mrs. Howard Mountz and baby were over from Garrett today, guests of the former's mother, Mrs. E. E Teeters.

—'Squire Hoffman of Butler township was here yesterday. He and his wife were getting Christmas presents at McCord's.

—Frank Nelson left yesterday on a business trip to Muncie. This is his first trip out on the road and we wish him success.

—We lead the procession down the 'pike" in the holiday parade. See our stock and get our prices. H. B. McCord, the druggist.

—WANTED:—Black Walnut logs for timber. Highest cash prices paid for ame. Address, The Sanders & Egbert Co., Goshen, Ind. 8

—ATTETTION FARMERS:—Have you tried the big 15 cent lunch at Had's? Roast beef, potatoes, coffee and bread and butter. Every noon.

—Cures dizzy spells, tired feeling, stomach, kidney and liver troubles. Keeps you well all the year. Rocky Mountain Tea taken this month. 35c —Parties who require the services of county coroner, can call up Dr. Nusbaum by 'phone, or in person, and he can notify the coroner or attend to the matter.

—It would take a whole page to describe our mammoth holiday stock. So we ask you to call and see for yourself that we will save you money. H. B. McCord, the druggist.

—Just a word to the farmers. When you are in Auburn at noon time, don't miss the big 15 cent lunch that you can get at Had's. Roast beef, potatoes, coffee and bread and butter.

—Mrs. Farmer has a letter from Geo. Weeks of Edon, Ohio, containing the sad news of the death of his wife. We have no particulars. He had not been married more than a year or two.

—MARRIED:—At the residence of and by Rev. W. O. Butler, Dec. 16, 1900, Mr. Wilson A. Grogg of near Auburn and Miss Ada E. Link, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Link, residing near Waterloo, Ind.

—Coroner Comesky's verdict on the death of Charles Mitchell is that he came to his death by carelessly lying down by the fire in the furnace under the boilers and thus exposing himself to the fire. No one else is blamed.

—Do not allow dealers to sell you something just as good as Putnam Fadeless Dyes. There is no such a thing on the market. Insist on having Putnam Fadeless Dyes. Sold by F. E. Davenport. 51

—FOR SALE:—Well improved farm, situated two miles southeast of Corunna, four miles north of Garrett, belonging to the Amos Britton heirs. Low price and easy terms. Call on or write W V. Britton, Hudson, Indiana.

—Mrs. Anise Leas received as a Christmas present from Mrs. Dean Worcester in Manila, a shirt waist pattern of hand embroidered linen. It was bought in Canton and is of very fine quality and texture. Mrs Worcester also sent pictures of her children dressed in Japanese costumes which make charming pictures.

—Geo. H. Snyder, Record Keeper of Auburn Tent No. 51, of the K. O. T. M. has received from the Supreme Tent a draft for $900 for Mrs. Fred Kring. The papers were made out Dec. 6th, and the draft which bears the date of Dec. 14, was received by Record Keeper Snyder, Dec. 17, showing that they responded with great promptness. Sir Knight Kring also received $100 from the Supreme Tent, when he was ill and needed it most. Is there another order in town that can do the same? Think about this.

No Right To Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, skin eruptions and wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate the stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming, woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at H. B. McCord's Drug Store.

—The most effective little liver pills made are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They never gripe. H. B. McCord.

Wednesday's Daily.

—Milas Rhodes went on our 1901 list today.

—Will Cuppy is reported very sick today.

—Mrs. Anise Leas is able to be out again.

—H. C. Shull, who has been very ill, is convalescing.

—Take your neighbor with you to the Presbyterian prayer meeting tonight.

—A new roof is being put on the Ashley property occupied by Rev. Burrowes.

—Yesbera has a fine line of gents gloves, mufflers, umbrellas and Handkerchiefs. d20

—FOR SALE:—Two first-class, air tight wood stoves. A bargain. Inquire at this office. d22 wtf

—Jesse Ray of Detroit spent last evening here, called by the death of his uncle, John Ray.

—If you would present him with an appropriate present you should see Yesbera's Christmas specialties.

—WANTED:—An experienced agricultural salesman, with a rig; opportunity of a lifetime. American Farm Company, Buffalo, N. Y. 52

—We have a number of childrens caps and overcoats which we are selling at one-third the regular price, making $6 coats at $2. They must go at a price G. H. Yesbera.

—"This is too much, John, I won't stand it any longer. Tomorrow I leave for my mother's, unless you get me Rocky Mountain Tea." Sensible woman. 35c.

—Let all attend the Presbyterian prayer meeting tonight, as it is the introductory for the Moody lecture course, which Rev. Burowes will commence next Monday evening.

—A man fell dead on the streets this morning when he saw Yesbera's big stock of specialties. He was telling a friend what all he was going to buy at this popular store. Enlargement of the heart was the cause of his death.

—John Ray passed away after a lingering illness yesterday at 1.30 p. m. at his home on North Cedar street. The funeral will be held at the Presbyterian church tomorrow at 2 p. m., Rev. Burrowes officiating. Interment in Woodlawn cemetery.

—Tonight the Harry Shannon company will present the four act comedy called, "In The Rogue's Gallery." Specialties will be introduced by little Hazel and Harry Shannon and other members of the company. A matinee will be given Saturday at 2:30, when the prices will be 10 and 20 cents.

CASTORIA.

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says; "I was taken with Typhoid Fever, that ran into Pneumonia. My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of Consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave me great relief. I continued to use it, and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." This marvelous medicine is the surest and quickest cure for all Throat and Lung Trouble. Regular size 50 cents and $1. Trial bottles free at H. B. McCord's Drug Store! every bottle guaranteed.

ORDINANCE NO. 16,

An ordinance regulating and prohibiting the accumulation of obstructions to travel upon the streets and sidewalks of the City of Auburn.

Be it ordained by the common council of the City of Auburn, Indiana:

SECTION 1—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, the owner or occupant of any premises within the corporate limits of said city, and bordering on any street thereof, within twenty-four hours after a fall of snow, to fail to clear said sidewalks of all snow, ice or other obstructions, and any such persons, firms, or corporations failing or refusing to comply with the provisions of this section shall upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not exceeding five dollars for each offense.

SECTION 2—To promote the operation of this ordinance, it is made the duty of the city marshal, after a fall of snow to the depth of six inches or over to assist the removal thereof from the sidewalks with snow plows, as far as possible or practicable. But the failure or inability of the marshal to so plow the snow shall not excuse any from the performance of the provisions of this ordinance.

SECTION 3—This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication for two successive weeks in the Auburn Weekly Courier.

Adopted Dec. 17, 1900.

D. A. GARWOOD, Mayor.

Attest:—C. B. WEAVER, City Clerk.

ST. JOE.

Mrs. F. Abel has moved back from the west and is now domiciled in her own home.

J. C. F. Abel has returned from his Maine huut and reports a good time.

The Big Four drugstore has been sold to a Mr. Milliman of Hicksville who will take charge January 1. We understand that the stock of goods will be moved to the vacant room under the opera house.

Two of our prominent citizens had a little mix up at the butcher shop a few nights ago, of which they both ought to be ashamed. The defendant was walked up before the J. P. court and fined one dollar and costs. A "V" paid the bill.

The Fort Wayne Journal seems to think that Concord township is good for a big majority for the Wabash donation. Don't be so sure Mr. Journal. A good many voters seem to think not.

Miss Michael Hoffacker of Monticello Iowa, spent a few hours at the home of Geo. W. Woodcox one day last week. Mrs. Hoffacker had been at Hicksville attending the funeral of Mrs George Miller nee Susan Clemmens.

Mrs. Clarence Woodcox, who has been at Battle Creek for the past five weeks, a patient at the sanitarium, returned Saturday. Her health has improved greatly and she speaks in highest terms of the treatment she received.

The handle factory has closed down and there are rumors of change in management. We hope to see the factory running again in the near future.

The lumber yard of Widney & Kagey will be moved from its present location near the depot to a part of the saw mill grounds where new and improved sheds will be erected. The removal will be ready in the spring.

The steam shovel and gang of men who have been doing the grading at this place have moved 2 miles east of town where they have a month or six weeks job.

We learn that the son of G. W Bleeks, who left two months ago, has been located at LaOotto where he has a good job and is doing well.

OLD SANTA CLAUS.

OLD SANTA CLAUS sat all alone in his den,
With his leg crossed over his knee;
While a comical look peeped out at his eyes,
For a funny old fellow is he.

His queer little cap was tumbled and torn,
And his wig it was all awry;
But he sat and mused the whole day long,
While the hours went flying by.

He had been as busy as busy could be,
In filling his pack with toys;
He had gathered his nuts and baked his pies,
To give to the girls and boys.

There were dolls for the girls, and whips for the boys,
With wheelbarrows, horses and drays;
And bureaus and trunks for dolly's new clothes;
All these in his pack he displays.

Of candy, too, both twisted and striped,
He had furnished a plentiful store;
While raisins and figs, and prunes and
grapes,
Hung up, on a peg, by the door.

"I am almost ready," quoth he, quoth he,
"And Christmas is almost here;
But, one thing more—I must write a book,
And give to each one, this year."

So he clapped his specs on his little round nose,
And seizing the stump of his pen,
He wrote more lines in one little hour,
Than you ever could write in ten.

He told them stories all pretty and new,
And wrote them all out in rhyme;
Then packed them away, with his box of toys,
To distribute one at a time.

And Christmas eve, when all were in bed,
Right down the chimney he flew;
And stretching the stocking-leg out at the top,
He clapped in a book for you.

One New Year's Eve.

BY FRANCIS A. DURIVAGE.

"SO, you're not afraid of being left alone in the church," said Deacon Bradstock.

"Afraid! no!" answered Luke Bridgely, boldly; "what should I be afraid of?"

"Many a man is afraid of his own evil conscience," said the deacon. Luke Bridgely made no answer.

This conversation passed in the vestry of a small city church. The room had been lately plastered, and as it was cold winter weather that 31st of December, a large fire had been kindled to dry the walls against the coming Sunday. Luke Bridgely had been once a thriving mechanic. Like many a man whose conviviality has been his ruin, there were many good traits in his character; he was kind-hearted, generous, charitable, but guided by impulse rather than principle. The deacon had known him in better days, and when that afternoon Luke, haggard, weary and wan, had asked him for a job, he had ventured, for the sake of the applicant's wife and children, to engage him to watch the fires. Luke had not entered a church for years, and it was with a certain awe that he had crossed the threshold.

"And you will not take the pledge, Luke?" said the deacon, as he lingered near the door.

"Not a bit of it," answered Luke, with an uneasy laugh. "I should only break it, as I have done so many promises to poor Martha."

"Well," rejoined the deacon, with a sigh, "at least you will pledge me your word not to drink a drop to-night?"

"That I will, deacon; my word of honor and I give you full permission to turn the key on me."

"Luke bade him good night and threw himself in an armchair before the red-hot stove. The light glowed ruddily on the walls, lit up the pine trees and festoons that were bound about the pillars, touched the trembling drops of the chandelier, gleamed on the dial of the clock in the gallery, and burnished with gold the pipes of the great organ. Against the windows the wind dashed and the arrow-flights of sleet fell harmlessly, though with a dreary sound.

Luke was composing himself to sleep when the sound of voices singing without roused him. He recognized as the music drew nearer, the singers, the air and the words. The latter were as follows:

"Here's a health to the poor old year!
"Here's a health to his bright young heir!
At the grave, at the cradle, 'tis ours to share—
For sorrow and joy alike good cheer.
Hip, hip, hurrah!
Hip, hip, hurrah!
A health to the old and the brand new year!"

The music ceased directly under the windows of the vestry. "Ah, jolly Jack Finchley!" said Luke to himself; "I should know that bass among a thousand! And Billy Martin, too! no tenor voice like his. Confound the deacon for mewing me up here, when my jolly cronies are seeing the old year out and the new year in."

A sound at the window attracted his attention, and a rubicund visage peered in on him, like the full moon from the face of an old-fashioned clock.

"Hullo! old fell," said the full moon. "You ought to be hamstrung for deserting us on a night like this. We want you to sing. Hang Deacon Bradstock! Just you get up in a chair, and we'll snake you out of this gospel shop in the twinkling of an eye."

"I can't do it. I have given my word to remain here," said Luke, firmly.

"You won't join us?"

"No—I tell you I can't."

"Then stay and be hanged to you," said the full moon, as it set in an angry cloud.

Luke was left to himself. After a while he fell asleep. He dreamed that he was in a strange country—strange but beautiful. The sky was deep blue, uncheckered by a cloud. All at once there came gliding towards the dreamer, from a cluster of magnolias, an old man, with two fairy children. As they drew nearer he recognized with awe the features of his father and of the two young children, his own, whose ashes lay in the old churchyard. They saw him—they turned their glorious faces towards him. Then in an agony of affection the poor man was rushing forward to clasp them in his arms; but he had no power over his limbs; his feet seemed rooted. And at the same moment a voice sounded in his ear, "Luke Bridgely, art thou worthy to join those blessed ones?"

"Worthy or not, I make the effort," said the unhappy man.

"To strive is to succeed!" answered the voice. With this Luke Bridgely awoke.

"You are a sound sleeper, Luke," said Deacon Bradstock, standing by the armchair.

"Where am I?" asked Luke, gazing wildly round him. "O, I remember."

"You can go home now," said the deacon. "I'll take my turn. And look here, Luke, as I prevented you from doing your marketing, I thought it to be but fair to be your caterer for to-morrow's dinner. You'll find everything needful for a good set down in this basket."

"Deacon Bradstock," said Luke, taking his hand, "you are a good and generous friend to me. How shall I ever repay you?"

"There is one thing that would repay me amply," said the deacon; "but that you'll never do, I'm afraid."

"And what is that?" asked Luke, with downcast eyes.

"Sign the pledge," replied the deacon.

"I would sign the pledge if I thought I could keep it."

"To strive is to succeed," answered the deacon.

"You have used those words before to-night!" cried Luke.

"You are mistaken—they haven't passed my lips," answered the deacon, smiling. "You are but half awake yet, Luke."

"No—wide awake, thank Heaven!" answered Bridgely. "Give me the pledge—quick! I'll sign it and I'll keep it; never fear me! There, the deed is done, and I am a happier man already. Good night, and a happy new year to you, and a thousand to boot! Good night!"

With a heart full to bursting, he caught up the basket and hurried home. His wife was sitting up. Her habitual glance of anxiety changed into relief as she beheld his clear and hopeful countenance.

"Dear Martha," said Luke, "I'm a poor man now, and this is all the new year's present I can bring you."

He handed her the pledge. She pressed it and the hand that held it to her heart of hearts. It was the preface to a life of chastened happiness. It now hangs, framed in gold, in the elegant drawing room of a gentleman who is proud to call Luke Bridgely father, and who has often heard from his own lips the story of One New Year's Eve.

The Mistletoe.

There are some pretty traditions connected with the use of the mistletoe at this season of the year that date back to the ancient celebrations. The ancient Britons worshiped the god Tutanes, the god of the sun. Of course the winter solstice, or the turning point of the sun in its course, the change from decreasing to increasing length of days, was an occasion for rejoicing among that people. Their customs, practiced by the Druid priests, were therefore appropriate. They went out at this season of the year to gather the revered mistletoe and it is significant that they cared for none but that which grew upon the trunk of an oak tree which was sacred to the sun god. Two white bullocks were led out and tied to the oak tree upon which the plant was found. When the mistletoe had been detached by the priests the bullocks were sacrificed. The mistletoe was hung up above the doors of the houses to insure good luck for the year that was about to begin. In Normandy the plants are still gathered in great quantities and shipped to England and America for what purposes we well know. The hanging up of the mistletoe seems to reflect somewhat the custom of the Druids and the Britons of centuries ago.

The mistletoe grows in England and parts of France, especially on apple trees. So closely does it cling to the trees that it saps their life and often kills them.

A New Year Proposal.

"What resolutions have I vowed to keep the coming year?
Come, sit beside me, maiden fair, and straightway you shall hear:
I've pledged myself to choose one girl from out the throng so gay,
And love her with an honest love forever and for aye.

I'll work for her with brain and brawn, with all my might and main,
Until I've won her everything that honesty can gain;
I'll fill her life with all that's good, till life itself is done—
And while we train our minds and hearts
we'll not neglect the fun.

Now tell me, won't you, maiden fair, what you have vowed to do—
For I've laid bare my inmost soul to no one but to you?"
"I've made no pledges," she replied in so demure a tone,
"But, if you don't object, I'll try to help you keep your own!"
—Leslie's Monthly.

Burning the Christmas Candle.

We are inclined to pity the Puritan little one of New England who knows nothing about merry Christmastide, with its rollicking games of blindman's buff, hunt the slipper, snapdragon and the like, but some of them enjoyed the practice which they called "burning the Christmas candle." This taper was a home-made affair and differed from other tallow dips only in being larger and having the wick divided at the lower end to form three legs, while at its heart was concealed a quill well filled with gunpowder. On Christmas eve it was lighted, and the quaint little Puritan folk sat around telling stories and riddles until suddenly the candle went off with a tremendous explosion, making a delightful excitement and giving the children of the colonies their only taste of uproarious holiday fun.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

The Giving of Gifts at Christmas Should Be Much Simplified.

In the Ladies' Home Journal Edward Bok writes in vigorous deprecation of the complicating of Christmas. "Much as we need simplicity in all the phases of our living," he contends, "its greatest need is sometimes felt at Christmas. And it seems a pity that we cannot make a beginning there. We could if we would simplify this question of presents; if we would leave out of our consideration all but the natural promptings of our hearts. If ever material considerations should be dismissed from our minds and lives it should be in connection with Christmas. If ever our friends should see our hearts—our real inner selves—it should be on Christmas day. Not that we should be other than our real selves on other days. But as it is, we are not our actual selves on the day of all days when we should be. See how we strive that our present of this year shall surpass the one we gave last year! See how instinctively we think of the material value of what we give, and actually of what we receive! See how we wrong ourselves by leaving needful things undone and inviting illness because we feel we must give something of our own making to a friend, when really a sigh goes into each stitch, instead of being frank with ourselves, and pleasing our friends infinitely more by being frank with them, and purchasing something at far less cost to our health. Every woman knows what I mean by this: the great evil of 'making things' for Christmas presents when really neither the time nor the strength can be spared. In much the same way we complicate Christmas at the table."

JANUARY.

BLUFF old Winter Chieftain! How his merry forces rally!
Clash of spears and clink of spurs,
and plume of flying snow;
Swift they come from frozen sea and marsh,
and moor and valley,
All the bold and mighty winds that blow.

The Sultan of the Northland comes with stiff and rattling volley;
Not an acorn in the forest can escape his driving gale;
And he even hurls his dagger through the mistletoe and holly,
And flares about the stoutest cedar's veil.

And the Western wind comes rushing in a white and blinding flurry,
And dances on the hill tops the livelong
winter day;
And the tiny snow-winged fairies, they hustle
and they hurry
Till all the earth is snugly tucked away.

The Eastern wind comes up from where the low, white bogs are lying;
And he brings a veil of moisture, and he brings the sleety rain;
We hear him shrilly wailing, and we hear him softly sighing,
And flinging bits of ice against the pane.

Then the Southern wind comes whispering of valleys that are sleeping
Among the orange thickets and groves of palm and date,
And we dream a dream of springtime, and of pinks and lark-spur peeping,
And know that we shall find them if we wait.

But Janus claps his ice-mailed hands, and stamps upon the heather;
Once more his forces rally at mandate of their king;
And all the mad and merry winds clasp
hands and dance together,
And flees away the fairy dream of spring.

THE CHRISTMAS CHOIR.

ODD FACTS ABOUT CHRISTMAS.

Superstitions and Customs Associated with Celebration of the Day.

Christ was born in 4 B. C.

Christmas means Christ's mass.

The Christmas tree is of German origin.

In Australia Christmas day is an out-of-door festival.

In Germany the proper fowl for a family Christmas dinner is the goose.

Plum pudding is a purely English dish. Originally the dish was plum porridge.

The Pilgrim Fathers forbade the celebration of Christmas as "a heathen mummery."

For years the Emperor of Germany sent Queen Victoria a boar's head as a Christmas present.

Until within the last half of the present century Christmas was but little observed in New England.

In the Philippines Christmas day is celebrated by mass in the morning and a cock fight in the afternoon, both services being well attended.

THE SAME OLD FACE.

Christmas on a Warship.

Christmas day is nowhere anticipated with more pleasure or celebrated more jovially than among the jackies on board our men-of-war. Wherever the ship may be on Christmas, and the navy is usually scattered all over the world, the day is invariably set aside for a general jollification. The elaborate Christmas dinner, the decorating of the ship, the skylarking and games have become tradition in the navy. The officers and men alike all join in making the day a very merry Christmas.

Christmas Counsel.

Do not work so hard, getting ready for the feast of the day, that you have no strength left to enjoy the good things you have prepared. Do not strain your eyes over that piece of embroidery. Oculists' prices are high. Do not fancy yourself generous because you have spent every cent you can—foolish fits the case better.

LIGHTS THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

Electrical Outfit for This Purpose with Tiny Incandescent Lamps.

An electric light outfit for a Christmas tree has a suitable battery which is inclosed in a box placed at the foot of the tree, from which two main wires run up the tree trunk. The bulbs of the little incandescent lamps, which are made in the shape of a candle flame, and in white glass of various other colors, screw each into a little socket that is like a little cup, with a tiny spike projecting from its under side. By means of this spike the lamp can be placed anywhere in the tree; on any branch with body enough to permit of thrusting the point of the spike into it. From cup at the base of the bulb there are two wires of sufficient length to reach the main wires along the tree trunk with which they are connected.

The lights of this equipment would keep going for twenty hours, but it is not, of course, intended to run them continuously for that time; they can be turned on and off at will.

A Bit of Deception.

She stood beneath no chandelier
Entwined with mistletoe;
I glanced the hall-length far and near,
I looked both high and low;
No license for a kiss was hung.
'Twas near a failure flat,
When lo, I spied a sprig among
The feathers on her hat.

FOOD EATEN BY FAMILY IN A YEAR

Amount Consumed by Man, Wife, and Two Daughters.

STATISTICS kept by a Chicago man show that during a year his family, consisting of himself, his wife and two daughters, consumed 4,047 pounds and thirty-eight varieties of food. The family lived under no economical restrictions, and their table was supplied as it has been daily for years with everything desired by any member of the family. For this reason the statistics, religiously kept and accurate to the ounce, have been pronounced highly valuable by students of food statistics and medical men generally, especially since the tables were kept in a casual manner, no influence being exerted either to augment or reduce the amount or variety of the daily menu to which the family had been accustomed.

The table in gross amounts is as follows:

Foodstuffs, in pounds	4,047
Eggs, in dozens	112
Oranges and lemons, in dozens	54
Milk, quarts	650
Berries, quarts	125
Apples, bushels	9

The foodstuffs, measured in pounds, are tabled as follows:

	Pounds.
Vegetables	1,200
Cereals	724
Meats	600
Poultry	220
Fish	180
Butter	187
Cheese	9
Grapes	340
Sugar	404
Coffee	43
Nuts	40
Preserved fruits	40
Lard	61
Total	4,047

As compared with the whole amount it is seen that 1,924 pounds of cereals and vegetables were consumed, while but 1,000 pounds of meats, poultry and fish were eaten, the nuts, fruits, eggs and milk not being considered, as they were regarded on the menu as but secondary foods. The proportion of vegetables and cereals may be regarded by some families as being excessive. There are, in fact, a large number of families who consider their tables well provided for that do not consume half this proportion of vegetables and cereals. The proportion, however, is regarded by statisticians as a normal one, and is classed thus by the man who kept the statistics, as at no time during the year was the proportion of vegetable foods on the table regarded as out of the ordinary.

The flour used during the year would make a loaf of bread so large it would take two men to carry it. If hollowed out it would make a two-story playhouse for half a dozen children and leave room for the dog. A chicken weighing 220 pounds, the amount of poultry used during the year, would be almost eight feet in height and, according to estimate its cackle could be heard four times around a city block. Closely pressing the poultry in its amount is the item of fish. A fish weighing 180 pounds would be almost as large as the fish that always gets away.

The meat total would supply a small sized butcher shop for a considerable length of time, and the 650 quarts of milk would require a jar several times larger than the ordinary sized milk man. A flap jack made of the twenty-eight pounds of pancake flour would make a small sized dancing floor and the 1,344 eggs, if made into one large egg to be colored for Easter, would require four buckets of aniline dye for the work.

The 1,200 pounds of vegetables would make a New England boiled dinner large enough for two full regiments, the fruits would start a street stand of no mean dimensions, while the nine pounds of cheese, if turned loose, would exert, it is estimated, about forty horse power.—Chicago Tribune.

QUEER PHILIPPINE PRODUCT.

The Doerian Assails the Nostrils Violently but Enchants the Palate.

The doerian is a fruit. What it looks like would be impossible to convey to the thought, except by tinted pictures. Its appearance is of slight moment here, for even if the Philippines are annexed the fruit will never be seen in the American markets. It will not bear transportation, and if that difficulty could be obviated no quarantine officer would dare to allow a cargo of doerian to enter any port, its signs of dire contagion are so manifest. The unimportant question of what it most resembles may be passed over by saying that it never looks ripe and never looks fit to eat.

The first doerian which a newcomer encounters in Luzon, and, above all, at Iloilo, where they abound, does not long occupy the eye, for the nose is more violently assailed. When a doerian is in its best stage of ripeness its odor is such as to demonstrate how poverty-stricken the language is in terms descriptive of foul odors. How man ever discovered that this nauseating odor covers the most delicious of all fruits is a dense mystery. There is but one way to eat one's first doerian. Have simple faith and the utmost confidence in the integrity of the person who proffers the revolting delicacy. Then stand at a distance to windward while some immune breaks the fruit open for eating. Holding a tight grip upon the nostrils, rush upon the fruit, and pop a segment into the mouth. The moment the creamy pulp melts up on the tongue and finds its way back to the palate there is the victory won; the Philippines have peacefully conquered the invader. No fruit can rival its rich flavor as of strawberries and raspberries mixed with violets and delicate rose leaves. Of all the products of nature it is the most delicious. The first mouthful is all that is needed; the nauseating odor is passed and done forever; years may elapse between the eating of two doerians, but the disgusting stench will never again be perceived. The plant, though now abundant in the Philippines, is believed to be indigenous to Sumatra. There at least they endow it with magic power to call the wanderer home, for the islanders often repeat the proverb, "Who has eaten doerian will eat doerian."

A PSYCHIC PHENOMENON.

In This Case No Heed Was Paid to the Warnings.

"Speaking of superstitions and strange warnings that come to people," said a veteran Washington correspondent, "I had an experience once that I hardly know how to account for. I may say in advance that I don't believe in any of the business that cannot be demonstrated scientifically. One day, not a great while after the present elevator to the House press gallery had been put in, my mother sent for me to stop at her house on my way down town, as she had something particular to see me about. I went, and she asked me if there wasn't a new elevator to the press gallery. I told her one had been put in three or four months before that. She said that was it, and that I must not ride in it, for she had dreamed the night before that I had been crushed to death in it. I laughed at her, of course, and went on my way. Down on F street I met an aunt who told me she had something odd to tell me. She said she had been the day before, with a niece of her husband, to see a fortune teller, as the niece had taken a fancy to see one of those fakirs. The fortune teller, however, instead of telling the niece anything, had directed her remarks to her (my aunt) and had told her that she had a relative, a young man, whom she should warn, as he would be crushed to death in an elevator. That was rather a jar to me, as I was her only young man relative, and as I had so shortly before been warned by my mother. However, I laughed at her also and went on my way to the Capitol.

"I went about the committee rooms awhile, and at last, quite forgetful of my late warnings, went to the elevator to go up to the gallery. The elevator man, an old fellow whom I had known for some time, was in the cage when I got there, and before opening it he talked to me through the bars.

"'I don't know,' said he, 'whether I ought to let you come in here or not.'

"'Why not?' I inquired, laughing.

"'Because,' said he, as serious as could be, 'I dreamed last night that I had run the elevator up too high and that as you started to get in you slipped some way under it, and when I got down to you at the bottom of the shaft you were smashed to death.'

"This looked like the 'fatal three warnings,' and I confess I had a few doubts myself, but I had some nerve left, and I jollied him on his notion and got in. On my way up I told him what my mother and my aunt had told me, and the old fellow was so scared that he hardly knew what to do, but I got through all right, and up to date I have not been crushed in that elevator or any other, but, of course, that's no sign I won't be, and if I ever am, the cranks will be sure to hold me up as a frightful example. I suppose there are some people who wouldn't ride in that elevator for all kinds of money, and still they may fall down stairs at any moment and break their necks."—Washington Star.

CHILDREN'S MEMORIES LONG.

Parents Should Be Careful What They Say Before the Little Ones.

That the mind of a child is easily impressed was demonstrated recently, when a 3-year-old son of a well-known South-Sider spoke of a foolish remark that had been made by his father more than a week before and which had been forgotten by all who heard it except little Raymond, who, it should have been expected, would be the first to forget what he had heard.

The family was seated at dinner several weeks ago, and after the father had lighted his cigar he said that he did not feel well and the mother jokingly said that she hoped he was not getting ready to die. Then the father asked her what she would do if he should die, and before she had time to answer he told her that he wanted her to forget him after he was dead.

The conversation drifted to other subjects, and all who heard the advice of the father forgot it long before they retired that night, but it developed later that for little 3-year-old Raymond it was not so easy to forget what he had heard his father say.

More than a week after the father had made the joking remark the mother and her little son were alone at dinner, as the father had been detained at his office. Just before they were ready to leave the table Raymond toddled across to his mother, and standing at her side he said:

"Mamma, will you fordit pappa?"

"No, dear; of course, mamma won't forget papa. Why do you ask me such a question?" answered the astonished mother.

"Pappa tole us to fordit him."

"No, papa didn't tell us to forget him, Raymond."

By this time tears were glistening in the child's eyes, and he finally burst into pitiful weeping. The mother could not understand what it all meant. Suddenly Raymond raised his head from her lap, and looking her in the face he said:

"Mamma, I know you will fordit pappa when he's dead, but I won't. I'll love him more'n I do now."

Then the mother asked the little weeping child what he was talking about, and between his sobs he reminded her that his father had told them to forget him after he was dead. The father got a good lecture from his wife that night, and he will never again jest about dying.—Chicago Chronicle.

STRUCK TERROR TO LIONS.

Savage Beasts Were Panic-Stricken at Sight of a Strange Woman.

More animals are lost to the stage through fear than through viciousness. The show people dread a timid lion, tiger or leopard not only because in its panic it is likely to injure the trainer, but because it is unreliable and may take fright and spoil a performance at any moment from the slightest causes. An incident at the Porte St. Martin Theater in Paris has become part of the annals of the show business. The chief feature of the exhibition was a "turn" consisting of the casting of a young woman, securely bound, into a cage of lions, heralded as being the fiercest and most bloodthirsty of maneaters.

Unfortunately the woman who had the "thinking" part of the victim was taken ill and a substitute was found in the wife of one of the trainers, herself a trainer of some experience, but without any acquaintance with these particular six lions. As she was somewhat nervous, she carried a small club ready for use should occasion arise. Amid the breathless silence of the spectators, the ringmaster explained the ferocious nature of the lions and the terrible risk of the woman, and she was thrust in at the cage door. In the excitement of the occasion the door was not securely shut after her. No sooner was she fairly inside than the six monarchs of the jungle, seeing that a strange person had been forced upon them, raised a chorus of shuddering terror, bolted for the cage door, clawed it open and, with dragging tails and cringing flanks, fled out through a rear entrance and found refuge in a cellar, whence they were dislodged only after great difficulty. It was a week before the "ferocious maneaters" were sufficiently recovered from their terror to reappear in public.—McClure's Magazine.

Ineligible.

In the Blue mountains of Tennessee, a mother is expostulating earnestly with her daughter.

"Yes," the young girl has already said, "I'm going to marry Bud Bangforth!"

"But," protests the mother, "he is socially so much your inferior."

"Love levels ranks!" the daughter simpers simply.

"Ay!" exclaims the elder woman, with a bitter sneer. "But think of our family feuding with those impossible, gawky, parvenu Bangforths!"

The girl shivers perceptibly, and yet remains unmoved.—Detroit Journal.

When a Child Dies in Greenland.

When a child dies in Greenland the natives bury a live dog with it, the dog to be used by the child as a guide to the other world. When questioned with regard to his peculiar superstition, they will only answer, "A dog can find his way anywhere."

OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Peruna.

Mr. Isaac Brock, the Oldest Man in the United States.

Mr. Isaac Brock, of McLennan County, Texas, has attained the great age of 111 years, having been born in 1788. He is an ardent friend to Peruna and speaks of it in the following terms:

"During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhoea. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases, but I have learned from Dr. Hartman's books that these affections are the same and are properly called catarrh.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections.

"Peruna has been my stand-by for many years, and I attribute my good health and my extreme age to this remedy. It exactly meets all my requirements.

"I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine. I believe it to be especially valuable to old people. "Isaac Brock."

Catarrh is the greatest enemy of old age. A person entirely free from catarrh is sure to live to a hale and hearty old age. A free book on catarrh sent by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

THE achievements of the nineteenth century as brought forth by a review seem almost too great for the comprehension of the human mind. Through the telephone the human voice spans a thousand miles as easily as the distance across a quiet and narrow street. The telegraph and cables have placed the peoples of the world in as quick communication as are the inhabitants of a township. A hundred years ago Washington, the greatest figure of the century, died and was buried, before the Congress of his country, 200 miles distant, could be apprised of the sad and momentous event of his death. Were it now, the world would have mourned with the republic within an hour after her illustrious son had breathed his last. Sir Francis Drake immortalized his name by being the first man to circumnavigate the globe; now the railroad and the steel steamship make the journey a short vacation trip. Then the light furnished by the candle, the pine knot or the oil of the sperm whale were the only aids to man in the darkness of night; now electricity, one of nature's most subtle and mysterious agents, is utilized to make the night almost as brilliant as the day. Then the words of illustrious personages were clumsily recorded on the printed page or on written parchment, and notable deeds were only roughly sketched; now not only words, but the tones and inflections of the human voice, can be preserved on the rolls of the phonograph, and in the ages to come the great actors in to-day's life drama may be reproduced in form, feature and action from the films of the kinetoscope. We can live and associate in the past only through the imagination; future generations will listen to our voices as they were in life and see us in action as we lived.

In all lines of human endeavor the progress of the century has been phenomenal. No line seems to have lagged or been neglected. The strides of progress have been long in mathematics, insurance, both fire and life, music, literature, medicine, law, theology, agriculture and all the sciences. The methods of warfare on both land and water have been revolutionized. On the water steam has taken the place of sails, metal instead of wood is used in the building of the ships, and the paddle wheel has passed for the screw propeller. These changes have caused a great advance in the speed of the vessels. There has been a wonderful increase in the caliber and power of the guns and in their rapidity of fire. The safe use of high explosives has brought the fleet little torpedo boat into use as one of the principal features of naval warfare. On land the breech-loading, rapid-fire guns have compelled radical changes in military tactics. There are now no massed formations in dense columns such as were hurled against each other in the last and preceding centuries. Modern arms have compelled skirmishing lines and open order formations. If alliances and arbitration cannot maintain universal peace it is probable that the future wars on land will be duels between heavy and light artillery; and it will not be surprising if the naval conflicts will take place to a great extent beneath the surface of the water. The practicability of the submarine boat has already been demonstrated and some of the leading governments of the world have already ordered some of these boats to be constructed for their navies.

The wildest dreams of the last century did not imagine the achievements of the present, and though our dreams and predictions for the future seem extravagant, yet no one can even faintly anticipate what another century will bring forth. In the closing years of the twentieth century perhaps our successors on this atom of the universe will converse with each other through a space of hundreds of miles without the use of wires; will see compressed air take the place of steam on the railroads; liquid air stored in the bunkers of submarine vessels to furnish the motive power for an ocean voyage; airships traveling long distances safely and under perfect control; contagious diseases eradicated through a complete knowledge of the treatment of the germs which cause them; crime greatly reduced by the general and skillful mental and physical training of children; surgery reduce to a minimum the fear of death by accidents and organic troubles; electricity carry photos over the wire as it now carries the letters of the alphabet; and in the quietness of the night the astronomer carry on a conversation with an astronomer of Mars through a system of giant electric flashes.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS IN OUR OWN COUNTRY.

A HUNDRED years ago the great States lived almost within sight of the Atlantic. A few hundred thousands of adventurous settlers had pressed across the Alleghanies. Kentucky with 220,955 inhabitants and Tennessee with 105,602 inhabitants had been admitted to the Union; the territory north of the Ohio, with 45,365, was admitted to Statehood; Indian Territory had 5,641 inhabitants and the territory of Mississippi 8,850; but the rest of the 5,308,483 inhabitants of the Union, dwelling east of the mountains in the lands of the original thirteen States, and the forests, inhabited by fierce and warlike Indian tribes, covered the greater part of the area of the country. The Mississippi bounded the Union on the west; on the south the territories of Spain shut it off from the Gulf of Mexico. The mouth of the great river was in the hands of aliens, and the Western settlers could float their produce to the sea only when they paid tribute to the Spaniards. The territory of the United States in 1800 covered but 827,844 square miles. To-day the Union reaches from Porto Rico on the east to the Philippine archipelago on the west; from the frozen ocean on the north to Key West, the Mexican line, Hawaii and the Sulus on the south. In 1803 Louisiana had come into the possession of France, and Napoleon saw the futility of attempting to hold it against the sea power of England. Besides he needed money, and Jefferson seized the opportunity to add this domain to the Union at the price of $15,000,000. On the heels of this purchase Jefferson sent an expedition under Lewis and Clarke which confirmed title to the Western prairies and gave us Oregon and Washington by right of exploration and occupation. The admission of Texas into the Union after the American immigrants into that territory had conquered independence from Mexico, added that domain to the United States, and the war with Mexico brought in California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico and parts of other States. Alaska was bought for $7,500,000. Hawaii came in much as Texas. Porto Rico, the Ladrones and the Philippines are the gift of the Spanish war. The area has more than quadrupled. The 827,844 square miles have increased to more than 3,733,330. The population has grown at a more rapid rate than the area, the twelfth census showing a total of 76,295,220. The 5,308,483 inhabitants of 1800 have multiplied, by natural increase, immigration and conquest, by over fourteen times. The increase of wealth and production in the United States has been even more characteristic of the century than the increase in area and population. The average wealth in 1800 was $200 per inhabitant. In 1890 it was $1,000. What the wealth is to-day cannot be known until the census returns of this year are published.

One of the most notable advances of the century has been made in transportation and communication. It is not too much to say that it is this advance that has made the United States of to-day possible. Manila is nearer to Washington, measured by the time of transit, than was New Orleans when Jefferson bought Louisiana. News of what has happened in the Philippines is read throughout the United States a few hours after it is talked of on the streets of Manila. A century ago it took two days to go from New York to Philadelphia, by the fastest stage in good weather. It took six days to go from Boston to New York. A journal of a trip from Boston to Philadelphia in 1810 shows that the journey covered nine days. From Baltimore to Washington in 1812 took a day and a half. The journey across the Atlantic was counted rapid if it was made in seven weeks, and sometimes it took three months. Now we can go from San Francisco to New York in four days. The telegraph and the telephone enable us to communicate with persons a thousand miles away as readily as we can communicate with the man at the other end of the city. The world has grown smaller than the United States of the eighteenth century, and the people of the whole country are knit more closely together than the people of New York State a hundred years ago.

His Plan Was Effective.

A bashful young man had sat for some time in the terminal station waiting for his train to be announced. His grip he had shoved under his seat. Finally he jumped up and sought the train announcer for the third time. He was told that his train time had at last arrived. Then the young man remembered his grip, which he had left under the seat in the waiting-room. Hurrying back, he was amazed to find a beautiful girl occupying the place he had left a moment before. His grip was hidden by her skirts and the bashful young man saw no way of getting at it. He feared that he would miss his train, so he decided to speak to the young lady. Strutting up to her in a flustered state, his intention to politely ask her to allow him to get his grip was forgotten and he blurted out with: "Pardon me, lady, but you are sitting on a nail and might tear your dress." With a bound the girl was out of the seat, when the young man grabbed his grip and fairly ran through the waiting-room and to his train. The girl blushed as others sitting near giggled and she, too, hurried out to the train shed and waited there for her train.—Philadelphia Record.

FROM BRYAN'S OWN CITY.

Comes a Startling Story. An Open Letter that Will Cause a Sensation.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 17.—(Special.)—At No. 2115 O street, this city, is the B. & M. Wall Paper House. "B. & M." are the initial letters of the proprietors, Mr. A. C. Bonsor and Mr. O. E. Meyers. The senior partner, Mr. Bonsor, is a well-known and highly respected citizen, and no one has ever doubted his truthfulness. It is, therefore, the pronounced opinion in Lincoln and the State generally that the significant and very strong statements made in Mr. Bonsor's letter will go unchallenged. After explaining his willingness that the matter be given the fullest possible publicity in the public interest, Mr. Bonsor proceeds:

I have suffered untold misery and pain for over ten years. My kidneys were diseased. I tried many so-called remedies, but they did me no good. I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I bought some, and commenced to use them at once. I had not had one good night's sleep, and before the first box of the Dodd's Kidney Pills were all used, I could sleep all night without pains. I am now completely cured, and have not a pain or ache left. I cannot recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly, for they are unexcelled as a kidney remedy.

Yours truly, A. C. BONSOR.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

—DO YOU WANT TO SELL YOUR PROPERTY?—We have several parties who want to buy property in Auburn. If you want to sell, call on us quick.—MOODY & RICKEL.

—A card from Mrs. Lottie Cochran at Tucson, Arizona, reports them all well and enjoying fine warm weather, with an utter absence of winter. They all send greetings to Auburn friends.

—Mrs. Dan Welch has bought a lot on South VanBuren street, formerly owned by Mike Lumm, and directly opposite to where she now lives. She expects to put up a residence for herself.

—Miss Maggie Sibert reports having received word from Mrs. Della Koons that Mr. and Mrs. John Weaver had a nice trip and arrived in Lewiston, Idaho, Friday evening. She also says they are all enjoying good health.

—Frank Dawson, son of H. K. Dawson of Richland is our latest name on the Weekly list. He has bought the Grogg place northwest of town, and like so many sensible young men, settles down to life's business and takes a good paper.

—Oscar Ensley is here, a guest of Mr. Zent and other relatives. He and a friend, Charles Tilton, came up from Indianapolis Tuesday and will return the last of the week. He reports the family well and getting ready to spend the winter in California.

—We were a little out in speaking the other day about the resignation of Mr. Eckhart as county chairman of the prohibition party. This had no connection with the W. C. T. U. At the same time P. A. Shurts of St. Joe was elected to fill his place. Will Eckhart resigned as secretary and treasurer, and S. S. Widney was elected in his stead.

—No one can reasonably hope for good health unless his bowels move once a day. When this is not attended to, disorders of the stomach arise, biliousness, headache, dyspepsia and piles soon follow. If you wish to avoid these ailments keep your bowels regular by using Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets when required. They are so easy to take and mild and gentle in effect. H. B. McCord.

A Postmaster's View of It.

BLOOMINGDALE, IND., Feb. 20, 1899. Pepsin Syrup Co.

GENTLEMEN:—After having given Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a fair trial in my family, I unhesitatingly pronounce it a boon to all suffering from indigestion, constipation and dyspepsia in all their forms with all their train of evil consequences. I have fought dyspepsia and constipation of a severe character for 25 years, have employed the most skilled physicians that I could reach, have spent hundreds of dollars and now I find more relief in this pleasant remedy than I have found in anything else. To all persons of sedentary occupations in life, I wish to say, buy it and use it. I have spent 12 years at the postmaster's desk, averaging 14 hours per day, and know now if I had had this remedy years ago it would have saved me much suffering.

Rev. L. L. Carpenter, Wabash, Ind., president of the Bethany Assembly at Brooklyn, Ind., writes on May 16, 1898: —It affords me great pleasure to give my testimony as to the efficency of Dr. Kay's remedies.

Dr. Kay's Lung Balm is the very best cough, cold and throat remedy that I ever used.

I have also received great benefit from the use of Dr. Kay's Renovator. My son had for years been greatly afflicted with the piles; he commenced the use of Dr. Kay's remedies and experienced relief almost from the start.

We have no words to express our thankfulness for the benefit we have received as the result of using these remedies. I take great pleasure in commending them to the suffering.

CHAPTER LXI.

The case in the October term of court entitled Owen vs Howe, to quiet title is an echo of the old Hale failure at Waterloo, the greatest financial crash that ever visited DeKalb county. The property in controversy in this case, was one in which Amos and Marshall Hale were interested.

Our elder people will remember that Marshall and Amos Hale were for some years previous to 1870 doing an extensive mercantile business in Waterloo, their location being the brick building on the corner of Main street across south from the present location of Speer's new grocery building. The Hales did a more extensive business than has ever been done by any other firm in this county we suppose. They not only sold all lines of goods, including clothing, boots and shoes and groceries, but they bought almost all kinds of produce. They gathered up the wheat and everything the farmers had to sell, from all over DeKalb county, and their operations extended into the surrounding counties. Before 1870, the Air Line, now Lake Shore, was the only railroad in the county. Auburn and Angola were tributary to Waterloo and had to get all their goods hauled from that point by teams. This condition gave the Hales a great advantage in controlling the business of the county and they should have become rich. But instead, they failed most disastrously to themselves and to most of those who dealt with them. They bought a good deal of their produce by paying extra prices, and then giving their notes in payment. They also borrowed large sums of money, paying rates of interest so high, that lenders should have been suspicious. But they still lent their money. Some of these loans were secured by the notes of men apparently doing business with the Hales, and by some who were not. At last, these obligations became so numerous that the Hales could not pay, even the interest which was 12 to 15 per cent, though the usual rate at that time was ten. The firm laid in an immense stock of goods piled full both stores and the basement and then the crash came. Farmers from all over the country rushed in to see about the notes they held for produce sold to the Hales, and those who were not secured, lost their claims. Some who were secured lost all or a part, in cases where the security proved insufficient. The distant firms and home creditors were called together and quite an army gathered in the big main room of the store, and with closed doors spent the day in consultation. The outcome of this meeting was an agreement to pay 50 per cent of the unsecured claims, to be made in payments covering twelve months. Before the time was up, it was found these payments could not be made, as harder times had come on, and the firm's popularity was gone. So their business grew less and less and finally they went into bankruptcy, under the United states law then in existence but afterwards repealed. The assets of the firm were disposed of but the costs were enormous, the fees of the U. S. marshal alone, being said to be over $1,200, as he charged a full trip from Indianapolis and back for each of the many notices he served. though the bulk of them, in fact about all, were sent by mail, And many of these notices were unnecessary and merely formal. This was the case with the notices served on the writer, who had a claim on the Hales but which, being secured by a mortgage was settled by taking the property, and the U. S. court had nothing to do with it.

The debts of the firm secured and unsecured amounted to over $114,000 The assets were considerable there being some real estate including a good house and lot for each partner, and a good two-story brick business room, the well known "Hale Corner." Those who had security got something, but not generally full value. The unsecured claims got little. We believe W. H. McIntosh of this city had $1,000 unsecured, and that when the thing was closed up, he received $25 or $30. Many farmers lost large sums on the crops they sold the firm and took notes for. Men, like Joe Boyer, who signed notes for the Hales, lost heavily, and the failure was a hard blow on the county. It was especially hard on Waterloo, as times were just beginning to get close, after the expansion period that followed the war, and the people there had put about $40,000 into the Jackson road, the building of which revived Auburn, and consequently hurt Waterloo.

We have had several failures in this county in the thirty-one years we have lived in it, but nothing to compare with what was called in bitter pun, the "Hale Storm."

The Best Plaster.

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest, give it a trial and you are sure to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism One application gives relief. H. B. McCord.

O'Boyle-Cooper.

The Jackson Patriot of Dec. 13 says:

A pretty wedding was solemnized last evening at the residence of Horace Cooper, 124 Maple Ave., where occurred the wedding of his daughter Mabel Moulton Cooper and Frank Collett O'Boyle of Peoria, Ill. It was an exquisitely pretty affair, but semi-private because of the death of the groom's mother, The ceremony was performed at seven o'clock by Rev. Fayette L. Thompson in the presence of a few friends of the bride. Mrs. F. J. Beaman rendered a vocal solo preceding the ceremony, Lohengrins bridal chorus played by Marguerite Moore of Hillsdale summoned the bridal party to their places. The bride was charmingly gowned in white crepe de chene and carried bridal roses, and her maid of honor, Miss Mabel Green carried pink roses. Of the bridesmaids, Misses Emma Meyforth and Annie Webb were in white and Misses Jane Hough and Carrie Barkworth, in pink. The bride's brother acted as best man. The house decorations were pink and green. Mrs. J. H. Dunlap catered for the wedding collation and later Mr. and Mrs. O'Boyle left for Chicago, Ill. Their future home will be in Peoria, Ill, Mr. O'Boyle being a representative of the Batchelder street car advertising company of that city. The bridal couple enter their new life with the sincerest wishes of their many friends.

Leake-Kelley.

Wednesday at 1:30 p. m. in the parlors of the Locke Hotel in Waterloo, occurred one of the prettiest weddings of the season, that of Miss Blanche Kelley, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Kelley, of Waterloo, Ind., and Mr. David Leake of St. Francisville La. The bridal party entered the room to the strains of the Mendelsohn wedding march, played by Mrs. Jennie Shull, who also rendered soft, beautiful music during the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Brand in the arch way in front of a large bank of smilax, carnations and chrysanhemums, in the presence of the relatives and friends of the bride and groom. Immediately following the congratulations the bridal party repaired to the dining room where an elegant and sumptuous repast was served in courses. The bride was charmingly attired and looked very sweet in her traveling suit of dark navy blue broadcloth, the groom also wore his traveling suit.

They left on the afternoon train for Chicago and from there started on their trip to New Orleans to spend the holidays with the groom's relatives On their return they will be at home to their many friends after January twentieth at 913 Market street, Logansport, Ind. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents. She is one of Waterloo's most popular young ladies and has many friends in Auburn who join with the COURIER in extending heartiest congratulations.

MARVIN KUHNS.

Interview With the Noted Outlaw at His Old Neighborhood.

So few of our readers have seen the interview a reporter of the Indianapolis News had last Sunday with Marvin Kuhns that we give it nearly in full:

Albion, Ind., Dec. 17.—While some of the shrewdest detectives in Ohio and Indiana were seeking for Marvin Kuhns, and the horse thief associations of half a dozen counties were endeavoring to surround and capture him, the most desperate man in the record of criminals of Indiana was seated beside a warm stove, toasting his stockinged feet in the oven, and talking of his life. After a drive of thirty five miles, with two different teams, I found Marvin Kuhns at the home of his brother, Joseph, four and a half miles south of this place. He had not been there long before I arrived, and when I entered the door he looked me over sharply, and, with the old-fashioned stove between us, said: "Sit down and get warm. I was not expecting any company just now, but I will try and entertain you. What do you want?"

I explained my errand and glanced at the handles of two heavy revolvers that were protruding from his pockets; one from his hip pocket and one from the pocket of his trousers. Kuhns saw the direction of my eyes and said: "You needn't be uneasy about them chaps; they won't do any talking unless I tell them to. If you treat me square, I am all right, but I don't intend to let any one get me. I hastened to remark that I was not there to get him, or to give him away to the detectives. I only wanted to talk to him for the Indianapolis News. I agreed further, that if he objected to his hiding place being mentioned that I would not locate him.

"Oh, I don't care a d—n about that," was the reply in a careless tone. "The people around here know where I am, and if they want me they know where to come and look for me. I have been in this locality for some time, and I told all my friends that if the detectives asked for me to tell them I am here and if there is to be any trouble I will take the trouble myself."

"Then you are not uneasy?"

"Not a bit. I am not afraid of any man, or lot of men, on earth. I won't bother any one who don't bother me. I am prepared for anything that might happen."

"You might not stand much of a show against Winchester rifles."

"Oh, I don't know," replied the outlaw, with a hearty laugh. "I won't have much trouble to find a Winchester myself." He looked toward a room adjoining the one we were in, and my eyes followed his. Standing against a bureau were two Winchester rifles, with a belt of cartridges hanging with them. It was a story without words.

While the outlaw was lighting a cigar that I gave him, I looked him over carefully. He is 33 years old, and in build he is a model for a sculptor. His shoulders are broad; his chest full and his waist slender. His legs are straight and well built, and his arms like those of a blacksmith. His hands taper like those of a woman, but the wrists are larger than common; the kind of wrists that don't hold handcuffs very well. His hair is dark and carefully combed, and a heavy black mustache droops over a thick-lipped mouth, with large white teeth. Kuhns' eyes are dark gray, sharp and restless, and there is an expression in them that seemed to be beyond tomorrow or behind yesterday. They were continually watching everything in their range, and at the slightest noise the outlaw glances quickly in the direction from which the sound comes. Once there was a sound at the door, and a large fox hound came in. Kuhns' features relaxed as he patted the animal on its head, and said, with a slight tremor in his voice: "A good dog is sometimes a better friend than a man is." There is about a week's growth of beard on Kuhn's face, and he apologized for his appearance by saying that he had not been able to find a razor with which to shave himself.

On his face and neck were imbedded a number of grains of shot, and on one side of his neck were scars of freshly healed wounds, from which shot had evidently been taken. One grain of shot was in an eye-cover, another on the end of his nose, and a third on his lip. In all I counted twelve grains of shot in his head and face. The outlaw is a much different appearing and acting man than I supposed, from what has been written about him. He is really a handsome man, talks very intelligently in a soft voice, and does no bragging, though at times he is rather profane. I told him that I had, in my search for him, found that he has many friends in this locality. "I know that they are all my friends out this way and not one of them would give me away. I have been staying with friends ever since I got away, and I can stay here as long as I want to; and no one will betray me. But I am not going to stay here. That's why I don't care if you say in your paper where you met me, for when that's published I will be a hundred miles away."

It is told that the reason you came back here was to be revenged on certain people who helped send you to the penitentiary," I suggested. "That is a lie," replied Kuhns. "I have no grudge against any man, and I will bother no one who does not bother me. All I want is to be let alone. I have been hounded and hunted until I have no place to lay my head, and the papers have pictured me as one who goes around murdering people just to be killing some one. I was sent to the Ohio pen for a murder I never committed, and I am charged with a hundred robberies that I never heard about. I have been shot and stabbed and clubbed without reason and a price has been set upon me, so that any one who wants to can shoot me down like a dog, and never be punished for it. It is not much wonder that I am supicious of any one. I won't attack any one. I will run if I can, but if I can't, by the living God, the man who gets me in a corner must prepare himself. I will not be taken, nor will I let any one kill me, if I can help it. If I have to sell my life, I will get the best price for it that I can."

While Kuhns was saying this his eyes flashed like electric sparks, and he paced the room like a mad tiger. Throwing himself into a chair, the man whose name is a terror to the whole northern part of the state, looked like a picture of despair outlined by grace. "I came here," he continued and there was a slight trembling of his lips, "because here I am safe. Here I am among my friends. I came here to get money that will carry me away to some place where I can begin life again. I have money enough to take care of me until spring."

"What about the affair at Logansport?"

"I don't know anything about that except what I read in the papers. I was not there, and I can show that I was not the man who was in that fight, and I did not shoot that 'copper.' That's another lie that the papers tell on me. I was not around Rochester and I didn't steal any horses there. I haven't done a single thing since I beat the Ohio pen."

"Why did you run away from there; weren't you well treated?"

"Why did I run away?" exclaimed the outlaw, fiercely, "why would any man get out of prison? I was well treated. The warden, the deputy and all the officers treated me well, and gave me as many privileges as a prisoner could have, but I was in there for life. I could have been the prison several times but I thought I would be paroled; but I was turned down time and again and at last the board was told that I did not deserve a parole; that I was vicious and ugly, and would hurt some one if I got out. They said I didn't deserve any sympathy. D—n them, I don't want any sympathy. All I want is justice, and they would not give me justice, so I went out and I intend to stay out. My brother John will be out of there next Tuesday—" But at that he stopped.

For more than three hours I talked with Marvin Kuhns, the modern Jesse James, as the detectives call him. and and in that time I learned much about the man, against whose name rests the charges of murder, highway robbery, burglary, horse stealing, arson and minor crimes without number.

He told me of his prison life, of his love affairs and of his future hopes and from them all I will recite a story that will rival the life of a border outlaw. When I climbed into the buggy he held the lines and tucked the heavy robes about me, for it was bitterly cold, and then handed me the lines. Grasping my hand, the man with a price upon his head said: "Give Marvin Khuns a fair shake in your paper, and you can say that this is a fine team that I did not steal."

Trustees Office Days.

I will have my business days on Wednesday and Saturday of each week my office being at J. W. Baxter's law office on corner of Seventh and Cedar streets. All those who have business with the township, are requested to call on those days, MILES BAXTER, Trustee Union Township.

Working Night and Day

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Every pill is a sugar-coated globule of health, that changes weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health Only 25c per box. Sold by H. B. McCord's druggstore.

Voting Machines.

—Several Citizens of Lafayette are experimenting with a voting machine which they have in process of construction and hope to perfect it in a short time. The machine is said to be simple and answer every demand, any one who can vote under the Australian system being able to manipulate it. There is no doubt that many voting machines will be placed upon the market now that there is quite a sentiment in favor of voting by machinery, This fact in itself should serve as an admonition not to be in a hurry about contracting machines at this time, or even in the near future. Six hundred dollars per machine is too big a price. Interested parties who are ever on the lookout for driving a good bargain will urge immediate action. Taxpayers who will have to foot the bills are interested in deferring action until voting machines are perfected and offered at a price within the bounds of reason. —South Bend Times.

Club Notes.

The Philharmonic Club met with a good attendance at the home of S. L. Gibson on West Seventh street last evening. Miss Zoe Conrad rendered a beautiful piano solo, which was followed by the lesson conducted by the leader, Mrs. James Baxter, in a very able manner. Mrs. Shull then delighted the audience with a fine vocal solo, after which Mrs. Simps Johnson gave the current events in the music world. Those present were then treated to a fine piano duet by Miss Inez Knapp and Anna Cuppy, and after the discussion of business the club adjourned to meet in two weeks with Miss Mayme Buckley, with Mr. Bottenburg as leader.

Red Hot From The Gun

Was the ball that hit G. B. Steadman of Newark, Mich., in the Civil War. It caused horrible Ulcers that no treatment helped for 20 years. Then Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him. n2 EDWIN S. MARSTON, Secretary.

This picture is the trade mark of SCOTT'S EMULSION, and is on every bottle of SCOTT'S EMULSION in the World, which now amounts to many millions yearly. This great business has grown to such vast proportions,

First:-Because the proprietors have always been most careful in selecting the various ingredients used in its composition, namely; the finest Cod Liver Oil, and the purest Hypophosphites.

Second:-Because they have so skillfully combined the various ingredients that the best possible results are obtained by its use.

Third:-Because it has made so many sickly, delicate children strong and healthy, given health and rosy cheeks to so many pale, anaemic girls, and healed the lungs and restored to full health, so many thousands in the first stages of Consumption.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample. Its agreeable taste will surprise you.

W. C. T. U. Column.

—"In the name of Jesus Christ as king, the liquor traffic ought to die."

It is a crime against the state; the state ought to suppress it.

It is a crime against humanity; humanity ought to rise up against it.

CLOSE THE SALOONS.

Magistrate Pool in Yorkvill police court a short time ago discharged all the prisoners accused of drunkenness. Instead of imposing the usual fines he lectured the policemen who had made the arrests, saying:

"I want you to understand that you cannot have a wide-open town and not have men arrested for drunkenness. If you policemen did your duty you would arrest the men who sold the poison to these unfortunates. It is your duty to close the saloons on Sunday. There is only one way to prevent drunkenness and that is to close the saloons. I'm tired of having men arrested while the saloon keepers who violate the law in a larger sense are unmolested." New York World, Nov. 27, 1900.

A Postmaster's View of It.

BLOOMINGDALE, IND., Feb. 20, 1899. Pepsin Syrup Co.

GENTLEMEN:—After having given Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a fair trial in my family, I unhesitatingly pronounce it a boon to all suffering from indigestion, constipation and dyspepsia in all their forms with all their train of evil consequences. I have fought dyspepsia and constipation of a severe character for 25 years, have employed the most skilled physicians that I could reach, have spent hundreds of dollars and now I find more relief in this pleasant remedy than I have found in anything else. To all persons of sedentary occupations in life, I wish to say, buy it and use it. I have spent 12 years at the postmaster's desk, averaging 14 hours per day, and know now if I had had this remedy years ago it would have saved me much suffering.

W. M. McCOY, P. M.

Surprised.

After an absence of twenty-five years in the west, Albert Long of San Francisco, Cal., dropped in on his brothers and sisters and gave them a wonderful surprise. As not any of his relatives or friends had heard from him for about five years, they had given him up as lost, and for his sudden appearance, the joy of the family can well be imagined. His brothers and sisters are Mrs. David Essig, Mrs. John Feagler, Miss Mathias Cupp and Mr. Henry Long of this place and Mrs. Silas McCosh of Butler, Ind. Mr. Long has resided in San Francisco for the past fifteen years.

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents at H. B. McCord's drug store. Every bottle guaranteed.

Attention Farmers.

The Auburn Handle Factory will pay the highest cash price for ash handle block delivered at their factory on the Lake Shore tracks, cut 58 inches long. Also want ash logs cut 9½, 14½ and 19½ feet long. All timber to be smooth and sound. Will also take basswood cut 4 feet long and 8 inches in diameter and up, left round with bark on. Will pay $3 percord.—J. M. CHERRY & Co.

Sam Brown Appointed.

Samuel Brown was today appointed superintendent of the Poor Farm to succeed Mr. Bartels who has resigned. There had been a talk that Mr. Gunsenhouser would resign the office of commissioner and be appointed to the place. But on second thoughts he concluded not to do this. Today the board met and appointed Mr. Brown. We find that people generally approve the choice.

Recorder's Notice.

Recorder Herrick makes the request that parties who have left their deeds, mortgages, etc., deposited in the recorder's office, call or send and get them, as they have accumulated a good deal. Some have been here for several years.

EVENTS OF INTEREST

THAT OCCURRED DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Tersely Told Telegraph Tales in Brief Paragraphs—Many Casualties—A Few Crimes—Some Fires—Political and Religious News.

Natural Gas Explosions.

Three houses were wrecked and seven persons injured by two natural gas explosions at Beaver Falls, Pa. The first explosion occurred in Mrs. Celia Cox's house, where a family named Barnes lived. The gas had accumulated in the cellar and lower part of the house, having followed the water pipe from the street. The explosion was followed by fire, which spread to the adjoining dwelling, and both were consumed, the occupants barely escaping with their lives. An hour later, the residence of H. A. Moore, just across the street from the Barnes home, was torn to pieces by a terrific explosion. The property loss is estimated at $10,000. The explosions were caused by the breaking of a valve gate of the Fort Pitt gas line.

Great Battle Fought.

The State Department has received a cablegram from United States Charge D'Affaires Deaupre, at Bogoto, stating that a great battle has been fought at Girardot Point, Magaldine River, Colombia, which lasted two days and resulted in a decisive victory for the government. It is reported that 600 were killed and many hundreds wounded. Other victories by the government forces of the utmost importance have been announced. The government is celebrating the victories and considers itself greatly strengthened by the success of its arms.

Died in Foreign Lands.

It is stated at the War Department that the transport Grant, which is due at San Francisco about the first proximo brings the remains of 398 officers, soldiers and civilian employes of the War Department, who died in Hawaii, China or the Philippines and that there are twelve dead on the transport Sherman which is due at San Francisco on the 12th proximo. Among the bodies on the Grant is that of Young Barber, the nephew of Mrs. McKinley, who recently died in the orient.

Cape Dutch May Rebel.

A dispatch from Cape Town says: The situation in the northern district of Cape Colony is more serious. Fully 2,000 Boers have invaded that section. Grave fears are entertained that Dutch sympathizers will join the rebellion and that this will spread. Although there is no fear as to the ultimate result, the lack of a sufficient number of mounted troops is felt by the British. The enormous waste of horses in South Africa was never fully appreciated until now.

Duel with Thieves.

Lincoln (Neb.) special: A bold attempt was made to rob the State treasury at the capitol building. The attempt was frustrated by Watchman Good, who had a revolver duel with the burglars, in which one bullet pierced his coat, and another severing his watch chain. From $100,000 to $200,000 are in the vaults of the building. The burglars fled through the windows, leaving their tools behind.

Electric Cars Collide.

In a head-end collision between two street cars at Ashland, Ky., three persons were fatally hurt, five were seriously injured, while half a dozen more sustained severe cuts and bruises. A dense fog caused the accident. The cars were nearing the center of the city and were filled with passengers en route to their places of business.

Hit at Ohio Trust Laws.

Attorney General Sheets has practically annulled the Ohio anti-trust laws by requesting the Supreme Court to dismiss all the oil trust and tobacco trust cases. In the oil cases, he said the evidence was insufficient to convict. In the Continental tobacco case he said it was only a big corporation, and not a trust.

Fort Wayne Masonic Temple Attractions.

Dec. 31.—"The Tyranny of Tears."
Jan. 1.—Thos. Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle."
Jan. 2.—"At the White Horse Tavern."

Desert the Strikers.

The committee respresenting the engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen of of the Santa Fe railway system declared that they would not advise a strike in sympathy with the telegraphers.

There is great excitement in the little borough of Verona, Pa., over the drilling of two oil wells in the cemetery of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church. Some time ago oil was discovered in the vicinity. If the wells produce oil the pastor expects to get money enough to pay off the church debt.

According to the report of Commissioner John McMackin of the New York Bureau of Statistics, for the first time in two years the gain in membership has not kept pace with the increase in the number of organizations. In three months the membership in labor unions dropped from 247,552 to 245,332, a loss of 2,220.

The strike at the Natalie colliery, Shamokin, Pa., is ended, the 1,200 employes returning to work. The Shamokin Coal Company agreed to grant everybody the 10 per cent increase, to reinstate several discharged men and to give non-union men two days in which to settle differences with union men, otherwise the former will be discharged.

An assignment was made in Philadelphia by the old firm of James Martin & Co., dyers, to William H. Jackson, a dealer in chemicals. The liabilities amount to $205,000 and may be met after judicious liquidation, by assets of about $300,000. Martin & Co. is one of the oldest and most reliable firms in Philadelphia, the house dating back sixty years.

WESTERN.

The Arbuckles have withdrawn their suit against the Woolson Spice Company, now controlled by the sugar trust, which has been pending in the Federal court in Toledo, Ohio.

Architect Bernard's revised plan for the projected University of California buildings have been accepted by the regents. They contemplate an expenditure of about $10,000,000.

The case against Fred S. Kelly, former cashier at Omaha, Neb., of the Phenix Insurance Company of Brooklyn, charged with embezzling $5,000 of the company's funds, has been dropped.

As the result of proceedings alleging insolvency the A. G. Patton Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, has passed into the hands of receivers. The concern manufactures hollow ware.

The Colorado Supreme Court in the case appealed by the American Refrigerator Transit Company sustains the State's right to assess the cars of foreign corporations doing business in Colorado.

Lornie Timmins, 15 years old, fell dead of heart disease at Fargo, N. D., while skating. The boy's physical condition is said to have been remarkable in that his heart was on the right instead of the left side.

Two negroes, Jim Henderson and Bud Rowlands, who confessed they waylaid, brutally murdered and robbed Hollie Simons, a barber, were lynched in the jail yard at Rockport, Ind., by a mob of 1,000 frenzied citizens.

SOUTHERN.

The safe of Dicks & Sally, at Sally, S. C., was blown open with dynamite and robbed of $7,000 in cash and papers valued at $2,000.

John W. Hyden, a well-known educator of eastern Tennessee, and John Mincey were killed by a train near Philadelphia, Tenn., while walking on the tracks.

Two negroes robbed and burned a trading boat at Arcadia, Miss., after killing the owner, a white man, his wife and baby. The murderers were captured and confessed.

New York, Philadelphia and Washington capitalists will build a new town in Florida. Application has been made for a charter for the Jacksonville-Springfield Improvement Company, which starts with a paid-in capital stock of $100,000. The company has already purchased sixty acres north of Springfield.

Detectives found the body of one of the robbers who recently held up, within the city limits of New Orleans, the Chicago mail train on the Illinois Central Railroad. The watch of Conductor Kinnabrew, found on the dead man, leaves no doubt of his identity as the leader of the gang who held up the train.

Enraged citizens of Cohutta, Ga., are scouring the woods in quest of a negro who assaulted Annie Neal, the 16-year-old daughter of John Neal, a farmer. The negro choked his victim into insensibility, then covered her with leaves and set fire to them. A passer-by put out the fire, but the girl is in a critical condition.

The building occupied by the construction department at the Norfolk, Va., navy yard was destroyed by fire. The building contained all the important papers, models and plans of the construction department. Over 7,000 drawings and $100,000 worth of live oak timber were destroyed. The loss to building and contents is over $200,000.

FOREIGN.

Li-Hung-Chang is said to be suffering from influenza.

White Star liner Cufic was towed into Queenstown harbor, having lost her propeller. First Officer Crosby was drowned.

Mail advices from China say 2,000 shops and houses were burned in Canton a few days ago. Forty natives perished in the flames.

With only her masts showing above the surface of the water the German training frigate Gneisenau lies a wreck off Gibraltar. It is believed that the loss of life will reach 100. This figure is considered a conservative estimate.

Dispatches from South Africa tell of another furious battle, and this time of victory for the British arms. The Boers, who numbered between 1,500 and 2,000 men, were defeated by the British at the Orange river. The Boer loss, in killed and wounded, was heavy.

Advices from Iloilo, Island of Panay, say that the insurgents burned a large part of the village of Cabatuan. Assistant Surgeon Frederick A. Washburn, Jr., of the Twenty-sixth volunteer infantry, with eighteen men, held the principal buildings. The Americans sustained no casualties.

Serious riots growing out of race feeling took place in the streets of Kingston, Jamaica. The chief rioters were several hundred negro soldiers of the British West India regiment, who were supported by natives of their own color. They attacked civilians in the street and maltreated many so badly that they were taken to the hospital and are under treatment for severe injuries.

IN GENERAL.

Bill granting suffrage to women was introduced in the Porto Rico house of delegates.

The steamship City of Topeka, with thirty passengers, is reported a total wreck in Lynn Canal, Alaska. The number of fatalities is unknown, but it is feared that the list may be long.

The steamer Alpha foundered on a reef off the east coast of Vancouver Island and is a total wreck. The captain, three engineers, the managing owners, the purser and three seamen were drowned.

Helen Keller, the deaf, blind and heretofore dumb student at Radcliffe College, recently astonished and delighted the freshman class, of which she is a vice-president, by making a short address. It was at a class luncheon in Fay Hall.

A sharp earthquake shock was felt at Santiago, Cuba. It was the most severe that had been experienced in several years and almost created a panic at the San Carlos Club, where a grand ball was in progress. It was preceded by a dull sound like a mine explosion.

The litigation between William L. Elkins, P. A. B. Widener, George W. Elkins, William Flynn, Joshua Rhodes and M. K. McMullen, plaintiffs, and Drexel & Co., and Whitney & Stephenson over the consolidation of the Pittsburg traction lines has been amicably settled.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

HOUSE.

Beer sustained a defeat in the final round-up of votes in committee of the whole House Friday evening, first, when Mr. Newlands of Nevada offered an amendment cutting the war tax on that product to $1.20 per barrel, and again when Mr. Barthold of Missouri offered an amendment making the tax $1.50 flat. The Newlands amendment was defeated by a vote of 74 to 119 and the Barthold amendment by 64 to 139. The ways and means committee provision for a reduction of 20 per cent, or a flat tax of $1.60 per barrel, as reported by Chairman Payne, was adopted. The most startling action of the committee in its discussion of the war tax bill was the adoption by a vote of 123 to 106 of an amendment introduced by Representative Henry C. Smith of Michigan providing for the restoration of the stamp tax on express receipts, and also providing that the express companies should pay the tax.

Ten millions a minute was the new record established by the House on Saturday in disposing of appropriation bills. The bill providing $145,245,000 to pay pensions during the fiscal year, 1902, was considered in committee of the whole, reported to and passed by the House in fifteen minutes. There was no debate, save a brief statement by Barney (Rep., Wis.) to the effect that the bill contained no new legislation, and was, in fact, a literal copy of the law for the current year. Earlier in the day the new delegate from Hawaii, R. W. Wilcox, appeared and was sworn in. Then the bill to reduce war revenue taxes was passed, the measure leaving the House as it was recommended by the committee on ways and means. The reimposition of the tax on express receipts made Friday in the committee of the whole was not approved by the House, the amendment being rejected on a yea and nay vote, 125 to 139. A motion to recommit, with instructions to frame the revenue by $7,000,000, and to frame an income tax, was defeated, 131 to 155.

Monday was suspension day and the House passed 102 private pension bills. Passed bills to divide Kentucky and West Virginia into two judicial districts and to create another district judge in the northern district of Ohio. By a vote of 51 to 105 defeated a bill to give old soldiers and sailors preference in the matter of Federal appointments. Passed a bill to place Congressman Charles A. Boutelle on the retired list as a captain in the navy. Passed an urgent deficiency bill carrying $182,500 for contingent expenses of the House of Representatives, Indian affairs, District of Columbia and the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers.

On Tuesday the House passed Senate bill amending act authorizing construction of bridge across Mississippi river at Dubuque, Iowa; also bill changing time of holding court in southern judicial division of Iowa. Devoted rest of day to consideration of Senate bill to change terminal facilities of Pennsylvania Railroad Company in Washington and elevate its tracks across the Mall, south of Pennsylvania avenue. Bill was antagonized on ground that it gave the road thirty-four and one-half acres of government land and would destroy scheme to beautify the Mall from capitol to Washington monument.

The House on Wednesday at the end of a spirited contest extending over two days passed bills to compel the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads to abolish grade crossings, to alter their routes into the city and to change their terminal facilities. An amendment was placed upon the Pennsylvania bill to require the road to build a new station to cost not less than $1,500,000. The bills were vigorously antagonized by a portion of the minority under the leadership of Mr. Cowherd (Mo.), on the ground that they were too liberal to the roads.

The Senate has referred the credentials of W. A. Clark and Martin Maginnis, contesting Senators from the State of Montana, to the committee on privileges and elections.

Senator Cullom has introduced bills for pensions of $50 a month each to the widows of Gens. John M. Palmer and John L. McClernand.

Gen. Miles appeared before the Senate military affairs committee in advocacy of changes in the House army bill.

The Senate has confirmed the nomination of Col. John F. Weston as commissary general of the United States army.

SENATE.

Soon after the Senate convened on Friday Mr. Allison, chairman of the committee on appropriations, reported from that committee the House resolution providing for a holiday recess of Congress beginning Friday, Dec. 21, and extending to Thursday, Jan. 3, and it was passed. The President pro tem., Mr. Frye, announced the appointment by authority of the resolution adopted two days before of Senators Hanna of Ohio, Spooner of Wisconsin and Jones of Arkansas to make the necessary arrangements for the inauguration of the President of the United States on the 4th of March next. Most of the day was spent in secret session on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

In the Senate on Saturday notice was given by Nelson (Rep., Minn.) that he would on Jan. 12 next submit resolutions as to his deceased colleague, Mr. Davis. After some routine morning business the Senate at 12:25 o'clock went into executive session on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

The Senate was in executive session practically all day Monday over the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, and Senators Money and Mason occupied the time in making speeches upon the treaty. Senator Money's speech was a flat protest against the entire proceeding in connection with the treaty. He talked for two hours, contending for the right of the United States to act in this matter independently of other nations. Senator Mason spoke in support of his suggested amendment authorizing the United States to defend the canal as it may deem proper in case it constructs the canal. Just before adjourning an agreement was reached to take a vote upon the treaty on Thursday.

Five treaties were ratified by the Senate Tuesday in secret session. The most important was a treaty with England extending the time for the ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Although the fact was not known outside of diplomatic circles, the time for the ratification of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty expired five months ago, and the treaty until this action of the Senate was in reality dead. The convention ratified extends the time of the acceptance of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty by the United States until March 4. The other treaties ratified are extradition treaties with Chili and Bolivia and treaties extending the time for the acceptance of the reciprocity treaties with Barbadoes and Argentina. The remainder of the day was spent in consideration of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in executive session.

On Wednesday the Senate passed House resolution authorizing President McKinley to appoint Congressman Boutelle (Maine) captain on retired list of the navy. Passed urgent deficiency bill. Passed bills giving pensions of $50 monthly to widows of Gens. John M. Palmer and John A. McClernand.

REVIEW OF THE YEAR

BRIEF SUMMARY OF EVENTS OCCURRING IN 1900.

Concluding Year of the Century Made Memorable by Many Important Happenings: Wars, Internal Disturbances, Great Casualties, Etc.

Many and important are the events that make up the chronological record of the closing year of the nineteenth century. The manifestation of anti-foreign feeling in China, which led to the siege of the legations in Pekin and the relief expedition of the world-powers, was undoubtedly but the beginning of changes in the governmental affairs of that ancient kingdom that will shake the dynasty to its foundations and seriously threaten the integrity of the country. The wars in the Philippines and in the Transvaal, legacies from the preceding year, have been continued through 1900 and are passed on to 1901, without having been brought to decisive official conclusions. Organized anarchy was responsible for the assassination of King Humbert of Italy. To the heat of political warfare must be attributed the killing of Gov. William E. Goebel of Kentucky, and the race feeling between whites and blacks was the cause of serious riots in New Orleans and New York. Two occasions upon which many human lives were destroyed by the elements were the great fire at Hoboken, N. J., in June and the destruction of Galveston, Texas, by that memorable September storm. The opening of the Chicago drainage canal, the discovery of the south magnetic pole, and the Paris exposition were three important events in the realms of science and industry. The roll of prominent persons who have made their exit from earthly surroundings since January first last embraces the names of those famed in statecraft, industry, literature and music.

The most important events of the year are summarized thus:

ANOINTING WITH OIL.

Ancient Use of Unguents for Suppleness, Beauty and Health.

It was the custom among the athletes and the gladiators of old to anoint the body with oils. And as the olive grew upon the sunny Eastern hills and on the slopes of greater and lesser Greece, as it does to-day, it is probable that the luxurious idlers in the baths of Caracalla used for anointing their bodies olive oil tinctured with Oriental perfumes. As for the Roman athletes, they were in the habit of using the freshly expressed oil of the olive to give agility and suppleness to their limbs.

Some of the greatest beauties of whom history babbles have also been prone to the use of oil. Mme. Recamier was in the habit of partaking freely of olive oil with her food and used it also for the bath. Her beautiful skin and clear complexion were doubtless due to this rather than to powders or paints dabbed upon her with a brush or a powder puff, as modern patent medicine venders would have many women believe.

In the countries where the olive oil flourishes, such as Italy, medical practitioners use the oil very freely for a host of ailments. Fever patients are sometimes soothed in Italy by copious inunctions of olive oil. It is maintained in the Levantine countries that the use of oil

LAST WINTER'S OVERCOAT.

When the stormy breezes bluster
Through the shade trees, lank and bare,
And the tiny frost flakes sparkle
In the chilly morning air,
Then we take an inventory
And o'er useful things we gloat;
Naught can wake our tender interest
Like last winter's overcoat.

Tenderly we pick the mothballs
From the pockets where they've lain,
And with sponge and brush we labor
To remove each spot and stain;
Mourning o'er the frequent tokens
Of our hungry friend the moth,
Where he foraged at his leisure
On the sleek imported cloth.

But at length, with some misgivings,
We pronounce it fit to wear;
Yet we shun our dude companions
And resent their haughty stare.
And we're apt to lose some slumber
And some envy we devote
To the man who need not worry
O'er last winter's overcoat.

The Little Lacemaker.

MDLLE. NOEMI VERDIER, a lacemaker of Valenciennes, was as good as she was pretty, and her modesty and simplicity commanded the respect of all.

Left an orphan at thirteen years of age she lived with her brother, three years her senior, who, having suddenly become the head of the house, labored for his little sister and himself at cabinet making.

The two lived happily together; but the years passed and the time of military service came. Louis was obliged to go. The separation was terrible to those two children, who loved each other so much.

Left alone in the little lodgings, thus suddenly become too large for her, Noemi with bleeding heart applied herself to her work and wrought marvels from the flax fields.

Each Saturday she carried back her work and when she returned home divided her earnings in two parts. Must she not send a small subsidy to her soldier, who was thinking of her there in his far-away garrison?

On his side Louis behaved in his regiment as he did in Valenciennes; that is to say, like an honest man, and so, at the end of the second year of his absence he was able to announce one beautiful morning that he had been promoted to be sergeant.

You can imagine how happy Noemi was! How her heart throbbed with joy! Oh, how proud she was of her dear brother! But her happiness was short. In a few weeks came a letter. The war-cloud had burst all at once; armed France rushed to the frontier of the East.

The dreadful war began.

From the letters of her beloved Louis she learned the successive defeats of the French army, Woerth, Rozenville, Saint-Private, Gravelotte, Sedan. Then silence followed—no more letters, no more news, nothing.

Noemi, who never read the papers, hastened now to the office of the Guetteur de Valenciennes and of the Echo de la Frontiere, seeking there some little ray of hope. She listened to the talk on the street, she mingled with the groups of people commenting on the news, she gave ear to the painful accounts of the war and she learned, with a sinking heart, that her brother's regiment had met with severe losses.

Meanwhile the wounded soldiers were sent, through Hirsan and Avesnes, to the towns and cities on the northern frontier. Every day fresh convoys arrived in Valenciennes.

All the hospitals were full, and still they came. Then private ambulances were organized everywhere, churches and factories opened their doors to the unfortunate wounded soldiers.

One morning the report was circulated that a convoy of wounded from her brother's regiment had arrived during the night.

To the poor girl a glimmer of hope returned.

She ran from one to the other, asking of the nurses, bending over every cot; but the hope of the morning vanished.

All at once she remembered that the day before they had opened in Saint-Sauive a hospital intended especially for the officers. Was there any possibility that an unknown sergeant might have been brought there? Surely not. Yet, notwithstanding, she found strength to go thither.

An army surgeon came toward her.

"What do you wish, mademoiselle?"

"Oh, monsieur! Pardon! I am looking for my brother, Sergeant Louis Verdier."

"You mean Lieutenant Louis Verdier?" And pointing with his finger down the long row of mattresses on the floor, "there he is in the sixth bed."

To the poor girl it seemed as if the earth vanished from beneath her feet. She choked back an exclamation of joy, tottered forward a few steps and with an outburst of infinite happiness knelt before the bed of Lieutenant Verdier, who, with his head wrapped in linen, was lying in a heavy stupor.

"Louis! Louis! It is I," she exclaimed, trembling, with clasped hands, ready to fall.

At this appeal the wounded man recovered his consciousness, opened his eyes and perceived his sister, but not being able to raise his head he stretched forth both his hands, which she seized in hers and covered with tears.

In the meantime the surgeon approached, and, half unwillingly, led her away.

"You must not cause him any emotion, or we cannot guarantee anything, impristi! Your brother's wound is doing well; he will recover, that is certain, if you do not undo our work."

"Oh, monsieur le docteur——"

"Never mind monsieur le docteur. This is enough for to-day. Come back to-morrow morning, but now go home."

"Do you see, my dear Louis," said the happy Noemi to him a few days later, sitting by the bedside of her brother, "yesterday the merchant for whom I work ordered of me a piece of magnificent lace for a wealthy English house. I began to work on it last night and I hope to finish it in ten days. For this work they will pay me a very high price. Do you know what I am going to do with the money?"

"Speak, my darling," answered the young officer.

"The surgeon says that you will soon be able to get up. I am going to take you home to our little nest and take care of you day and night. You shall see how happy we will be and how quickly you will be well."

"Dear, dear sister! Oh, what a good idea, and how I shall hasten to get strong, so as to be able to go with you."

One morning, when she came in, radiant with gladness, her brother bade her speak low and pointed with his eyes to a new wounded officer, whom they had brought in and placed on a mattress beside his own. The wounded man was M. de Lauterac d'Amboyse, lieutenant "aux chasseurs a pied" and had been struck in the shoulder by a bombshell.

"Poor young man!" said Noemi, compassionately. "He has no sister to take care of him." And she became interested in this man, whose death seemed certain.

In the meantime the days went by and Louis' convalescence progressed rapidly. Had he not promise to hurry? On the morning of the tenth day Noemi arrived, joy in her face, bringing a precious package wrapped in tissue paper.

She, too, had kept her word; her marvelous work was finished and she brought it to show her brother before carrying it to the merchant who ordered it, and in her joy at being able to take her brother home she forgot about the poor, wounded man lying beside her.

"See how beautiful it is!" she said, displaying the delicate masterpiece upon the bed—proud of it, not because of its overwhelming difficulties, but because it enabled her to realize her most ardent wish, to bring her dear convalescent into their little nest in the little street, into the small lodgings where happiness would come back at the return of her beloved brother.

And they were both happy. With hands clasped, they contemplated the delicate lace.

All at once a piercing shriek drew them from their ecstasy.

In making an effort to rise M. de Lauterac d'Ambroyse had disarranged his bandages, the wound reopened, and the unfortunate man fell back on his bed covered with blood.

At the scream the surgeon was on the spot and in a twinkling had removed the bandage.

"Quick, quick! Some dnt!" he cried. "Hurry, hurry!"

And while the nurses, beside themselves at the cries of the patient, searched everywhere for what was at hand, the stream of blood kept on flowing and the anxious surgeon multiplied his appeals.

The brother and sister, motionless, pale with fright, exchanged one glance. Noemi seized her precious lace, tore it in pieces, and gave it to the major, who applied it to the wound.

The hemorrhage was stopped.

Louis and Noemi, trembling with emotion, looked at each other.

"Dear sister, thanks——." That was all that Louis could say.

"It will make but a few days' delay," lisped the young girl, keeping back the tears just ready to flow. "I will begin my work again."

Lieutenant de Lauterac l'Ambroyse is to-day colonel; he is the father of three children; one a big, pretty girl, almost as beautiful and sweet as her mother, whose name she wears, Noemi; and two fine-looking boys, who are "terrors," as their uncle assures us, the brave commandant Louis Vernier.

EVOLUTION OF A SIGNATURE.

Signature of Lieut. McKinley in 1864.

Signature of President of United States in 1900

Those fond of studying character in handwriting will find much of interest in the signatures of First Lieut. William McKinley, Jr., of the Twenty-third Ohio volunteer infantry, and William McKinley, President of the United States. Unless one looks closely at the signatures it may seem hard to trace much similarity. Still, it is there, and can be found in a number of places.

When the older of the signatures was written the father of the boy lieutenant was alive, and the future President was William Jr. This signature was written across the face of a small photograph, and there was not room to spell the "William" out in full, even if the lieutenant had wished to do so. The photograph was taken and the signature written when President McKinley was 21 years old, and when he had not had occasion to sign the name more than a few times, comparatively. The other signature is thirty-five years older, being that of the President of the nation. For all the changes that time made in the signature and in the man who wrote it, there are interesting similarities in the two fac-similes.

ANKLE BRACE FOR SKATERS.

Device for Giving Artificial Aid to Weak Ankles.

Many a person is prevented from learning to skate, both with roller and ice skates, by weakness of the ankles, and as skating is such a fascinating sport it is not to be wondered at that artificial aid is to be provided to brace the ankles for this sport. The latest device for this purpose has just been patented by Arthur J. and Robert T. Brauer of St. Louis, Mo., and is illustrated herewith. The brace is not intended to be attached to the ankle, but depends entirely upon the force exerted by the strap pulling the triangular plates over either ankle in a downward direction. The plates are of leather and carry semi-circular steel braces, which are connected by a strap passing underneath the hollow of the foot. When the ankle starts to turn, the plate on the side toward which it bends draws the bones back into place, and there is no upward play to the brace. The sole of the shoe is also prevented from tilting in either direction, and as this movement always takes place when the ankle turns a further aid is thus provided. As the brace depends upon no exterior support and is light and easily attached it will be an aid to football, baseball and golf players also.

SIMPLE AND CONVENIENT SUPPORT.

LINIMENTS MADE AT HOME.

They Are Frequently of Great Value for the Cure of Disease.

It is difficult to find a liniment that will be of more general usefulness than simple camphorated oil or camphor liniment, as it is often called. It is valuable for rubbing on the outside of the throat or on the chest as a gentle stimulant, or it may be used in case of chronic rheumatism, where it must be applied with friction to give any relief. It may be purchased of the druggist or it may be prepared at home by dissolving one ounce of gum camphor in four fluid ounces of olive oil. In case of a severe cold a piece of flannel dipped in camphor liniment and heated and laid over the chest under a layer of cotton batting will seldom fail to bring relief to a little child or even to an older person.

A compound liniment which is recommended for rheumatism and "numbness" is made of two and a half ounces of gum camphor and one drachm of oil of lavender dissolved in seventeen fluid ounces of alcohol. After this add three fluid ounces of strong solution of ammonia and shake the ingredients thoroughly together in a bottle. Keep it closely corked when not in use. A good liniment for bruises and strains is made of two fluid ounces of alcohol, two fluid ounces of ammonia and two tablespoonfuls of salt. Put these ingredients in a quart bottle every time this liniment is used. Apply it with friction, using the palm of the hand, as the massage nurse does. The efficacy of almost any of the liniments depends considerably on the care and zeal with which it is applied. In all cases the skin should be covered with flannel and often with cotton batting after the liniment has been applied, as it is desirable to keep in the heat of the rubbing. A good healing liniment for chafed skins, burns or scalds is made of three ounces of spermaceti and one ounce of white wax melted into a pint of olive oil by setting them in a bottle uncorked in a pan of warm water and repeatedly shaking the bottle, returning it to the warm water until the ingredients are all melted together.—New York Tribune.

PICTURES ON HUMAN SKIN.

The Latest Parisian Fad Has Made Its Debut in This Country.

Not long after Dinkeresco, the noted Russian chemist, had discovered that it is possible to reproduce a photograph on the human skin it became quite a fad in Paris for love-sick men and women to have their dear one's lineaments stamped on the arm or shoulder. An English actress now playing in New York has brought the fad to this country and other members of the theatrical profession are being bitten by the Dinkeresco habit. The process is quite simple. The spot to be consecrated to displaying the features of a dear one is coated with a chemical mixture that is sensitive to the light. A flexible film of the loved one's features is placed on the mixture and you expose your arm for ten minutes and the picture is there. It must be washed with three different chemicals to assure permanency. After the triple bath it is impossible to remove the picture by any known process.

THE NEW FAD.

Subsidence of the Bermuda Islands.

According to the results of studies by Prof. A. E. Verrill the beautiful Bermuda Islands are merely the remnant of an island, very much larger than the present group, but which has sunk in the ocean. The original island had an area of 300 or 400 square miles, whereas the Bermudas to-day are only about 20 square miles in area. Within a comparatively recent period, says Prof. Verrill, the Bermudas have subsided at least 80 or 100 feet. Their base is the summit of an ancient volcano, while their surface is composed of shell sand drifted into hills by the wind and consolidated by infiltration.

Next Century Will Bring Longer Life.

The American will be taller by from one to two inches in the next hundred years. His increase of stature will result from better health, due to vast reforms in medicine, sanitation, food and athletics. He will live fifty years instead of thirty-five as at present—for he will reside in the suburbs. The city house will practically be no more. Building in blocks will be illegal. The trip from suburban home to office will require a few minutes only. A penny will pay the fare.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Euphonistic in the Extreme.

The rapid extension of polite terms appears to threaten an era of Chesterfieldian courtesy. A negro boy whose duty it is to look after the family wash when taken to task for a delay of several days replied:

"The wash-lady says that the wash-gentleman was sick and she had to wait on him."

The presumption is that the husband of the laundress has been ill.

Time is but a narrow ruffle on the edge of eternity.

NOW WED AT HOME.

FASHIONABLE BRIDES TABOO CHURCH FUNCTION.

Simplicity of Arrangements Contrary to Former Elaborateness—Society Leaders Say Home Wedding Is a More Sacred Event—Guests Still Numerous.

The weddings of the fashionables are no longer "brilliant functions," says the Chicago Chronicle. The elaborate affair of the past few years has been replaced by a quiet home wedding, which does not lend itself to long descriptions. "And why have a home wedding?" some people ask. "Wasn't the old way the best?"

These fashionables who have planned and executed the change have many reasons for it. In the first place they say a home wedding is so much more sacred. One is inclined to ask them why they did not think of that long ago, before Mrs. So and So or Mrs. Somebody Else thought of it. Why didn't they have a plain home wedding when their first daughter was married. Why was the church so much better then than it is now? Not that it would do any good to ask all these things, for the fashionable mother of the fashionable bride would look at you in grieved wonderment if you did. "A house wedding is so simple and pretty and my husband likes it so much better, really, we never could think of having another church wedding," she would repeat, much impressed with the words. All of these reasons are an avoidance of the point in question, which is simply that home weddings are now fashionable and are, therefore, generally observed. Within the past three months there have been thirty weddings among the ultra-fashionable of Chicago, and of this number but three were church functions.

But there is more to it than the mere fact that the home has succeeded the church as a place for such affairs. With the change the whole tone of the function has changed, the bride is no longer so elaborately gowned, the decorations are not so extravagant, the bridesmaids and groomsmen are not so numerous and the guest list is essentially much reduced. The wedding is still a pretty affair, but it is not gorgeous and the efforts of the most imaginative society editor could not make it so. One maid of honor and one bridesmaid are at most the attendants of the party and frequently the maid of honor alone accompanies the bride, while the groom has no attendant. The bride is gowned simply yet with all the adornments necessary to the proverbial bride and the costume of her maid is likewise simple.

In spite of all its apparent simplicity, the home wedding is not a small affair, 200 or 300 guests are frequently in attendance and the reception which follows is always largely attended. Take it all in all, the home function is no less brilliant, though less showy, than that of the church and even when it is announced as simply a family affair there is a reception afterward for friends. There is still the "Lohengrin" wedding march and the "Oh, Promise Me," played softly through the service, and there is always the bride, a happy and altogether charming person, who is after all the center of general interest. And there is still a wedding ring, although there is no page in white velvet to carry it on a cushion, and there is still a bride's bouquet to be thrown at her girl friends after the ceremony, although there is no small flower girl to hold it. And there is always the rice and the old slippers to be thrown at the departing couple, for happily the wedding journey is not as yet tabooed.

Home Wedding Is Better of Two.

Take it altogether, there are a great many people who will agree with the society matron that the home wedding is the better of the two, although it is noticeable that they are in every case the people who will be guests at the affair wherever it is held. Yet if there is to be a change in the style of marriages, and it has undoubtedly been deemed necessary, it is perhaps wisest that the wedding should be celebrated at home, "quietly," as the society columns say, and in the old-fashioned way. The church wedding has held sway for more than ten years and it certainly was getting to be a bore to have a whole family of daughters married in exactly the same way. The first could have a pink wedding and the second a blue one and so on to the end, but as for any further individuality it was simply impossible. A bride could be a bride after just so much fuss and flurry and running to the church and back again. There was a strict code for the arrangement of such an affair and no one dared to depart from it. For all these years society has been a slave to this code and when it did finally rebel it was to the great satisfaction and relief of numerous brides-to-be

Now that it is not only proper but properest to have one's wedding at home and to have it a simple, unpretentious affair, the ordeal is no longer so trying. The preparation and celebration of her wedding will not leave the bride in a state of nervous collapse and her entire family exhausted. The last of the church weddings were eight-day wonders for splendor and no one would have dared to outdo them. They had worked themselves out of novelties as a means of display and it only remained to repeat the wonders that had already been accomplished. The home wedding is a kindly respite from these shows and a respite for which both society and the newspaper reading public is thankful.

CHURCH WEDDINGS ARE NOW OUT OF DATE.

PROVED TO BE FORGERIES.

Tanagra Figurines in the Boston Museum Are Base Imitations.

The discovery that twenty-five of the twenty-eight Tanagra figurines in the Boston art museum are forgeries has attracted much attention from artists and art critics, largely because the Boston figurines were the best specimens of the peculiar Tanagra potteries in this country and have been widely copied, cheap imitations of some of them being found in the shop of almost every dealer in art goods and bric-a-brac. The collection has been valued at $30,000 and was given to the museum in 1879 by Thomas Appleton, whose authority on art subjects was so great that the genuineness of his gift was never questioned. It is not believed that Mr. Appleton knew that the figurines were forgeries, as the museum judges at the Louvre, at Berlin and New York were also deceived by forged figurines made by the same persons who are now known to have faked the Appleton pieces.

The first intimation that the Boston figurines were forgeries was the statement of John Marshall, an English authority, that he believed them to be spurious. Later a Greek shopkeeper from New York told the museum authorities that the figurines were part of a lot made in Athens in 1874, and that he knew the maker. He produced proof that fifteen of the men engaged in the manufacture of the fictitious figures were now in prison for the offense. Curator Robinson of the museum, after hearing the Greek's story, recognized the man named as the principal maker of the forgeries as one known to him for similar work in other lines. The man is now dead. To the credit of the museum authorities, they at once decided on an investigation of the figurines themselves, and Mr. Marshall, who had called their attention to some of the evidences of forgery, was called in to assist Curator Robinson. The figurines were scraped and the forgery at once revealed.

Beautiful Cora Livingston.

"Under the John Quincy Adams administration Cora Livingston was recognized as one of a trio of the foremost beauties of the United States," writes William Perrine in the Ladies' Home Journal. "'During the period from 1820 to 1830,' said Josiah Quincy, who had a critical eye for pretty girls, 'who has not heard of the three great belles of this country—Miss Cora Livingston of New Orleans, Miss Julia Dickenson of Troy and Miss Emily Marshall of Boston?' Indeed, he observed that he would need to know how to paint the rose to describe Miss Cora. 'In the first place,' he went on to say, 'she is not handsome; I mean not transcendentally handsome, but she has a fine figure, a pretty face, dances well, and dresses to admiration. It is the height of the ton to be her admirer, and she is certainly the belle of this country.'

"The beauty of Cora Livingston Barton had ripened early and it faded early. Long after the days of her supremacy as a belle were gone Josiah Quincy was taken to her home at Montgomery place, on the Hudson. He had not seen her for thirty years. 'Will you come into the house and see Mrs. Barton?' he was asked. He assented, and he saw an old lady in cap and dress of studied simplicity. 'You would not have known me,' she said, and he could not make reply. 'Come into the next room,' she then said, 'and you will see the Cora Livingston you knew in Washington.' There he saw the full-length portrait of the beauty to whom he had paid homage a generation before, and he could gaze upon it only in silence."

How Many.

Jonesby and his wife took the family tandem with them on their summer vacation, and in due time returned home, greatly refreshed by the outing.

"You are not as much tanned up as I expected to see you, Jonesby," remarked Brownson, meeting him the next day after his return. "Tell me candidly how far you traveled on that tandem."

"Well," he replied, lowering his voice, "I have hired a boy to turn the front wheel just one hour. As soon as he has finished I'll look at the cyclometer and tell you exactly how many miles we made on it."

Petroleum in Paint Explodes.

Explosions caused by paint mixed with petroleum ether are said to have occurred frequently of late in England. The admixture of petroleum ether is made to hasten the drying of the paint. Aside from the recent accidents with such paints in the interior of vessels, attention is called to the fire in former years on the man-of-war Detterel, where 151 persons lost their lives. Hence great caution is recommended in employing such paints. In closed rooms their use should be entirely prohibited.

Age of Responsibility.

In England the law looks upon everyone over the age of 7 as a responsible being, and every child beyond that age can be prosecuted as a criminal. The same age is accepted in Russia and Portugal. In France and Belgium the age is 8, in Italy and Spain it is 9. Norway, Greece, Austria, Denmark and Holland decline to prosecute a child under 10, and this is the rule also in some of the Swiss cantons. In Germany the limit of responsibility is fixed at 12.

At the Churches.

—The Christmas entertainment at the Lutheran church Monday evening was the best ever given at Christmas. The house was filled to overflowing The decorations by R. S. Johnson were fine. In all it was excellent and enjoyed by those present.

The most elaborate Christmas entertainment was at the M. E. church Monday evening. There were many new things, especially the boys and girls dressed to represent various nations, the cute way that Santa Claus took to come down the chimney with his brownies.

Somewhat similar was that at the Presbyterian church. There was a group of Indian boys and another of Japanese girls, all very fine. The singing and speaking were excellent. At both churches. presents were liberally given.

The Christmas exercises at the Reformed church were held last evening and consisted of speaking, singing and declaiming in the English and German languages. The little folks who were under the direction of Tillie Stevens, acquitted themselves quite creditably and enjoyably to all present. Marie Hebel also delighted the audience with a recitation. The offering which the children gathered for the fatherless and motherless amounted to $7. The pastor and family were also abundantly remembered, all the auxiliaries of the church.

Kruse-Miller.

Yesterday, at noon, the nuptials of the always genial Wm. Kruse jr., son of Wm. Kruse sr., and the amiable daughter of Conrad and Mrs. Miller, Anna, were solemnized. A large number of friends and relatives had assembled at the home of the bride's parents to witness the momentous and impressive ceremony performed. Truly, an impressive scene it is, for all who take life as it is, real and earnest, to witness a handsome young couple enter their ship and sail onto the sea of matrimony, plighting each other never to leave the craft whether the water be placid or disturbed, until the smooth waters in the harbor of eternity be safely reached. Mr. and Mrs. Kruse have bright prospects for a happy voyage, and their many friends sincerely wish them such.

After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. G. M. Hirsch, the wedding guests then partook of a bounteous dinner, and many, too, enjoyed the hospitality of their hosts that remained throughout the afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Kruse will remain with us and will, for the present, be at home to their friends at the home of the bride's parents.

The Cork Tree.

Some children fancy that corks grow out of bottles instead of being made of the bark of a tree which grows in Italy, Spain and other southern countries. The cork tree is an evergreen about the size of our apple tree. The bark is stripped in order to obtain the cork, which is soaked and then dried. The moment the bark is peeled off, the tree begins to grow another cork skin, and each new one is better than the last, so the older the better the cork. The trees are stripped about every eight years, and so strong does it make them that they often live to the age of 200 years. Besides its chief use as stoppers for bottles, cork is made into buoys; in making life-preservers to save people from drowning, soles of boots and slippers, fancy rock work, largely for lifeboats, and sometimes for artificial limbs. After the bark is stripped off, it is trimmed and dried and flattened out. Then it is packed and shipped to all parts of the world.

Mrs. Plum Dead.

After a long time of suffering, Mrs. Phil Plum passed away Saturday at her home in Waterloo. The funeral was today at 2 o'clock. Her case has been a hopeless one for a year or so. But last Friday, her sister Mrs. Britton, was buried at South Chicago.

The Cudahy Case.

We have waited to see if this mystery would not be cleared up, so we could give it in full. But as so many of our readers have heard only a part of the story. we condense it today for their benefit.

Last Tuesday night at Omaha, Edward Cudahy, the 15-year old son of the wealthy packer, Edward Cudady sr., was walking along the streets alone on his way home, and when two or three blocks from his home, was stopped in the darkness by two men who held revolvers to his head and told him to keep still. They hurried him to a covered buggy near by, and held him while they drove several miles away, making turns, evidently so he could not remember the road and finally took him into the second story of an unoccupied house, and kept him chained over twenty-four hours, and then took him back home in the same rig, dropped him out in the darkness near his home and disappeared in the darkness.

At his home, which he would have reached at 8 p. m, had he not been kidnaped, tney were not much uneasy till midnight, when it was believed something was wrong, and the police were called to help look for him. But no trace of him could be found. The morning came, and about 8 a. m. the half distracted father was called up by telephone and asked if he had got the letter that had been thrown into his yard by a man on horseback. He replied he had not, and the answer came, that he would do well to get it. This he did, and found a note which told him his son had been kidnaped, and he would have to pay a ransom of $25,000 to get him. The family now remembered they had seen a strange horseman ride rapidly by and throw something away. Soon after noon, a letter came through the mail, telling him fully what to do.

The letter said drive out alone, several miles after dark that night, with a red lantern in the buggy and a sack of $25,000 in $5, $10 and $20 gold pieces. On reaching a certain place he would see a white lantern, and there he must leave the gold and drive home. If he did not bring the money, they said they would put out the boy's eyes.

At first, the father thought he would try to catch the scoundrels. But the more he thought it over, the more he feared he would never see his boy again, as was the case with Charley Ross.

So he had a messenger sworn to secrecy, go to a bank and get a sack of gold, took his buggy and a red lantern, made the dreary night drive all alone, reached at last the lonely place where a lantern hung on a stick. He got out, put the sack of gold pieces, $25,000, on the ground near the lantern and turning towards home left it in the darkness. It is believed the kidnapers were out on the river in a boat watching him, as the road at that place runs close by the river. They got the money some way, and by one o'clock that night, the boy was home.

At this writing the kidnapers have not been found, but the searchers have found the old house in which the boy was held a prisoner, and the lad recognized it and the articles it contained.

OBITUARY.

Margaret May Beard was born in Franklin township, DeKalb county, Indiana, April 18, 1865, and died Dec. 20, 1900, aged 35 years, 8 months and 2 days. She was the daughter of Jefferson D. and Margaret E. Beard. At the age of four months she was orphaned by the death of her mother. Mrs. Orrin Keep, her father's sister, at once took her to their home and cared for her as their own. Under the kindly care of Father and Mother Keep, she grew to womanhood, and remained with them until their recent death. She was a young woman of sterling worth and of the strictest probity. Not long since she went to the home of her brother, Geo. Beard, and was stricken with that dreadful disease, typhoid fever, which was so intense as to destroy the integrity of her lungs from which she could not recover, and so lingered in his home where she received every kindness, and was provided with the best professional nurses by her brothers and sisters, who were untiring in their ministrations, and faithful to their duty. But all to no avail. She merged into the shadow of death amid the tears and sorrow of her many friends. There remain to mourn her untimely departure, her father and stepmother, sisters, Mrs. Mary Boozer, Miss Ella J. Beard and Mrs. Bertha M. Heflefinger; brothers, Geo. J. and Edson B. Beard and Prof. H. H. Keep, a foster brother and cousin. She was followed to the grave at Hamilton, Ind., December 23, by a large concourse of neighbors, where funeral services were held by Rev. W. O. Butler. The entire obsequies were conducted by undertaker Ettinger.

The relatives of Miss May Beard desire to make this public expression of thanks and appreciation for the sympathy and help of friends during her sickness, death and burial.

OBITUARY.

Emmeline Plum, oldest daughter of J. J. and Charlotte Latson, was born in Darien Center, N. Y., March 24, 1843, and departed this life December 22, 1900, aged 57 years, 8 months and 28 days.

She was united in marriage to Philip Plum Aug. 19, 1866, whose faithful and loving wife she was until death did them part. Mrs. Plum was an earnest and faithful Sunday school and church worker. She commenced teaching in Sabbath school when but fourteen years of age, and remained a faithful worker until failing health deprived her of further attendance.

She united with the First Presbyterian church of Waterloo, Ind., May 20, 1867, of which she was a member at her death. She was a member of the Rebekah lodge and also the Rathbone Sisters of Waterloo, and a member of the Ladies' Minerva Club of Waterloo. She had represented both of the lodges of which she was a member, in the Grand Lodge of the state. She was a teacher in the public schools for a number of years, and was a member of the first teachers' institute ever held in DeKalb county.

With her parents, she came to Auburn, DeKalb county, Indiana, May 5, 1854, in which place she passed nearly her whole life. She leaves to mourn, her husband, an aged father, three brothers, four sisters and a host of friends and relatives who are bereaved at this hour of sorrow.

GIRL'S INFLUENCE.

Domestic Decides Boston Lawyer's Course Toward Missions.

A Boston lawyer, who has for forty years been eminent in his profession and no less eminent in Christian work and in princely gifts to the cause of benevolence, tells this story of what fixed his course of life: When he was a young man he once attended a missionary meeting in Boston. One of the speakers at that meeting, a plain man, said he had a girl in his domestic service at a wage of less than two dollars a week, who gave a dollar every month to missions; she also had a class of poor boys in Sunday school who never missed her from her place. And he said of her, "She is the happiest, kindest, tidiest girl I ever had in my kitchen." The young man went home with these three broken sentences sticking in his mind: "Class in Sunday school—dollar a month to missions—happiest girl." The first result was that he took a class in Sunday school; the second was a resolve that if this girl could give a dollar a month to missions, he could, and would. These were the immediate effects of one plain girl's consecrated life. But who can count, who can imagine the sum total? That lawyer was, for almost half a century from this time, an increasingly active force in every good work within his reach.—Boston Journal.

ST. JOE.

Mr. Jack Dickerhoof and wife entertained friends from Hicksville last Sunday.

George Hamm and better half were at Hicksville last week laying in a supply of Christmas goods.

Mrs. Lulu Hamm, nee Body, of Chicago Junction is visiting her grandparents during the holidays.

Mrs. Jacob Sechler, son Merrit and daughter Flossy, are visiting with friends in Edon, O., this week.

Geo W. Woodcox, wife and daughter, Laura, were at Auburn on Monday looing up the whereabouts of Santa Claus.

Quite a number of St. Joe's best citizens were at Hurah Town Saturday, presumably after Christmas cheer in the shape of lager beer.

Rev. H. G. Provines preached at the Christian church in Coburn Town Sunday morning and in the afternoon visited with his best girl.

The Christian church at Newville and Coburn Town have secured the services of a minister from Iowa. He was here several weeks ago and preached for the two churches, and by those who have heard him is spoken of in highest terms.

Several good sized disappointments are being indulged in, owing to the fact that Gunsenhouser did not resign and give someone the chance to become a commissioner. We know several down this way that think Isaac did the very thing he ought to do. There are enough hornet nests in the politics of old Concord just at present.

It was the talk of the town last Friday when it became noised around that Professor Stall of the high school had been locked out of the school room on his return from dinner. To say that he was mad would be putting it very mildly, and if he indulged in language ascribed to him was, to say the least, very indecent. We understand that the resignation of the professor is in the hands of the school board, but they refuse to accept it. The board is very reticent about the matter and do not let their right hands know what their left ones are doing.

BUTLER.

The Butler schools have closed for a two weeks' vacation.

The new coal chute for the L. S. & M. S. railroad is nearly completed.

Florence Campbell is visiting friends in Toledo and Norwalk, Ohio, this week.

Mrs. M. F. Campbell is spending the holidays with her parents in Fort Wayne.

The Sunday school Christmas festivities at the different churches were a grand success.

Merchants complain of a very light holiday trade. It can not be charged to a scarcity of money.

Elsie Skelton, who is spending the winter with Dr. Shumaker's, spent last Sabbath with her parents near Edon, Ohio.

A young man named Herrick, living near Hamilton, accidentally shot himself in the arm near the shoulder last Friday. His recovery is doubtful.

L. W. Campbell, assistant treasurer of Lucas county, Ohio, was visiting his brother, J. Campbell, the fore part of the week. He was formerly a resident of Butler, but had been absent for thirteen years. They visited over Christmas with their sister, Mrs. Hannah Dickerhoof, of Garrett.

Nicholas Bentrager, an old respected citizen of Butler, died last Thursday, Dec. 20. He formerly lived in Tuscarwas Co. O., and came west with his parents in the forties, and settled in Troy township. He removed to Butler about ten years ago. He served about four years in the war of the Rebellion in Company F, 44th Regiment, Indiana Volunteer Infantry under Captain John Gunsenhouser, who was killed in the early part of the war. He leaves a wife and four children. His age was 62 years.

A PERFECT WOMAN.

Physical Proportions of a Well-Developed Lady.

The dimensions of a perfect woman are these: Five feet five inches in height; weight, 128 pounds. From tip to tip of each middle finger just five feet five inches, the same as her height. The length of her hand should be one-tenth of her height; her foot one-seventh, and the diameter of her chest one-fifth. From her thighs to the ground she should measure just the same as from her thighs to the top of her head. The knee should come exactly midway between the thigh and the heel. The distance from the elbow to the middle finger should be the same as from the elbow to the middle of the chest. From the top of the head to the chin should be just the length of the foot, and the same distance from the chin to the armpit. A woman of this height should measure 24 inches around the waist, 34 around the bust, if measured under the arms, and 43 if measured over them. The upper arm should measure 13 inches and the wrist six inches. The calf of the leg should measure 14½ inches, thigh 25 and the ankle 8.

Long Term as Prince.

The Prince of Wales, who recently celebrated his fifty-ninth birthday, has now held his title the longest in English history. Previously the distinction belonged to George IV., who was Prince of Wales for fifty-eight years. Within a month of his birth the prince was created duke of Cornwall and Rothesay, earl of Carrick, Baron Renfrew, lord of the Isles, Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, while in 1850 he was made Earl of Dublin. When he wishes to travel on the quiet the prince goes as Lord Renfrew and sometimes as the Earl of Chester.

MIDWAY IDEA

To Be Prominent Feature of Pan-American Exposition.

That famous Midway idea of the Columbia exposition has become firmly associated with great expositions in general, and no great exhibit of states or nations has been held since that has not had a Midway of its own, in most cases under that very name. When the Pan-American exposition opens next year at Buffalo its Midway will be a prominent feature of the whole and will occupy a large extent of space. It is said that almost one-third of the entire cost of the whole will be expended upon this one feature alone. Only high-grade attractions have been given space to the Pan-American Midway, though it is said that over 1,500 applications for permits to exhibit there were received. One of the novel and elaborate productions that will be seen is the huge structure which is to afford innumerable trips to the moon for the exposition visitors. There will be an airship Luna, skimming from the earth to the moon, passing myriads of stars, sweeping by comets and actually piercing the milky way, until the journey is finally ended at the doorway to the palace of the man in the moon. Great secrecy is being preserved in the construction of the mechanism and the workmen are all sworn to silence. There will be a Streets of Mexico and a typical Mexican village wil be reproduced, with its shops, cathedral, market place, dance hall, bull ring and cafe. Near it is to be a southern plantation, which will show an old before the war homestead, with cotton fields, negro quarters and all complete. It is said that there will be shown, also, in this exhibit the original cabin in which Jefferson was born and the cabin that was Lincoln's boyhood home. Dante's Inferno is to furnish material for another attraction. The Hawaiian village and burning volcano and the Filipino village can be seen, and one of the attractions of the recent Paris exposition is to be reproduced in the house upside down, where everything, inside and out, will have the appearance of being inverted. An Indian congress is to add some of the necessary noise in the shape of war whoop, and there are to be regular exhibits of Indian fighting, feasts and dances. There will also be a beautiful Orient exhibit. What the Ferris wheel was to the Columbian exposition, it is claimed the Aerio-Cycle will be to the Buffalo fair. Its general plan resembles a great see saw, and at the same moment that it is taking on new passengers on the ground level, others will be riding nearly 300 feet above the earth. Concessions have been granted for an animal show, a number of moving picture exhibits, a mining camp, a Jap village, a Florida morass and many more of the smaller attractions that serve, after all, an important part in the make-up of the whole.

The Biggest Plum Pudding on Record.

The town of Paignton, England, has revived an old custom of making a plum pudding for the benefit of the local poor. After being drawn in procession round the town, it was cut up and sold. Its weight—250 pounds—compares, however, but poorly with Paignton's former efforts. In 1819 a pudding weighing 900 pounds was made, with, unfortunately, but indifferent success, for after boiling three days and nights in a brewer's copper, it was pronounced too "doughy" to be eaten. However, in 1858 tthe inhabitants recovered their prestige and beat the record with a pudding a ton and a half in weight, and costing $225. In its composition were employed 573 pounds of flour, 191 of bread, 382 pounds of raisins, 191 pounds of currants, 382 pounds of suet, 320 lemons, 360 quarts of milk, 144 nutmegs, 95 pounds of sugar, besides a quantity of eggs. It was cooked in sections, which were afterwards built together.

Discovered Coal in Pennsylvania.

A number of prominent coal men of Pennsylvania have decided to erect a monument of coal to Philip Ginter, the discoverer of that fuel, at Summit Hill, near Mauch Chunk. One hundred and nine years ago Ginter lived in a rough cabin in the forests on the Mauch Chunk Mountain. While in quest of game for his family, whom he had left at home without food of any kind, his foot struck a black stone. By the roadside, not far from the Town of Summit Hill, he built a fire of wood and threw pieces of the supposed stone about it, so that the embers might last longer while he was roasting a fowl. He was surprised, after a little while, to see the stones glow and retain their heat for a long time. He carried a lot of the coal home and burned it there. The few neighbors soon learned of the discovery, but there was no mining to any extent in Carbon county until after the war of 1812 had begun.

Full Dress at Theater.

It is always more courteous in a man to pay a young lady you have invited to go to the theater the compliment of wearing your dress suit, for she will undoubtedly take the trouble to wear a rather smarter gown than her ordinary street costume. There are a great many reasons why it may not be possible for you to wear a dress suit. You may not have time, or you may not be in the habit of wearing one, but if you are in the habit of wearing one it certainly would seem very strange to choose this opportunity for not wearing it, and undoubtedly the young lady would be very much pleased if you did so.

Police Judge Fined Himself.

Police Judge Judah inadvertently rode a bicycle upon a forbidden sidewalk today, says the Portland Oregonian, and on being reprimanded by a citizen went to his own office and swore out a warrant for his own arrest. The warrant was delivered to Marshal Gibson, who arrested Judah and brought him into his own court for trial. Judah sat as police judge and took his own plea of guilty, fined himself the usual sum of $1, and then paid himself the fine. The record of the case was in the usual form.

No Brother or Sister.

Queen Victoria had no full brothers and sister. Through her mother's first marriage with Pince Charles of Leiningin, she had a half-sister, the Princess Fedore, who married Prince Hohenlohe of Langenburg, and a half-brother, Prince Charles of Leiningin, neither of whom is now living.

To Raise Big Church Fund.

Rev. Dr. George L. Perin of Boston has been given a year's leave of absence from his church in that city for the purpose of raising a $200,000 fund for the advancement of the Universalist church in America.

Infanta Eulalia's Separation.

The Infanta Eulalia de Bourbon of Spain is completing arrangements with her lawyers and her government to carry out the deed of separation which was agreed to by her and by her husband, Prince Antonio de Montpensier, in Paris a short time ago. This separation, which has been arranged without the intervention of the courts of justice and by mutual consent, will allow the Infanta Eulalia to fix her residence in Spain and to travel abroad to visit her mother, Queen Isabella, and her sister, Princess Paz, at Munich. She will continue to receive $30,000 annually, voted by the Cortes, and her marriage settlement allowances.

Teachers Resign Upon Marrying.

The Boston school board has come to the conclusion, as one of its members expresses it, that the city has paid quite enough wedding journey bills, and has adopted a rule declaring that hereafter the marriage of a woman teacher shall operate as a resignation of her position.

—Help is needed at once when a person's life is in danger. A neglected cough or cold may soon become serious and should be stopped at once. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures coughs and colds and the worst cases of croup, bronchitis, grippe and other throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord.

—MARRIED:—At the Lutheran parsonage December 25, 1900, at 3:30 p. m., by Rev. J. D. Brosy, O. H. P. Martius of Toledo, Ohio, and Phebe Estella Hathaway of Garrett, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. Martius will make their future home in Toledo, as he is employed as a switchman there. Our best wishes go with them.

—Marion DeLong reports that Mrs. John Trush, who lives south of Sedan, had an unpleasant experience last Friday. Mrs Levi Hewitt was driving by and went to turn out, when the latter stepped aside the wrong way and was run over. She was picked up unconscious, but we understand, was not seriously hurt.

—MARRIED:—At the Lutheran parsonage last Saturday, Dec. 22, at 7:30 p. m. by Rev. J. D. Brosy, D. K. Hull and Florence Grace Crandall. These are two of Auburn's worthy young people and we extend to them our best wishes. They had their rooms all furnished on East Seventh street and began housekeeping at once.

—MARRIED:—At the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rich, last evening at 5:30 on West Ninth street by J. D. Brosy, Frank L. Pyle and Miss Blanche Potter. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few friends. They move on the old home three miles east of Auburn. Mr Pyle will farm his father's place. We wish them happiness and success.

—The ladies of the Culture Club and L. L. C. joined yesterday in playing Santa Claus and gladdened the hearts of about fifty people, aged and sick, with boxes of fruit and candy tastefully trimmed with wreaths and sprigs of holly. The ladies deserve great praise for their kindness and generosity, for their hearts were certainly filled with the true Christmas spirit.

—Mr. and Mrs. Chris McNabb had their Christmas tree yesterday morning before daylight, instead of the evening before. The little wax candles blazed nicely, and was showing off the presents and decorations in fine shape, when some of the cotton caught fire, and there was a sudden blaze. The tree was pitched out doors, but the gifts were saved. For a few minutes there was real danger.

—Many persons having had the experience of Mr. Peter Sherman of North Stratford, N. H., who says "For years I suffered torture from chronic indigestion, but Kodol Dyspepsia Cure made a well man of me." It digests what you eat and is a certain cure for dyspepsia and every form of stomach trouble. It gives relief at once even in the worst cases, and can't help but do you good. H. B. McCord.

—J. L. Marvin, formerly of this office, but for some time with the Edon Independent, at Edon, O., has been visiting the old home in Jackson township and his brother Charles in Auburn, went to Valparaiso today. He will be in school for some time, and will also assist in the publication of a college paper, "The College Courant." Mr. Marvin is a handy man to have in such a position. We hope to hear of his success in this line as well as his studies.

—George C. Clark, formerly of this city, was married at Bourbon, Ind., Sunday evening to a Miss Katherine Feiser of Walkerton, the ceremony being performed at the home of her sister by the U. B. minister. Miss Feiser is an estimable young lady and well and favorably known in that vicinity, her parents having resided there until a few weeks ago when they removed to Texas. Mr. Clark is a special deputy employed by the Modern Samaritan insurance company, and has recently been assigned the management of the work in twelve counties in northern Indiana. His friends here will join the COURIER in extending congratulations.

—Don't use any of the counterfeits of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Most of them are worthless or, liable to cause injury. The original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a certain cure for piles, eczema, cuts, scalds, burns, sores and skin diseases. H. B. McCord.

—A little boy at St. Louis was looking up the chimney of the fireplace for Santa Claus, when his clothes caught fire. He was so badly burned that he died.

—DeWitt's Little Early Risers are dainty little pills, but they never fail to cleanse the liver, remove obstructions and invigorate the system. H. B. McCord.

Phonographs Teach Pronunciation.

Phonographs are to be put to practical use in the study of foreign languages, where they seem to have found a useful place. Grammar and technicalities may be acquired without a teacher, but one cannot teach one's self pronunciation. Hence to the many obliged to learn a foreign language without the aid of a teacher phonographic records of language lessons are the greatest help, as the machine can repeat the words over and over again until familiarity with the sounds is obtained.

POLITICS OF THE DAY

How the Glass Trust Pinches.

The extortions of the glass trust have become so unbearable under the cover of the high duties imposed by the tariff upon imported glass that the dealers in paints and glass have been driven into open revolt. There is no remedy for consumers except to drive the trust from under its tariff shelter. The dealers know precisely what pinches them and they have resolved to carry their grievance to the door of Congress. Congress can reduce the tax on glass without reducing the surplus in the treasury a dollar. But a remission of the tax or its reduction to a revenue basis would save millions of dollars to taxpayers.—Philadelphia Record.

Which Is the Better Republican?

Benjamin Harrison is out of office and looks at things calmly and judicially. His pre-election statement that he regarded the administration's colonial policy as "a serious departure from right principles" has been followed by a post-election declaration against the ship subsidy bill. The question naturally arises as to which is the better Republican—William McKinley or Benjamin Harrison? If the latter instead of the former were now President it would be certain that the colonial policy would not be what it is, nor would a ship subsidy bill be pending, with excellent chances of success.—Des Moines Leader.

Let the Truth Be Told Now.

Now that the election is over, it should be possible not only to discuss our serious national situation in the Philippines with candor, but also to get at and recognize the real facts of it. There has been monstrous perversion somewhere. Now that all the partisan ends desired have been achieved, let light shine into the bottom of this dark well that the truth may be revealed. The people, whose business it is, have a right to understand all that is involved in this enterprise of the United States.—Springfield, Mass., Republican.

A One-Sided Treaty.

One of the provisions of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty is that should a vessel of the enemy enter the canal the United States shall not pursue until the lapse of twenty-four hours. Under this provision of the treaty the commerce of the isthmian canal might be utterly destroyed. The treaty forces the United States to relinquish all the rights of a belligerent on the canal in time of war and opens the canal to the enemies of the United States. Better have no canal than such a condition.—Dubuque Herald.

Why the Trusts Prosper.

That the trust should find phenomenal prosperity in the face of hostile law is chargeable to three causes: First, the nonfeasance of malfeasance of officials intrusted with the enforcement of the law; second, the inefficiency of existing legislative remedies, and, third, and, perhaps, chief of all, the maintenance of other laws and national policies which annul and give the lie to all anti-trust legislation.—St. Paul Globe.

Standard Oil's Ohio Victory.

The decision of the Ohio Supreme Court that the Standard Oil trust of Ohio is not a trust is another of those decisions that cause a loss of popular confidence in courts. The case has been allowed to drag along for three years, during which an anti-trust Supreme Judge has been defeated for renomination, and now the case goes off under an equal division of the court—three to three.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

Only a Makeshift Policy.

Republican high protection makes unnatural trade conditions. The attempt of Republicans to remedy evils resulting from wrong legislation by additional legislation is a makeshift policy. Trusts are to a preponderating degree due to the same tariff laws which keep down the American merchant marine. A thorough reform of the tariff laws would help the United States in a number of ways.—St. Louis Republic.

The Ills We Have Annexed.

It is less for the morals of our own country than "in respect of other portions of the globe to which our dominion has been extended" that ex-Senator Edmunds thinks it well to have a constitutional inhibition of polygamy. His contention is evidently aimed at our subsidized subject, the Sultan of Sulu, but it shows what ills we knew not of we have rushed into.—Philadelphia Ledger.

There Is No Disagreement.

Mr. McKinley is quite sure that Congress will effect proper legislation on the trust question. In this opinion the trusts and Mr. McKinley are in hearty accord. The trusts are confident that they will get just the kind of legislation they paid for.—Omaha World-Herald.

The Foreigner and the Tax.

The foreigner pays the tax, presumably, when American steel rails are sold in England and Norway for less than they are sold in this country, but it complicates the explanation somewhat.—Sioux City Tribune.

The Ship Subsidy Bill.

These two facts condemn the subsidy grab: 1. Our shipyards have for some time been worked at their full capacity without any subsidy. 2. Steel ships can be built cheaper here than anywhere else; our mills have just sent a large quantity of steel plates to Europe to be used in foreign shipyards.—New York World.

A little of the recklessness of Mark Hanna in pushing the ship-subsidy bill may be attributed to the fact that he well understands that he has made his last political fight. When McKinley retires from office the power of Hanna will go with him, and nobody understands this better than Hanna himself.—Indianapolis Press.

There is no doubt that there is a strong sentiment among the people in favor of having their ocean-carrying trade done in ships which are owned by Americans and which carry the American flag. It is not believed, however, that the ship-subsidy bill would accomplish that object if it should become a law. It would bring about the building of a few swift steamers and that is all it would do.—Savannah News.

It (the ship subsidy) is at the very best only a waste of the public money. At its worst it is diverting public money for private profit. Neither the owners nor the builders of ships have the slightest claim to contributions from their fellow citizens. A direct subsidy on wheat raised and exported or on steel and iron or on buildings would be just as excusable and less liable to abuse. Every end sought that it is legitimate to seek, in the subsidy scheme, can be reached through the opening of the ship markets of the world to Americans wishing to buy ships.—New York Times.

Trusts have been heretofore strong enough to fasten themselves on the people without aid from the government. All they have asked was to be let alone. Now the ship trust wants to be supported out of the taxpayers' pockets. That is the most audacious scheme of all. This subsidy grab has been on hand for three years, and has heretofore been defeated in all its attempts to fasten itself on the people. Now, however, it seems to have prospect of success and its powerful promoters will doubtless use pressure enough to defeat other appropriations, unless they can get what they want.—New Orleans Picayune.

Jack's Growl.

The author of "From Edinburgh to the Antarctic," writing of the sailor's habit of grumbling, says: "The dinners are all the same; that is to say, Monday's dinners are all alike, and what we have to-day, we shall have this day six months hence. Jack's forefather this day a hundred years ago had the same menu, and made the same uncomplimentary remarks about the dishes; and a hundred years hence on this day Jack's children will growl over their salt horse and plumless duff." The author also tells this "yarn" to illustrate that Jack's habit of grumbling can't be cured and must be endured:

Once upon a time there lived a skipper whose wife said to him that if she went to sea the poor men would never find fault with their food. Her husband took her with him on a voyage, and the good woman attended to the cooking in the galley herself.

The scouse was thick with fresh vegetables, the bread was white and without weevils, the meat was good and the duff was almost half plums; but still the men growled.

Then the skipper's wife thought of the hens she had brought on board to lay eggs for her husband's breakfast. She took them out of the coop, wrung their necks with her own fair hands, plucked them, roasted them, and sent them to the forecastle on the cabin china.

"Now the men," she said to herself, "will know how much we think of their comfort."

At eight bells she stole forward to the forescuttle to listen to the praise of her skill as a cook. She looked down the hatch, and saw a big, black fist plunge a fork into the hen, and heard a hoarse voice growl, "I say, Bill, what d'ye think this 'ere bloody fowl died of?"

A Domestic Monkey.

A lady tells of a monkey which she saw while in Paris. Meeting him suddenly on the stairs one day, he stood in the corner to allow her to pass, and when she said "Good-morning" he took off his cap and bowed.

"Are you going away?" she asked. "Where is your passport?"

Pulling off his cap, he took from the crown a paper, opened it, and showed it to her. When some one observed that her dress was dusty, the courteous monkey took a brush from the table and carefully brushed her dress and then her shoes. When food was given him he always made a low bow before taking it, and then ate it slowly and daintily. He had been taught to eat eggs with a spoon, and to use a knife and fork. He could lock and unlock a drawer, thread a needle, uncork a bottle, and polish his master's shoes. He seemed to take great pleasure in gay company, and from the apparent attention he paid to the conversation, looking in turn at each speaker, it was almost impossible to believe that he did not understand what was being said. This marvelous monkey was never put on public exhibition, and died at an early age of pneumonia, just like a human being.

Country Doctor's Experience.

The trials of the country doctor were well illustrated recently by Dr. O. H. Simmons, of Kingsfield, who was called to go into a logging camp to attend a man who had broken his leg. Dr. Simmons left Kingsfield late in the afternoon and drove to Sam Parsons' on the Lowe Deal River road, which is about twenty miles from Kingfield. He left there with a guide on foot in the evening and tramped across through the woods and streams and rivers fourteen miles to the logging camp, arriving there at 3 o'clock in the morning. He set the broken leg and started for home about 8 a. m. The last three miles before they got to the camp the only track through the frozen snow was a single foot track going in, so coming out the track was the wrong way. It lamed him so that by the time he got out within about five miles of the settlement where his team was he was so lame he could not travel. His guide had to go out and get a team, and by cutting boughs to fill one of the streams they got the team in and took him out to Mr. Parsons'. He arrived home late two days after.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Vermont continues to be a rural State. It is the only State in the North that does not contain a city with a population of 25,000 or more.

VAST REGIONS OF THE EARTH AS YET UNEXPLORED BY WHITE MEN

IN an exhaustive article in the Globus, a well-known German periodical devoted to geography, Dr. Rudolph Andree sums up the achievements of the country in regard to geography, and while he claims that the nineteenth century may well be termed the century of discoveries, he comes to the conclusion that it will still be the work of many years before the surface of the earth is known. The unknown parts of the globe are illustrated in a series of charts in which the "terra incognita" is represented in black.

Concerning the regions around the north pole about which nothing is known, the tasks of future explorations may be briefly indicated as follows: In the Asiatic-European Polar Sea, from Wrangel Land in the east to north of Spitzbegen in the west the unknown is bounded by the drifts of the Jeanette in 1881 and of the Fram in 1894-1896. In north Greenland geographical knowledge does not extend, generally speaking, beyond Lockwood's farthest point in 1882. Cape Washington, and Peary's searches in the vicinity of Independence Bay, 1892, but beside these that part of the eastern coast from Cape Bismarck (Rayer, 1870,) to Independence Bay, with the ocean in front of it, is unknown. Nearly determined is the extent of Grinnell Land toward the west, while of the extent of the Ellesmere Land south of it and about the ocean north of Parry archipelago absolutely nothing is known. Large parts of the coast of Baffin's Land also need exploration. In this respect the next few years are likely to add materially to the geographical knowledge of the north polar region, for not less than four expeditions on a large scale are nearly ready to start.

Search for South Pole.

The south polar region, where the most extensive unknown territory is located, will also be attacked next year all along the line. Most of the land in this region is fixed by supposition upon the maps. Actual knowledge of land around the south pole reaches only at six points beyond 70 degrees latitude; at 170 degrees east longitude, where James Ross in 1840 discovered Victoria Land and its volcanoes and Borchgrevink in the winter of 1899-1900 found the magnetic south pole and reached the highest southern latitude so far, 78 degrees 50 minutes; at 160 degrees west longitude, where Ross in 1842 found land which is probably a continental mass; at 110 degrees west longitude (Cook, 1774); at 90 degrees west longitude, where the Belgian expedition under De Gerlache, during the winter of 1898-1899 drifted beyond 71 degrees 30 minutes south latitude; at 35 degrees west longitude, where Weddell penetrated to 74 degrees 30 minutes south latitude, and finally at 15 degrees west longitude (Ross, 1843). The enormous extent of the unknown south polar region can best be illustrated if its limits are transferred to a map of the north polar region. It will then be found that the boundary would include Norway, Siberia and North America down to 65 degrees north latitude, taking in the entire northern half of Alaska.

Thibet Still a Mystery.

For the completion of the map of the Asiatic continent the researches of the nineteenth century have established new and exact bases, yet there are still smaller and larger regions which are entirely unknown. Much remains to be done in Thibet, despite the successes of Russian, English and French travelers and Indian surveyors. This is particularly the case of the land north of the route of Nain Singh (1874-1875), south of the Kwenlun and west of the route of the journey of De Rhins in 1893. North of the Kwenlun and of the routes of Prschewalski and Hedin, stretching to the Tarulo, are extensive unknown deserts. The eastern half of the Himalayas is known only in incomplete outlines. The highest peaks of the earth in this region have been measured by trigonometry from the flats of the Ganges river, but their bases nor their tops have not been reached.

Unknown in the sense of modern research is also the territory east of Bhutan across the Tsangpo, Bramaputra, and the Yang-tse-Kiang. In the southern part of Arabia is the so-called "vacant quarter," as will be seen from a glance at the map, an area more than twice the extent of the German Empire.

Activity in Africa.

In Africa the researches have been particularly active, and what is known of this continent is almost exclusively the result of work in the nineteenth century. But there is still much darkness in regard to this continent, and the classic question Quid novi ex Africa? will probably be repeated for many years. A territory little known is between the Niger in the south, the chain of oasis of the Tidikelt in the north, the route of Lenz in the west, and the routes of Barth and Duveyriers in the east. Much remains to be done in the Congo State. Here the courses of the larger rivers have been surveyed, but the vast territory between the water courses is unknown. Hard work for courageous travelers also is required to explore the region of the sources of the Congo and the adjoining part of British central Africa, Portuguese west Africa and British east Africa. The south of Madagascar is also unknown.

It may be surprising to many people that explorers have a wide range of work in North America, yet a glance at the black spots on the chart will show this to be the fact. Researches in the far Northwest and in Alaska, caused by the gold finds, only begin to show how much remains to be done here, despite the energy with which the government of the United States and of Canada push surveys year after year. Much territory in Labrador and in the regions between the great rivers and lakes of the North is also still unexplored.

Much in South America.

A glance at the chart of South America shows that this part of the western hemisphere is almost as unknown as "Darkest Africa." Of the Andes in Peru, the peaks in Bolivia, and the central mountain chains in the south of Venezuela and Guiana nothing is known. A large number of rivers have been explored within the last twenty years, but others still are waiting for the courageous traveler.

Of Australia, Arnhem Land in the north and the extensive deserts in the east of West Australia are unknown, and the north and south of South Australia have only been crossed by few routes at great distances from each other.

The face of the earth is known in great outlines, but to portray it in its detailed features is still impossible.

NEW CABLE TO PHILIPPINES,

Uncle Sam Will Soon Have Connection with the Islands.

The United States will soon have cable communication with the Philippine Islands and the people hereabouts may learn with greater facility than is now possible details of Aguinaldo's efforts to win the sprinting championship of the world. For some time the difficulty of communication between the islands has seriously hampered American operations in the Philippines and has been the subject of complaints to the government from Gen. Otis, Gen. MacArthur and other officers. It was obvious that some method of quick communication must be put into operation, as the dispatches carried by the warships were in many cases too slow of delivery to be practicable. As soon as this important undertaking of laying a cable had been decided upon the War Department set about finding a suitable vessel in the transport service. The transport Burnside was chosen on account of her large capacity and her shallow draught in proportion to her size. She is the first cableship ever owned by the United States.

The Burnside was formerly owned by Spain and named the Rita. She was captured during the war by the Yale while trying to run the blockade off Porto Rico with a cargo of arms and ammunition, towed to Charleston, S. C., and there taken charge of by Capt. Laflin, her present commander, renamed and put into commission, first as a transport carrying mules and general government stores to Cuba and afterward as a troopship. Taken to the Morse iron works in Brooklyn, the Burnside was there reconstructed and transformed into a cable steamer. The cabins and saloon were refurnished with a view to accommodating army officers and their wives en route to the Philippines. Three huge tanks made of copper were placed in her hold, each capable of holding 250 miles of cable. These tanks are twenty-five feet in diameter and fifteen feet in depth, with an iron core in the center to keep the cable in position when being paid out from the ship.

Laying the cable is going to be a difficult and delicate job. A crew of more than twenty men will have the handling of the cable and their duty will be to see that it is paid out properly and that it runs smoothly from the great tanks to the deck and thence out into the water. If the ocean bed were fairly level cable laying would be a comparatively easy operation. But in the Philippine Islands region the sea bottom is extremely rough, full of high mountains and deep chasms. Moreover, the charts are few and what there are are mainly unreliable. Consequently the cable layers will not know until they find out for themselves when the slender strand is stretching up the side of a submarine mountain and when it is descending into the depths. After the Burnside has done her work there will be some new information regarding the ocean bottom between the more important islands that will be valuable to navigation.

On reaching the point whence the cable is to be laid the crew proceed to land the heavy shore ends, this being done by hauling from the beach with ropes and supporting the cable with rubber air balloons until sufficient length is landed. Connection having been made with the signal station on shore, the Burnside will set out for the shore with which communication will be established, going at a rate from four to eight miles an hour. She must proceed cautiously, as the rate at which the cable is paid out depends on the depth of the water. In 2,000 fathoms of water, for instance, the length of cable from the ship to the point of contact with the ocean bed is twenty miles. A sudden shallow from very deep water, as in the case of a submarine mountain, is likely to break the cable by too sharply shortening the slack. Then the tedious work of grappling for the broken end must be undertaken.

Bibles for the Heathen.

Over 5,000,000 copies of the Bible were sold by the British and Foreign Bible Society last year. This is an increase of 1,000,000 over the sales of the year before, says a London newspaper. Sixty thousand "parts" of the testaments were printed and bound for the use of the troops in South Africa. But for this number the sale of Bibles in England has remained for two years at 2,000,000 copies. The missionaries are responsible for the additional million in the output. The heathen has more Bibles than ever before. Most of the books were printed in China and in Chinese characters. Many were printed in Hindostan. If the present rate of increase is kept up and each Bible represents a converted heathen, the world may be all Christianized about two centuries hence.

Age of Big Trees.

Referring to the age of the big trees of California, Prof. C. E. Bessy records in "Science" that he once counted with much care the rings of growth of the tree of which the stump constitutes the floor of the so-called dancing pavilion. This count was made from circumference to center, and every ring in all that distance was counted, no estimates or guesses being made. The result was that 1,147 rings were counted and accordingly it is safe to say that this tree, which was fully 24 or 25 feet in diameter, and considerably more than 300 feet in height, acquired these dimensions in eleven hundred and forty-seven years. Prof. Bessey doubts whether any of the existing trees approach the age of two thousand years.

There is a great deal of satisfaction in being able to deceive the deceiver.

WANT TO VOTE BY MACHINE.

Indiana Desires to Change the Method of Polling Votes.

The success of the voting machines in the various cities of New York State having been demonstrated a demand has been created that they be employed in Indiana at future general elections, says an Indianapolis correspondent. Men of all parties are favorable to the innovation, and it is the general belief that before the election of 1902 they will be fully installed in this State, at least in the principal cities. Several of the boards of County Commissioners have taken the matter up with a view to recommending that appropriations for the purchase of voting machines be made by County Councils.

To meet the requirements of the laws of Indiana it is said that a machine must be able to register an independent or irregular vote. For this extra devices are required. Ordinarily the voter is willing to choose from the candidates on the regularly nominated tickets and voting machines are designed principally with this fact in view, but it is said that a machine does not comply with the requirements in Indiana if it does not provide a way for a man to cast his ballot for whomsoever he desires. To meet this difficulty one voting machine that has been used two or three times in Indiana, has a row of little receptacles under the regular tickets. They open to receive the ballot or ballots desired to be cast. For this kind of a vote it is necessary to have a printed ballot or ballots.

Examples of two of the difficult problems for inventors of voting machines were presented at the last city election in Indianapolis. One was the twenty-four candidates for Councilmen at large—six to a party—and the other the numerous nominees for School Commissioner. The machines had to be so constructed that a man could vote for any six and no more of the twenty-four candidates for Councilman at large. This is what is styled group voting. In Marion County, there were seven Representatives and three Senators to elect this fall. A voting machine would have had to be arranged with all the candidates for Representative in one group and all for Senator in another, so that the voter could cast his ballot for any seven of the former and any three of the latter. This grouping is necessary because a candidate for Representative or Councilman at large is not in competition with a practical candidate in each of the other parties, but is a candidate as against all men seeking the same office.

The School Board election in Indianapolis, according to the law of 1899, must be conducted independently of political parties. Nominations for School Commission are by petition and ballots are deposited in a box separate from the one receiving the vote for other city officials. All this was something to tax the ingenuity of the voting machine. The machines ordered for a few precincts at the last city election were to be arranged so that all the nominees for School Commissioner were in the lower right-hand corner, and not in columns where the party tickets appeared. The group was to be designated "candidates for School Commissioner," and the voter could vote for five and no more.

In some States women vote on school questions and in other States tax questions are voted on only by taxpayers of a certain class. When these questions come up at general elections voting machines must be constructed so that all parts can be locked when the voter with limited qualifications enters, except the parts on which the elector is entitled to vote.

There are many mechanical geniuses at work in Indiana on voting machines. It is said that in Washington City there are 389 patents applied for from all quarters of the United States. It is probable that companies will be organized to back the inventors as fast as they show promise of early success, for it is expected that much money will be spent by Indiana counties for machines in the next three or four years.

PORTABLE QUARTERS.

Huts for British Soldiers Who Stay in South Africa.

The British Government has contracted for a number of huts for the army of occupation in South Africa at the close of the war. Huts providing accommodation for 30,000 troops have been ordered. The building for warrant officers' quarters is sixty feet long and twenty feet wide, and divided into twelve rooms. The hut is constructed of timber framing, covered outside with corrugated iron, lined with felt, and inside with deal match-boarding. The men's huts, accommodating thirty men and one non-commissioned officer, are 113 feet long and 20 feet wide. When packed the men's huts each weigh about thirty-five tons and the warrant officers' about twenty tons.

HUT FOR SOLDIERS.

MONEY IN SCRUB PALMETTO.

Looked Upon as a Nuisance, the Plant Is Found to Be Valuable.

The saw palmetto, or "sabal serrulate," as the scientists call it, is indigenous to the soil of South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana, in the tidewater sections and just beyond. It is an extremely hardy and vigorous growth. Once its roots are set in a soil they can be removed only by the most industrious and thorough grubbing. In very many places the palmetto scrub covers whole "flats" of many acres with an almost impassable barrier of tangled undergrowth.

Until within the very recent past the saw palmetto has been looked upon as an unmitigated nuisance, says the Savannah News. The cost of clearing an acre of land of the growth was often much greater than the price of a dozen acres of the rough. Lately, however, the plant has been receiving more consideration. It has been discovered that the saw palmetto is both a source of health and of wealth, and the probabilities are that at a day not far in the future it will be adding largely to the prosperity of these sections which formerly cut it down and cast it into the fire. The medicinal properties of it have been found very valuable in the treatment of kidney and other troubles, and various proprietary medicines manufactured from the saw palmetto are now finding their way into the markets.

The roots are rich in tannic acid. Several factories for extracting the acid are already in operation in Florida, and others are projected. Leather tanned with acid from the palmetto is said to be equal if not superior to the best oak or hemlock-tanned stock. As the palmetto costs hardly more than the gathering, acid from it can be produced at less cost than from any other source. The market for it, therefore, is safe. For manufacturing such articles as baskets, mats, hats, etc., it would seem that there ought to be a great field for the palmetto. It was extensively made use of during the war of secession by the women of the South in making such articles, and it is safe to say that thousands of the articles made then are in serviceable condition to-day, so durable is the material.

FOUR DOCTORS FAILED.

A Michigan Lady's Battle with Disease and How It Was Won.

Flushing, Mich., Dec. 24, 1900.—(Special.)—One of the most active workers in the cause of Temperance and Social Reform in Michigan is Mrs. P. A. Passmore of this place. She is a prominent and very enthusiastic W. C. T. U. woman, and one who never loses an opportunity to strike a blow against the demon of Intemperance. Mrs. Passmore has suffered much bodily pain during the last three years through Kidney and Bladder Trouble. At times the pain was almost unbearable, and the good lady was very much distressed. She tried physician after physician, and each in turn failed to relieve her, let alone effecting a cure. Home remedies suggested by anxious friends were applied, but all to no purpose. At last some one spoke of Dodd's Kidney Pills as a great remedy for all Kidney and Bladder Diseases, and Mrs. Passmore decided to try them. She did, and is now a well woman. She has given the following statement for publication:

At different times in the past three years, I have suffered severely with Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and after trying four of the best physicians I could hear of, two of them living in the State of New York, I found myself no better. I took any amount of home remedies suggested by kind friends, with little or no relief from anything. I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. Less than one box has done me more good than all other treatments combined. I am still using them, and can say from experience that they are an excellent remedy for Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I would heartily recommend them to all those suffering from these ills in like manner.

MRS. P. A. PASSMORE.
Flushing, Mich.

When physicians and all other methods of treatment have failed, try Dodd's Kidney Pills. What they did for Mrs. Passmore they will do for any one similarly afflicted.

A Negro's Nerve.

After raising his upper body and resting on his elbow so he could examine the mangled stumps of his legs, which had been crushed beneath the wheels of a railroad train, and out of one of which the naked bone protruded four inches, ending in a shattered point, Charles Bradford, aged 25, a negro roustabout, asked Sergeant Cole for a cigar, and on getting it lighted he smoked it with apparent enjoyment. For an exhibition of indifference to pain and composed nerve, the police have never seen nor heard of anything to compare with this.

When the man was lifted into the patrol wagon he asked the opinion of the police as to what were his chances for surviving, and what operation would be necessary when he reached the hospital. If he experienced pain he did not betray the feeling by audible sound, word or gesture. At the City Hospital he exhibited the same stoical indifference. He was put under influence of anaesthetics as a humane measure when the surgeons dressed his frightful injuries. It was the opinion of the surgeons that he had the nerve to attempt to undergo the operation without being reduced to a merciful state of oblivion.—Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Greater Than a King.

"Now, children," said the school teacher, "can you tell me of a greater power than a king?"

"Yes, ma'am," cried a little boy eagerly.

"What, Willie?" asked the teacher (expecting the answer, "An emperor"), benignly.

"An ace, ma'am," was the unexpected reply.—Town Talk.

—MARRIED: — At the Lutheran parsonage last Saturday evening, Dec. 22, at 9 o'clock by J. D. Brosy, Orel W. Shreves and Effie Hornbeck. Both are from Auburn and will make their home here.

—Fairfield people don't like the free rural delivery route as well as they expected. In many cases they do not get their mail as early as before. They want the Star route from Kendallville re-established.

—MARRIED:—At the Lutheran parsonage December 25, 1900, at 11:30 a. m., by Rev. J. D. Brosy, Arthur Grube and Atlanta V. Link. They will begin housekeeping on a farm south of Auburn Junction.

—FOR SALE:—Well improved farm, situated two miles southeast of Corunna, four miles north of Garrett, belonging to the Amos Britton heirs. Low price and easy terms. Call on or write W. V. Britton, Hudson, Indiana.

—C. W. Campbell and wife stopped off between trains yesterdya with the COURIER folks. They were on their way from Chicago to visit the relatives of both at Butler, the families of Samuel Jones and J. A. Campbell.

—Cyrus Seiler of Elkhart, brother of Auditor Seiler, with his wife, spent Christmas here, returning home on the noon train. He has been in that county since soon after the war and was for four years county treasuser.

—Mrs. Huston and daughter Sadie ate Christmas turkey at J. N. Huston's in Jackson township. There were relatives and friends to the number of fifteen or twenty, and such a dinner is seldom seen as they enjoyed there.

—E. J. Bonner, eye specialist, of Kendallville, will be at Fischler's drug store in Auburn, on Monday and Tuesday of next week, Dec. 31, and Jan. 1, where he will be pleased to have those needing his services call on him. d29

—I. M. Zent was taken Sunday with his old throat trouble so bad, he could not speak. It is a strange thing. He is able to work, but cannot make a sound. He had a similar attack several years ago. We hope he may soon get over it.

—MARRIED:—On Monday, December 24, 1900, at 3 p. m., at the home of John Palmer on South VanBuren street by Rev. J. D. Brosy, Albert E. Palmer and Nonia Inez Carter. Both are from Garrett, Ind., and will make that their future home.

—Help is needed at once when a person's life is in danger. A neglected cough or cold may soon become serious and should be stopped at once. One Minute Cough Cure quickly cures coughs and colds and the worst cases of croup, bronchitis, grippe and other throat and lung troubles. H. B. McCord.

—MARRIED:—At the Lutheran parsonage December 25, 1900, at 3:30 p. m., by Rev. J. D. Brosy, O. H. P. Martius of Toledo, Ohio, and Phebe Estella Hathaway of Garrett, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. Martius will make their future home in Toledo, as he is employed as a switchman there. Our best wishes go with them.

—Marion DeLong reports that Mrs. John Trush, who lives south of Sedan, had an unpleasant experience last Friday. Mrs Levi Hewitt was driving by and went to turn out, when the latter stepped aside the wrong way and was run over. She was picked up unconscious, but we understand, was not seriously hurt.

—MARRIED:—At the Lutheran parsonage last Saturday, Dec. 22, at 7:30 p. m. by Rev. J. D. Brosy, D. K. Hull and Florence Grace Crandall. These are two of Auburn's worthy young people and we extend to them our best wishes. They had their rooms all furnished on East Seventh street and began housekeeping at once.

—MARRIED:—At the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Rich, last evening at 5:30 on West Ninth street by J. D. Brosy, Frank L. Pyle and Miss Blanche Potter. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few friends. They move on the old home three miles east of Auburn. Mr Pyle will farm his father's place. We wish them happiness and success.

—The ladies of the Culture Club and L. L. C. joined yesterday in playing Santa Claus and gladdened the hearts of about fifty people, aged and sick, with boxes of fruit and candy tastefully trimmed with wreaths and sprigs of holly. The ladies deserve great praise for their kindness and generosity, for their hearts were certainly filled with the true Christmas spirit.

—Mr. and Mrs. Chris McNabb had their Christmas tree yesterday morning before daylight, instead of the evening before. The little wax candles blazed nicely, and was showing off the presents and decorations in fine shape, when some of the cotton caught fire, and there was a sudden blaze. The tree was pitched out doors, but the gifts were saved. For a few minutes there was real danger.

—Many persons having had the experience of Mr. Peter Sherman of North Stratford, N. H., who says "For years I suffered torture from chronic indigestion, but Kodol Dyspepsia Cure made a well man of me." It digests what you eat and is a certain cure for dyspepsia and every form of stomach trouble. It gives relief at once even in the worst cases, and can't help but do you good. H. B. McCord.

—J. L. Marvin, formerly of this office, but for some time with the Edon Independent, at Edon, O., has been visiting the old home in Jackson township and his brother Charles in Auburn, went to Valparaiso today. He will be in school for some time, and will also assist in the publication of a college paper, "The College Courant." Mr. Marvin is a handy man to have in such a position. We hope to hear of his success in this line as well as his studies.

—George C. Clark, formerly of this city, was married at Bourbon, Ind., Sunday evening to a Miss Katherine Feiser of Walkerton, the ceremony being performed at the home of her sister by the U. B. minister. Miss Feiser is an estimable young lady and well and favorably known in that vicinity, her parents having resided there until a few weeks ago when they removed to Texas. Mr. Clark is a special deputy employed by the Modern Samaritan insurance company, and has recently been assigned the management of the work in twelve counties in northern Indiana. His friends here will join the COURIER in extending congratulations.

—Don't use any of the counterfeits of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Most of them are worthless or liable to cause injury. The original DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a certain cure for piles, eczema, cuts, scalds, burns, sores and skin diseases. H. B. McCord.

—A little boy at St. Louis was looking up the chimney of the fireplace for Santa Claus, when his clothes caught fire. He was so badly burned that he died.

—DeWitt's Little Early Risers are dainty little pills, but they never fail to cleanse the liver, remove obstructions and invigorate the system. H. B. McCord.

Phonographs Teach Pronunciation.

Phonographs are to be put to practical use in the study of foreign languages, where they seem to have found a useful place. Grammar and technicalities may be acquired without a teacher, but one cannot teach one's self pronunciation. Hence to the many obliged to learn a foreign language without the aid of a teacher phonographic records of language lessons are the greatest help, as the machine can repeat the words over and over again until familiarity with the sounds is obtained.

Heifer Killed by Red Paint

The courts may be called upon to settle a question of culpability in which a yearling heifer and two quarts of red paint are involved. The heifer, which belonged to Peter Dewitt, of Westtown, N. Y., is dead, after having drank two quarts of Abraham Neall's red paint. Dewitt wants pay for the dead heifer and Neall seeks damages for the paint consumed. Neall was painting a creamery, and while at work on a ladder left the paint bucket at the foot of it. The heifer drained the bucket and the draught proved fatal.—New York World.

RECORD OF THE WEEK

INDIANA INCIDENTS TERSELY TOLD.

Wheat Damaged by Hessian Fly—Fatal Result of Frank by Mischievous Boys—Farmers to Organize for Protection Against Horse Thieves.

E. S. Holmes, special agent of the statistical bureau of the Agricultural Department, who has just completed a trip through northern Indiana, expresses the fear that the two almost total failures of the wheat crop in 1899 and 1900 will be followed by another failure next year. Mr. Holmes declares that fully one-third the wheat examined has been seriously damaged by the Hessian fly and that with bad weather henceforth the plants will have small chance of maturing. In some localities he advised farmers to plow up their wheat and cultivate the land in other crops until the larvae are destroyed, but the farmers hesitate to sacrifice the prospect of even a partial crop.

Alarming Theft of Horses.

The theft of horses in the counties of this State north of Indianapolis has become such a serious matter that calls are being issued for the organization of vigilance leagues. The Kankakee swamps seem to be the headquarters of an organized gang, the members of which have carried on a wholesale business within the past year. Shrewd detectives have failed to unearth the gang. Within ten days, twenty horses were stolen in various sections of northern Indiana, but not a single animal was recovered and the thieves covered their trail so ingeniously that not an arrest was made.

Horse Drags Boy to Death.

Dragging at the heels of a frightened horse, a boy named Hall was battered to death six miles north of Nashville. The two older companions, named Pittman and Copenhaven, in a spirit of boyish recklessness, tied young Hall on the horse's back, telling him they would teach him to become a circus rider. The boy became alarmed as the horse started to gallop and his terror increased his companions' merriment. The animal took fright and began to run at a terrific pace. The boy clung to the frightened animal's back for some distance, but in his terror he lost his hold and fell under the horse's hoofs.

Claims the Site of La Porte.

Charles L. Pokagon, only surviving son and heir of the late chief of the Pottawatomie Indians, will take legal measures to gain possession of land worth millions of dollars; the land in question covering the site of the present city of La Porte. Mr. Pokagon has documents showing that the government by virtue of treaties issued a patent for 40 acres to Chief Pokagon, father of the late chief, Simon Pokagon, and grandfather of the present claimant. Mr. Pokagon is sanguine of establishing his claim. His residence is at Hartford, Mich.

Gas Explosion Ruins Office.

A terrific gas explosion, followed by fire, completely wrecked the office of factory No. 11 of the American Window Glass Company in Muncie. The fact that the explosion occurred on Sunday saved the lives of nearly twenty office employes. Falling debris caused several glass workmen employed on night turn to receive injuries, but none were seriously hurt. All the valuable records and papers kept in the office were burned, and the loss will reach several thousand dollars.

A Revelation.

If there are doubting Thomases or Maidens fair, or those unfair, who fain would be fair, let them use Dr. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream and prove the efficacy of what the proprietor has so long tried to impress on the minds of all, in nearly every part of the world. As a Skin Purifier and Beautifier it has no equal or rival. If the reader would prove the virtues of Oriental Cream, use it where a Scratch or slight Cut, or where a Black-head or Pimple is troubling you, then you see its healing and purifying qualities—if it does its work well, then read the advertisement again for further testimony of its virtues, and by using Oriental Cream renew both Youth and Beauty.

Home of Many Assassins.

It is a fact that does not speak well for Italy that the chief anarchist assassins of recent years have claimed that country as their birthplace. President Carnot of France, Premier Canovas of Spain, the Empress of Austria and King Humbert have all fallen victims of anarchists of Italian birth and breeding. Santa Caserio, who stabbed Carnot at Lyons in 1894, was a native of Lombardy; Angino Gollo, who shot Canovas in 1897, was born at Boggia, near Naples; Luchent, who killed the Empress of Austria at Geneva in 1898, although born in Paris, was of Italian parentage; Angelo Bresci, who shot Humbert, is reputed to be a native of Prato, in Tuscany. In this connection it may also be stated that the latest published statistics show that in Italy, with a population estimated at 30,000,000, over 4,000 people were murdered in 1897, while more than 80,000 were violently assaulted and wounded. In Sicily alone 968 persons were murdered in one year, or an average of between two and three each day. These facts and figures are full of unpleasant suggestion. Nor does the supplementary record of punishments meted out by the Italian courts relieve the situation very greatly. Of these 4,000 murderers made known to the authorities only 124 received the full penalty prescribed by Italian law—imprisonment for life. It would appear that human life is nowhere held more cheaply than in the Italian peninsula.—Leslie's Weekly.

MRS. BREWER RECOMMENDS PERUNA FOR GRIP AND FEMALE CATARRH.

The Home of Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer at Westerly, R. I.

In a letter to Dr. Hartman concerning the merits of Pe-ru-na, Mrs. Brewer writes, among other things:

Westerly, R. I.

"Dear Dr. Hartman—I find Pe-ru-na a sure cure for all catarrhal affections so common in this part of the country. It cures a cold at once. There is no cough medicine that can at all equal Pe-ru-na. As for la grippe, there is no other remedy that can at all compare with Pe-ru-na.

"I am among the sick a great deal in our city and have supplied many invalids with Pe-ru-na, simply because I am enthusiastic in my faith as to its results. I have never known it to fail to quickly and permanently remove that demoralized state of the human system which follows la grippe.

"In all cases of extreme weakness I use Pe-ru-na with perfect confidence of a good result. In cases of weakness peculiar to my sex I am sure that no other remedy can approach in good results the action of Pe-ru-na. It meets all the bad symptoms to which females are subject. The irregularities and nervousness, the debility and miseries which afflict more or less the women from girlhood to change of life, are one and all met and overcome by this excellent remedy. I wish every young lady in our city could read your book.

"Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer."

Pe-ru-na will cure the worst cases of catarrh. La grippe is acute epidemic catarrh, for which Pe-ru-na is a specific.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, New Lisbon, Ohio, suffered for many years with chronic catarrh of the lungs, head and throat; continuous cough; many physicians failed to cure. Permanently cured by Pe-ru-na. Thousands of testimonials could be produced. A valuable treatise on catarrh sent free by The Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O.

Morrow's KID-NE-OIDS Cure Sick Kidneys.

Diseases of the Kidneys will stand no trifling because no disease is so deceptive and none more fatal. Statistics show that more people die from Kidney Diseases than any other disease.

U. S. SENATOR DAVIS DIES FROM KIDNEY DISEASE.

Senator Davis made a prolonged and gallant fight with disease.

The trouble, of which the kidney affection was the fatal outcome, first appeared about Sept. 20.

* * * * * * * * *

Trouble Stealthily Encroached.

The trouble had, however, stealthily encroached upon a vital organ, and on Nov. 11 examination of the urine proved the presence of inflammation of the kidneys.

Both acute nephritis and diabetes made their appearance, and Dr. Murphy, of Chicago, was summoned. He agreed with Doctors Stone and Lankester as to the presence of these serious ailments in acute form, and, while not making any public statement, he made known privately to some of Senator Davis' business associates his opinion that the case was hopeless.

* * * * * * * * *

To those, however, who were familiar with the symptoms of acute kidney troubles the bulletins held ominous information, the rapid respiration, fluctuating pulse, delirium and approaching coma telling the story of death's nearness.

—St. Paul Dispatch.

Is This What Ails You?

Does your back ache?
Do you have scanty flow of urine?
Do you have frequent severe headaches?
Do you urinate too frequently either day or night?
Have you sand, gravel, brick dust or white mucous in your urine?
Have you dark or bloody looking urine which scalds when voiding?
Have you dark circles around the eyes, puffiness under the eyes, or bloated appearance of the face in the morning?

Your Kidneys are Sick

AND HERE IS WHERE YOUR DANGER LIES:

Kidney Disease does not make itself felt until it has secured a firm hold on your system.

Morrow's Kid-ne-oids are made for Kidney Diseases and that they cure Kidney Diseases can be attested by a "cloud of living witnesses," three of which give voluntary testimony below:

Mr. J. O. Schoch.

Mr. J. C. Schoch, of DuBois, Pa., convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that Morrow's Kid-ne-oids cure kidney troubles promptly and to stay cured.

"For about a year I had a dull, heavy pain in the small of my back, which would be attended by a sharp, stining pain when lifting or stooping over. On account of the pain in my back I could not sleep and get proper rest, and would feel dull and tired when arising in the morning instead of fresh and vigorous. When Morrow's Kid-ne-oids were first advertised I did not have much faith in their curative qualities, but after seeing them recommended to relieve symptoms like my own, I procured some at Vosburg's drug store, and took them according to directions. In a few days the pain in my back stopped. The Kid-ne-oids have done away with that dull, tired feeling and I am enjoying better health than I have for years." Mr. Schoch, lives at 117 Olive Ave., DuBois, Pa. and is always glad to say a good word for that peerless kidney remedy—Kid-ne-oids.

Mrs. Gold Campman.

Mrs. Gold Campman 48 River St., Sharon, Pa., graphically describes her condition before and after she used Morrow's Kid-ne-oids, hoping by so doing she will help some other woman to get rid of the debilitating backaches so common to the female sex.

Sharon, Pa., Nov. 8, 1900. John Morrow & Co. Dear Sirs:—"I take pleasure in recommending your medicine to the public in the hope that it may benefit others as it has me. Three years ago in March I was attacked with a severe fever which left me in a miserable, weak condition. About one year ago, after my kidneys became affected, the pain in my back was so bad I could not sit up or lie down. I saw Morrow's Kid-ne-oids highly recommended and procured a box and took them according to directions, which resulted in a cure. I have taken in all three boxes and consider the medicine so good for kidney troubles that I will take no other." Yours truly, Mrs. Gold Campman.

Mrs. D. S. Sterner.

Graphic interview given our reporter by Mrs. D. S. Sterner, of Altoona, Pa., who suffered for years with kidney troubles.

"I suffered several years with kidney trouble and did considerable doctoring, even going to the hospital for a time, but it seemed that my disease was incurable. My suffering was terrible, especially with my back. I saw Morrow's Kid-ne-oids advertised and recommended so highly by other persons whose symptoms were similar to my own that I decided to try them. I began to improve in two or three days after I commenced to take them, and continued to improve until the pain in my back has all disappeared. I have felt like a new person since taking Kid-ne-oids and am only too glad to be able to recommend such a valuable medicine." Mrs. Sterner resides at 1615 7th Ave., Altoona, Pa.

All the Testimonials and letters published by John Morrow & Co. are true. They are proof positive of the great merit of Morrow's Kid-ne-oids.

Each name and address is correctly given; if you write them enclose a postagestamp to pay for the answer.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

Notice of Election.

Notice is hereby given to the qualified voters of Concord township in DeKalb county, in the State of Indiana, that pursuant to an order of the Board of Commissioners of the county of DeKalb, made at a regular session of said Board, held on the fourth (4) day of December, 1900, that the polls will be opened on Tuesday, the eighth (8) day of January, 1901, at the usual voting places for the several precincts of said Concord township, to take the votes of the legal voters of said township, upon the question of said township aiding in the construction of the Fort Wayne and Butler railroad through said township by an appropriation of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) in money: said aid of ten thousand dollars ($10,000) being less than two per centum upon the amount of taxable property, both eral and personal, of said township; at least one-half of said amount to be levied by a special tax on the duplicate for the year 1901, and the residue thereof by a special tax on the duplicate for the ensuing year of 1902; the said appropriation to be made upon the following conditions to wit: That said road shall be built to a point within one quarter of a mile to one-half of a mile of the towns of Spencerville and St. Joe in said Concord township, and there shall be a freight house and depot for the purpose of handling freight and for the accommodation of passengers, at a point on said road, nearest Spencerville and also at a point on said road nearest St. Joe, The election will be governed in all respects by the laws now in force regulating general elections.

ORDINANCE NO. 16,

An ordinance regulating and prohibiting the accumulation of obstructions to travel upon the streets and sidewalks of the City of Auburn.

Be it ordained by the common council of the City of Auburn, Indiana:

SECTION 1—It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, the owner or occupant of any premises within the corporate limits of said city, and bordering on any street thereof, within twenty-four hours after a fall of snow, to fail to clear said sidewalks of all snow, ice or other obstructions, and any such persons, firms, or corporations failing or refusing to comply with the provisions of this section shall upon conviction thereof, be fined in any sum not exceeding five dollars for each offense.

SECTION 2—To promote the operation of this ordinance, it is made the duty of the city marshal, after a fall of snow to the depth of six inches or over to assist the removal thereof from the sidewalks with snow plows, as far as possible or practicable. But the failure or inability of the marshal to so plow the snow shall not excuse any from the performance of the provisions of this ordinance.

SECTION 3—This ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage and publication for two successive weeks in the Auburn Weekly Courier.

Adopted Dec. 17, 1900.

Vinegar for Salads.

The ordinary manufactured vinegars are just a little too strong for the average salad. They may be diluted or lemon juice may be used instead. A good rule to remember is that salads made from uncooked vegetables, such as cress or lettuce, are better served with lemon juice, while those cooked, as string beans, cauliflower and asparagus, are better with tarragon vinegar. It is better, in mixing a salad dressing, to mix the oil, salt and pepper together, and then add at the last the vinegar, giving a few rapid beats to make the emulsion perfect. It must go at once over the salad. Vinegar poured over the lettuce first gives an exceedingly sharp taste as the oil runs off. Where the oil is put over first and the vinegar last you have a much pleasanter effect.

COURTESY AT HOME.

Too Much License Accorded to American Children.

When we read of court functions in foreign lands we notice that precedence is a thing determined by arbitrary laws, and should we spend a season in Washington we would learn that there are certain conventional rules which govern society, and which cannot be violated by any one, from the lowest to the highest, says Good Housekeeping. Precedence is an anomaly in the simple life of the ordinary home, yet it is an open question whether the cheerful contentment of the simplest household would not be increased if there were more formality in the daily intercourse of parents and children. Politeness would prevent much friction, for it is inconsistent with politeness to squabble, to say disagreeable things, to be brutally candid. Perhaps we do not half consider how much politeness saves us from as we go about among our friends. In home conversation precedence as to right of way should be with the elders. Father and mother, grown-up brothers and sisters, guests, should be allowed to express themselves and little people should not be suffered either to interrupt, or to carry on their talk in a high key so that the older persons can hardly hear themselves speak. One finds in otherwise well-bred circles an amazing license accorded to the children, in their continual breaking in with queries or with information about their own matters, nobody taking notice that they are learning to trample on others by the practice of speaking first and speaking loudest. When mother comes into a room, Hubert and Harriet should see that she has a chair. I can think of nothing ruder than the figure of a girl of say 10, 12 or 13 years, calmly ensconced in the most comfortable chair in the house, while her mother, or her father for that matter, looks about in vain for as desirable a seat. Boys are, of course, taught to rise and give a seat to any lady who enters a room, also to rise and remain standing till a woman is seated, but the rule is often in abeyance to their own mothers and sisters. You may enter it on your records as a rule without exception, that no one will ever be at ease in society who fails in the little daily amenities in the home. Only as we are most careful to insist on perfect courtesy in our home life, can we expect that our children shall appear to advantage when they step on the larger world-stage beyond their own doors.

APPLES AS FOOD.

Doctors Disagree but Majority Speak Well of This Fruit.

The theory has been advanced by some learned authorities that the apple is not a wholesome article of food. Doubtless in individual cases this has proven to be the case, but it is hard to believe that fruit that almost every one likes, and one which can be grown freely and in practically unlimited quantities in all temperate climates, was not intended for the use of man. There are other authorities, however, who come to the rescue and so highly recommend the apple that we conclude that where doctors disagree we must depend upon our own judgment and experience. To quote from well-known American authorities, the apple is composed of vegetable fiber, albumen, sugar, acid, gum, chlorophyl, malic and gallic acids, lime and water, and contains as well a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. This analysis would indicate that there must be considerable food value in apples, and on account of the phosphorus they are well adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter. There is an old Scandinavian legend to the effect that what was represented in their traditions as the food for the gods was resorted to by them when they felt themselves growing feeble and infirm to renew their powers of mind and body. They are recommended to persons of sedentary habits who are apt to have trouble on account of torpid livers, which are slow in their work of eliminating the wasted material of the body, which, if retained, makes the brain heavy and dull and may in time cause rheumatism, jaundice, skin eruptions, and troubles of like nature. The malic acid in the fruit, whether new or cooked, will remedy difficulties arising from a too liberal use of meat diet by neutralizing the excess of chalky matter.

A Minister Says.

Rev. L. L. Carpenter, Wabash, Ind., president of the Bethany Assembly at Brooklyn, Ind., writes on May 16, 1898: —It affords me great pleasure to give my testimony as to the efficency of Dr. Kay's remedies.

Dr. Kay's Lung Balm is the very best cough, cold and throat remedy that I ever used.

I have also received great benefit from the use of Dr. Kay's Renovator. My son had for years been greatly afflicted with the piles; he commenced the use of Dr. Kay's remedies and experienced relief almost from the start.

We have no words to express our thankfulness for the benefit we have received as the result of using these remedies. I take great pleasure in commending them to the suffering.

How to Cure Croup.

Mr. R. Gray, who lives near Amenia, Duchess county, N. Y., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best medicine I have ever used. It is a fine children's remedy for croup and never fails to cure." When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croup cough has developed, it will prevent the attack. This should be borne in mind and a bottle of the cough Remedy kept at hand ready for instant use as soon as these symptoms appear. For sale by H. B. McCord.

$1,000 Worth of Good.

A. H. Thurness of Wills Creek Coal Co., Buffalo, O., writes: "I have been afflicted with kidney and bladder trouble for years, passing gravel or stones, excruciating pain. Other medicines only give relief. After taking Foley's Kidney Cure the result was surprising. A few doses started the brick dust, like fine stones, etc., and now I have no pain across my kidneys and I feel like a new man. Foley's Kidney Cure has done me $1,000 worth of good. Take no substitute. H. B. McCord
